LONDON, Jan. 12.—Petrograd correspondent of the Star wires that it is announced there that the German protected cruiser Bremen has returned to Wilhelmshaven badly damaged by having struck a mine.

The above report adds still another chapter to the mystery concerning the whereabouts of the cruiser Bremen. Since the war began this vessel has been reported at various time in both the Atlantic and Pacific waters, and for a time it was believed that she was part of Admiral Von Spee's squadron.

Even if the Bremen actually has been damaged by striking a mine, it is hard to conceive how Petrograd would get the news from Wilhelmshaven. The Bremen is a light protected cruiser of the Danzig and Leipzig type, 382 feet long, with a displacement of 3,268 tons.

BELGIAN PRIESTS DISOBEY GERMANS.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 12.—The Tyd says that most of the priests in the diocese of Malines have refused to obey the German order not to circulate Cardinal Mercier's pastoral letter, on the ground that they take orders form the Cardinal and not from the military.

PRINCESS "PATS" TASTE FIRE.

OTTAWA, Jan. 2.—That the Princess Pats have been in action is made certain by the casualty list received by the militia department this morning ,announcing that Private John Gordon Walter, of the crack Canadian regiment has been slightly wounded while in action. His next of kin reside in Dumferline, Scotland.

Private Charles Bingham of the 16th battalion, has died in the hospital at Plymouth of spinal meningitis. The next of kin reside in London, Eng.

PETROGRAD, Jan 12.—Fighting along the Polish battle front was today reported to be confined to the positions on the Rawka river where the Germans are persisting in their efforts to hack and hew their way to Warsaw. Elsewhere along the front the weather conditions are interfering with the free movements of troops and only artillery exchanges are taking place.

The Germans are reported to have lost heavily in their efforts to force the Russian positions and capture the hills near Bolimow. A score of attacks, both by night and by day have been directed against the Russian positions, but at not point has any headway been gained.

The Russians hold a series of entrenchments along the side of the hills whih the artillery posted at the top commanding every approach. They are thus in a position to prevent any carrying of their positions by storm ,and so far the German artillery has made very little impression on them. In Galicia there has been practically no fighting of consequence for a week, owing to the heavy snows which have blocked the roads.

A LIVELY AFFAIR AT LE PRETRE.

PARIS, France, Jan. 12.—On January ninth, the whole Allies' infantry attached Le Pretre wood and the forest of Apremont. Artillery massed behind Elireya waited the right moment to open fire. German shells began to fall among the gunners. Twice the positions were changed but still the shells fell thickly.

It was then noticed that the sails of a dilapidated windmill moved in an unaccountable way since there was not a breath of wind and five men were sent to investigate. As soon as they reached the building a man jumped from the window and fled towards the German lines but he was soon brought down by a French bullet.

After hours of shelling the German guns were put out of action and the French infantrymen dashed forward. The Germans unmasked quick firers, but their assailants were well into their stride and unheeded the fire.

GERMANS FIRED ON OWN MEN.

A fierce hand to hand struggle followed along the edge of the wood and the Germans were forced back on to the muzzles of their own quick firers, which pumped lead into them for ten minutes, an error which enabled the French engineers to reach the principal work and blow it up as well as the treacherous windmill. By the end of the day the Germans had been driven well into the wood and the French had gained half a mile.

APPEALING THE CASE

Mr. Fred Blastorah Not Satisfied With the Magistrate's Decision.

Chief of Police Thompson was today served with notice of appeal in the Blastorah case, by Messrs. Gordon and Widdifield, his solicitors.

This case was reported in Friey's issue of the Examiner. Magistrate Dumble gave jugment in the Police Court yesterday morning, in which he found Mr. Blastorah, who is proprietor of the Palace Hotel, guilty of allowing one Howard Quinn, an inebriate, on the prohibited list, to loiter in or about his bar on December 31st. The defendant was fined $10.00 and costs, amounting in all to $20.36.

Young People's Society at Park Street Re-opens

The Young People's Society at Park Street Baptist Church held a very successful re-opening meeting last evening. There was a large attendance, about 100 being present. Mr. Haw occupied the chair, and Mrs. McElhiney, of the Salvation Army, gave a very interesting and helpful talk on "Is it worth while." This was listened to very attentively, and very much enjoyed by all.

Mr. H. Hill rendered a vocal solo, which was well received. The Park Street male quartette executed one of their old numbers with their accustomed blend of tone and voice, and were also well received.

A vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. McElhiney for so kindly consenting to come and address the meeting, and the first part of the meeting closed with prayer.

The business meeting and election of officers followed, and the following officers were elected:

President: Mr. M. Dunkley.
Vice-President: Mr. Haw.
Secretary-Treasurer: Miss E. Fallis.

The conveners of committees were also elected.

WILL PURCHASE 400 METERS

For the Use of the Utilities Commission.

At a meeting of the Public Utilities Commission, which was held last evening, Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager, was authorized to purchase 400 meters from the Ontario Hydro - Electric Power Commission at a cost of $4.10 each. The meters were manufactured by the Westinghouse Company and the Canadian General Electric Company.

The waterworks superintendent was instructed to ask for prices for cast iron and galvanized iron pipes and supplies.

A SPLENDID APPOINTMENT

LATEST MILITARY NEWS

Lieut.-Col. T. W. H. Young, M.D., of Peterborough, commanding the 10th Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery and ex-Surgeon-Major of the Third Prince of Wales' Canadian Dragoons, has received word from Ottawa to the effect that he has been appointed surgeon to the Headquarters Divisional Engineers, with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, with headquarters at Ottawa. Dr. Young will leave to-morrow night. He has two brothers with the Second Contingent, namely, Lieut.-Col. A. L. Young, commanding 12th Manitoba Dragoons, and Major F. V. Young, second in command of the 34th Mounted Infantry. All three brothers will be attached to the Second Contingent.

The Mounted Rifles are still adding to their membership. Yesterday thirteen recruits arrived from the Trenton district, and eleven were passed by the doctors here. This morning a number of mounted men were enlisted, including several from Havelock. The percentage of Canadians in the corps has been considerably increased by the last addition to the strength. Eighteen out of the last twenty accepted are Canadians.

Twenty members of the Mounted Rifles were inoculated for typhoid yesterday, and a similar number will receive the serum this afternoon. The men who were treated yesterday were excused from drill to-day, although most of them did not seem to feel very serious disturbances as a result of the operation. All members of the Mounted Rifles must receive the inoculation, which will be carried on daily until all have been treated.

Lieut. Sneath, of Napanee, who has been appointed to the Mounted Rifles, arrived yesterday, and is now on duty at the Armouries.

The 57th Contingent of the Infantry Battalion have not yet started drilling, but orders are expected at any time. In the meantime the men have to report at the Armouries daily. Lieuts. Cameron and Eastwood, who have been accepted for the Third Contingent, are on duty.

So far, about 180 men have been taken on here for the Third Contingent. About 100 of these are for the Mounted Rifles.

The 57th Regiment will resume drilling this evening, and it is expected that there will be a big turnout at the first parade.

RAILWAYS WANT AN INCREASE IN FREIGHT RATES

MUSICAL RECITAL ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Attention is directed to the advertisement in another column regarding the Musical Recital in St. Paul's Church, a week from to-day, Tuesday, Jan. 19th. This Recital is to be given by five men whose musical peers it is impossible to find in Canada. In spite of the large expense involved, tickets are only 50 cents, as it is desired that as large a number of the Peterborough public as possible may enjoy the pleasure of hearing this splendid quartette, and also Hesselburg, the famous Russian pianist

MAY WEAR THEIR UNIFORMS

SPECIAL WIRE:

TORONTO, Ont., Jan 12—Sir William Meredith, Chief Justice of Ontario, has issued an order guaranteeing lawyers connected with the Overseas Expeditionary forces to appear in court cases in uniform.

THE THIRD CONTINGENT

THE DIFFERENT DISTRICTS

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—Orders for the mobilization of the third Canadian expeditionary force were sent out today, and enlistments will be actively under way at all recruiting centres within a few days. In order to secure greater local interest in recruiting and to have the men better prepared for regimental drill, the plan is to make the headquarters of each of the militia regiments throughout the country a recruiting centre where the men will also be held for a short time and given some preliminary training.

The men thus recruited by companies at the local centres will later gather at battalion mobilization centres. For the first contingent the troops were mobilized at Valcartier, and for the second contingent at headquarters of divisional areas. The new plan is expected to be better than either.

First Military District.

For Military District No. 1, Western Ontario, the recruiting centres are: 33nd battalion, Walkerton; 33rd Goderich; 22nd Sarnia; 21st Windsor; 24th Chatham; 25th St. Thomas; 26th Simcoe; 28th Strathroy; 29th Stratford; 30th Galt; 23nd Woodstock; 7th London; 30th Guelph.

The two regiments allotted to Western Ontario for the 3rd contingent will be mobilized afterwards at London and Guelph.

Toronto Centres.

For No. 2 Military District, Toronto, the recruiting centres are: 31st Battalion, Owen Sound; 35th Barrie and Orillia, or Collingwood; 37th Dunnville or Hagarsville; 38th Brantford; 44th Welland; 19th St Catharines; 77th Dundas; 20th Georgetown; 36th Brampton, Orangeville and Toronto; 12th Newmarket and Toronto; 34th Oshawa; 23rd Parry Sound, or Bracebridge; 1st and 13th Hamilton.

The Toronto companies will be recruited at Toronto.

Mobilization of the two Regiments allotted to the district will be at Hamilton and Toronto.

Northern Ontario Corps.

A Northern Ontario Regiment will be recruited by Companies at the following local centres: Sault Ste Marie, Sudbury, North Bay, Cobalt, Haileybury, New Liskeard, Cochrane and possibly Mattawa.

For military District No. 3 Eastern Ontario, recruiting centres are as follows: 45th Batalion, Lindsay; 46th Port Hope; 40th Cobourg; 57th Peterborough; 16th Picton; 49th and 15th, Belleville; 47th Napanee; 42nd Smith Falls; 50th Prescott; 41st Brockville, 59th Cornwall or Alexandra; 43rd and G.G.F.G. Ottawa.

The mobilization centres will be Belleville and Ottawa.

WARSAW WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MEETING

Special to The Examiner:

WARSAW, Jan. 12.—The winter series meeting of the Warsaw Women's Institute will be held in the Town Hall on Wednesday, January 20th, commencing at 2.30 o'clock.

The Government delegate, Mrs. W. Dawson, of Parkhill, will address the meeting on the following subjects: "Women and the War" and "The Things that are Out of Sight."

Lunch will be served and the ladies of the township are invited.

The annual meeting of the Dummer and Douro Agricultural Society will be held in the Town Hall, Warsaw, on Tuesday, January 19th, at one o'clock p.m.

THE WEATHER

About this date last year we had the coldest weather of the winter. On the 11th of January it was seventeen degrees below; on the 12th, sixteen degrees below; on the 13th, 32 below zero; on the 14th, 28 below. The 13th was the coldest day for many years: While it was 32 below in the early morning, it was 19 below at noon, and bitterly cold at night. The figures are quite a contrast to the conditions prevailing at the present time.—W. P.

COUNCIL ASKED TO ENDORSE DEBENTURE ISSUE OF $79,000

To Cover the Indebtedness of the of the Utilities Commission—Will Have to Bear the Assent of the Legislature.

"TOO INDEFINITE"

If last night's meeting of the committee of the whole Council is any criterion of the harmony that will prevail in Mayor Buller's cabinet throughout the year, some stormy sessions may be anticipated. The fireworks commenced with a statement made by Ald. Stratton, chairman of the Finance committee and his subsequent refusal to withdraw it despite the demands of Mayor Buller and Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission. The latter supported by Mr. R. Hicks and Mr. W. H. Moore of the Commission, appeared before the committee with a request that the city obtain legislation that will enable them to issue debentures, without the consent of the electors, to replace money that has been expended by the Commission on permanent improvements, such as the dam, new feed mains and also to provide for the purchase of land for a sub-station and if necessary to provide sufficeint money to instal an auxiliary pumping plant. The Commission is in need of seventy-nine thousand dollars for immediate necessities.

Exceeded Debenture.

Mr. T. F. Matthews explained that in no one year had the Commissioners been able to keep the expenditures below the legal debenture issue.

He pointed out that several necessary expenditures had been made for water mains, at the request of the City Council, which, together with the needed improvements undertaken by the Commission represented an expenditure of $60,000 in excess of the borrowing capacity of the Commission. Added to this was $10,000 required for the turbine pump. This indebtedness includes an overdraft of $40,000 in the Bank of Montreal. He asked the committee to make application to the Legislature for power to issue debentures to cover this amount. The system is revenue producing and does not constitute a burden on the taxpayer. It would not in any way effect the water rates or the taxes of the city. The debenture issue would be provided for out of the revenue derived from the system. Mr. Matthews also asked the committee to guarantee a line of credit sufficient to meet the needs of the Commission.

Must Have Money.

Mayor Buller— "The Commission must have money in order to carry out the work that is allotted to them.

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, Jan. 12.— President Sir Thomas Shaughnessy to-day declined to make any statement regarding reports that the C.P.R. is to make big cuts in wages and other expenses owing to loss of business due to the war, but it is thought here that such action is quite probable.

THE SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. T. B. COLLINS

MILLBROOK, Ont., Jan. 11. The death took place this morning suddenly, at his office, of Thomas B. Collins, who had been in business here for nearly 50 years, and who was honoured and trusted by the whole community. He was around this forenoon as usual, and at about half-past eleven he fell on the stair, expiring almost immediately from heart failure. Mr. Collins was born amost 74 years ago, in Liskesnea, County Permanagh, Ireland, coming to this country when a lad. After a short stay in New York he went to Peterborough, and shortly thereafter started here in the dry goods business, from which he retired about 20 years ago and entered into private banking. He sold out a few years ago to a Toronto Bank, and had since spent his time looking after his property and superintending recently some Government buildings in the Town. He was a Conservative in politics, and once unsuccessfully contested Durham County. He was a strong Orangeman and known as such all over Canada. At times he even went against his party on Protestant issues. He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. E. D. Lampsey, of Berlin, Ont., and Miss Mary L., at home, and two sons Walter H., of The Bank of Commerce at Belleville, and Thos. H., of the Bank of Toronto, Montreal. The funeral takes place on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Barrie's Fur News

Advertising prices count for nothing excepting you have the advantage of seeing and closely inspecting qualities, etc. This you can do right at your own door. Do the citizens of Peterborough realize the value of the Fur Service Barrie's Limited offer them?

They not only guarantee every article in their stock, but that their prices shall be less in every case, when goods are honestly compared.

Why? One reason is that expenses in manufacturing in Peterborough are very much less than in the larger cities.

Another reason is that they buy their own raw skins and manufacture them on their own premises, thereby eliminating all middlemen.

Another reason is that the trend of Wealthy buyers to these larger cities invites higher prices.

It pays to pay for quality—but you needn't pay the "fancy prices." Nine times out of ten the purchasers of a fur coat would be willing to pay the highest price for the highest quality if they knew they were getting what they paid for.

In choosing a fur coat at Barrie's Limited, you DO buy it with a guarantee that it is made from the finest fur goods, that the linings and trimmings are the best that can be bought, that the design is the latest mode, and that the workmanship is the most skilled.

The fact that the extensive building operations of Barrie's Limited now in progress makes it necessary to secure ready cash, is a valid reason for the generousness of the radical reductions they are making.

Fuel Values Of Wood And Coal

The fuel value of two pounds of wood is roughly equivalent to that of one pound of coal. Certain kinds of wood, such as hickory, oak, beech, birch, hard maple, ash, elm, locust, long-leafed pine, and cherry, have fairly high heat values, and only one cord of seasoned wood of these species is required to equal one ton. of good coal.. It takes a cord and a half of short-leafed pine, hemlock, red gum, Douglas fir, sycamore, and soft maple, and two cords of cedar, redwood, poplar, catalpa, Norway pine, cypress, basswood, spruce, and white pine, to equal a ton of coal. Equal weights of dry, non-resinous woods, however, are said to have practically the same heat value regardless of species, and as a consequence it can be stated as a general proposition that the heavier the wood the more heat to the cord. Weight for weight there is very little difference between various species.

THE REID CO'S SACRIFICE SALE

Lady shoppers looking for extra values should note the January Clearance sale which is being advertised by The Reid Co., and which begins Saturday, January 16th. The Reid Co. is noted for carrying the newest models in smart Coats, Suits and Dresses. When it is learned that these are all to be reduced so as to constitute extraordinary savings, the announcement will prepare everyone in advance of the sale for a most appreciated event.

Watch the tenth page on Friday for a brief mention of the interesting prices that will make fascinating buying. Looking ahead as far as possible the ladies will see no time in the future when Women's Coats and Suits will be sold at similar reductions as the Reid Co. contemplates.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, JAN. 12, 1915

THE LATE T. B. COLLINS.

Many in Peterborough, will join in the regret with which The Examiner learns of the sudden death of Mr. T. B. Collins, which took place on Monday morning. The deceased gentleman was well-known in Peterborough, and has for many years been a prominent figure in financial and allied circles in Millbrook where he has spent almost half a century of his busy and useful life. In his public relation he touched many interests, and in all he earned admiration for his high character of manhood and principle. He was a staunch Conservative in politics, and did not give his party perhaps less effective and useful service because he was once unsuccessful as a candidate for the representation of Durham. He was an active and influential member of the Orange Society, and in that capacity was well known throughout the whole country. So strongly did he hold to the principles of the society that, strong a party man as he antagonized his party on a Protestant issue.

AN EMERGENCY YEAR.

The candidature of Mayor Church, of Toronto, was regarded as a joke by many who opposed him and by some who supported him; but it looks as if Mayor Church will have the last laugh. His inaugural address is reasonable if not radical in some of his proposals. He counsels many things that Peterborough might heed with profit. He advises for the present the adoption of economy, and the elimination of all but essentials. He particularly urges the avoidance of increase of assessment. In Toronto, as in Peterborough, the war conditions have depressed the value of property, and it is manifestly unfair, if not oppressive, to strain the law to the point of making assessment beyond the actual value of property. There will have to be some other way of getting revenue, and a good way would be to lessen the necessity for revenue, by the adoption of systematic administration of city affairs that would eleminate waste and bring better results for lesser expenditure. The City Council of Peterborough has its work cut out for it this year. The old routine methods will not serve. There is an emergency, and the emergency demands corresponding methods of administration.

GLAD TO BE HATED.

If good old blust Samuel Johnson were alive to-day he would take Germany to his arms. He declared that he loved "a good hater," and certainly in these days Germany measures up to his liking. It is astonishing, or at least, remarkable, how bitterly German hatred for England has developed in Germany of late months—a few years ago the feeling was envy and jealousy, now it is downright, intense, unreasonable hatred. An example of how this feeling is held and fostered by the German people is shown by the following extract from a Berlin journal, Allgemeine Zeitung—

Our brave soldiers listened with rapt attention to the beautiful German folk-songs, the grand martial airs played with splendid dash and spirit by the "1914 War Band," and to the moving melodies of the lady artists.

Then Herr Ernst Lissauer intoned the "Song of Hatred," and when the passion-pregnant words ceased reverberating through the building there crashed forth a storm of cheering so fierce and vehement as to cause the very glass of the domed ceiling to shiver as though it were struck by an earthquake.

With eyes ablaze, with fists clenched, soldiers and civilians alike rose to their feet, loudly acclaiming the poet's fury against England.

Isn't that a beautiful Christian spirit, a splendid example of the influence of German culture? We can have no doubt of German hatred of Great Britain, and we are glad of it for what it means. It means that the shoe pinches, the galled jade winces. It means that it hurts. It means that Great Britain is a thorn in the flesh of German militarism. It means that Great Britain's entry into the war has topsy-turvied all of Germany's plans for a triumphal march of her mad ambition. Great Britain's mighty navy, and Great Britain's "contemptible little army" have written Germany's doom as a disturbing element in international relations; the end of her domination in the cult of the higher barbarism. It means desperation in the face of certain defeat. In this regard, German hatred of Britain is something pleasant to see; it is a proud thing to be its object. One might well adopt one of the Beatitudes—blessed are yet who men revile you and persecute, and hate you for the sake of doing right, protecting the weak, maintaining the right—standing as the bulwark of all of good, that the maintenance and promotion of human freedom and human rights can create.

UNITED STATES NEUTRALITY.

The United States in this war is making laudable attempts at neutrality; but a really neutral observer cannot compliment that country very strongly upon its success. It has been very careful. The United States was one of the signatories to The Hague convention, and was as much in duty bound to regard violation of its provisions with reprobation and protest, as Great Britain was in duty bound to resent the outrage of Belgium's neutrality. Great Britain acted when Germany committed the outrage; but the United States has been strictly neutral while Germany has riddled The Hogue convention in every direction—towns sacked and destroyed; cathedrals ruined, seats of learning destroyed; mines sown broad-cast in neutral waters; non-combatants, men and women, clergy and nuns, maltreated and murdered; women and children killed and abused—all an outrage on both humanity and The Hague convention, and yet not a word of protest—strict neutrality maintained. But when, in the interests of humanity and in the process of the punishment of Germany, Great Britain detains contraband United States shipping; when the illicit property of a few United States shippers, is concerned, a mighty protest is raised, and a stately remonstrance addressed to Great Britain.

The answer of the British Government to the United States diplomatic note—diplomatic in name—is dignified and at the same time firm, and furnishes complete justification for her actions. The object of Britain's interference with contraband United States shipping was, and is, and will be, to prevent the strengthening of her enemy, Germany, by getting supplies that will enable her to prolong the struggle against human rights and liberties. The reply shows that the shipments of such aids from the United States have assumed immense proportions. Britain was unwarrantably charged with the responsibility for the falling off of United States exports—a falling off which Sir Edward Grey shows does not exist. For instance, the shipments of copper from the United States in November, 1914, to Sweden, Norway and Italy—from there to find their way to Germany—amounted to 21 million pounds, and in the November before the war, 1913, the shipments only totalled 8 million pounds. From the beginning of the war to the 25th of December, the shipment of copper from the United States to Italy—to Germany via Italy—totalled 36 million pounds, as against 15 million pounds for the corresponding period of the previous year. There is positive evidence in the hands of the British Government, that much of this important ingredient in the manufacture of war munitions, found its way to Germany, or was intended to reach Germany. The United States contends that much of her shipping had to seek round-about courses owing to the scattering of German mines in neutral waters. Uncle Sam did not protest against Germany's outrageous action in sowing mines; he is, however, strong in protest against Britain taking an action intended to prevent Germany continuing her outrages against humanity; but never a word against Germany's iniquitous practices. We believe the United States Government, in spite of its peculiar manifestations of neutrality, it at heart friendly to Great Britain and the cause of human liberty it represents in this war, but the exigencies of politics make necessary a little trimming of sails to catch the popular breeze—of a portion of its people. Domestic politics for the moment, overcome international politics. Uncle Sam's protest against British interference with its shipping having failed on its merits, he now has a good chance to enter a long catalogue of protests with the highest justification. A big dose of protest is due Germany.

AUSTRIA'S DETERMINATION TO SUBJUGATE LITTLE SERVIA

Every British subject ought to have a copy of the British White Paper, which has been reprinted by the Dominion Government, and is to be had for the asking. It is the Briton's Bible in the present crisis. In it will be found a refutation of every charge that is made by Germany to the effect that Britain is responsible for the war, and an answer for every neutral who desires to take an impartial view of the situation. Especially important are the earlier letters and despatches that passed between Sir Edward Grey and the British Ambassadors in France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Servia. No one can read them and not realize that on the part of the British Government the greatest efforts were put forth to preserve peace, and that on the part of the enemy there was an even greater determination to bring about a war. Our particular interest in Belgium, which was the real reason for the British Empire engaging in the war, has caused us to pay too little attention to the Austrian plot which had Servia for its victim, just as Germany had for her victim Belgium.

A German Miscalculation.

A study of these documents will show that Germany had no thought at first of going to war with Great Britain. Germany's hatred and jealousy of the British Empire may be taken for granted. We know that for years the German naval officers have been drinking to "the day" when they should become strong enough to challenge British supremacy at sea, but none of them would have chosen a day in August last. The present war has for most of us turned into a fight between Britain and Germany. That is the way they regard it in the United States; but in the beginning it did not involve either of these powers. The British Minister to Servia, when it seemed certain that Austria meant war, telegraphed to Sir Edward Grey the request of the Servian kingdom that Britain should do something to head off Austria. More than once Sir Edward Grey told the British Ambassadors that if the quarrel were confined to Servia and Austria the British Government could not intervene. He said the British interests in Servia were nil, and that British public opinion would not countenance a war on behalf of Servia.

On the other hand, the German Imperial Chancellor told the British Ambassador at Berlin that before the Austrian ultimatum had been despatched to Servia the German Government knew nothing of it. This he said in contradiction of the report that the demand had been dictated or approved by the German Foreign Office. He admitted that the despatch left much to be desired as a diplomatic document. Moreover, he admitted that the Austrian ultimatum was not launched in the expectation that it would be answered. Austria was determined to teach Servia a lesson, he said; and, although the German Government did not wholly approve of the note, it was prepared to stand by Austria. Sir Edward Grey pointed out as soon as the situation became grave that it was almost certain Russia would be drawn into the affray. The German Chancellor said he did not believe that Russia would become involved, because Austria had promised not to annex Servian territory in the event of war. He thought that this pledge would enable the Russian Government to back out.

Servia Desperate.

In Servia the situation was desperate. The demands made upon her were the most formidable, as Sir Edward Grey says, that were ever addressed by one independent State to another. For Servia to have accepted them would have been to bring on a revolution. Yet Servia did assent to practically every demand made by Austria, and announced her willingness to humiliate herself in the process. Upon one or two points she dissented, but was willing to leave these matters to the decision of The Hague Tribunal or to the arbitration of Britain, France, Germany and Italy, the four great European powers not directly involved. Well might Servia have thus humbled herself, for the despatches show that she was not certain of Russia's support. Russia's attitude was dependent upon the support of France, as is admitted by the Russian Foreign Minister. At the time the French President and French Foreign Minister were not in Paris, and it was difficult to communicate with them.

In this extremity the Russian Government urged upon the British Government the necessity of declaring that it would support France and Russia. Sir Edward Grey declined to commit his country, although the German Minister was of opinion that if Britain declared herself Germany would draw back and would use her influence with Austria to secure an extension of the time limit named in the ultimatum. Germany maintained from the first that the quarrel was one that concerned only Austria and Servia. She declined to urge upon Austria the necessity of moderation. Indeed, it would have been absurd for her to have done so in the face of the official German admission that Austria was determined to teach Servia a lesson. No one can read the official documents without failing to recognize that Germany held the key to a peaceful solution of the trouble, and that if she had said the word Austria would have stopped short of invading Servian territory.—Mail and Empire.

WORD FROM SOME OF PETERBOROUGH'S BATTERY BOYS

A Letter From Eight of Them Now in Camp at Salisbury Plain

The Examiner has received the following letter from eight Peterborough boys in the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, of the First Canadian Contingent:

Dear Sir,—We beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter and papers for which we thank you most heartily. We would be further obliged if you would make it known through the medium of your valuable paper that a lot of anxiety is being caused through the non-delivery of our mail to our friends, and to let them know that we have no proper P. O. service where we are stationed, and we have no proper place in which to buy stamps. This is, we think, a matter that should be looked into by the responsible official concerned. Several of the boys have repeatedly written to their friends and have had no reply. We trust, through the publication of this letter, it will be the means of restoring communication between absent friends. We would also like to endorse J. R. Miller's letter that all the Peterborough boys are not in the 57th Regiment, also a reminder to our friends in addressing letters to Bustard Camp for this Battery causes delay and perhaps loss. One of the boys here is in receipt of a cutting from a Toronto paper, describing how the soldiers are spending their money unrestrainedly on drink and vice. It does not place the stigma upon any particular body of men, and we feel that such a letter, published at such a crisis, will undoubtedly cause uneasiness amongst the wives and friends of the Canadian soldiers serving here. We would like to point out that out of 38,000 men, there must undoubtedly be some misfits, but they have been given a quick shift back again. The men to-day of the First Contingent can be depended upon to bring no disgrace by vices or leaving their wives and children to the mercies of charity, but to bring honour to the land and flag we have given our services. Thanking you in anticipation for the publication of this letter.—We remain, dear sir, yours,

EIGHT PETERBOROUGH BOYS.

"Extra Rooms" Means Extra Income
If your house is extra-ample—if you can rent a room, or several rooms, in it—your problem of "extra income" is easy.
Some people prefer a large house, in a better locality, at a higher rent—and by sub-letting some furnished rooms either wipe out the extra cost of the house rent, or reduce it to the cost of a poor house in a poor neighbourhood. Of course want advertising is NECESSARY!

MRS. WILLIAMS' LONG SICKNESS

Yields To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my sides were increased by walking or standing on my feet and I had awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and also the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

POISONOUS FLY KILLERS

Increasing Number of Deaths From Parents Leaving Fly Paper About

In a recent issue of "Child Betterment," published in Chicago, the following appeal was made to the press:

We again call the attention of the press to the increasing number of deaths of small children between the ages of 1 and 3 years, resulting from parents using poisonous fly killers.

We again publish statistics covering the brief period of four months, from July to October, 1914, with the addition of one more death and others yet to be heard from

All persons interested in preventing the sale of poisons dangerous to childrendren will confer a favour on the publishers of "Child Betterment" by sending their protest to us at once.

The authorities in South Africa have restricted the sale of arsenical fly killers. Is South Africa to be ahead of us in protecting our children?

KITCHENER THINKS IT WILL LAST BIT LONGER

LONDON, Jan. 11—Mrs. Parker, sister of Lord Kitchener, in opening a Tipperary Club for the wives and mothers of soldiers and sailors, said: "From all I can pick up in ten-minute conversations once in a fortnight with my brother I gather that he thinks it will last a bit longer. The longer it lasts the more men will be required, and more men we must have."

WOMEN OF TURKEY BACK OF WAR, THEIR HOPE FOR FREEDOM

CONSTANTINOPLE (mailed from Saloniki to New York to avoid the Turkish censor).—All Turkish women strongly favour the war and for a reason of their own. For the time being at least hatred of England pervades them that is only equalled in Germany.

Two years ago the Turkish government called for public subscriptions to a fund to purchase two dreadnoughts. They were to give Turkey naval supremacy over all of the Balkan nations. The women of Turkey then saw their opportunity for emancipation. During two preceding Balkan wars they had made great strides forward. One woman had flown in an aeroplane over St. Sophia. Others had accepted dangerous and secret diplomatic missions. In many ways they had demonstrated that, if given an opportunity they could show courage, character and intelligence equal to that of any Turkish male.

The Young Turks had recognized this fact. They had brought influence on the Sheik-ul-Islam to moderate their condition. And when the government called for public subscriptions for the war craft the women of Turkey saw another golden opportunity of winning emancipation. So far as the male Turks were concerned calling the movement a "popular subscription" was a misnomer. Rather "unpopular extortion" would have been far more applicable. The officials in charge simply fixed the amount each man must contribute. It ranged from a week to a month's salary. If the man paid—well and good. If not the local authorities collected.

But so far as the women were concerned this was unnecessary. They gave benefits, teas and bazaars when the participation in such things by Turkish women was as radical as would be the advent on Broadway of the female populace of New York in Lady Godiva garb. Their fall in the estimation of the Turkish male by such participation equalled also what would be the fall in the estimation of the American man caused by a general pulling off of the Godiva act. Yet they never hesitated.

In addition they pinched and scrimped to make the greatest contribution possible. They cut down their household expenses; they ate less; they dressed more cheaply and they sold their jewels — some even sold their hair, the most sacred of woman's natural adornment according to the psychology of Turkish men.

In all a total of $35,000,000 was raised. The Turkish women raised more than half.

The two dreadnoughts were being rushed to completion in British ship yards when Turkey most needed them after Greece had bought two cruisers from the United States. The last instalment was paid and the crews and officers selected. Then came the European war and England seized the two craft. British announcement that they will be paid for in full was of no avail.

Montana Cowboys, Moved by Chivalry, Enlist With Allies

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—In the training camp in England where Canadian troops are being whipped into fighting trim a bewildered and happy Montana cowboy who is in this war because of fine chivalry, is probably smoking himself a dull brown, warmly wrapped in knitted mufflers and "cholera belts." By this time he should have received the bulky parcel containing these things, for it left New York on board the St. Louis, of the American line, before Christmas.

The cowboy is Frank McCullom, who with five hundred of his companions from the section of Montana where they still ride, herd and have semi-annual round-ups, rode over into Canada and enlisted, because, as he explained:

"I didn't like the way the Germans were treating the women. So, with some more of the fellows, I went over and enlisted."

When the Montana contingent arrived in Valcartier they were split up into sections and distributed about, much to the disgust of all concerned. They had imagined they would be able to ride their horses into the fight, but the horses were not wanted and the cowboys became foot soldiers.

McCullom was wandering lonesomely about Valcartier in October, when he met a party of men and women from New York. One of the women, who was born in England, told him to write when he felt lonesome and to let her know when he came back home, promising that she and her husband would treat him to the best dinner in New York.

"I sure will," answered McCullom fervently. And, true to his word, in December he wrote the following letter, which explains the mufflers, cigarettes and bands:

"Dear Folks—I suppose you will be thinking I have forgotten you since we left Valcartier. Well, I have not, only I lost your address and I was looking through the kit bag to-day and I ran across it. So I wrote this right away. I thought of that dinner you promised me and I wish I was there, as a good dinner would go good now. Well, the Germans are getting all they want now. I think we will soon have the Germans against the wall. Well, I can't think of any more to say, so I will close for this time, hoping this letter finds you well as it leaves me and hoping to hear from you soon."

"The folks" after reading the letter sent off the box of cigarettes, mufflers, cigars and knitted bands. In the letter which accompanied this box McCullom was instructed to present the surplus mufflers and bands to less fortunate friends. The promise of the dinner on his return was renewed.

Council Asked To Endorse

It's a question of if it's right to enable them to obtain money without the consent of the people."

Ald. Stratton—"I think that the statement submitted is too indefinite. It's conceding too much power to the Commissioners. They might come back and boast that they put it over us."

"I would ask for a withdrawal of that statement," said Mr. Matthews, addressing Mayor Butler. We don't treat matters of that kind lightly."

Mayor Butler put Mr. Matthews' request to Ald. Stratton, but the latter declined to accede.

"I don' like to hear a member of this Council speaking in discourteous terms and mincing up matters," said Ald. Johnston.

"I made that statement and know it to be true."

"I know you did. You are capable of making any kind of a statement," countered Ald. Johnston.

"A Scrap Heap."

The pending storm abated with Ald. Green's remark that the borrowing power of the Commission would have to be increased if their usefulness was to remain unimpaired. "Even when we complete the arbitration now in prospect between the city and the Power Company we will have nothing but a scrap heap," said Ald. Green.

Ald. Stratton—"Don't you think that the City Solicitor could put it in better shape so that it could be better understood by this committee?"

Ald. Green—"It's indefinite, but then we are not obliged to act upon it even if it's passed by the Private Bills committee."

"The bill in its entirety will be submitted to the Council before it is passed by the Legislature," said City Solicitor Gordon.

The Measure Was Endorsed.

With this assurance the measure was endorsed by the committee. A resolution designed to constitute the city guarantor for a line of credit required by the commission was objected to. Ald. Stratton contended that some limit should be placed on the amount the city would guarantee to the Commissioners.

In reading over the clause, City Solicitor Gordon admitted that it was a continuing guarantee. Alterations were made so that the guarantee will become extant when the sum of $75,000 has been borrowed by the Commission.

A Tribute To The Work of Nurse Hamilton

Dear Sir,—The report of the annual meeting of the Health Association in your issue of the 9th should appeal to all who are interested in such good work. My reasons for trespassing on your valuable space are that my wife and I wish to express our gratitude for the great help we have received from the very efficient services of Nurse Hamilton, who on two occasions has been most kind and attentive to the very details of what to us means very exacting and highly skilful work, and seeing that there is but the figure relating to numbers of cases, etc., I take this opportunity to publicly express our grateful thanks. I with many others would like to see a fuller report of what Nurse Hamilton has done in such work, because the figures referred to must represent a variety of cases. The tuberculosis cases [illegible] attending at this shutting out of all other interesting and equally important client.—In anticipation, yours gratefully,

EDWARD NAVEY.

ITCHY NOSE AND RUNNING EYES CURED IN FIVE MINUTES BY "CATARRHOZONE"

Every day comes news of wonderful cures made by Catarrhozone. Cases are reported and personal testimony is given that proves beyond question the marvellous merit of Catarrhozone.

Bad colds and running eyes it stops in a few minutes.

Irritable throat and dry bronchial coughs are helped in a jiffy — always cured—if Catarrhozone is used as directed.

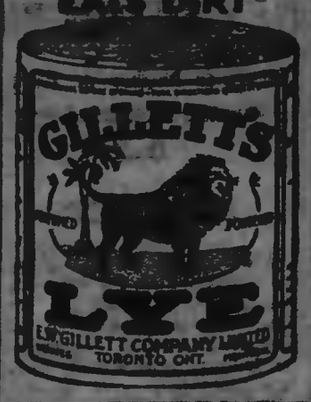
Chronic Catarrh in the nose and throat, the sort that keeps the breath rank and maintains a vile, sickening discharge—even that type of catarrh yields completely to the power of Catarrhozone.

Just think of it!

Not a drug to take, not an hour to wait for relief—you just simply inhale the pleasant, piney vapour of Catarrhozone and get well quickly.

"What Catarrhozone did for me in one week was simply a miracle," writes Malcolm K. McIntosh from Sydney. "I had a frightful attack of Catarrh. My ears buzzed and my head was full of noises. The end of my nose was red and itchy — on the inside it was sore and encrusted. I had vile dropping from my throat and was very sick. Relief came quick—so I kept up the treatment and was absolutely cured by Catarrhozone."

Nothing else will so effectively and quickly cure you as Catarrhozone. Get the $1.00 outfit; it always does the trick. Smaller sizes, [illegible] trial size 25c, at all dealers.



Refugees Live In Novel Towns

13,000 IN ONE CAMP

HARDERWIJK, Netherlands, Jan. 8.—A new Belgium town in Gelderland, not far from here, and about five minutes' walk from the picturesque village of Nunspeet, has arisen in the last month. It has more inhabitants than any other in the Veluwa, the well wooded, hilly heathland of the Province of Gelderland.

Teh town is one of the cities of refuge for the Belgian fugitives that are being or have been constructed in various parts of Holland, and this particular place is made ready for a population of 13,000. A large tract of heather grown soil has been fenced in with barbed wire, and within this inclosure has been built a town of wooden buildings, a town in three parts, each separated from the others by long, wide stretches of heather.

Live in Wooden Sheds.

The wooden sheds have double walls to exclude cold, and are covered with plates of a kind of asbestigranito, impervious to the wet. Each building can shelter 250 persons, who sleep in little rooms designed for five persons each. The buildings are heated by huge stoves.

Meals are served in great common dining rooms for 1,000 persons each, with long tables and benches alongside. These dining sheds stand close to the kitchen, where ten big stoves are kept going all day for cooking. No separate cooking is allowed in the living and sleeping buildings and no smoking either—all for fear of a possible fire, which might have most disastrous consequences in this town of timber. The whole town is electrically lighted.

Two Sheds Used as Prisons.

Hussars guard its outer approaches and it is policed inside by more soldiers. This is very necessary, for not all the fugitives are of the kind that love law and order. If necessary disturbers can be "interned" in the two prison sheds, one for the men (Caledonia), the other for the women (Congo), which stand in an enclosure of barbed wire in the middle of the town. Besides these useful but unpleasant public buildings there are several others, an assembly hall, a post-office, a Church, and a school.

There also is a store—just one—where those few fugitives who still possess savings or those who have had some money given them can buy some little extras for themselves. The fugitives at the camp at Oldebroek are all being moved to this new town, which is less exposed to the winds. Besides, unless a large number of fresh refugees come in, the Oldebroek camp will have to be restored to its original possessor, the Dutch army.

Another large refugee town for 10,000 people is being built at Ede, also in Gelderland, and other camps are to be made in other healthful localities, for it has been found absolutely necessary to evacuate the first fugitive camps, those in North Brabant, Zeeland, and Limburg.

METZ OBJECT OF FRENCH AMBITION

Man Who May Succeed In Recapturing The City Is Sure Of Immortal Fame

Ever since Marshal Bazaine surrendered the Capital of Lorraine certain keys of the gates of Metz, says an Exchange, have been held in Paris awaiting the time when France should reclaim the city, which up to that disastrous day in 1870 had never been conquered as a fortress by an enemy.

One of the centres of conflict to-day is the region between Metz and Verdun, and French aviators are scouting over the city and dropping bombs upon its great circle of forts, La Pacelle, as the city has been called because of its impregnability, is far stronger to-day than half a century ago, yet the forts were intact when the capitulation yielded 175,000 prisoners of war to the Germans and left the road to Paris open without obstacle to their troops. A new chain of forts has been built since 1899, and Metz and Strassburg are now the chief fortresses of the western frontier of the German Empire.

The man who succeeds in taking Metz will insure for himself an immorality of fame measurable only by the depths of chagrin and the furious anger into which its loss plunged the people of France. Gambetta had escaped from Paris in a balloon and was earning the admiration of the world by his superhuman exertions at Tours. Bazaine ha fought well in Algeria, Spain and the Crimea, and had been the leader of the French in Mexico in the time of Maximilian. Opinions will always differ as to the degree of his culpability for the surrender of October 27, 1870.

Three years after he was tried by court-martial and sentenced to degradation and death. The sentence was commuted to imprisonment for twenty years. But the condemnation was doubtless due in part to the necessity of making some concesion to the popular cry for vengeance and a victim. Through all these intervening years the French people have cherished the memory of that fallen capital and, characteristically, they have draped monuments for its fall and treasured the keys that were brought safely away when the army of the Rhine marched out of the gates. No event would cause such a frenzy of rejoicing throughout France as the capture of Metz.

That Racking Persistent Cough

Can Be Quickly Cured By DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to the general action of "Dr. Wood's" for the simple reason that this valuable preparation combines all the [illegible] healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, with which is combined Wild Cherry Bark, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent barks and herbs. This makes it, without any chance of denial, the best cough medicine on the market to-day.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that it is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark, and that the name, The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., appears on the wrapper. Price, 25c and 50c.

Mrs. H. C. Kingston, Moose Jaw, Sask., writes: "I wish to recommend Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup as being the best cough medicine on the market. A few months ago I took a severe cold which left me with a racking cough. After trying several cough remedies, with no result, I decided to get a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking the first two doses it began to effect a cure, and after continuing its use for a short time, I was entirely cured. I cannot say too much in its praise."

The Supreme Test of a Healing Agent

Psoriasis or Chronic Eczema Defied All Treatment Until Dr. Chase's Ointment Was Used.

After suffering with the terrible itching of Psoriasis for five years, and being told by physicians that she could not be cured, Mrs. Massey turned to Dr. Chase's Ointment and was entirely cured.

You will find this letter interesting, and will not wonder that the writer is enthusiastic in praising this ointment.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Consecon, Ont., writes:—"For five years I suffered with what three doctors called psoriasis. They could not help me, and one of them told me if anyone offered to guarantee a cure for $50.00 to keep my money, as I could not be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this ointment enough."

Can you imagine a more severe test for Dr. Chase's Ointment? This should convince you that as a cure for eczema and all forms of itching skin disease Dr. Chase's Ointment stands supreme. Put it to the test. 60c a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Fire Chief Howard Presents His Seventh Annual Report

Fire Loss During 1914 Amounted to $11,583.00--The Department Responded to 132 Alarms of Fire--Apparatus Travelled 148 Miles---Only One Accident Recorded in the Department.

During the year 1914, the Peterborough Fire Department responded to 132 alarms of fire. This as compared with the 197 of alarms received during the previous year indicates a substantion decrease. The total fire loss in 1914 was several thousand dollars lower than that of 1913, when it reached the sum of $17,400. Last year's fire loss amounted to $11,583.00.

Following is the seventh annual report of the Fire Department for the year ending December 31st, 1914. It was presented at the inaugural meeting of the City Council:

Travelled 148 Miles.

During the year, the Department responded to 132 alarms of fire and in doing so the apparatus travelled 148 miles. We laid 29,400 feet of 2½-inch fire hose and raised 142 feet of ladders.

In addition to attending the number of fire mentioned, weekly fire drill was conducted throughout the year laying 21,000 feet of standard fire hose and raising 1,900 feet of ladders.

In extinguishing fires we used 297 gallons of chemicals. The total damage by fire, as near as could be estimated, for the year 1914 was $11,583.00 divided as follows:

Damage to buildings $2,298.00
Damage to contents 9,285.00

Inspections.

The systematic inspection of Public Buildings, Wholesale, Retail and Manufacturing Establishments has been carried on throughout the year and has been productive of much good, with splendid beneficial results in the matter of fire protection.

The work of the Department has been exceptionally successful from many standpoints. We have been fortunate in receiving alarms of fire while they were in the incipient stage, and by being specially alert at all times we have been able to prevent any of the fires reaching the conflagration stage. The merchants and manufacturers have this year, more than any previous year, shown a disposition to be cautious and to safeguard their individual premises; in consequence of this state of affairs, the fire losses have been less than any previous year in the history of the Department.

The whole general public are evidently taking kindly to the suggestions offered by this Department for the prevention of fire. I am pleased to be able to report that we have had the general co-operation of the citizens at large, hence my report to your Honourable Body is a splendid showing for our city. Something to be proud of.

Only one accident happened in the Department during the year, by which one fireman was laid up for 28 days.

We regret the death of one member. The late Joseph Jefferson died on October 19th from natural causes.

Appropriation.

Although the appropriations for the year were well pared by your Committee in charge, I am pleased to be able to state that, through the valuable assistance of Alderman G. Walter Green, the Chairman of the Board, whose wise counsel and business methods, coupled with the strictest economy, enabled us to finance the affairs of the Department on the amount allotted, and come out at the end of the year with a small balance on the right side, despite the fact that we were faced with several items of expenditure that were not provided for in the original estimates. I sincerely trust your Committee will take this into account and be as liberal and considerate as possible in providing sufficient funds to finance the affairs of the Department for the year 1915.

It is not my intention to press the claims of the Department for any extras this coming year owing to the general outlook in financial affairs. The matter of providing underground cable for the Fire Alarm System will be a somewhat expensive item and the advisability of purchasing a Chemical Engine for Peterborough, I believe, has been sufficiently demonstrated to warrant such an undertaking.

One Man Added.

During the year 1914, one man was added to the staff—two new fire alarm boxes were installed—one new exercise and supply waggon was purchased, and also a Pulmotor for life-saving. The wisdom of purchasing a Pulmotor is beyond any doubt, as it has been called into requisition several times with the desired effect of saving life.

I have great pleasure in reporting the excellent behaviour of your Firemen during the past year. Only three slight breaches of discipline occurred and these were adjusted in a satisfactory manner by the Chairman of the Board and the Fire Chief. The Firemen have been faithful to duty, courteous and polite to the public and have continued to take a keen interest in the welfare of the affairs of the Department and the protection of life and property.

General Health Good.

The general health of the Department has been good.

You will please find attached to this Report a Stock Sheet showing the amount of equipment and supplies on hand, January the First, 1915,—a table showing the number of alarms of fire received during the year—the date of each fire—the day of the week on which alarms were received—the time of day or night on which fire alarms occurred—the causes of fires as near as could be ascertained—the names and addresses of persons having fires—the names of the owners of buildings where fires occurred — how alarms were received—by Fire Alarm Street boxes, Telephone, or verbal—the estimated damage resulting from fires—the number of miles the apparatus travelled—the number of feet of ladders raised—the number of feet of hose used—the number of gallons of chemicals used—the number of telephone calls received at the Fire Station in each month—the number of street lights reported out by citizens and police—and the number of inspections made by the Department. A comparative tabulated state of former years is also attached.

In Conclusion.

In conclusion, I wish to thank the gentlemen of last year's Council for their assistance and kind co-operation, especially Alderman G. Walter Green, the Chairman of the Board, for the many hours of patient, painstaking interest in the general affairs, workings and doings of the Department.

The Chief of Police and his staff of Constables have rendered valuable assistance from time to time, which is highly appreciated.

The friendly relations existing between the City Officials and the members of this Department are worthy of note.

We also wish to thank the Public Press for the many kind references to the Department from time to time, throughout the year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. A. HOWARD,
Chief, Fire Department.

Dog Collars Are Stolen

Sir,—I would like to draw the attention of the public to an act which is a mean, despicable act, and which is being carried on by a few so-called "honourable citizens of Peterborough," and that is, the coaxing away of dogs from their original homes and stealing the collars. There have, of late, been quite a few complaints of this nature. In my case, I purchased a collar, which cost 65 cents. This as well as a new collar which had only been on the dog one day, disappeared in turn. At this rate, one can hardly put a dog on the street, looking as though they belonged to anybody even though the license has been paid for such, without having either dog or collar taken. The law holds that you must actually see the act committed before one can expect to have their rights recognized. This should never be. If either can be traced to any particular place, the people living there should be made to answer for it. Trusting the like of such will see this and avoid trouble in the future. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this space in your valuable paper.—I remain, yours truly,

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

At last night's meeting of the City Council a resolution was brought in recommending that a special committee be appointed to go over the list of civic employees with a view of cutting out any unnecessary officials, and also to place those retained as civic employees on the same schedule of salary previous to last increase. Financial strengthening was given as the reason for this step. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

Election of Representatives.

Dr. Amys, G. H. Duncan and Jas. Murty were re-elected to the Board of Health. Ald. Stratton was elected to the Committee, which has charge of the charitable funds under the will of the late Almria Grover Foley. Mr. R. H. R. Kenner was reappointed as the Council's representative on the Public Library Board.

Library Estimates.

The Public Library has a balance on hand of $276.48. The estimates required for this year amount to $2,800. The matter has been referred to the Finance Committee of the City Council.

Want Street Paved.

The Council is in receipt of a letter from E. G. Patterson calling attention to a petition signed by a number of the property owners on Hunter street, from Stewart to Walton street, asking that that section of Hunter street be paved. Those who have signed the petition represent about ninety-five per cent. of he assessment. The matter has been referred to the Board of Works.

Electrical Inspector.

The matter of appointing H. A. Fife to the staff of the Public Utilities Commission has been referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee. If appointed he will undertake the work of electrical inspection.

DEADLOCK ON EASTERN SIDE

Change in Weather or Entry of Roumania Would Bring Marked Change

RUSS IN BUKOWINA

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Operations are at a standstill in the eastern area, and there is practically a deadlock. Only a change in the weather or the entrance into the war of Roumania or Italy, or both, is likely to bring any marked change in the military situation in Europe for some time to come.

What turn the weather will take, no one can predict, but the belief is growing in the countries allied against Germany, Austria and Turkey that Roumania with her well-trained army of not less than 400,000 men, which she is now able to equip, provision and finance—will at an early date throw herself into the conflict, which would in effect link Roumania with the extreme Russian left, now forcing its way into Hungary through Bukowina.

Taking into consideration the Serbians and Montenegrins, this would form a line menacing Austria-Hungary along the entire south-eastern frontier from Russia to the Adriatic.

BUKOWINA IN RUSSIAN HANDS.

Practically the whole of Bukowina is now in Russian hands, and despatches reaching London from Bucharest say that thousands of fugitives from that territory are crossing the Roumanian frontier, some of them developments arising from the occu- proceeding to Vienna. It is in the developments arising from the occupation of Bukowina that interest is now centred, as it is believed to have an immediate bearing on the Roumanian situation.

The British military experts, conceding that there is a virtual deadlock elsewhere, are marking time, pending the crisis.

Simultaneously with the Russian advance through Bukowina there is developing a further tightening grip on Cracow.

ALLIES ARE STRIVING TO SEIZE RAILWAY

Violent Fighting is Going on to North of Town But Activity in North is Limited Almost Entirely to Artillery Duel

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Little change is observed on the western front. In Alsace the French continue, by creeping and sporadic charges, their attempts to force their way nearer the Rhine, but there has been snow in the Vosges, and it is noticeable that neither side claims any new progress. The Germans threw heavy reinforcements into Alsace after the recent French advance, and apparently they have been able to hold their ground, in view of the failure of the French to consolidate the positions they took after much hard fighting.

With a comparative lull in this quarter and artillery duels predominating near the Belgian coast, fighting of a desperate character has broken out in the centre, notably to the northeast of Soissons, which bids fair, through bombardments, to suffer the fate of Rheims, and further east, in the vicinity of Perthes and Beausejour, from which points the allies have been trying to reach the important railway to the north, the seizure of which would cut one of the German main arteries of communication.

The official communications of the contending nations do not agree as to the outcome of the recent fighting in these areas. The allies claim to have forged ahead from Soissons; the Germans say these attacks have not been fruitful, and that fighting is proceeding.

The allies contend that they have advanced north of Perthes and still hold the ground at Beausejour, to the north and east. The Germans make no mention of fighting to the north of Perthes, but maintain that they have advanced east of the village. The fighting in the vicinity of Beausejour, which the allies consider so important, they ignore.

French war office said:

"There is no change in the situation to be chronicled."

The afternoon bulletin said:

"From the sea to the Lys, there was yesterday an intermittent and not very intense cannonading. In the region of Ypres our artillery responded efficaciously to the artillery of the enemy, and sent well-placed shots against the German trenches.

"From the Lys to the Oise, in the region of Boisselle, our troops took possession of a trench of the enemy after a violent fight. To the northeast of Soissons, on 'Spur 132,' they yesterday repulsed a German attack. Following this, they attacked and occupied two lines of the enemy's trenches captured Jan. 3, and assuring complete possession of 'Spur 132.'

"On the Aisne and in Champagne, as far as Rheims, there have been artillery exchanges. From Rheims to the Argonne our artillery bombarded the first line trenches of the enemy and the shelters of the reserves. To the north of Perthes, after having driven back the counter-attacks referred to in last night's communication, we made progress and gained 200 yards of trenches.

"To the north of Beausejour the enemy made a desperate effort to recapture the little fort which he had previously lost. His counter-attacks were delivered with energy. In each of them two battalions were engaged, the second advancing in close formation. Each attack was carried on with determination, but each was repulsed.

"In the Argonne there were some few small engagements, and our front was maintained. Between the Meuse and the Moselle the day passed calmly. In the Vosges there was a heavy fall of snow. Some shells fell in the Thann and on 'Hill 425'."

EXTRAORDINARY ANNOUNCEMENT OF IMPORTANCE

THE REID CO.

WILL START

on JANUARY 16th

A GREAT SALE OF WOMEN'S APPAREL

The first, and what is likely to prove the greatest apparel sale of 1915 will start on January 16th at The Reid Co.'s. Our stocks are large, the garments they contain are fashionable and desirable.

Economical women of Peterborough and vicinity have doubtless been waiting for this great bargain movement, and this announcement is made in advance of the sale so as to give everyone an opportunity to prepare for it.

This clearance offers an unequalled chance to purchase Winter Coats, Suits and Dresses at extraordinary savings. As a general rule the prices that will prevail here during this sale are substantially less than equal qualities of apparel would cost if purchased wholesale.

Remember the date—SATURDAY, January 16th!

CZAR'S BROTHER-IN-LAW IS KILLED IN ACTION.

Grand Duke Alexander Loses Life in Fighting at Miandoab, Persia.

BERLIN, Jan. 10.—A Turkish official statement reports that Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch, brother-in-law of Emperor Nicholas, has been killed in the fighting at Miandoab, Persia.

The Grand Duke, who was born at Tiflis on April 13, 1866, married on August 6, 1894, Grand Duchess Xenia, daughter of the Czar Alexander III. and sister of the present Emperor, in the Imperial palace at Peterhof. Among the guests were the Queen of Greece, the Crown Prince of Denmark and the Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII.

The Grand Duke was greatly interested in aviation. He was President of the Russian Aerial League, and took several flights in Mr. Hugh Robinson's aeroplane, which the Curtiss Company exhibited in St. Petersburg. As Vice-Admiral of the Russian fleet he did much to establish the flying corps of the Russian navy.

FEAR INTERNAL TROUBLE.

Members of Turkish Government Are Ready For Quick Getaway.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 8.—Despatches reaching here from Constantinople describe the situation in the Turkish capital as increasingly alarming.

The local authorities appear to apprehend not only attack from the outside, but internal disorders as well. The archives of the state have been packed up ready for removal from the city, and many of them already have been sent away.

Preparations have been completed also for the removal of the Treasury, and locomotives are kept constantly under steam in the railroad yards at Stamboul to meet the possible necessity of conveying the officials of the Government to a place of safety at short notice.

Preparations have been made at Adrianople for the quartering of the state officials should eventualities cause the Porte to decide to quit the present capital.

MORE FIRES OCCURRED ON TUESDAY THAN ANY OTHER DAY

Some Interesting Items That Were Embodied In The Annual Report of Fire Chief Howard—The Causes of Fires - Number of Lights Reported Out

According to the report of Fire Chief Howard covering the work of the Department for the year 1914, it will be seen that there were more fires on Tuesday than any other day of the week. Sunday was also a busy day for the Department. The report also goes to show that the telephone is the most common means of summoning the Department.

The appended extracts from the Chief Howard's seventh annual report contain many interesting details concerning the operation of the Department over which he has control.

STATEMENT FROM THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Concerning the Cost of Constructing the New East and West Ward Schools and the Consequent Overdraft of $18,000

Some time ago the Board of Education waited upon the Finance Committee of the City Council with the request that the Council arrange for an issue of short term debentures sufficient to meet the overdraft incurred in the construction of the new East and West Ward Schools. This overdraft amounts to eighteen thousand dollars. The Board was asked to submit a statement covering the cost of the work involved in the construction of the schools. This statement was submitted at last night's meeting of the City Council. It contains the following:

Will Seek Wider Powers

City Will Have a Bill to Submit to the Legislature

Peterborough is to have a private bill this year, which will contain three clauses.

One to authorise the granting by Council, without the assent of the electors, of the sum of $10,000 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and to meet the cost of such a grant by the issue of debentures.

Ald. Stratton objected to this on the grounds that it was originally intended to meet this expenditure out of the taxes, and not "load it on posterity." It was pointed out that it was not necessary to adopt such a course even if the bill passed the Legislature.

SECOND CLAUSE.

The second clause of the bill is to authorise the Council to pass by-laws from time to time, without the assent of the electors, to borrow money by the issue of the debentures to replace money which has been expended by the Peterborough Water Commissioners of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, in the construction of the waterworks dam and in permanent improvements in the waterworks, or the electric lighting and power system of the City, and for the purchase and installation of an additional pumping unit for the waterworks and money that may hereafter be expended by the Commission in the laying of mains and improving and extending the electric lighting and power systems of the City.

This is the clause that was characterised as "tob indefinite" by Ald. Stratton at last night's meeting of the committee of the whole Council.

THIRD CLAUSE.

The third clause is to provide for an arrangement with the G. T. R. for a lease to the C. G. E. of a part of the right-of-way of the Peterborough and Chemong Lake branch of the G. T. R. as a testing track for electric locomotives, and authorising the crossing of highways in the City of Peterborough and with the approval of the Council of the Township of Smith.

GERMANS STRUGGLING TO CAPTURE A FOREST

So Great is the Slaughter as Teutons Advance in Solid Formation Again and Again That Russians Have Piled Up Dead in Front of Machine Guns.

LONDON, Jan. 12. — The Times' correspondent at Petrograd telegraphs: During the past week the offensive action of the German forces in Poland has been concentrated within a narrow zone, approximately some 30 miles west of Warsaw. The zone runs along the right bank of the Rawka river, between the hamlet of Mozeli, two miles south of Bolimow and Sucha, a village approximately equidistant from Bolimow and Sochazew.

Here the Germans hold two army corps, one of which is in reserve. The other is on the firing line. Here also they have placed in position a large number of heavy guns. The German trenches are on the easterly bank, and run approximately parallel with the course of the Rawka for a couple of miles. In some cases the German trench runs through one side of a village while the Russian trench runs through the other.

It is believed the Germans are straining every nerve to gain possession of the Bolimow woods. It would seem that they are hopeful of piercing the Russian lines if they can once establish themselves in these woods.

Very fierce fighting has been in progress since Monday last in the vicinity of Bolimow. Positions are frequently changing hands, but despite the enormous sacrifices of men and the almost unceasing bombardment the Germans have entirely failed to make any serious headway.

A wounded officer related how his regiment, which was holding the trenches in one of the Bolimow positions, had repulsed thirteen consecutive attacks in one night. The enemy came on in close columns, but was mowed down to a man.

After the tenth attack had thus been stopped bodies were piled so high that the Russian riflemen were unable to shoot, and men were sent out to heap the bodies in such a way as to form embrasures for the machine guns. The three next attacks were repulsed from behind the shelter of the German bodies.

An unofficial dispatch from Petrograd says:

"On the Austrian front the enemy is attempting to execute great changes in his general position in view of the rapid and stalwart Russian advance through Bukowina."

The following official communication was issued last night from General Headquarters at Petrograd:

"On the left bank of the Vistula, both day and night on Jan. 10, the Germans attempted without success to attack our line at several points, but were repulsed everywhere by our fire.

"In an attack in the region of the village of Samice, east of Skierniewice, the Germans reached our barbed wire entanglements and began to shout: 'Do not fire; we are yours.'

"However, as similar strategems had been employed before, the vigilance of our troops was not deceived by this manoeuvre of the Germans, and we directed against them a destructive fire and delivered a counter-attack, repulsing the enemy and inflicting heavy losses upon them.

"In Galicia the cannon and rifle-fire has been kept going, and we remain in contact with the enemy."

THE MUNICIPAL SKATING RINK

Has Been Consigned to the Care of Aldermen Dobbin and Johnston

Aldermen Dobbin and Johnston have been named as a Committee to play the part of sponsers to the civic skating rink. They will be given an opportunity to find out far one hundred dollars will go towards the maintenance of the rink. Skating hours will be from nine o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night. Ad. Duffus was given authority to have the rink flooded by the Fire Department, also any other free rinks in the City. The water is supplied free by the Water Commissioners in return for free skating privileges.

REV. CANON DAVIDSON URGED PAYMENT OF MONEYS WE MAY OWE

In conformity with a practice of previous years, Rev. Canon Davidson directed the attention of the congregation of St. John's church at both services on Sunday to the importance as New Year's duty of people promptly meeting their financial obligations. Failure to do this caused much inconvenience and distress. Money due to others for goods bought or service rendered belonged to them and should be paid. We were all interdependent, Rev. Canon Davidson pointed out, and thoughtlessness and procrastination affected a wide circle. This duty of making payment is of special importance this year and when payment in full is impossible some settlement should be effected.

Studied Missions At Geo. St. League

Last Monday night, the George St. Epworth League received a great incentive in its missionary endeavours, by the splendid address of Mr. Wearing, on "Missions." He spoke upon both foreign and home missions, and regarded them as being of equally great importance. During the last one hundred years, there has been a marked change for the better throughout barbarous countries, due to missionary work, but there is still much to be done. Some of our most intellectually and spiritually developed young men have given their lives for the extension of the Gospel in China, India, Africa and other foreign fields.

Home missions also demand much thought and support on our part. Right here in Northern Ontario are people, homesteaders, who can reckon the time really in years, since they have been inside of a church. These people are deprived of elevating influences for the reason that there are no places of worship within miles of their abodes. The speaker stated that it is a fact that most crimes occur in out-of-the-way country districts, and not in the cities, where the many churches are able to wield their beneficial influence. Many persons, bent on performing Christian work, have gone to such districts, and are labouring among the benighted people with great perseverance and enduring many hardships. But such workers are as yet far too few, and the means at their disposal too limited, and, therefore, we should do our best to promote this good work by giving freely.

This stirring address should have a beneficial effect upon the League, and enthuse its members to greater efforts to reach the goal in mission giving, which they have set. A well-rendered duet by the Misses McKee formed a part of the programme.

ARMIES REQUIRE IMMENSE NUMBER OF BOOTS IN WAR

Never in the history of the world was there anything comparable to the sudden demand for shoes which has been created by the war. John Hanan, he New York shoe manufacturer, who is now in Europe on business, is quoted in a cable despatch from Paris as saying that the demand for army boots is 80,000,000 pairs a year. The figures seem hardly credible, yet by some estimates about 20,000,000 men are more or less under arms; the figures would provide on the average four pairs of boots a year. The English army allows six weeks' service for a pair of boots in the trenches each pair costing $4 or more. At that rate, a war of three years would cost Europe nearly a billion dollars merely for boots. The United States has all of this trade that it can provide for, and Mr. Hanan says that the American factories can provide nearly 160,000 pairs daily for export, or perhaps over 30,000,000 a year, more than a third of the required total. None the less there are likely to be a good many bare-toed soldiers before the war is over.—Springfield Republican.

SEVEN MEN ARE JAILED

Alleged Gang of Burglars Arrested by Toronto Detectives.

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—An inscription on a comic supplement pasted on the wall of a room at 24 Lakeview avenue after they had ransacked the house was responsible indirectly for the arrest of seven men and the recovery of nearly two thousand dollars' worth of stolen jewelry and merchandise during the past few days.

Those at present in custody and the charges against them are: Ernest G. Mill, aged 50, 916 Queen street west, a confidential clerk employed by David Morrison of the same address, theft; Albert Secord, ex-bartender, rooming at 603A College street, receiving stolen property; Arnold Perkins, 4 Widmer street, receiving stolen property; John Batchelor, bartender, Clifton House, receiving stolen property; John Kemp, unemployed, 4 Widmer street, receiving stolen property; James McLaughlin, 79 West Lodge avenue, nine charges of burglary; Arthur Johnson, Frankish avenue, nine charges of burglary, and Henry Cullen, St. Patrick street, who is charged with the theft of candy from his employers, the Harry Webb Co.

Perkins is, the police allege, one of the worst "fences" with whom they have had to deal in some time. In his house on Widmer street, Detective Cronin uncovered goods which had been stolen from Morrison's clothing store, valued at $700. The police also located a large quantity of candy which had been stolen from the Webb company.

Cracow Deserted.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 12.—Cracow is deserted by all but artisans and soldiers, says a Polish newspaper writer from that city, who made his way out and into the Russian lines, and has reached Warsaw. Those of the residents who had means have removed to the interior of Austria and the officers of the municipal administration have removed to Vienna. There are practically no women and children left in the city.

Laborers are throwing up earthworks, while the rest of the civilians left are working in the factories, making shoes, clothing and other articles for the army.

HINDUS IN INDIA ARE LOYAL TO A MAN

Sister of Mr. G. G. Barlow Writes Interesting Letter in Regard to the Conditions—No Trouble is Expected.

EXPRESSIONS OF LOYALTY

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—My sister (Mrs. K. L. Crosthwaite), who has served as a missionary and Deaconess in India for nearly twenty years, and speaks and writes Hindustanee fluently, has sent me the enclosed letter concerning the general and loyal feeling of the Indians in India to-day to the British Raj (King and Emperor).

I thought that your many thousands of readers would like to read the enclosed, through your widely circulated paper. The letter was posted in India on Dec. 14th.—Yours truly,

G. G. BARLOW.

291 Bethune St., Peterborough,
Jan. 11th, 1915.

The following extracts from Mrs. Crosthwaite's letters will be of interest:

Moradabad, India, Nov. 20, 1914.

Turkey's having joined forces with Germany does not appear to have done any harm in India. There have been more emphatic expressions of loyalty to the British Raj from the Mohammedans than there was before. There is some disaffection amongst them, but they wish to be on the winning side, and as long as the Allies continue to succeed we are unlikely to have trouble. A series of serious reverses might perhaps encourage some Mohammedans to have a bid for India, but it is considered unlikely. The Government is very much on the alert and the police are prepared for military duty.

Moradabad, India, Nov. 30, 1914.

I have been very busy this autumn with Red Cross work for our troops at the front. This war is terrible, with the long casualty lists in the papers.

India seems to be going on quietly. I don't think we are likely to have any trouble as long as the Allied armies continue to succeed. The Hindus are loyal to a man. There is some disaffection among the Mohammedans, but nothing active.

I see the Canadian troops received a warm welcome in England, and that more are to be sent.

LIEGE HERO HONOURED.

Bust of General Leman Crowned With Laurel Wreath.

PARIS, Jan. 11.—A bust of General Leman, the defender of Liege, who is now a prisoner of the Germans, was crowned with a wreath of laurel in the presence of representatives of the French and Belgian governments and five thousand spectators in the Trocadero yesterday. During the ceremony Jean Richepin, the dramatist, declaimed "The Marseillaise."

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The junior business boys held their first outing to the toboggan slide last night, Mr. Elmer Brown, their leader, in charge. After enjoying the slide for two hours the boys returned to the building, where a good supper was waiting for them. Several outings have been planned for this winter, and the boys expect to have a very enjoyable time.

Intermediate boys will have their first outing at the slide to-night.

The leaders of boys' groups are requested to have their teams play off their hockey schedule as soon as possible.

The Y.M.C.A. is proud to state that ten more of our members have enlisted for the war and are to leave with the third contingent. This brings our honour roll up to about fifty, while it has cost our work considerable, as the young men taken are from our best workers and leaders. Still, we are very proud of our soldier boys.

W. Flowers, A Theobald and A. Skillcter who are just enlisted for the third contingent, are members of the gymnasium leaders corps and have been responsible for a number of classes that have been conducted in the gymnasium. Allan Sharpe and A. Morrow are two of our best committee men. McKinley, Perry and Eastwood and Portsmouth will also be missed from the activities of the Association.

It is a great pleasure for us from time to time to hear from our boys who are on Salisbury Plain and at Kingston. It was a special pleasure for us to receive calls recently from Stuart Laing and Allan Harper, who are stationed at Kingston.

The Association has been handicapped for lack of funds, but the handicap is not nearly so great as is the removal of these well trained and tireless workers. But we bid them God speed and are sure that their action is in the cause of right.

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Girls! Beautify Your Hair! Make it Soft, Fluffy and Luxuriant.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

Consignment of Fruit

Grown in California by Two Peterborough Boys Has Been Received by Mr. E. F. Mason

Mr. E. F. Mason, the well-known George Street merchant, has received a consignment of unusually fine oranges from Wells and Emmerson of Porterville, California. The fruit, which is of a very fine quality, bears some local significance in that it was grown by two Peterborough boys, in the persons of J. W. Wells and Jas. Emmerson. The latter was connected with the firm of T. W. Robinson, who conducted a store on Simcoe Street. Mr. Emmerson will also be remembered as a teacher in George Street Sunday School. He married a Miss Wells, and, later associated himself with his brother-in-law, J. W. Wells. They conducted a hardware business in Port Arthur for some time, and afterwards removed to California, where they purchased a thirty five acre fruit farm for $50,000. They have been in the business for about two years and, judging by the sample of the oranges received by Mr. Mason, are making a success of their chosen vocation.

JEWS IN THE ARMY.

Over Ten Thousand Are Serving With the British Colors.

LONDON, Jan. 11. — More than 10,000 Jews are now serving in the British army and navy, and the army casualty lists show that six officers and over forty enlisted men have been killed and 150 reported wounded or missing in addition. These figures are compiled by Rev. Michael Adler, the senior Jewish chaplain to the forces. Rev. Mr. Adler has a son in the Royal Fusiliers, and he himself expects to leave for the front soon.

"Before the war," says the rabbi, "there were only 500 Jews in the service. Since the war, all sections of Jewry, rich and poor, have responded. Two of our men have received distinguished conduct medals. Among the Canadian troops are about 200 Jews, mostly sons of naturalized Russian and Roumanian Jews. Jewish soldiers are to be found also in all the training centres in England."

PICTON AND PETES BOTH WON--- NO CHANGE IN THE CLOSE RACE

PICTON WON AT HOME

The race in this group of the intermediate O.H.A. shows no sign of abating in interest. The Picton Pirates, who are setting the pace, beat Bowmanville on Picton ice while the Petes went to Belleville and easily defeated Lawson Whitehead's team by 8 to 2. The blue and white team had the score 3 to 1 at the end of the first period and 8 to 2 at the close of the second. They took things easy in the last period and there was no more scoring. The ice was heavy. The class of the Petes soon asserted itself and they won easily. The boys came through the game without a mishap, with the exception of Joe Moines, who had a toe broken. They had a little bit of excitement in the middle of the night, when the Victoria Hotel, next door to the Queen's, where they were staying, took fire, and they had to turn out. The Victoria House was pretty well gutted, but the fire did not spread to the Queen's.

An Belleville despatch says:

Belleville, Ont., Jan. 11—In a well-contested game here to-night Peterborough Intermediate O. H. A. team defeated Belleville intermediates by a score of 8 to 2. Score in the first period, Peterborough 3, Belleville 1; second, Peterborough 5, Belleville 1; third period, no score. The teams:

PICTON, Ont., Jan. 11.—Picton intermediates made it 5 straight by winning from Bowmanville to-night in a fast, clean game. Not one player went to the fence on either side. The ice was rather soft, and condition told. The score at the end of the first period was 3 to 1. Neither side scored in the second period. Picton came strong in the last ten minutes of the last period and scored three goals, making the final score 6 to 1. In the last period the Bowmanville side was on the defensive most of the time and tired badly. Jack Moxon handled the game in his usual impartial way and pleased both sides, and the crowd. The line-up:

CURLING

The primary competition for the Tankard in Group 3 will be held at the curling rink on Tuesday, January 19. The following clubs will be represented: Bobcaygeon, Cannington, Fenelon Falls, Lindsay, Millbrook, Norwood and Peterborough.

Last night's scheduled games were played on all the ices resulting as follows:

W. G. Montgomery	Jas. Rollins
A. Davidson	R. B. Rogers
J. H. Metheral	E. H. D. Hall
W. H. Taylor	T. Brightman
Skip 15	Skip 9
J. W. Koster	A. Laing
F. Cressman	A. H. Webb
G. Benor	J. J. Duffus
D. Davidson	Dr. Greer
Skip 15	Skip 8
A. Laing	J. J. Murphy
T. H. Hooper	E. Vernon
Wm. McCracken	W. G. Read
R. Neill	J. H. Ferguson
Skip 13	Skip 7
C. G. Graham	L. Potvin
Dr. Tennant	J. Wolstenholme
W. H. Collier	M. C. Tooley

R. Dobbin	C. E. Smith
A. Best	G. Hill
J. E. A. Fitzgerald	W. H. Denham
Skip 21	Skip 11

BOWLING

The Beginners run against a tough proposition last night when they rolled Pidgeon's lowly Unknowns. The Beginners were shy one man, but with the dead man rule, were allowed 100 pins per game for the missing link. At that the Beginners took two out of the three games. The score follows:

Unknowns	1	2	3
Carruthers	128	154	125—407
Nicol	122	107	111—340
Pidgeon	131	126	118—375
Handicap	25	25	25— 75
	406	412	379—1197
Beginners.
Missing Link	100	100	100—300
Hardill	131	155	121—407
Dawson	159	177	177—513
	390	432	398—1220

As usual Dawson of the Beginners had a good string, with 513, for the three, and from present indications looks good to get away with the high average for the tournament.

To-night's Game at Brock Street Rink Will Be a Battle

The ice is in good shape for to-night's Junior game at Brock St. Rink, when the Cobourg and Peterborough Juniors collide in a game that will decide the fate of one of them as far as the district honours are concerned. A loss puts either team out so that it should be a battle royal. Just because the Petes won in Cobourg there is no reason to expect an easy game to-night. On the other hand, judging by last week's game, the homesters will have to step all the way, and unless they are at the top of their form will be in danger of defeat They can't afford to lose to-night and may be counted upon to chase the Lakeshore gang from gong to gong.

The Petes' line-up will probably be as follows, the nine players mentioned being asked to be on hand sharp at 7:30 o'clock:

Goal—Legros.
Right Defence—Long.
Rover—Rose.
Centre—Jackson.
Spares—Smyth, O'Connell.

Season's Best Game On Friday Night Picton Pirates Here

The game of the season will be the batle at Brock Street Rink, on Friday night when the Picton and Peterborough Intermediates will meet in what promises to be the decisive game for the group honours. Peterborough has already lost to Picton in the latter town and another defeat on Friday night will put the locals out of the running. Undoubtedly the biggest crowd of the season will be on hand. The plan of the reserved seats opens to-day, at the Morgan Hardware Company's store and the tickets will be eagerly snapped up.

Pammett, R. Stevenson, L. Clarke, A. Heard, N. Pammett, A. Pidgeon, C. Devey, Morphet, R. Lockhart, H. Crowe.

Valuable Horse Was Smothered

Animals Frightened at a Number of Children Who Were Sleighriding

It is understood that some steps will be taken to restrain the sleigh-riding propensities of the youths in East City, since the accident on Friday last when Mr. Thomas Petrie, of Otonabee, lost a valuable horse.

Mr. Petrie was driving south on Mark Street when the team which he was driving frightened at a number of children who were sleigh-riding on Sophia Street. Mr. Petrie was thrown out and the horses ran away. They collided with Mr. W. Rutherford, a rural mail carrier and threw him out, after which they turned around and headed towards the Lift-Lock. When nearing the Lock the animals fell and one of them was smothered.

WILL ENFORCE REGULATIONS

Pertaining to the Cutting of Ice on Local Waters

Ice intended for domestic use cannot be cut in local waters without a permit from the Board of Health. Sanitary Inspector Spence has been instructed to see that this regulation is strictly enforced. Anyone who is unable to produce the necessary permit when the Inspector happens along is liable to prosecution. This regulation was enacted by the Provincial Board of Health.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—Wild selling of wheat resulted today from reports that the fleets of England and France were successfully breaking thru the Turkish defences of the Dardanelles. After a downward plunge of 5⅝c from the top figures today the market closed restless 2c to 3⅛c under Saturday night. Other leading staples, too, all finished at a decided setback, 1¼c to 1⅝c for corn, 1c to 1⅜c for oats and 12½c to 50c for provisions.

Cornmeal—Yellow, 98-lb. sacks, $2.60.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 11.—Wheat futures opened unchanged to ⅛c lower, oats ¼c to ⅜c lower and flax 1¼c up. Trading was quiet, a light volume of business being transacted. Fluctuations previous to noon were ⅛c to 1c, and for the most part were fractionally higher than opening figures.

The market was, however, extremely excited during the closing hour. Prices were down 3⅜c for May and 3¼c for July from the high points of the day at 12.30, but recovered about one cent, weakening again later. Wheat futures closed 3⅜c lower to 2⅜c lower, cash 2⅜c lower, flax 1⅜c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 11.—There was some demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today and as the prices bid by the early cables were practically the same as Saturday's sales of 100,000 bushels were made. The demand for oats on export account is steady and sales of 50,000 bushels were made to London at 51s, an advance of 6d per quarter. The local trade in coarse grains is quiet, but the tone of the market is firm. The export trade in flour was slow and the local demand is also quiet, but the undertone of the market is firm. A fair trade continues to be done in millfeed. Butter was firm, cheese quiet, eggs active.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 11.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.31⅛; No. 1 northern, $1.30⅛; No. 2 do., $1.27⅛ to $1.29⅛; May, $1.32⅛.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 2328 cattle, 1486 hogs, 535 sheep and lambs and 103 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Committee Will Probe Estimates

That Were Submitted by the School Board

At last night's regular meeting of the City Council, Ald. Saunders complained of the inadequacy of the street light in the South Ward. One morning last week, while going to work shortly after six o'clock, he stepped into a large pool of water. He thought that the lights were turned off too early in the morning. Ald. A. Weir observed that the arc lights in East City were not turned off at all. They burned all day.

"You need lots of light over there," observed the Mayor.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, of the Utilities Commission, promised to look into the matter, and also see that the lights were turned off in East City throughout the day.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Board of Education will receive the first draft on their estimates about the fifteenth of this month. After that Ald. Stratton, chairman of the Finance Committee, will stick his fork into the estimates, turn them over and see if there are any means by which they can be reduced.

Mayor Fuller pointed out that the Council had no option in the matter. The Provincial Act compels them to meet the demands of the School Board.

"There is nothing to prevent us from looking over the estimates to see if the expenditures are justified," said Ald. Stratton. To which the Council agreed.

Music & Drama

O'HARA IN "JACK'S ROMANCE."

There was a splendid house at the Grand last night to be delighted with the splendid presentation of Mr. Pink O'Hara and his very capable company, of "Jack's Romance," a most fetching comedy, brightened in spots by Mr. O'Hara's popular singing of Irish songs. The stage setting of the comedy was delightfully effective, and formed a fine environment of the beautiful dresses of the 18th century, in the days of powder. The play was capitally put on, the action of Mr. O'Hara and the powerful characters being natural and unconstrained to an artistically effective degree. The humour is piquant without being broad or banal. It was thought a good, clean, well-staged and well-acted play, and the large audience was in every way delighted.

HAS READ THE EXAMINER FOR 46 YEARS

In renewing his subscription to the Examiner to-day, Mr. R. J. Bird of Los Angeles, draws attention to the fact that he has been a reader of the Examiner for forty-eight years, a note a few weeks ago in the Examiner, to the effect that Mr. H. T. Moore, of Norwood, had been a subscriber to the Examiner for over 46 years, brought the matter to Mr. Bird's attention, and on figuring up he found that he could beat out Mr. Moore by two years. He states that although living in California, and located 3,000 miles from his birthplace, he still looks forward each week to the arrival of the Examiner and peruses the contents with the keenest relish.

PILES OF TURKS ON RECENT FIELD

LONDON, Jan. 11.—A despatch to the Times from its Petrograd correspondent says:

"Telegrams from Tiflis state that the blow inflicted on the Turkish army involves all the corps engaged.

"The scenes in the battle zone were terrible. The ground was piled high with bodies of animals and men, smashed wagons and carts in large numbers. Many of the wounded are still lying on the ground, and many have been frozen.

"A majority of the captured mountain guns are of German make."

The Eleventh Turkish Army Corps suffered a disastrous defeat in the region of Van three days ago.

Thus the entire organization of the Turkish army in Anatolia has been destroyed.

Other despatches say that the Turkish defeat has aroused a dangerous feeling among the people of Constantinople.

WEDDING BELLS

CHOATE—SELKIRK.
The marriage of Beatrice Coulter, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Selkirk, to Harold G. E. Choate, took place at Warsaw on Monday, Jan. 11th. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. H. Brown at the home of the bride's parents, and was witnessed by the immediate relatives.

The bride was becomingly attired in a tailor-made suit of imported worsted, with pattern hat to match.

The newly married couple left immediately following the ceremony for Toronto and Buffalo, where they will spend a few days.

DARLING—WEBSTER.
The marriage took place this afternoon of Mr. Harold Darling to Miss Gladys Webster, both of Warsaw. The ceremony was performed at the Manse by Rev. R. Pogue.

Mr. and Mrs. Darling will reside in Dummer.

The Quaker Oats Company announce that they are paying $1.25 per bushel for Ontario winter wheat, a record price in this district. The price for some time has been around $1.18.

INTERESTING SOUVENIR

Christmas Number of 2nd Battalion Bulletin Received by The Examiner

The Examiner is indebted to Major G. W. Bennett of Peterborough, commanding A Company of the 2nd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, for a copy of the Special Christmas Number of the 2nd Battalion Bulletin, edited by Signaller C. Crean of C Company. The number is a most interesting one from the cover embellished with the Maple Leaf, and a photograph of a formidable looking bulldog standing over the Union Jack to the holiday greetings which form the finale. Some interesting gossip of camp life, photographs of the officers, fine pictures of the battalion on parade, a few "soldier" jokes, and many other lively items, make the Bulletin one to be treasured.

The Bulletin also gives the following verses:

The Kaiser's Fate.

Come all ye jolly lumbermen; to you I will relate,
Unto you all I'll tell the way the Kaiser met his fate—
Just how we took away his crown, and put him on the bum!
'Twas when we marched from Valcartier and went to Bal-gi-um.

We'd plenty socks and blankets, and plenty things to eat,
Our cosy little outfit was pretty hard to beat.
We answered to the bugle call, we answered to the drum,
And marched away from Valcartier and went to Belgium.

We fired some rounds of marmalade, some doughnuts hard as rocks.
We wadded them down with blankets, with wrist-bands and with socks,
We fired a handsome custard-pie, a dread soft-nosed dum-dum;
We brought it there from Valcartier to use in Belgium.

The enemy was starvin' and they were filled with woe.
We put canned salmon in our gun, and fired it at the foe!
They all come in to breakfast — by millions they did come
To meet the boys from Valcartier that went to Bel-gi-um.

The Germans they surrendered, their eyes were full of tears.
They hadn't had so much to eat for many, many years.
They asked us in amazement "Where do youse folks come from?"
We said, "We come from Valcartier to visit Bel-gi-um."

Oh! with our store of doughnuts, our pumpkin-pie, and jam,
Our stock of food canned salmon, our bread, cheese and ham,
We all have come from Canada, and we will make it hum;
We'll capture all of Europe as well as Bel-gi-um.

—Anon.

Since our last issue things have been going very well, and all the boys are happy; and I am pleased to be able to state that there is very little sickness among the boys of our Battalion, considering the weather that we have been having of late. They all feel much more satisfied now that we have got out of the mud by moving our camp over on high ground, about a quarter of a mile to the rear of Divisional Headquarters, where it is nice and dry, and prospects of it remaining so for some time; at least, it will require an awful lot of traffic to make it as bad as the old ground. Then, again, our Q. M. stores have received a supply of coal oil stoves and have issued a number to each Company, and supply each each ten with three pints of coal oil daily, which is very much appreciated.

We have finished our musketry tests, and it is pleasing to be able to record that all men of the Battalion have done remarkably well; in fact, a big percentage of the men have made possibles. Our Bugle Band is now in fine shape, due mainly to constant practice, under the able leadership of Bugler-Sergt. Day, who has been unsparing in his efforts to get things in proper trim; and he has succeeded, and we now enjoy the pleasure of marching to music as the Band always comes out when the Battalion go on route-march. Our Library is well stocked with papers, magazines, etc., and we have got a piano placed therein for the use of the boys, and many a pleasant hour is spent. We have not got our Orchestra formed yet, but hope to have everything going merrily before long. One thing that would please all the boys is if we could only get that long-looked-for order to proceed to the front, for then we would feel that we were doing something to help the Mother Country. Of course, we know that the training we are getting here is fitting us for the great hardships that we shall have to endure when we go to the front. However, we trust that we shall be given the opportunity early in the New Year of showing Kaiser Bill where he gets off at.

Its thinness is in the movement

Come inland let us show you how a new, mathematically correct, superior construction of watch called the thin model movement makes possible.

When you will understand how this watch can "fit your pocket like a silver dollar," yet embodies the highest standards of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different and this genuine thin model thinness is from watches made to appear thin by such methods as sacrificing the inside dust protection cap in the back case, or punishing a ladies' slim appearance for the sake of a thin edged case's sake.

Before you buy any watch, be sure to come in and see this genuine thin model watch—the Green Verithin.

GERMANY ALSO PREPARING FOR SPRING CAMPAIGN

LONDON, Jan. 12. — The great armies battling in the eastern and western arenas of the war by artillery exchanges, sapping operations and trench attacks, continue to be aligned to-day much as they were on the first of January. Everywhere the disposition seems to be to await the coming of spring, when, with fresh armies thrown into the field, events promise to move more quickly.

Great Britain is now sending thousands of men to France every week, and, according to to-day's reports from Berlin, Germany, aware of this, is making great military preparations for a counter-movement. All the reserves are being called to the colours, it is declared here, and the further statement is made that the German generals are gathering up the reins to assume active direction of all the campaigns, that is to say the Austro-Hungarian fight against Servia and Russia and the Turkish campaign against Russia and Great Britain.

This briefly is the schedule military observers in London believe will be followed subject, however, to any change which the entrance into war of Roumania and Italy might necessitate.

Russian Leaders Say Everything O.K.

Reinforce Their Entire Front Especially Between the Niemen and Bzura Rivers--Von Hindenburg's Next Movement is Awaited.

(Special Morning Cable.)

PETROGRAD, Jan. 13.—Anticipating an attempt on the part of the Germans to break through the Russian lines at a new point, now that their offensive on the Vistula has been checked, the Russians are reinforcing their entire front from the extreme north to the Pilica River.

Especially strong contingents have been sent to the line along the Niemen and the Bzura rivers. This action is taken because of realization that the Germans must win a way through within the next few weeks or definitely abandon their offensive in Poland until next summer. It is obvious that Gen. Von Hindenburg realizes this fact as well as the Russian commanders.

MARCH RAINS WILL HOLD UP ACTION.

By the middle of March the spring rains will set in, flooding the entire country and making the few roads impassable. So unless he can win through during the next few weeks there will be nothing left for the German commanding general to do but to withdraw all his forces to his own first line of defences.

The general situation in Poland and Galicia is satisfactory to the Russian commanders.

BATTLE FOR PROMONTORY NEAR SOISSONS RAGING

Fierce Struggle for "Spur No. 132"--Germans Hurl Counter Offensive at the Allied Forces

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 12.—The Germans have assumed a violent counter-offensive against the French positions to the north and east of Soissons in a desperate attempt to retrieve the three lines of trenches, more than a mile in length, captured from them during the past four days of terrific fighting.

Opening with a vigorous bombardment, shortly before midnight, the German batteries shelled incessantly the French trenches all during the night, and to-day they followed up the cannonade with an attack against two of the most advanced points of the newly-organized French line. Against the plateau of Perrieres, on the north bank of the Aisne, to the east of the plateau of Vregny, and against "Spur No. 132," the promontory which rises at the extreme eastern edge of the plateau of Vregny, they delivered important attacks. Their object was to retake Spur No. 132," from which the French guns seriously menace their positions and threaten their line of railway communication which now has been brought into range.

Battle Still Raging.

When the report was sent from the front to-night the battle was still in progress. The French were holding their own but the Germans were attacking with ungrecedented energy.

In the Argonne and on the heights of the Meuse the Germans are on the offensive and claim to have made further progress. It is reported that the Germans have sent heavy reinforcements to this district to prevent the French from breaking their lines, which are very close to their own border and not far from Metz.

Fresh German troops despatched to Alsace, combined with the wintry weather, have stopped the French advance in that region. Along the rest of the front the artillery is doing most of the work. Only isolated attacks are being attempted, the state of the weather and the ground making the movements of any large bodies of troops out of the question.

NO SUFFRAGE YET FOR WOMEN OF U.S.A.

Resolution For Amendment Defeated By 204-174 in American House

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Woman suffrage went down to overwhelming defeat in the House of Representatives to-day. By a vote of 204 to 174 the House refused to pass the Bristow-Medill resolution to submit to the different States an amendment to the national constitution providing that the right of suffrage should not be denied because of sex.

A two-thirds majority of the House and Senate is necessary for the passage of any resolution for a constitutional amendment.

The vote was the culmination of a ten-hour battle, in which the perfervid oratory of the champions and opponents of the resolution was cheered and hissed in turn by the women who packed the galleries almost to suffocation. So vociferous were those in the gallery that Speaker Clark several times threatened to have the galleries cleared.

Alsace Is A Big Fortress

Thoroughly Planned for Defence and May Be Difficult to Take

LONDON, Jan. 13.—R. Franklin Tate telegraphs to the Daily News from Paris:

"A correspondent of the Gazette du Lausanne, who has been able to penetrate into Upper Alsace, writes a vivid account of the situation there:

"Alsace from Belfort to the Rhine" he says, "is nothing but a gigantic fortress. Everywhere, around the smallest village, in the woods and fields and on the edge of rocks, defence works have been raised and as you pass along the wonderful Alsatian roads, somewhat torn up now by the heavy guns and supply convoys, at every turn you come upon watchers perched on a tree, crouching on a housetop or dodging behind rocks on the top of a hill searching the grey horizon by the aid of powerful glasses."

The Alsace Situation.

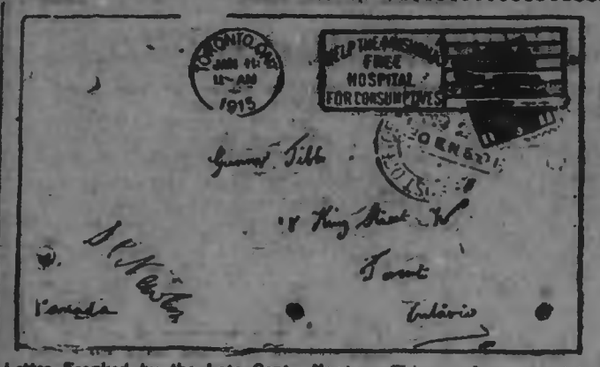
One hundred and twenty thousand German soldiers have been concentrated at Metz to repel the French invasion of Upper Alsace and Lorraine, it is said in a despatch received to-day from Basle, on the German frontier. Rain and snow have caused a cessation of hostilities on a large scale in Alsace, which may result in a loss of some of the advantage gained by the French, whose successes were achieved against German troops that had been weakened by withdrawals to other parts of the battle front.

ROUMANIANS IN WAR NEXT MONTH

Will Begin Campaign Against Hungary in February

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Times correspondent at Sofia says he believes that whatever now happens Roumania will start a campaign in Transylvania probably about the middle of February. The Roumanian Minister to Bulgaria, who is now in Budharest, the correspondent adds, is expected to return soon to Bulgaria, taking with him proposals to facilitate an understanding between Bulgaria and Roumania.

"It is believed," the correspondent declares, "that restitution of the towns of Baltchik and Tecbritch (in that portion of North-eastern Bulgaria which was awarded to Roumania at the end of the Balkan War) will be offered. Roumania formerly had hesitated owing to her doubts concerning Italy's policy, but she is now convinced that Italy will join the allies."



Letter Franked by the Late Capt. Newton.—This envelope, containing a letter from Lance Corporal Hayes of the Princess Patricias, arrived in Toronto simultaneously with the news that Capt. D. O. C. Newton (apparently the man who franked the letter) had been killed in action.

French Drive To Relieve Rheims

Allies Aim a Wedge Near This City and Manifest Activity All Down the Line--Still Hold New Trenches at Soissons

Special Morning Cable:

PARIS, Jan. 13.—French troops are in action to-day, east and west of Rheims, in an effort to drive a wedge through the German lines and thus lift the siege of the city.

All frontal attacks on the main German positions north of Rheims have failed, and the French commander declares that the German line here is too strong to be carried in this way. As a result the new movements have been initiated, and if successful the Germans must retire or face danger of assault from the rear.

SACRIFICE OF MEN AT SOISSONS.

The fighting also continues to the northeast of Soissons, where the Germans are sacrificing men in prodigal fashion in an effort to retake the trenches the French carried by assault last week.

On the heights of the Meuse both sides have attempted forward movements, but so far without success. In the vicinity of St. Mihiel the French are maintaining their new positions, but so far have been unable to gain any additional ground.

STILL NO DETAILS FROM ALSACE.

The Government still withholds details of fighting in Alsace, where the snow has interfered with the planned movements on a large scale. It is stated at headquarters, however, that the French are maintaining all of the positions recently captured.

TYPHOID EPIDEMIC IN GERMAN RANKS.

Prisoners coming from the north say that an epidemic of typhoid prevails in the German ranks. The number of cases is increasing, especially among late arrivals from the volunteer army who have not been inoculated with anti-typhoid germs.

CARGOES OF U.S. MEAT HELD SINCE NOV. 17

Packers Protest Against Detention---One Vessel's Manifest Was Fraudulent---Rubber Entered Under Name of Gum

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Norwegian steamers Alfred Nobel and Bjornstjerne Bjornson, loaded chiefly with lard, bacon and other products of Chicago packing houses, have been held with their cargoes in British ports since the middle of November. The cargoes are consigned "to order" at Copenhagen. The Nobel sailed from New York October 29, and arrived in Liverpool November 17. The Bjornson left New York October 27 and was taken into Leith November 17.

It is said by the owners of the vessels that they sailed from the United States before the British announcement of October 29 that all supplies that a belligerent army might utilise must be definitely consigned to some firm or individual.

The Swedish steamer Fridland, which left New York October 26 for Copenhagen, and arrived at Kirkwall November 10, an was taken thence to Shields November 20, also is still being held. Like the Nobel and Bjornson the Fridland is loaded with packers' products.

A Fraudulent Manifest.

The Foreign Office was advised that the Fridland's manifest was fraudulent, it being alleged that rubber was listed in it as gum. The cargoes of all three ships have been held for a Prize Court.

The Foreign Office says that the delay in bringing the causes to trial was due to the request of the owners for time to complete their evidence. The British Government, it was added, offers to sell the cargoes at auction, but the owners refused to permit this, saying that the basis it then was not the cost required by the British market, and that the other supplies in packages were not desirable for the London trade, and that therefore the prices received would be below the invoice.

It was also stated that the Government offered to release the cargoes if the owners would provide surety bonds equivalent to the total invoice figures, in order to secure the Government should it win a decision in the Prize Court.

Want Invoice Price.

The owners, according to the Foreign Office, say that the bacon and other articles in the cargoes are perishable, and take the position that the British Government should pay the invoice price for them, as it has done for copper, since the cargoes were at sea before Great Britain declared foodstuffs consigned "to order" contraband.

The packers' representatives insist that their trade with Denmark has been large at all times and maintain that the British Government is wrong in assuming that foodstuffs destined for neutral European countries are intended for Germany.

JOFFRE IS TOO BUSY

Neither Reads Nor Writes, Unless to His Wife, Since War Started.

The Point of Contact.

The merchant who is alive to his opportunities will keep in constant touch with his customers, and with others whom he hopes will become his customers. He will keep them informed of the arrivals of new goods, the prevailing tastes or fashions, the latest improvements in things to eat or to wear, or to make housework easier.

And the point of contact is advertising. To advertise intelligently, is an evidence of progressiveness. It is safe to conclude that you will receive the best service and best value from the merchant who seeks your patronage by modern methods.

Germans Still Pouring Men Into Russia's Bottomless Sack

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 12.—H. Hamilton Fyfe, the Daily Mail's correspondent, telegraphs from Petrograd:

"Along the Rawka, west of the Vistula, in the woods and marshland which border the stream, the Germans are still pouring men into the bottomless sack which the Russians hold out to tempt them, for they always try to fight the Germans in the open; then the Russians can reach the enemy's positions with their artillery.

"The Germans still are hammering at the same point along a front of a few miles, but without any obvious tactical idea. The battle is gaining ground that they recognize that it is impossible to take Warsaw. The methods which the Germans are adopting suggest that they do not quite know what to do.

"The military critic of the Russkoye Slovo quotes an army order said to have been issued by the German staff conducting operations in Poland. This order repudiates the idea of attacking the extremely large Russian force which is defending the Warsaw fortress. 'In other words,' says the Russkoye Slovo, 'it means that Field Marshal von Hindenburg's strategy is purely defensive and aimed at saving Silesia from invasion.'"

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

Because that was an easier form of building and the only form understood by these workmen, it was as square as a blockhouse erected in the days of Indian warfare, and it was as solid. In the words of one of its builders, "it would stand thar jest like thet, barrin' fire an' ther wrath of God, 'twell Kingdom come." But it was a house of many windows, and if its doors and shutters were as heavy as if they, too, had been built with a thought of standing a siege, that was because the frailer woodwork of the outer world could not be had. But the logs were solidly laid and their squared faces were smooth inside and out. A broad, high veranda went around the house, and Juanita could look at the structure which was growing day by day to be less of a skeleton, and see in her mind's eye exactly what its finished appearance would be. She would picture the whole place, as the future was to know it, with the little hospital perched on the hill slope and dormitories and workshops lying in an ordered hamlet about a trim campus. Dawn, to whom the growing of such unprecedented splendour was a world's wonder, shared her enthusiasm, and in her anticipation was a sparkle like wine. She used to walk around the sharp curve of the road which hid the place until you were almost upon it and "make-believe" that she was a stranger who had never travelled that road before. She would pretend to be amazed at the sight of a trim hillside with lines of colourful flowers, rows of hollyhock waving a welcome, and as the season advanced, brave lines of nodding marigolds and zinnias like soldiers of peace flaunting banners of welcome.

She and Juanita would stop and expatiate on the scene, which as yet had existence only in their imaginations.

"Wall, livin' land o' Mercy!" Dawn would exclaim with simulated astonishment. "Whoever seed the like of thet before in these hyar mountaings! I've heered tell of flower gyardens down in the settlements of old Kaintuck, but I nuver 'lowed ter see one hyarabouts." Then she would point to where there were to be buttresses of rough stone running here and there along the slopes green with transplanted ferns. These abutments were planned to give to tillers of the mountain sides an object lesson in the preservative value of terracing with which the gardeners of Switzerland and Madeira make fugitive garden spots and vineyards stand steadfast.

"An' would ye just take a peek at them thar rock fandangles," the mountain girl would go on with a twinkle in her blue eyes, mimicking the drawl which she herself was rapidly outgrowing. "I reckon ther feller thet built them thar things aims ter make his durned farm stand hitched. Many's thet field thet's run off, from me, in a tide. Many's ther time I've hed ter prop up a hill of corn with a boulder ter keep hit from a-sleddin' plumb down inter ther valley."

Juanita wished that her cabin could house more occupants, for the plague had left many motherless families and had there been accommodations, many children might have come into her fold. As it was, she had several besides the McNashes as her nucleus and while the weather held good she was rushing her work of timber-felling and building which the winter would halt. Young Jesse at first retained his sullenness of mien, standing on his dignity in this woman-ruled place and refusing to participate in any work which he regarded as incompatible with his man's dignity.

He scowled with infinite contempt over their plans for what he called the "weed gyarden," but as the weeks went on he, too, became enthused and toiled sturdily and uncomplainingly. Jeb, on his visits, was slow of censure or praise, but his face did not lighten and the sparkle of coming autumn found no reflection in the moody eyes, wherein smouldered a growing blood-lust. The girl guessed that he reported progress to Bad Anse Havey, and though she had never invited him and had lost no opportunity to affront him, she began to feel indignant at the clan chief's cool ignoring of her work. Heretofore men had come to her on her own terms. Here was one who could dismiss her from his scheme of things with no care or thought beyond a frank contempt, and her woman's latent vanity was piqued.

* * * * * *

One day in early October young Milt McBriar happened upon Dawn and Juanita walking in the woods.

The gallant colours and the smoky mists of autumn wrapped the forests and brooded in the sky. An elixir went into the blood with each deep-drawn breath and set to stirring forgotten or hitherto unawakened emotions. Effervescence tingled in the air and glory reigned over the woods, where every tree became a torch and every night an artist painting in the dark from a palette of increasing gorgeousness.

There was the fulness and gaiety of a great festival between the horizons, which seemed to communicate itself even to the geese as they waddled pompously up from the creek to banquet at leaky corn-cribs. On the slopes where the first frost had brought down showers of persimmons and walnuts and hickory nuts lay spread, was all the tapestried wonder of a carnival. The sugar trees flamed in scarlet. The oaks and hickories and poplars were garbed in russet and burgundy and yellow. Only the pines did not go mad with the festival spirit, but remained stoically sombre. And in this heady atmosphere of quickened pulses, the McBriar boy halted and gazed at the Havey girl.

Juanita saw the mountain boy's eyes flash with an awakened spirit. She saw a look in his face which she was woman enough to interpret even before he himself dreamed what its meaning might be. The silent gaze of the youth who would some day be chief over the McBriars followed the lissome movements of the girl whose father the McBriars had done to death; followed them mutely and steadfastly, and into his pupils came something softer than any light that had burned there before; softer and hungrier.

Dawn was standing with her head up and her lids half-closed, looking across the valley to the Indian summer haze that slept in smoky purple on the ridges. She wore a dress of red calico and she had thrust in her belt a few crimson leaves from a gum tree and a few yellow ones from a poplar. In her black hair were more of them—from a scarlet sugar tree—and as she felt the eyes of the boy on her face, and realized how she was bedecked, her cheeks, too, kindled into a carmine flush so that she stood there a tremendously vivid little incarnation of barbaric beauty. Juanita position that the two boys recognized each other.

Juanita saw the start with which Jeb's figure stiffened and grew taut. She saw his hands clench themselves and his face turn as white as chalk; saw his chest rise and fall under heavy breathing that hissed through clenched teeth, and her own heart pounded with wild anxiety. But Milt McBriar's face showed nothing. His father's mask-like calmness of feature had come down to him, and as he read the meaning of the other boy's attitude, he merely nodded and said casually, "Howdy, Jeb."

Jeb did not answer. He could not answer. He was straining and punishing every nerve fibre cruelly, simply in standing where he was and keeping his hands at his sides. For a time he remained stiff and white, breathing spasmodically; then without a word he turned and stalked away.

That noon a horseman brought a note across the ridge, and as Juanita Holland read it she felt that all her dreams were crumbling and that the soul of them was paralyzed.

It was a brief note written in a copy-book hand.

"I'll have to ask you," it ran, "to send the McNash children over to my house. Jeb doesn't want them to be consorting with the McBriars, and I can't blame him. He is the head of his family.

"Respectfully,

"Anse Havey."

Danger Signals Warn You of Approaching Paralysis

Slowly and Surely Exhaustion Goes on Until Collapse of the Nerves is the Natural Result.

You may be restless, nervous, irritable and sleepless, but you think there is nothing to be alarmed at. You have no appetite, digestion is impaired, and there is weakness and irregularity of other bodily organs. You feel tired in body and mind, and find that you lack the energy to attend to the daily task.

MRS. ALLAN.

You may not realize that these are the symptoms of nervous prostration and the danger signals which warn you that some form of paralysis is the next step of development.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most successful restorative for the nerves that has ever been offered to the public. This has been proven in many thousands of cases similar to the one described in this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D., 4, Sombra, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and subsequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbors of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

IN THE TRENCHES.

There lay in the trench at daybreak,
A boy who was scarce eighteen;
Yet he hummed to himself a love song,
As he filled up his magazine.

His eye was true and steady,
As his rifle he glanced along,
And with nerves of steel he faced the charge
Still hammering that same old song.

No thoughts of personal danger
From the shot or the bursting shell,
But he paused in his humming to laugh aloud,
As he fired, and a foeman fell.

He was only one of the many
In that laughing, joking crowd,
Who, as they fired at the enemy,
Hummed a tune or sang aloud.

And he lay in the trench at nightfall,
But a bullet had found a place,
And though the song was ended,
He still wore a smile on his face.

Holland did not marvel at the fascinated, almost rapt look that came into young Milt's eyes, and Young Milt, too, as he stood there in the autumn woods was himself no mean figure. His lean body was quick of movement and strong, and his bronzed face bore the straight-looking eyes that carried an assurance of fearless honesty. Juanita remembered that his father's eyes also wore that seeming, and that behind them lay a world of chicane and evil. But the boy had at least all the outward guise of a cleaner and better replica of his sire. He had been away to Lexington to college and was going back. The keen intelligence of his face was marred by no note of meanness, and now as he looked at the girl of the enemy, his shoulders came unconsciously back with something of the pride that shows in men of wild blood, when they feel in their veins the strain of chieftains.

But Dawn, after her first blush, dropped her lids a little and tilted her chin, and without a word snubbed him with the air of a Havey looking down on a McBriar.

Milt met that gaze with a steady one of his own and banteringly said, "Dawn, kinder 'pears like ye mout 'a' got tangled up with a rainbow."

Her voice was cool as she retorted, "I reckon that's better then gittin' mixed up with some other things."

"I was jest a-thinkin' es I looked at ye," went on the boy gravely, "thet hit's better than gittin' mixed up with any other thing."

Dawn turned away and went stalking along the woodland path without a backward glance and Milt followed at her heels, with Juanita, much amused, bringing up the rear. Juanita thought that these two young folk made a splendid pair, specimens of the best of the mountains, as yet unbroken by heavy harness. Then as the younger girl passed under a swinging rope of wild grape vine, stooping low, a tendril caught in her hair and became tangled there.

Without a word young Milt bent forward and was freeing it, tingling through all his pulses as his fingers touched the heavy black mass, but as soon as she was free the girl sprang away and wheeled with fire eyes blazing.

[illegible] do anything I wants," he told her. For a moment they stood looking at each other, then the girl dropped her eyes, but the anger had died out of them and Juanita saw that despite her condescending air, she was not displeased.

Juanita, of course, knew nothing of the suspicion which had led Jeb into the laurel on that summer afternoon, but even without that information when young Milt met them, more often than could be attributed to chance, on their walks and fell into the habit of strolling back with them, strong forebodings began to trouble her.

And one morning these forebodings were verified in crisis, for, while the youthful McBriar lounged near the porch of Juanita's cabin talking with Dawn, another shadow fell across the sunlight: the shadow of Jeb McNash. He had come silently and it was only as young Milt, whose back had been turned, shifted his Doctor Said She Had Bright's Disease.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER.

Bright's disease is a term applied to one of the most serious of all diseases of the kidneys, the symptoms of which are often of a severe character.

Severe pains in the back appear at first and are followed by disturbances of the urinary organs which show that the urine contains a large amount of albumen. Dropsy is also another forerunner of the dreaded Bright's disease. On the first sign of any kidney trouble you should at once put the kidneys right by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. The pill that cures kidney troubles only.

Mrs. C. A. Heistand, Moosva, Alta., writes: "Last May I was taken down sick. The doctor told me I had Bright's disease. My kidneys got so bad I could not rest day or night. The doctor's medicine did not give me any relief. I used four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they put me in good shape again."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pill, so when you ask for "Doan's" do not accept any others with similar names.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

CHRISTMAS AND AFTER

I have been looking on this evening at a merry company of children assembled around that pretty German toy, a Christmas tree.

Being now at home again and alone, the only person in the house awake, my thoughts are drawn by a fascination which I do not to resist to my own childhood to resist to my own childhood. Straight in the middle of the room, cramped in the freedom of its growth by no encircling walls or soon reached ceiling, a shadowy tree arises, and, looking up into the dreamy brightness of its top, for I observe in this tree the singular property that it appears to grow downward toward the earth, I look into my youngest Christmas recollections.

All toys at first I find. But upon the branches of the tree, lower down, how thick the books begin to hang—thin books, in themselves at first, but many of them, with deliciously smooth covers of bright red and green!

"A was an archer and shot at a frog." Of course he was! He was an apple pie also, and there he is! He was a good many things in his time, was A, and so were most of his friends, except X, who had so little versatility that I never knew him to get beyond Xerxes or Xantippe.

But now the very tree itself changes and becomes a beanstalk, the marvellous beanstalk by which Jack climbed up to the giant's house.

Good for Christmas time is the ruddy colour of the cloak in which, the tree making a forest of itself for her to trip through with her basket, Little Red Riding Hood comes to me on Christmas Eve to give me information of the cruelty and treachery of that dissembling wolf who ate her grandmother without making any impression on his appetite and then ate her after making that ferocious joke about his teeth. She was my first love. I felt that if I could have married Little Red Riding Hood I should have known perfect bliss. But it was not to be, and there was nothing for it but to look for the wolf in the Noah's ark there and put him last in the procession on the table as a monster who was to be degraded.

Oh, the wonderful Noah's ark! It was not found seaworthy when put in a washing tub, and the animals were crammed in at the roof and needed to have their legs well shaken down before they could be got in even there, and then 10 to 1 they began to tumble out at the door, which was but imperfectly fastened with a wire latch. But what was that against it?

Again a forest and somebody up in a tree—not Robin Hood, not Valentine, not the Yellow Dwarf; I have passed these and all Mother Bunch's wonders without mention—but an eastern king with the glittering scimitar and turban. It is the setting in of the bright Arabian Nights.

Oh, now all common things become uncommon and quite enchanted to me! All lamps are most wonderful. All rings are talismans. Common flowerpots are full of treasure, with a little earth scattered on the top; trees are for Ali Baba to hide in; beefsteaks are to throw down into the Valley of Diamonds, that the precious stones may stick to them and be carried by the eagles to their nests, whence the traders, with loud cries, will scare them. All the dates imported come from the same tree as that unlucky one with whose shell the merchant knocked out the eye of the genie's invisible son.

But, hark! The waits are playing, and they break my childish sleep. What images do I associate with the Christmas music as I see them set forth on the Christmas tree; Known before all the others, keeping far apart from all the others, they gather round my little bed—an angel speaking to a group of shepherds in a field; some travellers, with eyes uplifted, following a star; a baby in a manger; a child in a spacious temple, talking with great men; a solemn figure, with a mild and beautiful face, raising a dead girl by the hand; again, near a city gate calling back the son of a widow on his bier to life; a crowd of people looking through the open roof of a chamber where he sits and letting down a sick person on a bed with ropes; the same, in a tempest, walking on the waters; in a ship again, on a seashore, teaching a great multitude; again, with a child upon his knee and other children around; again, restoring sight to the blind, speech to the dumb, hearing to the deaf, health to the sick, strength to the lame, knowledge to the ignorant; again, dying upon a cross, watched by armed soldiers, a darkness coming on, the earth beginning to shake and only one voice heard, "Forgive them for they know not what they do!"

Encircled by the social thoughts of Christmas time, still let the benignant figure of my childhood stand unchanged; In every cheerful image and suggestion that the season brings may the bright star that rested above the poor roof be the star of all the Christian world!

A moment's pause, O vanishing tree of which the lower boughs are dark to me yet, and let me look once more. I know there are blank spaces on the branches, where eyes that I have loved have shone and smiled, from which they are departed. But far above I see the raiser of the dead girl and the widow's son—and God is good?—By Charles Dickens.

Third Contingent To Train First at Recruiting Centre.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12. — Orders for the mobilization of the third Canadian expeditionary force were sent out yesterday, and enlistments will be actively under way at all recruiting centres within a few days. In order to secure greater local interest in recruiting and to have the men better prepared for regimental drill, the plan is to make the headquarters of each of the militia regiments throughout the country a recruiting centre where the men will also be held for a short time and given some preliminary training.

The men thus recruited by companies at the local centres will later gather at battalion mobilization centres. For the first contingent the troops were mobilized at Valcartier, and for the second contingent at headquarters of divisional area. The new plan is expected to be better than either.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

P. & O. BOAT WRECKED.

Liner Nile's Passengers and Crew Saved by Japanese Liner.

TOKIO, Jan. 12.—The steamer Fukuju Maru reports by wireless that she has rescued and is bringing to Kobe 170 persons, comprising all the passengers and the crew of the Peninsula & Oriental Steamship Co.'s steamer Nile, which ran ashore on a reef in the inland sea early Monday morning.

It is believed that the Nile sank after she was pulled off the reef near Iwaijima. The vessel was on a voyage from London to Yokohama. She was in command of Capt. Powell.

SUFFERED FROM BILIOUS HEADACHE.

At Times Thought She Would Go Mad.

Headaches are one of the most aggravating troubles a person can have. They are many and varying; but when the headache starts you may be sure that there is some other chief cause of this most painful difficulty. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that there is some other baneful disease which is liable to assert itself unless the cause of the headache is removed. Get rid of the headache and thus perhaps save yourself many years of trial and suffering.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and has also proved itself to be a remedy that cures where all others fail. It does this by removing the cause of the trouble.

Miss Mary A. Roberts, Hampton, N.B., writes: "For about two years I have suffered from bilious headache. At times I thought I would really go mad. Not long ago a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters which I did, and after taking three bottles I have never been troubled with any kind of a headache. I think that B.B.B. is one of the wonders of the world. I can safely recommend it to all who suffer from bilious headache."

Burdock Blood Bitters is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ANY DYSPEPTIC CAN GET WELL

By Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Says Capt. Swan

Life is very miserable to those who suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach and Biliousness. This letter from Captain Swan (one of the best known skippers on the Great Lakes) tells how to get quick relief from Stomach Trouble.

PORT BURWELL, ONT., May 8th, 1913.

"A man has a poor chance of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. I am sure that "Fruit-a-tives" have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking "Fruit-a-tives" according to directions, any person with Dyspepsia will get benefit".

H. SWAN

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

St. Thomas To Sue Estate.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 13.—The will of the late Peter Couse of St. Thomas, who died two weeks ago has been entered for probate and the estate is valued over $100,000 principally in mortgages and stocks. He was only assessed for $1,000 a year by the city, and the city officials will enter an action against the trustees of the estate claiming back taxes for the past six years on an income of $12,000 a year as all the securities held by Mr. Couse were drawing interest at 6 per cent. and over.

Drinkers Must Go.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12. — Orders have gone out by direction of the Minister of Militia to all commanding officers in Canada to the effect that any recruit found under the influence of liquor shall be summarily dismissed from the service. The Minister has decided not to tolerate any marked inebriety in the ranks of the Canadian force preparing for the front, and hereafter drunken soldiers should no longer be seen on the streets at the mobilization cities.

French Reservists Recovering.

QUEBEC, Jan. 12.—News has been received here of a number of French reservists from Canada. Rene Deroure, professor of McGill and Laval, Montreal, who was known to be a prisoner of the Germans, is still held, but is quickly recovering. He was hurt in the legs by bursting shells and also received two bullets in the legs.

Henri Bunle, head of the Quebec Statistics Bureau, expects to return shortly to the front. He has recovered from wounds received in the line of battle.

Turkey Recalls Army Corps.

LONDON, Jan. 12. — Advices received here from Athens say that it is now reported in the Greek capital that the plan to have the eighth Turkish army corps proceed from Damascus to the Egyptian frontier has been abandoned.

A previous despatch from Athens said this army corps, well provisioned and provided with 8,100 camels, already had left Damascus for Egypt.

Lonsdale Escapes Death.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegram Co. from Berlin by way of Amsterdam says that the court of appeals has commuted the death sentence on Pte. William Lonsdale, the English soldier who was court-martialed for attacking one of his guards at the Doeberitz detention camp, to twenty years' imprisonment.

Flags Fly For Macdonald Centenary.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12—Yesterday was the hundredth anniversary of the birth of the late Sir John Macdonald. The centenary was marked by flags on all public buildings throughout Canada by direction of the Minister of Public Works.

Rondeau Made While Heated.

If I had time this sweltering day
To write a wondrous roundelay
To wafe the reader to a clime
More temperate, more free from grime
And change, then we might all away

To where the trees with breezes sway,
To where the skies are cool and gray,
Where squirts the seltzer, grows the lime—
If I had time!

If I had time I might display
A bit of energy—but, nay:
You're weary, reader dear, while I'm
Just bluffing with machine made rime
(But couldn't we be awfly gay
If I had time?)

Would Go Without Help.

A rising composer wrote an anthem for a celebration in a certain colonial capital.

Toward the end of the ceremonies, when the people were going out a few at a time, the author rushed to the conductor and said:

"Is it over?"

"Practically."

"But, great Scott, man, they have not sung my anthem?"

"Well," said the conductor, "so long as the people are going out peacefully and quietly why sing it at all?"—Stray Stories.

KOENIGSBERG DESTROYED.

Bottled-Up German Cruiser Was Sunk Some Time Ago.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—A news agency despatch from London, published here yesterday afternoon, says:

The German cruiser Koenigsberg, which was bottled up in a river on the coast of Africa several weeks ago, has been sunk, according to a despatch received here from Southend yesterday. It quotes Capt. Willet, commander of one of the blockading vessels, as saying that the Koenigsberg was destroyed five days after she was bottled up, an aeroplane giving the range for a rain of shells upon the German boat.

The Koenigsberg was a third-class cruiser of 3,350 tons, built in 1907. She carried ten 4.1-inch guns and eight 3.1-inch guns. Her speed was 23.5 knots.

Real War Begins In May.

LONDON, Jan. 12. — The British idea that operations up to the present are only preparatory to big events fits in with a bit of gossip now heard here. It is to the effect that Lord Kitchener, when asked concerning probable duration of the war, said: "I don't know when it will end, but I do know when it will begin, and that is in the month of May."

The opinion is expressed in some quarters, however, that the inauguration of more general movements will be on an earlier date than is generally expressed, although persons in close touch with the army believe that the real crisis will not be reached until summer.

Austrians Broken, Say Refugees.

ROME, Jan. 12. — A despatch to The Messagero from its correspondent at Bucharest states that several detachments of Austrian troops entered Roumania Sunday and were disarmed. They were in flight from the scene of conflict with the Russians in Transylvania.

They carried obsolete rifles and assured the Roumanians that the Austrian army is completely demoralized.

Had Stomach Rumblings Distress Before Meals

Was Seldom Free From That Weary, Dreopy, Half-dead Feeling

Now Cured and Gives Good Advice to Others With Dyspeptic Tendencies

If you have any stomach distress at all you will certainly be interested in the following experience which is told by Mr. Edward Dawkins:

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

Refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box or five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or post paid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Aitkin Runs Press Bureau.

OTTAWA, Jan. 12.—Sir Max Aitkin is to have charge of the official news concerning the Canadian division. He has been selected by the Government for special work in that connection, and will prepare official reports for publication from Salisbury Plain and also from the front when the Canadians get there.

Seymour Hicks Ill.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The recent visit to the front of Seymour Hicks, the well-known musical comedy actor, in order to give Christmas entertainments to the British soldiers, has nearly cost him his life. He took pneumonia, but the crisis is now past.

COUGHED ALMOST CONSTANTLY

Great Victory for Vinol Over a Severe Bronchial Cough. Vinol Succeeded After Everything Else Failed.

Bogalusa, Ala.—"I am a housekeeper and have three in my family, and I had a terrible cough and pains in my chest for so long I was discouraged. I coughed almost constantly and would almost lose my breath. My trouble interfered with my work because I was so weak and run-down from continual coughing. I took cod liver oil emulsions and other medicines which did me no good. Finally our druggist told me about Vinol. I tried it and noticed an improvement almost immediately and its continued use has completely cured me. Vinol is certainly wonderful and I praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. W. E. CARLISLE, Bogalusa, Ala.

The reason Vinol is so successful in curing chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis, is because of the healing and tissue building influence of the medicinal principles of cod liver oil, assisted by the tonic and blood making properties of tonic iron, all contained in Vinol.

If Vinol fails to benefit any person in this vicinity who suffers from chronic coughs, colds or bronchitis, or to build up the weak, run-down or debilitated, we will pay back their money

DUNKIRK AGAIN BOMBED.

Two of the German Aviators Brought Down by Shrapnel.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—According to French despatches to the London papers fifty bombs were dropped on Dunkirk Sunday by aeroplanes which were cruising over the town from 12 o'clock yesterday morning until nearly four o'clock in the afternoon. They came from all directions, and were met by a heavy shrapnel fire. Two of the raiders were brought down, one outside the town and the other twenty miles away.

In spite of the long ordeal the populace displayed no panic. The bombs included some of the incendiary type, but little material damage was done. Six persons were killed at Dunkirk and the suburb of Malo, and it is reported that several persons were killed at St. Pol and Adinkerke, but this has not been confirmed. It appears that the absence of a large number of French aeroplanes from Dunkirk must have been known to the Germans.

French Warship Is Sunk.

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—Vienna reports state that it has been ascertained that the French Dreadnought Courbet was hit by the Austrian submarine No. 12. The Courbet was rammed by her sister ship, the Jean Bart, which was attempting to tow her. The Courbet sank. The Jean Bart docked at Malta.

The Courbet was of 23,467 tons displacement, and was armed with twelve 12-inch guns, twenty-two 5 1-2 inch guns and four 3-pounders. She was completed in 1913, and carried a complement of 904 men.

Victoria Cross For Bandsman.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Victoria Cross was awarded yesterday to Bandsman Thomas E. Gendle, of the 1st Battalion of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. Gendle was decorated "for conspicuous bravery on Nov. 20 near Wulverdinghe, France, when he, attending wounded under a very heavy shell fire, rescued men from the trenches in which they were buried by the blowing in of parapets by the fire of the enemy's heavy howitzers."

Dutch Loan Oversubscribed.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 13.—(Via London.)—Announcement was made yesterday that the Government war loan of 275,000,000 guilders ($110,000,000) has been greatly over-subscribed. The exact total of the sum applied for is 402,000,000 guilders ($160,800,000).

If You Could Only Be a Stomach

You'd Go to Bed Rather Sore at the Work You'd Have to Do.

Fancy a master that works a horse so long, without rest, that the poor old beast at last has to go to a bone pile.

Fancy yourself doing the same thing with your stomach—the noblest of all our physical organs.

Just imagine yourself devoting hours of ceaseless work to the digestion of a meal which you cannot digest because of wrongful ingredients given to you by the blood.

Is not a man very foolish to imagine a raw sick stomach capable of good work when the juices it receives are so filled with alkali or acid that they actually eat the stomach membrane?

Do you not know from a common sense point of view that to continue such a course means not only the impairment of your stomach but of all digestive organs as well?

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into your stomach just like food. They are so powerful in health giving qualities that almost instantly the work of digestion is improved. They ease up the stomach's work. They go into the blood and balance it perfectly. Thus, when the stomach calls for new juices at your next meal you are able to furnish them.

Your common sense will tell you that so great an aid to digestion as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets could not be in every drug store, unless demanded after trial by all classes of stomach sufferers.

No more are they a doubtful quality. They have passed a rigid examination by all manner of stomach and digestive tests, and they have been awarded the diploma of American patronage. Their's has been the practical test.

Send coupon below to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample free.

STAMP TAX EXPECTED.

Opinion in Ottawa is a Tax of Some Kind Will be Imposed.

OTTAWA, Jan. 11—The form of the Government's war legislation excites a great deal of speculative interest, but it is doubtful if anything definite leaks out before the budget speech. It is customary for the Minister of Finance to prepare his tariff proposals and for them to be adopted by order-in-Council only immediately before being communicate to Parliament. The subject thus remains open to the last. The general belief here, however, is that some sort of special stamp or other tax will be imposed as well as certain changes being made in the tariff schedules. The extent of the proposals has not been anywhere near definitely determined as yet.

They are shown together in the accompanying illustration, the pattern of which is No. 6,974, and the sizes are 34 to 40 inches bust measure. Combinations of materials are very effective in such a design, like satin and net, taffeta and lace, crepe de Chine and chiffon. As the small back view shows, the cape part is set on, sometimes beautifying being used at the seamline. The waist is complete in itself without the cape, so the other back view makes clear, the question of the cape being one for individual preference; that is, whether it shall be used or not.

The cape collar must be wired at the back under the cape and on the outside. Only the standing part is wired and the cape part conceals the wires entirely, which would not be the case if the wires were sewed on the inside near the neck. For both collar and cuffs of this blouse nothing makes a prettier finish than the hemstitching. Whether the cut beshall be used at the very edge, or the stitching with hem as shown here, is again a matter of choice. Using a contrasting material for collar and cuffs, this crepe de Chine with net or taffeta, silk or wool cloth is the combination of white satin with dark blue or tete de negre satin, the white being used for the collar and cuffs.

Price 20 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as full as the number and name of pattern required and age of a child.

FROM THE DESERT TO BATTLE FRONT

He sat in the corner of our compartment coming down from Calais this afternoon, an old Algerian soldier, homeward bound, with a big round loaf of bread and a military pass. He had a blue robe, bright red soft boots, a white turban wound with a sort of scarf of brown cord, and baggy corduroy underneath, concealing various mysterious pockets.

"Paris? To-night?" he grunted in his queer French. The big Frenchman next him, who had served in Africa in his youth and understood the dialect, shook his head. "To-morrow morning!" he said. He laid his head on his hand to suggest a man sleeping, and held up three fingers. "Three days—Marseilles!" The old goumier's dark eyes blazed curiously, and he opened and shut his mouth in a dry yawn—like a tiger yawning.

Wounded? No—he pointed to his eyes, which were bloodshot, patted his forehead to suggest that it was throbbing, rubbed his legs, and scowled. "Rheumatism!" said the Frenchman. The Algerian pressed his palms together six times, then laid up two fingers. "He's sixty-two years old!" said the Frenchman, and the old warrior obligingly opened his jaws and pointed to two or three long brown fangs to prove it. They talked for a moment in the vernacular, and the Frenchman explained again; "Volunteer!" and then "Scout!"

The old Arab made the motion of sighting along a rifle, then of brushing something over, and tapped himself on the chest.

"Deux!" he said. "Two Germans—me!" Evidently he was going back to the desert satisfied.—Collier's.

RUSSIANS WAIT TO GIVE WELCOME TO A CHILD HERO

PETROGRAD, Jan. 9.—The Russian folk are waiting to welcome the second child hero who has gained the Order of St. George in the war. At present he is lying at Tavenrog with a German bullet in his side—a little sturdy Cossack of fourteen years, Alexander Cherviatkin by name. His mother prays twice daily that he will live, but she is the only one who fears he may die of his wound, and he fears least of all.

Alexander was a drummer in a Turkestan regiment, and he was one of the first to volunteer for the front. He was at Warsaw when the Germans came on their first swoop and after they had been driven back in the great battle he went out scouting at night. More than a mile from his camp he came across a Russian colour-bearer lying very stiff and still in the roadway.

Alexander peered at the body, wondering where the colours were, then he saw that the dead man had wrapped them around his body. The young scout began to unwind them.

In his excitement he began to sing a mighty war song the while he unwound the colours. Then suddenly a flash more vivid than lightning dazzled him and his hands flew to his eyes to protect them from the blinding glare. A searchlight was playing full in his face. He heard the clatter of horses' hoofs, and before he could see what was happening a hand was on his shoulder and a revolver was pressed against his face.

Alexander was a prisoner. The German patrol took him to their trenches, but later when the sentries dozed from exhaustion he crept out. A German was lying asleep not far off and by his side was the colours. Alexander crawled to the colours and lying on the ground cut the flag from the staff with his penknife. It was slow and laborious work, but it was done. Then he took his own flag and that of the Germans and fled.

An alarm was raised, but Alexander was far on his way. And then the searchlight found him again. He was near the Russian trenches, and he stumbled into the arms of his brethren as a bullet drilled through his coat.

IF MEALS HIT BACK AND STOMACH SOURS

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends stomach misery, indigestion in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepcia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

VIENNA STARTS AGITATION AGAINST CENSORSHIP AS MISLEADING PUBLIC

LONDON, Jan. 12.—E. Mackenzie, the News correspondent, telegraphs from Rome:—

"An agitation has been started in Vienna against the severe censorship which serves only to mislead the public by systematically suppressing the truth. At a meeting of business men a resolution has been passed proposing that the censorship should be relaxed. The Neue Freie Presse strongly indorses the proposal, and its campaign is proof of the lack of union among all parties. Hitherto the people submitted to the censorship without question."

HEAVY REINFORCEMENTS FOR GERMANS ON THE COAST

SPECIAL CABLE:

ON THE BELGIAN FRONTIER, Jan. 12.—Whatever plans the Germans may have for continuing the campaign in Flanders behind their new line of defence further from the Yser, their ominous activity in many ways continues to fill the population with foreboding. Trains of electric tramcars, filled with troops and wounded, are moving constantly now by day and night along the coast line between Westende and Knocke and Bruges.

Five hundred men continue to lay concrete floors at points on the dunes around Zeebrugge, while they daily are testing guns already mounted in this region. This is regarded as an added indication that the tide of battle eventually will swing this way, perhaps sooner than hitherto has been expected.

The sound of heavy guns was heard at the frontier again this morning.

A train containing many machine guns arrived at Heist on Saturday and yesterday the troops were busy adding them to the armament of the coast line. A number have been planted on either side of the Grand Hotel behind sand-bag barricades sweeping the open beach. Buildings at Knocke and Heyst not marked for demolition are now crowded with troops. The marines are now reinforced by infantry and cavalry and an additional cavalry brigade composed of first line Prussian regiments has been drafted to towns and villages near the coast for the surveillance of the inhabitants.

The residents of Ostend, according to message sent yesterday, are hourly expecting orders to evacuate the town.

Business Side of Army a Problem

Thousands of French Business Men Engaged Administration of Army.

PARIS, Dec. 28.— What might be called the civilian administration of the French army is probably the most gigantic business proposition the world has ever seen. It is as though all the railways of the United States with their 1,666,809 employes, all the steel and iron industries with their 280,762 employes and all the quarries, coal mines and metal mines with their 1,005,281 workers, were all under the direction of one office.

The French War Office, through its civilian administration, must assemble, transport and distribute food for nearly 4,000,000 men. It must supply the men with transportation from one part of the fighting line to another, the front to the interior and from the interior to the front in their periods of recuperation. It must provide clothing, medical attendance, dentists and every variety of service necessary to keep a man in health.

Besides all this, it must look out for the families of the men at the front, supplying their wives with the equivalent of 25 cents a day, and in case of children with the equivalent of 10 cents a day.

The smooth working of these immense business transactions is only possible because the work is distributed among the trained railway managers, steamship directors, great corporation officials and business men of capacity, who, although they are wearing uniforms, have been trained and prepared for civil life for this sort of work in war time. Some thousands of the most competent business men of France have been organized into this supply side of the war.

Many political leaders, senators, deputies, ex-presidents of the Chamber and men prominent in scientific and intellectual life have been called upon to help in this gigantic work.

MR. GERARD'S ADVICE ANGERS AUSTRALIA

LONDON, Jan. 12. — The Times correspondent cables from Sydney:

"Indignation has been aroused here by the suggestion of the American Ambassador to Berlin that Australian prisoners could obtain better treatment than English prisoners by obtaining proof of their birthplace. Australians say there is unity in the empire as against the enemy and they desire no distinction between home and 'dominion Britons.'"

Alum added to the last rinsing water or the starch when cotton garments are washed will render them fireproof.

CANADIAN GIFTS HAVE RELIEVED MUCH DISTRESS

LONDON, Jan. 11.— Very satisfactory evidence of the comparative absence in England of any distress caused by the war is furnished by a report on the special work of the Local Government Board arising out of the war, which was issued to-day as a White Paper. The action of Noel Kershaw, dealing with the dispositionof the gifts from the colonies shows that only a small part of the goods allocated has been required for relieving the distress of civilians.

The following is the disposition of the 940,530 bags of flour received from Canada: To the local committees for the relief of distress, 90,474 to the Belgian Refugees Committees, 1,601; transferred to the War Office, 99,760; further offer to the War Office, 300,000; to the Belgian Relief Commission, 443,686; sold owing to damage, 4,719.

Of the Quebec cheese 46,697 have been distributed, 37,500 going to the War Office 5,703 to the Local Relief Committees, and 744 to the Belgian Refugees. The best evidence that the cheese is appreciated, says the report, has been the repetition of requests therefor from the quarters previously supplied, including the War Office. Experts have testified to the high quality of the cheese, and have met the allusions of the press to its possible deterioration through continued storage by the declaration that it would improve by further keeping.

Salmon and Potatoes.

Applications were also numerous for the canned salmon from British Columbia, the War Office taking 10,000 out of the total of 25,287 cases. The New Brunswick potatoes were reported as excellent, with the exception of a few bags which suffered in transit.

The principal demand from the English distress communities came from the East End of London, where distress is more or less chronic at all times, and from Lancashire where the cotton industry, practically alone among the industries of the country, has suffered from the war. In all the distributions the recipients have been well informed by the labels on the goods as to the identity of the donors of the gifts. Even yet distress is not keen in the East End of London, and Mr. Kershaw, author of the report, informed The Mail and Empire to-day that more men are employed at the docks now than at the same time last year, while many others who might be idle have enlisted.

WAR ABOLISHES MILITANCY

Christabel Pankhurst Says Suffragettes will not Fight with Hands.

New York, Jan. 11—"I believe the last outburst of the militant suffragette has been made. I do not believe we shall again be called upon to fight with our hands, because England is now fighting a war of militancy—militancy against militarism."

Thus spoke Miss Christabel Pankhurst, the acknowledged "brains" of the militant suffragette movement in England, yesterday. Miss Pankhurst is to lecture at Carnegie Hall on Wednesday night.

She said the war would sweep all barriers away in England.

When War Came

(By Stephen Graham)

I was staying in an Altai Cossack village on the frontier of Mongolia when the war broke out, twelve hundred versts south of the Siberian Railway, a most verdant resting place with majestic fir forests, snow-crowned mountains range behind range, green and purple valleys deep in larkspur and monkshood. All the young men and women of the village were out on the grassy hills with scythes, the children gathered currants in the wood each day, old folk sat at home and sewed furs together, the pitch boilers and charcoal burners worked at their black fires with barrels and scoops, and athwart it all came the message of war.

At 4 a.m. on the 31st of July the first telegram came through—an order to mobilize and be prepared for active service. I was awakened that morning by an unusual commotion, and, going into the village street, saw the soldier population collected in groups, talking excitedly. My peasant hostess cried out to me "Have you heard the news? There is war!" A young man on a fine horse came galloping down the street, a great red flag hanging from his shoulders and flapping in the wind, and as he went he called out the news to each and every one: "War! War!"

Horses out, uniforms, swords! The village feldscher took his stand outside our one Government building, the Volostnoe pravlenie, and began to examine horses. The Czar had called on the Cossacks; they gave up their work without a regret and burned to fight the enemy. Who was the enemy? Nobody knew. The telegram contained no indications. All the village population knew was that the same telegram had come as came ten years ago when they were called to fight the Japanese. Rumours abounded. All the morning it was persisted that the Yellow Peril had matured and that the war was with China. Russia had pushed too far into Mongolia and China had declared war. Then a rumour went round: "It is with England, with England!" So far away these people lived they did not know that our old hostility had vanished. Only after four days did something like the truth come to us, and then nobody believed it.

"An immense war," said a peasant to me. "Thirteen powers engaged — England, France, Russia, Bulgaria, Serbia, Montenegro, against Germany, Austria, Italy, Roumania, Turkey."

Two days after the first telegram a second came, and this one called up every man between the ages of eighteen and forty-three. Astonishing, that Russia should at the very outset begin to mobilize her reservists five thousand versts from the scene of hostilities!

Flying messengers arrived on horses breathless and steaming, and delivered packets into the hands of the starosta, the head man of the Cossacks, the secret instructions. Fresh horses were at once given them and they were off again within five minutes of their arrival in the village.

The great red flag was mounted on an immense pine pole at the end of our one street, and at night it was taken down and a large red lantern was hung in its place. At the entrance of every village such a flag flew by day, such a lantern by night. — Colliers.

DID CHILD WAKE UP CROSS OR FEVERISH

Look, Mother! If Tongue is Coated Give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing". Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves worry to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

ROTHSCHILDS ARE ON BOTH SIDES OF TITANIC WAR

LONDON, Dec 19.— As the great war has set royal relative against royal relative, so it has set croesus against croesus of the same family. I refer especially to the Rothschilds, though they are not the only family of financiers with branches in several European capitals. The Rothschilds whose fortune was founded in war and who have thriven by taking advantage of the necessities of kings, are now arrayed on both sides of the conflict.

There was much humour for those who saw the point in the Germans' seizing Baron Lambert de Rothschild, head of the Belgian family branch, and holding him as a hostage for the Brussels war indemnity. The gold taken from his reluctant pockets may well have been used to pay the interest on Baron Ansolm's loans to the Austrian government. The money would still be in the family.

The Austrian Rothschilds are liberal supporters of the Austrian war loan, we learn. But their efforts are counteracted and more by the activities of the English and French Rothschilds.

Anselm Rothschild, the head of the Austrian Rothschilds, and Lord Rothschild, the head of the English Rothschilds, are both great-grandsons of Mayor Amschel Rothschild, the founder of this family. They are are even more closely related than therefore second cousins. But they that. For Anselm's mother was a sister of the late Baron Lionel de Rothschild and thus he is also first cousin to Lord Rothschild.

The Rothschilds have remained an absolutely united family, as witness their extraordinary series of marriages between first and second cousins unparalleled outside a few royal families. If has also been their policy —whether they were Austrian, French or English—to play more or less into each others hands in their financial operations. But so far as the financing of this war is concerned this is no longer possible. As a financier an Austrian Rothschild must know nothing of an English Rothschild. As head of the British people King George takes no count of the German Emperor, though they are first cousins. So with those who are princes in the realms of high finance.

The Rothschilds laid the foundations of their stupendous fortunes in war loans during the great struggle against Napoleon. A family of Germanic origin, all their financial support was given to the side that was seeking the overthrow of the little corporal. Even Lord Rothschild's great uncle James, who founded the French Rothschilds, was in Paris secretly collecting French coin to forward to Wellington for his advance in Southern France just before Napoleon's first abdication.

Since those days other Germanic families have imitated the Rothschilds with great success, and established branches working together in the leading capitals of the world. It is probable that a war between England and Germany never entered into their calculations, and certainly the man in the street may accept it as a fact that the last thing in the world that they, as financiers would desire, would be an Anglo-German war. Such a conflict must obviously cause them embarrassment in certain directions. As the bitterness of conflict deepens families and firms may be called upon by the nations to be less international and more national, or even entirely national.

Weighing Words.
An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."
Good advice and fortunately followed by nearly all our local advertisers.

Germans Heavily Reinforced at Soissons

The Russian Black Sea Fleet is Active

SEVERE FIGHTING IN SOISSONS NEIGHBOURHOOD

In Spite of Bad Weather Conditions the Battle is Raging Fiercely With the French Still Clinging to All Important Positions---Artillery Duels Everywhere.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, 3 p.m. official, Wednesday — Severe fighting for positions in the vicinity of Vreguy and to the east and to the west of Soissons, still continues, despite the fact that weather conditions show but very little improvement. The French have been compelled to cede some territory to the eastward of Vreguy but at no point have they relinquished any positions of importance, says the communique. In the territory between Nieuport and Ypres the artillery duel continues with the advantage favouring the allies. Heavy storms of wind which have swept the sand across the dunes into the faces of the troops, are reported. The fighting in the vicinity of Soissons continued all day yesterday and part of last night. The Germans have been heavily reinforced. The French artillery has covered itself with glory here, having produced numerous explosions here amidst the German batteries. From Rheims to the Argonne region there has been a violent artillery duel which continues. In the Vosges and Alsace fog and heavy snow are impeding all the movements.

SUBMARINES FIRED ON

LONDON, January 13.—It is reported that two German submarines who essayed a raid into Dover harbour to-day, were sunk by the land batteries.

LONDON, January 13.—Up to 4.45 this afternoon the Admiralty had made no announcement regarding the fate of the submarines which were fired on by the Dover forts this morning. All of the London newspapers, however, carry long accounts from their Dover correspondents, and all claim that the two submarines acutally were hit and sunk The Evening News declares that the submarines were accompanied by aeroplanes. It says:

"Two German submarines tried to enter Dover Harbour, but were sighted by the lookout of forts and fired upon. The submarines were said to have been hit and sunk."

The Evening Star says that the submarines were sighted well outside of the entrance to the channel and were not fired upon until they were well within range. Both disappeared from view and the gunners are confident that they sunk them.

PARIS, January 13.—"The real reason for the strict guarding of the Belgian-Dutch frontier," says the Matin correspondent at Havre, "is an epidemic of desertion which began in the German ranks after the battle of Yser. From Nov. 15 to Dec. 15 there were 11,000 desertions from the garrison of Bruges alone."

RULES FOR THE CITY'S FREE SKATING RINK

Meeting of Charity Board

Committee Created to Prevent Reckless Expenditure

City Relief Officer Miller and Mr. R. C. Braund, of the Central Charity Board, have been appointed a committee with authority to make a list of supplies which may be procured with a Charity Board order and to have the list stamped or printed on the order.

This resolution was passed at a meeting of the Central Charity Board that was held last evening. It is designed to prevent reckless expenditure of the funds supplied by the charity department for relief purposes. Cases are numerous where people have received monetary assistance from the department and diverted it into channels of luxury and extravagance. Four or five dollars a week from the charity department will not go very far towards the purchase of jellies, expensive canned goods and the higher priced varieties of foodstuffs.

The new orders will contain a list of supplies, that in the judgment of the committee is considered reasonable for the maintenance of a family dependent upon charity.

LONDON CALM IN THE FACE OF AERIAL RAIDS

Quiet Preparations Are Being Made and the Citizens Are Being Instructed as to How They Shall Act

TO KEEP IN DOORS

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 13—London continues unexpectedly calm over the possibilities of aeroplane raids, although quiet preparations are being made. The Education Committee of the London County Council has issued instructions to the school teachers that in case of an air attack they should continue the lessons, as far as possible, in a normal way, taking the children away from the near windows, but not crowding the lower floors Should the building be damaged the children should be marched into the yard, as in the case of a fire.

The Government offices and many business houses are insructing the clerks to continue their work. Scotland Yard generally advises people to keep well in doors, preferably in the basement, upon hearing sounds of firing

The Canadians at Salisbury Plain are preparing themselves for further disappointment over the date of leaving for the front. which may possibly be delayed for reasons known only to the War Office.

ITALY MAY SOON ENTER THE CONFLICT

Germans in the Country Are Returning to Their Native Land, Anticipating Italy's Action

DEMONSTRATIONS MADE

Special Cable:

ROME, Jan. 13—The Germans in Italy believe that Italy plans an entrance into the European war in the near future on the side of the Allies. This is shown by the large number who are closing up their business connections here and returning to the native land. They realise even though they are incapacitated for military service, should war come, they would be interned here.

It is stated that the Garibaldi demonstrations greatly displeased the Kaiser. Although the Italian Government had plenty of troops on duty to prevent any untoward anti-German demonstrations the fact that the public precautions were permitted with diplomatic representatives of the allies participating, is said to have been regarded in Berlin as in the nature of an affront to Germany.

Orders For Home Guards

Weekly Drill Will Be Held To-morrow Night

EARTHQUAKE CAUSES MUCH LOSS OF LIFE

Many Small Towns in Italy Have Been Almost Completely Wiped Out and the Death Roll Will Be Heavy

ROME IN A PANIC

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, Jan. 13.—Reports from the outside districts indicate that the earthquake which threw Rome into a panic early to-day and destroyed a number of buildings in the outskirts, caused a serious loss of life. The entire province of Abruzzi is declared to have suffered and amny of the small towns have been almost completely wiped out.

Several towns in Rome province also suffered.

The towns which are reported to have been injured the most include Capelle, Magliano, Frosinone, Monterotondo, Veroly, Valmontone and Albano. It is stated that many of the inhabitants were caught in the ruins and crushed to death. The government has taken energetic steps to aid the sufferers, and troops have been rushed to the afflicted provinces to aid in the rescue work.

The convicts at Frosinone prison mutinied when an attempt was made to keep them in prison after it had been partly destroyed by the earthquake.

Talent Social Was A Success

The Ladies' Aid Society, of the Park St. Baptist Church, held a very succesful talent tea at the home of Mrs. J. Stiner yesterday. The affair was given by Mrs. W. O'Neill and Mrs. Stiner and was a most enjoyable event. An interesting programme of recitations, solos and readings was given, after which tea was served by Mesdames O'Neill and Stiner. The proceeds wil be devoted to church work.

Sustained A Compound Fracture

Mrs. Felix Brownscombe Injured in the Crush That Followed Breaking of a Bench in a Local Church

Mrs. Felix Brownscombe sustained a compound fracture of the leg as a result of an accident that occurred in George Street Methodist Church, last evening. It appears that a party of young people connected with the church had returned from a toboggan party and were grouped in the basement of the church for the purpose of having a photo taken, when a bench upon which a number of young men were standing broke, precipitating them to the flor. In the confusion that resulted Mrs. Brownscombe suffered the injury referred to. She was removed to Nichols Hospital in Comstock's ambulance.

INCREASE IN THE POPULATION

As Represented by the New City Directory

According to the new city directory which is being distributed throughout the city, the population has increased from 24,500 to 25,112, or a net gain of 612 for the year. The number of names in the new directory is 10,045 as compared with 9,488 that it contained last year. This number multiplied by two and a half gives a population as indicated above. There are 21 churches in the city including the Salvation Army, Free Methodist churches and miscellaneous churches.

RUSSIAN FLEET DESTROYS THE TURKISH SHIPPING

After Chasing the Two Turkish Cruisers Breslau and Hamedieh, the Czar's Black Sea Fleet Sinks Fifty-one Turkish Boats---Sultan's Ports Are Bombarded and Damaged.

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, January 13.—During the night of January 6th the Russian fleet came up with the cruisers Breslau and Hamidieh, on the Black Sea. A spirited exchange of shots followed and finally the Turkish cruisers disappeared in the darkness. In Sourmene Bay and Rizah Bay, 30 miles east of Trebizond, the Russian warships destroyed 51 Turkish boats. The bombardment of the port of Hopa, which is the distributing point for the Tchoruk region, caused a number of fires along the coast. The Turkish shipping on the Black Sea is practically all destroyed.

PETROGRAD, January 13.—It is announced that the Turkish advance guards have occupied Tabriz, which next to Teheran is the largest city in Persia and the capital of the province of Azirbaigan.

COPENHAGEN, January 13.—Advices from Berlin say that the 121st Casualty List affecting the Prussian army, and published to-day, brings the total killed, wounded and captured up to 840,243. This is for the Prussian army alone and does not include 134 Bavarian, 90 Saxon, 89 Wurtemburg and 14 naval lists already issued.

AMSTERDAM, January 13.—Reports received here say that the Germans have confiscated the copper fittings of all of the railway stations in Antwerp, Ostend and Bruges, and on all of the postal buildings in Antwerp. In addition copper fittings have been taken from all the factories.

WASHINGTON, January 13.—The House Naval Affairs Committee this afternoon voted to recommend the construction next year of two new battleships and 16 coast defence submarines, one sea going submarine, 6 destroyers, one hospital ship, one transport, and one oiler. Eight of the coast submarines are for the Pacific coast.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

A meeting of the Central Charity Board was held last evening. Indications point to an increase in the number of applications for relief. The expenditures are increasing each month. A cold snap has about the same effect on the department as a bear raid on a bull market.

One Appeal.

At yesterday's sitting of the County Court, Mr. A. E. Micks, Hunter street, appealed against the decision of the Court of Revision, respecting the street paving assessment levied on his property. He contended that he should not be assessed for a lane on the east side of his building as it was used by several parties. Judge Huycke reserved judgment.

In Toronto.

The solicitors connected with the arbitration between the city and the Peterborough Light and Power Company are holding a meeting in Toronto to-day. City Solicitor Gordon is present.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

The Board of Trade's Belgian Relief Fund received an impetus this morning placing it well over the $60,000 mark when the County of Bruce sent cheque for $9,000.

Elected by Acclamation.

"Overalls Council."

Owing to the large percentage of Workingmen in the Council, Mayor Barnsdale of Stratford dubbed it the "Overalls Council."

Municipal Coal Yard.

In his inaugural address, Mayor Petrie, of St. Catharines outlined the establishment of a municipal coal yard and a covered market with cooling plant.

A Mile Road.

At the opening of the Chatham Council, Mayor Wanless urged the improvement of a mile of road on Queen street, the main thoroughfare, to points east.

Elected Mayor.

A New Election.

A new civic election will be held at Guelph on January 27 in order to fill the vacancies in the City Council caused by several of the aldermen failing to qualify.

Death of an Ex-Mayor.

While the funeral of the late Mrs. Richardson, wife of ex-Mayor J. W. Richardson, was being held at North Bay, all the business places were closed for two hours.

Municipal Parks.

A paid fire department, a system of municipal parks, and a commission form of government were the reforms suggested by Mayor Clendenning of Niagara Falls.

Engineer Dismissed.

At the inaugural meetingn of the Brockville Council, Mayor Donaldson, casting his vote before all the aldermen were elected, dismissed Town Engineer George H. Bryson

A Treasury Bank.

At the inaugural meeting of the Berlin City Council, Mayor Hett recommended that the cemetery be taken over by the Park Board, and that committees composed of three aldermen and three citizens be appointed to study the question of the sale of debentures and the advisability of opening a treasury bank.

CAPTURED A YOUTHFUL THIEF

The quick work of Detectives Newhall and Meagher resulted in restoring to the owner of the return portion of a ticket stolen from the pocket of Mr. Wesley Elliott's coat at the Jackson Park rink on Monday afternoon.

Mr. Elliott was skating at the Park on Monday afternoon and while his coat hung in the waiting room it was "frisked" and he lost the railroad ticket mentioned above, along with some personal papers. He reported the matter to the police yesterday and last night the detectives found the stolen property on the person of a young boy about twelve years of age.

The number of loafers around the Park rink waiting room is very noticeable and will not be tolerated in future.

THE VITAL DIFFERENCE.

The following incident illustrates in a few words what Canada and the Empire are fighting to retain, and what they are fighting to avoid:

Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the Brooklyn preacher, old-time disciple of Carl Schuls and now strongly anti-Prussian, delivered a scathing denunciation of German cannibalism from his pulpit the other evening. In a day or two he received an abusive but well-phrased letter, bearing all the earmarks of Teutonic "kultur," in which the writer said:

"One of the perils of American society is the liberty of the American press and pulpit. If your sermon, preached last Sunday night in Plymouth, had been preached in Germany, on Monday morning you would have been stood up against a wall and shot."

Here is a set in plain and emphatic contrast the animating genius of British liberty and the genius of German political and ethical policy. British freedom includes freedom of speech and all the rights that belong to the highest ideals of manhood. The contrast cannot be completely made for there is no such thing as German freedom. There is simply slavish and enforced obedience to the cult of force, the exaltation of the military machine over every other consideration; the subordination of manhood and individual freedom—the effacement of personality and personal freedom—to the organized power. Great Britain is fighting for the rights of the man as a man; his right to personal liberty and to a share in his own government. In this she is fighting not only her own battle, but the battle of all civilized nations. In view of this one can hardly conceive how a great nation like the United States, can, not only hold aloof, but by huckstering consideration of trade, take a course that can hamper the action of Great Britain and the Empire in the fight for all the United States holds dear in the way of the rights and privileges of free institutions.

FOR HOME AND EMPIRE.

"Conservation" in its last monthly number sets forth as Canada's aim in 1915, the following schedule of "Canada's Duty—1915"—

Conservation and development of her—
- Water-powers
- Minerals
- Forests and
- Fisheries

Large increase in farm production
Increase in live stock production
The cultivation of the garden plot
The purchase and use of goods "Made in Canada"
Provision for technical training of her sons and daughters
Further advances in providing sanitary homes and clean cities for her people
Extension of the "Safety First" movement
Further reduction in fire losses
Business as usual

This is an ambitious programme, but one well within our resources of accomplishment if we only faithfully observe the closing injunction—"business as usual." This we should especially heed. We are under the influence of new conditions. But we have become or are becoming accustomed to these. We have had our attention diverted from the ordinary routine of duty and activities by a new set of duties, compared with which our ordinary routine of personal and national life seemed trivial. This feeling or condition has largely lost its special influence and significance. We have settled into our stride of war preparation; we have settled down to the contemplation of recruiting and equipping soldiers, and preparing in other ways for our discharge of duty to the full in this great crisis. These things have to a large degree become a matter of routine, and we are left free to pursue the course that most directly means the promotion of our own interests.

When we see our duty laid down in the above code of injunctions, they are specially worth heeding; because they involve the application of the true principle of conservation of our resources—development of our resources. Canada has been munificently and magnificently endowed by Providence, but we are not alert enough in fitting ourselves for receiving in the fullest sense the gifts placed within our reach. Our potential wealth is not endowed with automatic movements—it will not come into our pockets without our help; without our intelligent and energetic action.

Here the adoption of a more patriotic policy is indicated. We must not only provide for the development of our resources, but for their development in a way that will give Canada the possession and enjoyment of their full value. By our pulp-wood policy, though it is not pushed to the utmost desirable limit, we are enjoying only about half the benefits from our pulp-wood resources that we should get. Sixty-four pulp mills in Canada, we are informed, report in the year 1913 a total consumption of pulp-wood in Canada of 1,168,034 cords. We are also informed of the calamity—in an economic sense—of the exportation of another million cords of our pulp-wood in an unmanufactured condition. Whatever small profit we got from the exportation of our unmanufactured pulp-wood logs, was wiped out perhaps ten times over by the loss sustained by not manufacturing in our own country. The manufacture of the million cords of Canadian pulp-wood, in Canada gave them a value of ten or even twenty times their raw value in the shape of large expenditure for Canadian labour, and expenditure for supplies, and activities incidental to manufacturing processes.

What great wealth do we permit to go out of Canada, in the form of unrefined nickel matte! The New Jersey concern that refines our Canadian nickel in one year was able to make a profit of nearly five million dollars out of the refinement of Canadian nickel. Under the application and operation of a national policy of providing for the manufacture of all our resources to the ultimate form in our own country, these five millions of profit would have been kept in Canada, and besides a very large additional profit, from the employment of labour and other incidental expenditures would have accrued to the country. In addition to the large profits we should have realized, by refining our nickel in Canada we should have avoided being contributing agents to our own injury and the injury of the Empire. By permitting our nickel matte to go to a foreign country to be refined we left and leave the door open for its exportation to Germany to enter into the manufacture of munitions of war to be employed against ourselves. Our policy in the matter of nickel is unpatriotic in a double way—it deprives Canada and Canadians of the immense advantages incident to refining within our own borders; and, at the same time, it indirectly—and not very indirectly, either—makes us important contributing agents to the strengthening of our enemy—the Germans.

We Canadians, government, parliament and people, are nobly doing our duty to the Empire and the cause of humanity, but at the same time we are practically impoverishing our own people, and practically fighting against ourselves and the Empire by our failure to adopt a home policy in the matter of nickel. Why have we not before this, why do we not now, adopt the true conversation policy by providing that not a pound of nickel or any other of our natural raw resources shall go out of the country in an unmanufactured condition? Why can we not in this regard strike a strong blow for Home and Empire?

WOODROW WILSON'S LOVE TAPS.

If the United States Government keeps on, lots of people will begin to wonder where its sympathies lie. First of all, the Wilson administration would the use of government funds in part to buy German ships interned in American harbours, which would have conveyed a lot of money to Germany. Then the Wilson administration announced that it looked with disfavour upon the idea of a French loan being taken up by New York bankers. Next the Wilson administration objected to Charles M. Schwab contracting to build submarines in his steel works for the Allies. Following came a protest against British warship searching for contraband of war in neutral merchant vessels. Germany violates agreements to which the United States was a party and kicks out of Belgium U.S. diplomats, but no objection is taken.

Of course everything is done at Washington in a most polite way, and pains are taken to describe it as most amicable to Britain, and really just a matter of form. If it keeps on, all of us beneath the Union Jack will be putting Mr. Wilson in the class of the villain in the thrilling melodrama entitled "Nellie the Beautiful Cloak Model." In the early part of the play the villain pushed Nellie off the Brooklyn Bridge. Later he threw her overboard from an Atlantic liner. Later still he thrust her under a descending elevator. The next time they met he said: "Nellie, why do you fear me?"—Ottawa Journal.

Hear ter reason, honey;
You'll have yo tune an' chance,
But be sho' you got de money
Fer de fiddler, 'fore you dance.

You'll have yo' thorns an' clover,
But hear ter die advice:
W'en de dancin's over,
Don't holler' bout de price.

Compensation That Will Come From Losses In The Present War

The recuperative power of nations monstrated by war is one of the marvellous lessons of history. All the countries engaged in the present conflict have passed through scenes of ware and are still great. When the inevitable conclusion is reached the world will go on living much as it lived before. There will be depressions, readjustments, alterations in maps, but no vital changes affecting the foundations of society.

The material loss caused by this war is being greatly exaggerated. Most of the fighting is in the open, and the earth's crust will suffer no permanent injury through furrows made by spades or shells. Fortifications have been destroyed, but they are obsolete and will not be rebuilt. Military and naval equipments have disappeared but will they be replaced Buildings, furnishing and clothing have been destroyed, but their replacement will require wood, stone, steel, iron, cloth, labour and other things of which there is abundance in the world waiting to be used.

But what about money to buy material and pay labour? The amount of gold in the world will not be decreased by this war; instead, it will probably be increased by the production of such gold mines as continue in operation. The only conceivable loss of gold will be that buried by those who are killed. The world's stock may change hands but it will not diminish. It has merely fled temporarily into bank vaults and into secret hiding places and will emerge when peace is restored. Credit which has practically disappeared, will return with the gold on which it is based, and we venture the prophecy that a good proportion of the world's supply of gold will be in British hands after the war

Where then is the loss?

In two things, principally: labour and crops. The time of the men drawn for fighting from productive labor is gone fo rever. Although men and their skill can be replaced by other men and other skill in time, the energy expended in fighting, and, later, in replacing the killed and disabled, is a loss. The crops which are destroyed and the crops which were prevented from being planted are also a loss, because the food supply of the world, being scarcely greater than the world's consumption, and perishable, must be kept fairly constant and cannot wait for replenishment. Unfortunately, owing to the number of combatants and the extent and fertility of the areas devastated, the loss from these two causes in this war will be enormous.

The first cause will affect Canada, but not the second. The sinister proverb, "the loser pays," will not apply to us. On the contrary, as we have food to sell, we shall benefit. There is an undue amount of pessimism prevalent regarding our material prospects after the war. While we shall have to face the transition period of waiting until gold reappears, and credit is restored, the fact remains that we have the raw materials which will be needed for reconstruction.

When our crops refuse to grow, when our mines fail, when our forests disappear, when our waters yield no fish andwhen our manufacurers are unable to multiply values, then Canadians should despair, and not before.—Industrial Canada.

ONE ITEM IN THE BILL.

In 1871 Germany enacted from France a war indemnity of $1,000,000,000. Already the damage done to Belgium by the war, by the estimate of a prominent lawyer of Brussels, Henri Masson, comes to $1,660,836,000. And that is but one item in the bill which the Allies if they should win, will expect Germany to pay.—Springfield Republican.

INDUSTRIAL PEACE IN TIME OF WAR.

One of the few benefits of war is that it promotes peace at home, a truth which is illustrated by the recent report of the Labour Department stating that there are practically no strikes or lock-outs now existing in Canada.

In times of peace and prosperity we sometimes "wax fat and kick," but the grim shadows cast by war are the most potent agents of conciliation.

The paid agitator and the uncompromising employer are alike silent. The attention of employees is concentrated in keeping or hunting jobs and the energy of employers is directed towards keeping and hunting contracts.

Employer and employee acquire a more sympathetic view of each other's position and admit many points which, in less strenuous days, would afford grounds for controversy.

The employer sees the distress brought upon workers out of employment and makes plans to keep them so far as he is able, while the workman begins to realise that his employer is not the grasping tyrant painted by a union organiser, but usually a man who works harder, enjoys less, worries more, and sleeps less than the average workman whom he pays

If masters and men pulled together in peace as they pull together in war our arbitration courts would be soon filled with cobwebs.—Industrial Canada.

UNION BANK HAS GOOD REPORT

Net Profits, $712,000 — Total Assets, Higher.

The shareholders of the Union Bank of Canada who attended the annual meeting of the Bank held in Winnipeg, on Wednesday, 6th January, had no reason to feel disappointed over the report presented to them Net profits are somewhat below those of 1913, but this has been characteristic of all Banks reporting on the year's business. The net profits amounted to $712,000.00 as compared with $750,000.00 for 1913. There has, however, been satisfactory progress made by the Bank throughout the year. Note circulation is higher than it was a year ago and now stands at $6,362,000.00, while deposits despite the world-wide depression amount to over $6,300,000.00. The Bank is particularly strong in gold, Dominion Notes, and other quickly available assets, which amount altogether to nearly $26,500,000,00, indicating that good banking practices were in operation by this well-known institution throughout the year. It should be pointed out however, that despite the fact that the Bank kept a large portion of its assets in quickly available form, its current loans throughout the year were $4,000,000.00 more than for the previous year. This is somewhat unusual and indicates that the Bank has been doing its full share in catering to the business needs of the communities in which its branches were located. The Union Bank now shows assets of over $91,500,000,00, a gain of nearly $1,000,000.00, over the figures for the close of business in 1913. This showing, in view of the world-wide depression, must be regarded as highly satisfactory.

Peterborough Branch, C. H. Pennefather.

South End Branch, corner Park and Reid streets, A. Macampbell, Acting Manager.

Norwood Branch, A. S. Wilkinson.

Hastings Branch, G. B. Beamish.

Stirling Branch, W. S. Martin, Manager

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Huge sales of wheat to Europe and to millers in the United States helped wonderfully today to quell fears as to the results of a possible opening for Russian shipments thru the Dardanelles. Accordingly, the market finished strong at 3c to 3½c above last night. Other leading staples, too, all scored best gains—corn 2½c to ¾c, oats ¾c to 1c, and provisions 7½c to 30c.

GRAIN AND PRODUCT.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.45½; No. 2 northern, $1.41½; No. 3 northern, $1.37½; ½c per bushel more on track, Goderich.

Ontario oats—Outside, 50c to 51c.

Ontario wheat—No. 2, car lots, $1.24 to $1.25, outside, according to freights.

Barley—Good malting barley, outside, 66c to 68c.

Rolled oats—Car lots, per bag of 90 lbs., $3 to $3.20; in smaller lots, $3.25 to $3.30 Windsor to Montreal.

Buckwheat—75c to 78c; car lots, outside.

Milfeed—Car lots, per ton; bran, $25 to $26; shorts, $27 to $28; middlings, $32 to $34; good feed flour, $36 to $42.

Manitoba flour—First patents, $7.30 in jute bags; second patents, $6.80 in jute bags; strong bakers', $6.60; in cotton bags 10c more.

Ontario flour—Winter, 90 per cent. patents, $5.65 to $5.80, seaboard, in bulk; $5 to $5.05, Toronto freights.

Cornmeal—Yellow, 24-lb. sacks, $2.60.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 12.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat was much better today in spite of the sharp decline in prices here yesterday, and a fair amount of business was done with sales of No. 1 northern for February-March shipment at 82c, and No. 2 northern at 80c to 80½ bd. The only business of importance in coarse grains on spot today was a sale of 12,000 bushels of No. 2 Canadian western oats at 60½c per bushel ex-store, but prices for car lots are firm. There is no change in the condition of the market for flour, business being rather quiet for export and domestic account at firm prices. The demand for millfeed is fair.

Butter is quieter, but the undertone of the market is firm.

There was more enquiry from abroad for cheese today. Eggs were active.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 12.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.37½; No. 1 northern, $1.33½ to $1.37; No. 2 do., $1.30 to $1.35; May, $1.33½ to $1.34½.

Corn—No. 2 yellow, 64½c to 66c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 50½c to 50¾c.

Flour—Fancy patents, $6.80; first clears, $6.45; second clears, $4.60.

Bran—Unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 12.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.34½; No. 1 northern, $1.33½; No. 2 do., $1.30½ to $1.31½.

CATTLE MARKETS

Writs For Bye-Elections.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13. — Writs have been issued for the bye-elections in Jacques Cartier and Terrebonne. The nominations will be on Feb. 1, the same as in Westmoreland, Londen, and Prince Albert.

While no official statement has been made there is reason to believe that there is a definite understanding between the parties that the five bye-elections will be uncontested, a Liberal to be elected in Westmoreland and Conservatives in the other four ridings.

ONE-FIFTH INDEMNITY TO BE TURKEY'S SHARE

Terms of Treaty Said to Exist Between Germany and Turkey.

PARIS, Jan. 12—A news despatch received here from Deadeagatch, Bulgaria, says there has been made public there a synopsis of a treaty recently concluded between Germany and Turkey.

The treaty provides that Germany shall furnish Turkey during the war with munitions, material, and the money necessary for the Turkish army and supply also a sufficient number of German officers and specialists to meet Turkey's requirements.

In case of victory, Germany agrees to pay Turkey one-fifth of her war indemnity; in case of defeat, Germany will introduce into the peace treaty a clause guaranteeing the integrity of Ottoman territory. Each country agrees not to conclude peace without the other.

Turkey, under the terms of this agreement, is bound to make war against Great Britain and Russia, France is not mentioned in the document.

TEUTON PRISONERS BASK ON ISLE OF A SUMMER SEA

Lieutenant Trojan, Captured With the North German Lloyd Steamship Thuringen, Writes to Friends of Robinson Crusoe Life in Australian Waters

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Seeking snakes and wallabies and fishing from coral reefs in the blue Australian waters is the daily relaxation of German naval officers who, as prisoners of the British Government, are living a sort of Robinson Crusoe existence on Rottnest Island, near Fremantle.

Rottnest Island, usually a popular summer resort, is now reserved exclusively for German and Austrian prisoners. Life on this lonely island does not exactly throb with excitement, but Lieutenant Martin Trojan, second officer of the North German Lloyd steamship Thuringen, who was captured by the Pioneer, of the Australian navy, finds it agreeably adventurous.

The story of Rottnest Island as told by Lieutenant Trojan and passed by the British censor and now printed in Germany starts with the capture of his ship. The lieutenant appears to be happy, although lonely, and it is one of his great consolations that the island yields suitable food for his two canaries, which the British naval officers permitted him to take with him into exile.

The Pioneer loomed up one night with all lights out, and by some clever pretence lured the Thuringen into a trap from which escape was impossible. The German captain fell an easy prey. The familiar warning—two gun shots—whizzed across her bows. The Pioneer signalled, "Stop your engines; we will escort you." Searchlights soon blinded every one on deck, and in a few minutes British marines were stationed about the Thuringen on guard with bayonets over the German officers and crew. At sunset that day the German flag, as usual, had been hauled down; but next morning at sunrise the British captain, with a strict observance of naval etiquette and the rules of war, saw that it was hoisted again, then immediately hauled it down and the white ensign run up in its place.

Lieutenant Trojan was ordered to join other prisoners taken from the Greifswald, of the North German Lloyd line, and the Neumunster, of the Hamburg-American line, and they set out on the voyage to Rottnest Island. Just before quitting the Thuringen he and his brother officers assembled in the saloon and drank "Good health and success to our dear Fatherland and the welfare of our dear ones at home."

"When we landed on the island," the lieutenant says, "we were marched in a single column, strongly guarded by British soldiers, to the camp. As we approached a burst of song greeted us. We thought it was the English welcoming us with a hymn of triumph, but it turned out to be the sympathetic expression of some Austrian prisoners who were already on the island. Their reception deeply moved me.

"We officers are living in a little summer house called the 'State Hotel,' very popular in the summer months with the holiday-makers from Perth and Fremantle. When the war broke out this house became part of the prisoners' camp. The holiday-makers were very wrathful, and they said that if the Germans were going to be kept on the island they should be made to cut new roads and otherwise improve it."

The lieutenant acknowledges the kindness of the English officers in command of the camp.

"They are very friendly to us, and would do all they could for us, but their powers are limited. We get simple food—weak coffee, bread and a little marmalade. Alcoholic drinks are prohibited. Mutton every day, sometimes vegetables. There is a government store on the island, but personally I haven't a penny to buy anything. How much better, I am sure, the English officers in Germany are being treated."

But then, in the same breath, Lieutenant Trojan speaks of pleasant, sunny days spent on this lovely azure island which many near the European battlefield might envy. He talks of wild flowers and blue, sparkling caves, and the clear waters where the great fish play and bask in the Australian sun. Nature, he says, is their only comfort on the island.

"We bathe every day, and there are no sharks. In many places there are coral reefs, where we go out and catch fish. Once I was out fishing the entire day. On the plateau you stumble across the water basins or caves connected by natural underground passages. I saw an enormous number of beautifully coloured fish, and many sea plants and seaweed."

It reminded him, he added, of the Aquarium at Berlin.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.
Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

ALMOST RIPE FOR IMPERIAL FEDERATION

Sir Richard Jebb Sounds Warning Against Blunders of Twelve Years Ago

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Sir Richard Jebb in the Morning Post advances a novel argument in favour of an Imperial conference this summer. "It should assemble this year," he says, "in order that the British Government, as Doyen of the Britannic group, may meet the Governments of France and Russia with proposals of peace which have received sanction of the Empire as a whole. We are bound to make peace in common with France and Russia, but prior obligation bids us arrange with the dominions first. When peace is concluded in favour of the allies it will be time enough to take up the question of Empire reconstruction."

Time Not Yet Ripe.

Sir Richard dissents from the view of a number of Imperialists that the time is ripe for bringing about a grand act of Imperial Federation. "The next political step," he suggests, "might well be for the dominions individually to take advantage of the existing offer of the British Government and appoint resident ministers in London with the right of free access to the British Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary. That proposal was the final outcome of the whole series of Imperial consultations and no future conference is needed to sanction it. If neither Canada nor Australia is yet willing to go so far neither is likely to make for a larger surrender of national liberty which a federalist grand act would necessarily require.

No More Blunders.

"At any rate let us avoid repeating the blunder of twelve years ago when while effusively praising the loyalty of the dominions, we calmly proceeded to arrange the South African settlement, the Chinese labour and all without ever seeking their opinions. It might be opportune," he concluded, "to summon the Imperial conference in private session for the purpose of deciding what terms of peace should be stipulated or accepted by the Empire, thus recognising at once de facto the new position of the dominions."

W. H. ROWLEY IS DEAD

Prominent Business Man and Former President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association Expires After Sudden Collapse

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—Stricken while drinking tea in the Alexandra room of the King Edward Hotel, William Hersley Rowley, J.P., one of Canada's well-known business men, and president of the E. B. Eddy Co. of Hull, Que., died suddenly of heart disease yesterday afternoon. With no warning whatever, Mr. Rowley collapsed while sitting at a table and expired a few minutes after being carried out of the room. No connection was caused as the impression gathered by the spectators was simply that a man had fainted. Medical aid was at once summoned, but nothing could be done to save Mr. Rowley's life.

Through his connection as president of the E. B. Eddy Co., and as vice-president and afterwards president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Rowley was very well known to business men all over the continent, and with everywhere respected as a first-class business man and the controller of the largest industry of its kind in the British Empire.

Mr. Rowley was born in Yarmouth in 1851 and was educated for the army, in which he was commissioned as a lieutenant of artillery. He turned to commerce before taking up his commission.

An Anglican in religion, Mr. Rowley was a delegate to the Synod, a member of the Chapter of the Treasurer-Seneschal of Christ Church Cathedral, Ottawa. He claimed to be "non-political" in his views, but was a strong imperialist and an uncompromising protectionist.

The Italian Demand Prevails

Turkey Orders Release of British Consul at Hodeida

LONDON, Jan. 13. — Special despatches from Rome yesterday say that Turkey has agreed to the demands of Italy in connection with the Hodeida incident. According to these advices, Turkey has ordered the release of the British vice-consul, Richardson, who was arrested in the Italian consulate at Hodeida, and has promised to punish the soldiers who broke into the consulate, as well as to salute the Italian flag when it is again hoisted over the building.

Investigation of the circumstances attending the invasion of the Italian consulate is still in progress, and the incident will remain open until this inquiry has been completed. In view of the concessions Turkey is reported to have made, however, satisfactory adjustment is expected.

A despatch from Rome, however, says that there are many indications that Italy's entrance into the war is accepted as a foregone conclusion in some quarters.

Large numbers of Germans and Austrians have left Rome within the past few days, and many others are ready to leave at any moment. The exodus is said to be due to advices received from "home authorities."

Japanese Seek Prize Ships.

LIMA, Peru, Jan. 13. — Japanese cruisers continue to be active along the coast of Peru seeking the German converted cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

The latest reports received here set forth that the Japanese armored cruiser Asama went into the port of Payta, Peru, Monday, took on provisions, and left the same afternoon. There is reason to believe that the British steamer Oriana, on her way back to Liverpool from the Pacific coast of South America, was being sought by the German boat.

Smallpox In Vienna.

VENICE, Jan. 13.—Private reports and statements appearing in the Austrian papers show that conditions in the Austrian capital are daily becoming more serious. Smallpox, cholera and typhoid fever are prevalent, 44 cases of smallpox being officially reported in Vienna during the first nine days of January.

To Select Metropolitan.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 13. — The Anglican bishops of Ontario will meet in this city on Jan. 21 for considering the vacancy at Ottawa. The Bishop of Algoma was selected, but he has not accepted the call, and it is understood that he does not care to take over this charge.

REPORT OF THE AUDITORS TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE UNION BANK OF CANADA

In accordance with the provisions of sub-sections 19 and 20 of Section 56 of the Bank Act, we report to the Shareholders as follows:

We have audited the above Balance Sheet with the books and vouchers at Head Office and with the certified returns from the branches.

We have obtained all the information and explanations that we have required, and are of the opinion that the transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

In addition to our verification at the 30th November, we have, during the year, checked the cash and verified the securities representing the investments of the Bank, at its chief office and principal branches and found them to be in agreement with the entries in the books of the Bank relating thereto.

In our opinion the Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true and correct view of the state of the affairs of the Bank according to the best of our information and the explanations given to us, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

T. HARRY WEBB, B. S. READ, C. B. HEGAN, Auditors, of the firm of WEBB, READ, HEGAN, CALLINGHAM and CO., Chartered Accountants

The President, Mr. John Galt, in moving the adoption of the Report, referred to the strong position which the Bank had maintained during the financial crisis and that they had not found it necessary to curtail loans for legitimate purposes. During the present war conditions our first duty is to defend the Empire; our next to devote all our energy to replacing the wastage of war by increased production, and it is to our farmers chiefly that this must be looked for. A splendid beginning has been made in an increase of about 20 per cent in the land ready for next year's crop. Hard work, courage, and intelligent economy will undoubtedly bring us safely through the present ordeal. We have a fertile land with a hardy, vigorous and industrious population, and though for the time being, our progress may be checked, nothing can stop Canada from becoming a great and prosperous country.

In closing he expressed the regret, which he knew would be felt by all the Shareholders, at the unavoidable absence of Mr. G. H. Balfour, the General Manager, on account of his serious illness, and requested Mr. H. B. Shaw, the Assistant General Manager, to read the report.

General Manager's Address.

The General Manager referred to the unsettled financial conditions which are gradually righting themselves, but it would be necessary to continue a policy of extreme caution, and maintain a strong financial position.

The action of the Finance Minister in making Bank Notes legal tender and in promising financial assistance to the Banks (if required), had been of great assistance in steadying the financial situation and in avoiding anything in the nature of a panic.

It is a hopeful sign that the necessity for economy has been universally recognized, and that efforts have been put forth generally to develop our natural resources along lines that will give the best results.

The profits were at the rate of 14.25 per cent on the Paid-up Capital, and were slightly less than last year. Securities have been written down by the sum of $215,000, which is merely a reasonable precaution in view of the present unsettled conditions. $25,000 has been donated to the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

The policy of maintaining a strong position has been continued and our Liquid Assets are 34.90 per cent of our Liabilities to the Public with other sources of strengthening our position available.

Provincial Government Deposits show a decrease, but Public Deposits show an increase of $968,490.75.

Amount due by Banks and Banking correspondents, elsewhere than in Canada, shows an increase of $2,163,261.11, which is immediately available.

Bonds, Debentures and Stocks show an increase of $1,242,538.57.

We have subscribed for £50,000 of the recent British War Loan.

Call and Short Loans, elsewhere than in Canada, show a decrease of $4,760,469.06. Other current Loans and Discounts, elsewhere than in Canada, show a decrease of $1,167,657.25. Current Loans in Canada show an increase of over $4,000,000.00.

Total Assets amount to $81,561,849.04, showing an increase of approximately $800,000.

Mr. B. T. Riley, the Vice-President, in seconding the motion for the adoption of the Report, referred to the fact that for fifty years the Union Bank has stood the test of time and with "BUSINESS AS USUAL" for our motto, we look forward with confidence to what the next fifty years has in store for us.

Auditors.

Messrs. T. Harry Webb, C.A.; B. S. Read, C.A.; and C. B. Hegan, C.A., were re-appointed Auditors of the Bank.

A resolution of sympathy for the General Manager, Mr. G. H. Balfour, during his serious illness, was passed, and the hope was expressed that he might be speedily restored to health and strength.

The customary resolutions of thanks to the Directors and Staff were passed.

The Scrutineers reported the following gentlemen elected as Directors for the ensuing year: Sir William Price, Messrs. John Galt, B. T. Riley, Geo. H. Thomson, E. L. Drewry, F. E. Kenaston, Wm. Shaw, W. R. Allan, M. Bull, Hon. Samuel Barker, P.C., M.P.; H. E. A. DuVernet, K.C.; Stephen Haas, Lieut.-Col. John Carson, J. S. Hough, K.C.; B. B. Cronyn.

The Meeting then adjourned.

At a subsequent Meeting of the newly elected board, Sir William Price was elected Honorary President; Mr. John Galt, President; Mr. B. T. Riley and Mr. Geo. H. Thomson, Vice-Presidents.

FRENCH HONOURS FOR BRITISH GENERALS

M. Poincare Decorates Smith-Dorrien and Haig With Cross of Legion

PARIS, Jan. 12.—President Poincare, on his latest trip to the front, from which he returned to-day, in addition to presenting the colours to the blue jackets and visiting Hazebrouck, went to the British headquarters, where he had a long conversation with Field Marshal Sir John French and the Prince of Wales, and invested the British Generals, Sir Douglas Haig and Smith-Dorrien, with the insignia of Grand Officers of the Legion of Honour. These were conferred at the special request of General Joffre, the French Commander-in-Chief.

From British headquarters President Poincare, undeterred by the serious risks from German shells, drove in an automobile to Arras, accompanied by the prefect of Arras, the Mayor and the bishop. President Poincare visited every part of the ruined city, whose aspect of utter desolation deeply moved him.

President Poincare enquired particularly if the 3,500 inhabitants who remain in the city were getting sufficient food, and before leaving spoke a few words of encouragement to a number of the citizens, mostly elderly people.

The President gave the Mayor 1,000 francs for the poor of the city.

RHEUMATISM, A SNEAKING DISEASE HAS AT LAST MET ITS CONQUEROR
Throbbing Muscles and Swollen Joints Made Well.
RUB ON NERVILINE.
Old age knows no foe more subtle, more unrelenting than rheumatism.
At first only a grumbling pain is felt. But, alas, it settles in the joints and muscles, and finally tortures its victims.
To-day the disease may be in the muscles of the back, thigh, shoulder or neck—to-morrow in the joints of the hand, toes, arms or legs it may work with redoubled fury.
Whether the pain is constant or occasional, makes no difference to "Nerviline."
Because other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged. Nerviline has proved the boon of count. It has brought health to those in the deepest despair, has ended years of awful suffering for those who never hope to be well again.
There is a marvellous healing power in Nerviline which it derives from the extracts and juices of certain rare herbs and roots. It allays almost magically the awful pain that only rheumatics can describe.
Congestion is drawn out of the muscles, stiffened joints are eased and limbered up, the old time feeling of depression is cast off, and once again Nerviline brings the sufferer to buoyant, vigorous lasting good health.
Every home needs good old Nerviline, needs it for earache, toothache, headache, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica, stiff neck, chest colds and sore throat. Whenever there is pain, congestion or inflammation, Nerviline will cure it. Family family size bottle 25c.; trial size 10c., all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

"THE CHURCH AND THE WAR" IS DISCUSSED BY REV. MR. ROLLINS

Most Interesting Address Given at One of the Meetings in the Week of Prayer

Following is an address by Rev. James Rollins given at one of the meetings during the Week of Prayer and published in response to several requests:

The Church and the War.

The subject set down for our consideration at this time—"The Church and the War," presents at first sight a startling conjunction, but only at first sight. When one stops to think, it becomes unthinkable that there should be war and the church, representing as she does the most subtle and powerful of all the world influences not relate herself to it.

It will be well worth our while to look at these two great forces as they touch and interpenetrate. The Church! Do you want me to idealize the church until you see her going forth with supernal beauty, fair as the moon and terrible as an enemy with banners?

The War! Do you want me to paint the war black as the pitch of the bottomless pit, and red with the blood of the slain and without a single redeeming feature?

That were to trifle with the situation. The Church. The actual church is tarnished and stained by the sin and the sordidness, the folly and the selfishness of her members and her ministers. The church members and the ministers of this city and of the world are no better than their life is, and neither oratory nor wilful blindness nor a desire to be praised and gratified is likely to improve the situation. The church people are just as good and just as bad as God sees them to be. There are no scales upon His eyes. We are what we are in His sight, and it will be a great day for the church and for the world when the millions who profess the Name of Jesus Christ search their own hearts with sincerity and diligence for the things there which are hostile to His purposes and antagonistic to His presence. I am not prepared to say that there is less genuine religion in the world to-day than a generation ago. But there is not enough genuine religion in the world to-day to keep vice from slaying annually its tens upon tens of thousands of both sexes, and the drink traffice from shattering brain and nerve, and virility and vision in millions of those made in the likeness of God. The most terrible thing in the world to-day is not the great war unsurpassed in violence and in magnitude as that war is.. The most terrible and the most deadly thing in the world to-day is vice, and drunkenness, and laziness and cruelty, and cunning, and deceit, and profit at any price. These are the terrible things. They are terrible in their consequences, and they have not one redeeming feature about them anywhere—but to me the most terrible thing, and the thing prophetic of woe upon woe, is the easy toleration by multitudes of the followers of Christ of these vast forces which are undoubtedly arrayed against God. Forces which are to be met everywhere in our social, ethical, economic and political life. Now I warn you against thinking that this great war is punishment from Almighty God upon us because of vice, drunkenness and laziness, and cruelty, and cunning, and deceit, and profit at any price. Do not imagine that God's resources are so limited that He needs to use war to punish vice. Let the vicious young man not delude himself that he can escape the punishments of God by shirking enlistment and by escaping the dangers of war. The mark of the beast is already being stamped upon his forehead in decaying manhood, in diseased imagination and in shattered chivalry, whether that chivalry be required toward the country that nourished him, or the sex that bore him, and all the other things I have mentioned, the seeds of punishment are in themselves and there is no way of escape. It needs not war to square the account in these matters. Had there been no war there would have been abundant reasons why the church should enter upon its work of another year with penitence and humiliation with strong crying and tears. The chances, however, are that we would have entered upon this year but for the war as we have entered on other years in prosperous times in a smug content. Why? Because we had increased our givings to mission by a few dollars and had all our local accounts paid!

The war is helping us to do better than that this year, and so I regard the war as having a redemptive side. But has it not also a penal side? Undoubtedly. And I want you now to look for a little at the penal side and the redemptive side of this great war.

If God by means of the war is not punishing the world for vice and drunkenness, and cruelty, and cunning, and deceit, and profit at any price, and if there is a penal side to the war, for what is God punishing us by means of it? The nation that gave to the world Luther and the Reformation, has so lost its vision of God and has become so dead to His wish that there should be peace on earth and good will among men; and that the strong should bear the burdens of the weak; and that the fit should survive in the interests of the unfit; and that the strength of the strong should be as a shield above the head of the faint, that it has taken its eyes off this vision splendid, and faced in the opposite direction. The dominating element in that great nation has become so dead to those essential ethical ideals, the possession of which declare a person to be an heir of God, and a joint heir with Jesus Christ, that it has proclaimed the right of might and reared a race of warriors and toasted "the day" when with adequate preparation and scientific brutality it would ride forth trampling upon the weak to remake the map of the world to its own liking irrespective of plighted word and solemn covenant. Vital religion was so lacking in that land, the church was so ineffective in that land, that this cult of the sword was able to flourish until it dominated society and occupied the seats of the mighty and sat upon the throne and menaced the peace of the world. The penal side of this war is intimately associated with the apostacy of this great nation from the ethical ideals of Christianity to the ideals of the brute and the barbarian.

The Allied nations have great national sins for which they will do well to humble themselves before God, but I do not think they will ever have to humble themselves because they challenged the Prussian Philosophy and denied the right of that Philosophy to rule the world—a philosophy which trains men to trample upon the weak, mutilate women and children, break its treaties, and enthrone in the heavens a new goddess—Necessity forsooth — and calls to its aid the "Butcher of Europe" to incite a "Holy War" against Christians.

It seems to me that any man who understands the immense issues which lie in the balances may well cheer on the Allies and give them material aid. The Canadian mother may give her son, and place the sword in his hand in the proud consciousness that he is defending not only the honour of the Empire, but also vindicating the imperial right of humanity to oppose by force the intolerable insolence of a force that recognizes no law either of God or man, except the law of its own necessity.

For the sacrifices which this war is demanding there are wonderful compensations. We are all coming to see in a new light the glory of discharging the debts we owe to one another, and to humanity. We are seeing with some degree of freshness that a man's life consists not in the abundance of that which he has, but in the abundance of that which he gives. The young moistener and the young moneymaker is not quite the whole thing in society to-day. That is a real gain. The butterfly is on the wheel, and the heart of humanity rejoices at a thing the butterfly is. That is a compensation indeed. Let us keep our faith in God. Let us pray and work for the speedy return of a peace founded upon righteousness and enduring in its character. Let us pray for the wounded among our friends and foes and send ministers to them for both body and soul. Let us pray God to prepare the dying for death, and let us remember the homes to which loved ones will return no more.

Let us pray that the General Staffs of the Allied forces may be given wisdom to direct the supreme interests intrusted to them and that our soldiers and sailors may have both courage and skill to execute the tasks assigned them.

Let us accept our share of the burden and stand ready to step into any door of service that opens for King and country.

Let us be prepared to walk the way of the valley of the shadow unafraid, when the hour for that great adventure strikes. So shall we in time grow familiar with the Master of Eternity and be His willing servants here and there.

Society is Meeting With Practical Response—1,650 Beds Endowed

The appeal made to the British public by the Red Cross Society for the endowment of 1,650 beds in the new Red Cross hospital in London, to be known as the King George hospital, has met with a splendid response. In less than two weeks since the appeal was made every bed in the institution has been subscribed for by the generous British public.

Although all the beds have been provided for, money is urgently needed for general furnishing, and the immense size of the hospital makes it necessary to appeal for a large fund to be devoted to that purpose. From every part of the British Empire subscriptions have been received by the society for the equipment of this splendid hospital where many of the gallant soldiers from Canada and other parts of the Empire, who may be wounded in the present fight for freedom, will be cared for and restored to health.

A Generous Donation.

Through the generosity of the British Government a government building has been remodelled and almost rebuilt, and through the generosity of thousands of British subjects one of the finest hospitals in the kingdom has arisen, as it were, in a night. Funds are still urgently needed for the equipment of this hospital. The King has generously donated four beds, while two were provided by the Queen. H. M. Queen Alexandra donated $125 for the endowment of one bed as did Princess Victoria, Princess Christian, H. M. Queen Amelie of Portugal. The King and Queen of Portugal each donated two beds.

The highest and the lowest in the land have given of their means to equip this splendid hospital, but funds are still urgently needed in order that the institution may be thoroughly furnished and equipped with the necessary surgical appliances. Subscriptions may be sent to the Canadian Red Cross Society, 77 King Street, east, Toronto.

Annual Meeting of The Murray Street Church

The annual meeting of Murray Street Baptist church will be held at eight o'clock to-night in the school room. The reports of all departments will be presented and the officers for the year 1915 elected.

The representatives of the departments have prepared their reports in concise fashion so that no time will be lost, while the work of the year will be fully covered.

The annual meeting of the teachers and officers of the Sunday school took place last night, and also that of the deacons, who act as a Nominating committee.

Operations Are Halted Turks On Their Mettle

Five Days' Battle is Going on at Urgan, Where Sultan's Forces Are In Their Death Struggle For Lack of Ability to Get Reinforcements—Russians Seeking to Force Road to Cracow

LONDON, Jan. 13. — The French attacks to the north of Soissons, on the Aisne and near Perthes, east of Rheims, are developing into a serious offensive. The gains which the French have made at these points, if followed up would have a two-fold importance. They threaten the railways which the Germans are using to supply their troops in the fighting line, and are a serious menace to the German forces which hold positions to the north of Rheims.

The French have found it impossible to take those positions from which the Germans are bombarding Rheims by frontal attacks, but advances on either side would envelop them and force a retirement, thus giving the cathedral city much desired relief from the German shells, from which it has suffered so much.

In the Argonne and on the heights of the Meuse the Germans are on the offensive and claim to have made further progress. It is reported that the Germans have sent heavy reinforcements to this district to prevent the French from breaking their lines, which are very close to their own border and not far from Metz.

Fresh German troops despatched to Alsace, combined with the wintry weather, have stopped the French advance in that region. Along the rest of the front the artillery is doing most of the work. Only isolated attacks are being attempted, the state of the weather and ground making the movements of any large bodies of troops out of the question.

Last night's French bulletin was as follows:

"To the northeast of Soissons the enemy throughout all last night bombarded our positions on the plateau of Perrieres and on 'Spur 132.' With the object of taking the latter point, he delivered to-day a strong attack, the result of which is not yet known.

"There is no other event of importance to report."

The afternoon bulletin said:

"From the aisne to the Oise there was yesterday an intermittent cannonading, fairly violent at certain places.

"On the Aisne, to the north of Soissons, determined attacks have been delivered against the trenches occupied by us the 8th and 9th of January. The enemy suffered heavy losses. The attacks were repulsed with the bayonet in a hand to hand struggle. To the east of Soissons the enemy yesterday attacked our positions several times. We repulsed him, and we took possession of more trenches.

"From Soissons to Rheims there were artillery exchanges. Our heavy pieces of artillery responded efficaciously to the batteries and the mine-throwers of the Germans.

"In Champagne, in the region of Souain, there was yesterday very active shooting by our artillery directed against the positions of our adversaries near Perthes.

"Le Forrin, situated to the north of the Beausejour farm, was the scene of a desperate encounter. The enemy succeeded in setting up a trench at a point within a series of field-works, the commanding position of which was held by us. This fighting is still going on.

"In the Argonne and as far as the Meuse there have been two German attacks, one at the Forest of Consenvoye and the other at the Forest of Bouchot. Each was repulsed.

"To the southeast of Circy-Sur-Vesouse one of our detachments surprised and put to flight a German company which was pillaging the village of St. Sauveur.

"In the Vosges and in Alsace the day passed quietly. Bad weather and the snowstorms continue."

A despatch from Lousanne, Switzerland, says:

"Rain and snow has fallen the past two days in Upper Alsace and has caused both the French and German armies operating in the vicinity of Muhlhausen and Altkirch to suspend their activities.

"Advices reaching here from Basle say the Germans are planning a big offensive movement with the view of recapturing positions they lost in Alsace."

The following despatch has been received from Amsterdam:

"Although fresh German troops were continually being sent to the front on the Yser, a passage of the river even if the allies' position could be forced, would be impossible according to a German officer, owing to the inundation of the country on either side of it. The officer added that if the Germans are forced to retire from present positions, Belgium will be devastated as the ruse have got beyond control."

(BY HARRY PAYNE BURTON.)

"Look out for the spreading boughs
On the riven forest tree,
Look down where deep in blood and mire
Black thunder plants his feet and ploughs
The soil for ruin—that is France
Still thrilling like a lyre."

So sang the heart of great George Meredith as he tramped the bleeding earth of fair Lorraine after the close of the Franco-Prussian War. But that was forty years ago when men were only killed by men, and not by Krupps! To-morrow no one but a blind poet, walking the plains of Marne, would pen such lines of hope—for at the end of the great world war now raging, even should it halt this hour, there will be too little left of France, or Germany either, to thrill a note.

Dead men do no singing, and the losses of life in this conflict have nothing even approaching a parallel in all the history of the world.

For the American mind, an ocean away, to grasp at all the appalling slaughter that is reddening Europe, a comparison with the mortality in the American Civil War will serve.

In the four years of this great conflict only about 4,000,000 men altogether were engaged, according to Livermore's figures—2,898,304 on the union side and 1,234,000 on the southern side. Of the union enrollment, according to Fox's "Regimental Losses in the Civil War," but 110,070 were killed in action or perished from wounds received in action during the whole course of the war.

And on the confederate side but 94,000 perished as a result of action, Livermore says.

At the outbreak of European hostilities the armies of the various nations swelled to unheard-of size due to modern militarism, were placed by leading authorities at these figures:

	Trained Men
Great Britain	700,000
France	2,150,000
Russia	5,400,000
Japan	1,500,000
Belgium	340,000
Germany	5,500,000
Austria-Hungary	3,200,000

Thus it is seen that the world war in Europe has already involved four times as many men as were involved in the entire length of our civil war. And it goes without saying that the mortality, proportionately as well as actually, will be much greater for modern armaments are many times as deadly as were the rifles and cannon of '61.

There have been no total official lists of the killed and wounded in the present war compiled yet in any nation, but various unofficial estimates declare that in the first five months of the war at least 1,800,000 lives were lost. And such estimates seem more or less borne out by the sporadic official estimates that have been given out from time to time in various countries.

On 19th December Great Britain issued an official statement to the effect that 84,000 Britons had been lost since the British Army took the field, but these losses had been more than made good by the introduction of various Colonial contingents and home recruits.

On 19th November, a French document announced that 100,000 French soldiers had been killed in action up to that date, that 400,000 were sick and wounded, and that 90,000 were prisoners in Germany.

On 30th November, a statement issue at Petrograd declared that the Austrain losses to that date consisted of 800,000 men and 19,000 officers, although this was probably an exaggeration. A semi-official statement, published on 4th November in the North German Gazette, said that the Russian losses against the Austrians had been 420,000 men and that the Russian losses against the Germans had been 340,000. The number of Russians lost at the battle of the Masurian lakes alone was fixed by the Germans at 150,000.

The Prussian losses in dead alone were fixed by the Berlin despatch to Copenhagen, Denmark, a neutral country, at the appalling total of 385,000.

This total does not include the German losses sustained by the regiments from Bavaria, Wurtemberg, and Saxony.

No doubt the bloodiest battles of the present war have been the series still raging in the Yser district of Belgium. It is said that the Germans estimate their losses in actual killed there so far at 40,000 and the Allies' dead at 30,000.

Compared with all other wars in the world's history these figures mean if this war goes on, Europe will be impoverished of strong manhood to such an extent that she may never rehabilitate herself—that France may never again come "thrilling like a lyre"—that though the big rulers of Europe may feel that "the blood of peasants is only red a hundred feet away," still life, after all, is only blood, and that this war of Kruppism is establishing a record for bloodspilling that only historians of the future have complete knowledge of and, what may be worse, its effect on the human race.

GOOD WORK OF THE INDUSTRIAL ASSOCIATION

In the Past Three Months Employment Has Been Found for 176 People—Central Association Secretory Expresses His Appreciation.

The Industrial Association, since its inception about three months ago, has found positions for 176 persons, as follows:

Boys	10
Clerks	8
Carpenters	5
Farm hands	36
Girls	10
Labourers	75
Machinists	6
Painters	4
Polishers	1
Teamsters	9
Women	15
Woollen Mill hands	4
Total	176

That this is an excellent showing may be gathered from the letter received from the Secretary of the Central Industrial Association of Ontario at Toronto, a copy of which follows:

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 9th, 1915.

Edward Langley, Esq., 352 1-2 Water Street, Peterborough.

My Dear Sir,—I am glad to learn by yours of the 7th of the excellent work you are doing in the Peterborough Branch of the Association. Peterborough seems to have arisen to the situation better than any other City, and if they all had co-operated on the same basis you have, we would really be able to do something big in the way of relief for the unemployed. Unfortunately our own City, as well as some of the other larger cities, have not organized on the basis we suggested, with the result that they are using existing machinery which is more or less inadequate to handle the difficult situation most of them are confronted with this year.

I am also in receipt of 100 cards covering applications from the unemployed.

With many thanks for your good wishes which I heartily reciprocate, I am,

Yours faithfully,
H. D. Scully,
Secretary.

On a report being made to Mr. Burnham, the Member of Parliament, of the work of the Association, he replied:

"Thank you very much for your note. It is very reassuring. It is a very good thing to have a man of your acute perception and tender sensibilities on guard in matters of this kind".

The men to whom Mr. Langley has been of assistance speak very warmly in his praise and of the good offices of Mrs. Langley who is indefatigable in her assistance in the work and particularly among the women. When the report is analized it shows that for every day since the Industrial Association commenced operations two applicants have been supplied with a position, thus relieving the City of the necessity of providing for the applicants. The citizens, generally, should be pleased with the success achieved. This is another instance of the power of organized effort and if all the citizens would take it upon themselves to patronize the Industrial Association by undertaking some work now that otherwise will be put off for a year or more, but must eventually be done and ring Mr. Langley, at 1669, a great deal of suffering and a heavy drain on the resources of the City will be relieved. The Association's motto of "Work, not Charity" seems to be entirely popular with the applicants, and it is a well-known fact that charity very often reaches the persons least entitled to it, and in this way tends to increase pauperism and destroy independence.

The Association is able to supply an almost unlimited demand for any kind of help and earnestly solicits the assistance of citizens in making its existence as useful as possible.

DISAPPROVES OF OTTAWA TRIP

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Mr. Editor,—Some time ago the M.P. for West Peterborough, through the press, informed the people, that all that could be done had been done, so far as getting a mobilization camp here; (at least, the people of his own party, that put him in power, should have accepted his statement); but no, the Mayor and his followers knew better, with the result that they travelled to Ottawa, on the tax-payer's money, only to find that what the M. P. had said, was true.

Before the nominations or elections, I objected to the idea of Mr. Harry Rush, that of "re-electing the Mayor and Council, by acclamation, in order to save five or six hundred dollars' election expenses." My objection was based on the principle, that such a Mayor and Council would waste more in thousands; and while neither the Mayor or the Council were re-elected by acclamation the statement still stands, and to prove it, I refer to the wild goose chase to Ottawa.

Are the Mayor and his followers entitled to spend the money of the Taxpayer in little trips? Is the tax-payer or the M.P. not to be considered? There are enough matters to be looked after in Peterborough, that need the attention of the city officials, without spanding time and money of the taxpayer, chasing the bag of gold at the foot of the rainbow.

I again repeat, what I said before, "the business of the city is very serious business" and should not be in the hands of incompetents.

A Non-Voting Taxpayer.

Peterborough, Jan. 9th, 1915.

Another Suggestiont For Civic Jaun

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Our City Fathers appear to rather like sending deputations to places outside our City. As an instance, there was the recent deputation to Ottawa, whep the Hon. "Sam.", metaphorically, "sat" upon them.

There is, I understand, a standing order to the effect that the Council may be allowed to send deputations to other places, when and where they like.

Now, here is an opportunity. Why not send a deputation to Montreal to wait on the authorities of the Grand Trunk Railway to protest against the proposed "cut" in their employees' wages, which will more or less affect our City?

It would be a pleasant little outing for a few of the members of the Council, plus a few well-to-do outsiders.

Hang the expense! It will all come out right in the wash; the cost will be cheerfully (?) borne by the long-suffering.

Taxpayer.

SYRIA A KINGDOM?

Latest British Plan Is To Establish an Independent Ruler.

ROME, Jan. 13.—The Cairo correspondent of The Giornale d'Italia says that Great Britain is planning to transform Syria into an independent kingdom, with Prince Mohammed Daud (a direct descendent of Mehammed Ali, who conquered Syria in 1831-33, but was compelled by the European powers to relinquish his control of the country in 1841) as sovereign under a British protectorate.

This, the correspondent says, will bring to a real test the question whether Great Britain can build a railway from the Syrian coast to Jerusalem.

Redmond Again Heads League.

DUBLIN, Jan. 13.—(Via London.)—John Redmond yesterday was re-elected president of the United Irish League at the annual meeting of the directorate held here. Resolutions were adopted congratulating the Irish nation on the triumphal end of the agitation of the past forty years for a national self-government, but maintaining that in view of the critical situation which might arise in the near future, the continued existence of the national organization until the crisis has passed is vitally essential.

EPOCH-MARKING EVENT IN THE HISTORY OF ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Will Be Recorded To-morrow Evening—Edifice Which Has Been Undergoing Extensive Alterations, Covering a Period of Nine Months, Will Be Dedicated by the Lord Bishop of Toronto.

To-morrow, January 14th, will mark the beginning of a new epoch in the history of All Saints' church in this city. On that date the church edifice, which has undergone extensive alterations will be re-opened for divine service.

For nine months the chancel and vestries have been in course of erection, while for the past three weeks the interior of the nave has been in a process of transformation. When the church is re-opened it will be one of the largest and most beautiful structures in the diocese of Toronto.

A Short History of the Work.

A short history of the parish will prove interesting to many at this time. Dating from 1875, the work covers a period of nearly forty years, and the church as it stands to-day, is the fulfillment of many fond hopes and the result of the efforts of many faithful workers, some of whom are not living to see the splendid fruition of their labours.

The work was begun under the late Rev. J. W. R. Beck, M.A., Rector of Peterborough, having with him the Rev. W. C. Allen, M.A., now of Millbrook. At that time services and Sunday school were held in a little brick building on Dalhousie Street, near Rubidge Street. This work, however, lapsed for a time, but was taken up with renewed vigour in 1882, chiefly along the line of the Sunday school, which comprised about fifteen of the religiously uncared-for children of the neighbourhood; a great contrast to the Sunday school of to-day, with over three hundred on the roll, besides a church congregation of over four hundred families.

A Change.

It soon became necessary to remove from the Mission building on Dalhousie Street, used at that time in common by several denominations, and Sunday school was held in the south ward school until Miss Chamberlain, whose interest and benefactions are remembered with great gratitude, donated a property on the corner of Bethune and Dalhousie Streets. The first religious service was held here by the late Mr. Herbert Hammond, a lay reader of St. John's church. The Rev. J. W. R. Beck died in 1886 and his successor, the Rev. Canon Davidson, took a more active interest in the new mission. A name also to be remembered among many others, who were interested workers of those early days, is that of the late Rev. V. Clementi, who gave not only the benefit of his ripe experience but also liberally of his means.

A New Mission Building.

During the summer of 1890 the idea of erecting a mission building assumed shape and work was vigorously begun towards this end. Miss Chamberlain exchanged the old site for the more desirable one, on the corner of Rubidge and Sherbrooke streets, upon which the parish hall is now situated. The work progressed rapidly and the new building was opened by the late Archbishop of Toronto on January 22nd, 1891. On January 3rd, 1892, the first morning service was held and the first celebration of the Holy Communion on Christmas Day of the same year.

The first curate of St. John's, especially detailed to have charge of "The South Ward Mission," as it was then called, was the Rev. W. M. Louks, now of Winnipeg. Other names also subsequently associated with the work are, the Rev. C. B. Kendrick, now of Hamilton, the Rev. E. W. Pickford, now of Brighton, the Rev. B. C. H. Andrews, and the Rev. Carl Smith.

The First Curate.

In 1896 the Rev. W. L. Armitage, B.A., became curate in charge. About that time a chancel was added to the original mission building, and the complete structure dedicated as "All Saints' Church," on Sunday, October 11th, 1897.

A date always to be remembered by the congregation is January 1st, 1902, when All Saints' emerged from the mission stage and attained the status of a separate and self-supporting parish. The first rector was the Rev. W. L. Armitage, B.A., who was inducted on January 22nd, 1902. Mr. Armitage remained in charge till 1904, when he resigned to go to Picton.

Subsequent rectors were the Rev. William Major, 1904—1908, and the Rev. H. B. Trumpour, 1908—1911. The present rector is the Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., who assumed charge of the parish on Jan. 1st, 1912, and was inducted on Feb. 16th, 1912.

About five years ago, the growing need, both of the congregation and Sunday school, necessitated the building of a new church. The matter had been under consideration for some years and finally took concrete form in the building of the nave of the present church structure, the corner stone of which was laid with Masonic ceremony on July 9th, 1909. The first service in the new church was held on Oct. 23rd, 1910. At that time the old church was converted into a parish hall.

Recent Additions.

The additions recently made include the chancel, clergyman's vestry, general assembly room for the choir, men's and boys' robing room, and ladies' robing room.

The building is Gothic in design and is constructed throughout of red, Stony Lake Granite, trimmed with grey granite and gray limestone.

The interior of the chancel is very beautiful and spacious, the dimensions being 34 ft. x 20 ft. It provides accommodation for a choir of 60 persons, while the whole church has a seating capacity of 900.

One of the most beautiful and striking features of the interior is the splendid Gothic arch separating the chancel from the nave and rising to the very peak of the roof. The inside of this arch is mounted with a row of incandescent lamps, which constitute a system of indirect lighting. This dispenses with the necessity of a central chandelier in the chancel, and so leaves unbroken the view of the triple chancel window, which is one of the most beautiful features of the church.

The chancel furniture is of dark, quarter-cut oak, including choir stalls, clergy seats and communion rail. These, all mounted on a rich red carpet of ecclesiastical design, will produce a beautiful and churchly appearance.

The walls and ceiling of this church have been beautifully decorated. This work has been under the direction of Mr. Arthur Kingdon, upon whom it reflects great credit, and adds greatly to the warmth and cosiness of the interior.

A Marble Tablet.

Near the chancel arch and over the font, a marble tablet has been erected to the memory of the late William Van Every. A number of gifts also have been made to the church, including the communion rail by the ladies' Bible class; a large prayer book for the prayer desk by the Junior Auxiliary, and kneeling cushions for the communion table and communion rail, by Mr. William Comstock. The furniture in the Rector's vestry is of quarter-cut oak and if the gift of the Women's Guild.

The church is also indebted to Mr. Alexander, of the firm of Alexander & Miller, for the electric wiring of the new addition; to Mr. Barry, for a skillful piece of work on the organ front; and to Mr. Hall and Mr. Greenwood for racks for the choir surplices, as well as to many other men and women of the congregation, who have given ungrudgingly of their time for various purposes.

The contractors were as follows: Masonry, Mr. R. Sheehy; carpenter work and painting, Ephgrave and Barrett; galvanized works, Campbell & Best; heating, Adamson & Dobbin.

The Building committee consisted of Mr. H. P. Morgan (chairman), Mr. C. E. Sisson, Mr. Thos. Hooper, Mr. T. H. Dawson, Mr. Edgar Worth.

The architect was Mr. Samuel Belcher.

The cost of the building, including furniture and exclusive of tower, is $45,000.

Opening Services.

The opening services ought to prove of interest not only to the congregation of All Saints', but to many others throughout the city. The following is a list of the special services:—

Thursday, Jan. 14th— Benediction service conducted by the Lord Bishop of Toronto.

Sunday, Jan. 17th— Preacher, the Rev. Dr. Griffeth-Thomas, of Toronto, late Principal of Wycliffe Hall, Oxford.

Monday— Congregational gathering in the Parish Hall.

Sunday, Jan. 24th— Preacher, the Rev. Dr. O'Meara, Principal of Wycliffe College, Toronto.

Sunday, Jan. 31st— Preacher, the Venerable Archdeacon Perry, M.A., of St. Catharines.

This Swedish Paper Displeased.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 13.—(Via London.)—The Dagblad, the leading Swedish Conservative paper, expresses great dissatisfaction over Great Britain's reply to the American Government's note concerning delays to commerce, declaring that it indicates a determination to adhere to what it terms the harassing policy of interfering with and restricting the legitimate commerce of neutrals.

The Dagblad declares that the Swedish people will never submit to Great Britain's assumption that she has the right to dictate just how much of any particular goods Sweden requires for her own consumption or how much of such goods she will be permitted to import.

Another Enquiry Asked For.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 13. — New Brunswick is to have another enquiry. Hon. John Morrissey, Minister of Public Works, has asked the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to appoint a commission to enquire into his Department because of the statements made "by certain men." It is understood his wish will be complied with.

ENJOYABLE BANQUET HELD IN KNOX CHURCH

Men of the Church Were the Guests of the Ladies at a Most Interesting Social Event Last Evening--Enjoyable Programme Given

About one hundred and twenty men enjoyed a tasty banquet prepared by the Ladies' Aid of Knox church, last evening.

The object of the gathering, as explained by Dr. McCulloch, the chairman and toastmaster, was to get a better understanding of their church's circumstances. When the suggestion of a banquet was first made the Ladies' Aid very kindly offered to act as hostesses.

The young men of the A. S. K. Bible class, under the directions of their president, Mr. Stanley Byers, waited on the tables.

After the supper there was the following interesting programme of toasts:

Chairman and toastmaster—Dr. McCulloch.

Prayer—Mr. J. T. Morrison.

To the King—Messrs. A. Mackenzie and W. J. Byers.

To Canada—Messrs. A. Parker, H. J. McCann and Mr. Lancaster.

To the Church, Spiritual and Corporal—Messrs. Clifford and Chiles.

Solo—Mr. Humpage.

To the Session—Messrs. H. Shurter and J. F. Morrison.

To the Board—Dr. McCulloch and Mr. K. Dencon.

To the Brotherhood—Messrs. Eason and Yale.

Missions—Mr. Sands.

To the Young Men—Messrs. A. McKenzie and E. Ide.

To the Young People— Messrs. C. Williamson and R. Hillier.

Duet— "The Battle Eve," Messrs. Humpage and Smith.

To the Old Minister—Messrs. Kennedy, Smith and Herron.

To the New Minister—Messrs. Taylor and Clarke.

To the Support of the Church—Dr. McCulloch and Mr. J. F. Morrison.

Solo—Mr. J. Smith.

To the Choir—Mr. Kenyon and Mr. J. Smith.

To the Ladies, Our Hostesses — Messrs. Dencon, Yale, Carpenter and Gerard.

The programme concluded with united singing and a prayer by Mr. H. Shurter.

MILITARY EUCHRE

A Military Euchre and At Home will be held under the Auspices of the St. Peter's Ladies Literary Society, Thursday Night in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum at 8 o'clock. Admission 25c.

A BASHFUL CLERK.

A pretty young woman stepped into a music store the other day. She tripped up to the counter where a new clerk was assorting music and in her sweetest tones asked:

"Have you 'Killed Me in the Moonlight?'

The clerk turned half way around, looked at her and answered:

"It must have been the man at the other counter; I've only been here a week."

FLOUR TAKES A JUMP BREAD IS STATIONARY

Local Bakers Say Price of Staff of Life Will Not Be Increased for the Present at Least, Although the Price of Wheat is on the Up Grade.

Though flour took a jump in the ... this morning it is highly improbable that bread will be advanced ... local consumers, according to one ... Peterborough's largest bakers.

Bread Stationary

Though all commodities have ad... alarmingly bread to local consumers is not likely to be any higher for the present at least.

An Examiner reporter called on Messrs. Wm. Stock and Sons to-day and found them drawing a car of Five Roses flour. He learned that $3.65 per cwt. was being paid, while a similar quantity of the same grade was bought three weeks ago at the rate of $3.35 per cwt.

Other commodities used in the production and distribution would also have an effect.

Sugar has doubled in price Oats are almost double what they were at the same time last year, and malt extract which bakers use, has been taxed by the Government, so that it costs nearly twenty-five per cent more than under normal conditions. On top of this the new taxes imposed by thte Workmen's Compensation Act would have their effect.

Bread in Peterborough is retailed at present at twelve cents for a three-pound loaf. There is no organization among the local bakers and none seems to be taking the initiative at the present in arranging a rise in prices. According to Mr. Harry Stock, manager for Messrs. Wm. Stock and Sons, it is not probable that there will be any difference in prices locally for a month at least.

LECTURE ON PERSIA

Most Enjoyable Event in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church

An interesting address on "Persia" was given at the Charlotte St. Methodist Church last evening by Mr. A. E. Kochaly, a native of Persia. Mr. Kochaly, who was educated in Canada, is a most intertaining lecturer, and his description of Persia, its people and costumes, was most educative. Mr. A. B. Gates was chairman, and before the lecture Miss Ada Richardson contributed a vocal sola and Miss E. Jackson a violin solo.

Vigorous Attacks Are Being Carried On at Perthes and on the Aisne to Relieve Cathedral City

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Heavy storms prevail in the east, and while they have not completely stopped the fighting they have called a halt over the greater part of the field of operations In restricted areas, along the river Pawka near Bolimow, however, there has been fierce fighting, but, according to Petrograd correspondents the Germans have been unable to make any serious advance. Severe fighting also is taking place on the Nida river, where the Austrians are opposing the Russian attempts to penetrate to Cracow.

The Turks have been offering stubborn resistance to the Russians at Kara Urgan, where a battle has been in progress for five days. The position at this place is more favorable for the Turks, who have not the deep snow of the mountains to contend with, and are in closer touch with their base. It is a death struggle for them, for so long as the Russian fleet commands the Black Sea the Turks cannot get reinforcements from Europe, the overland route being a long and difficult one. They have an army corps at Bagdad, but this is needed to oppose the advance of the British Indian army from the east.

An official statement issued last night at Petrograd says:

"From the left bank of the Vistula on the night of Jan. 11 and all the following day the Germans continued the attempts which have become customary of late to attack by small detachments at different points along our front, but nevertheless all these attempts were easily repulsed by our rifle fire and cannonading, which inflicted grave losses on the enemy.

"The Germans showed a more obstinate offensive which, however, failed in the region of the village of Soutahs, making four separate attacks, and also near the Meghaty farm, where they delivered two attacks.

"At daybreak on Jan. 11 along parts of our front, our scouts approached very near to the German trenches, and successfully attacked them by means of hand grenades, inflicting severe losses.

"According to supplementary information, the Germans suffered considerable losses in an attack on the night of Jan. 10 in the neighborhood of the village of Samice, abandoning 500 killed on the field. Our field searchlights were of much service during the attack.

"On the other fronts there is no essential change."

TWO DEATHS IN HASTINGS

Another Resident Is Suffering As a Result Of The Eating Propensities Of a Horse

HASTINGS, Jan. 13. — The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Pickens passed away on Friday last after a short illness. The baby was a little over two years old. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon to the T. V. cemetery, where interment took place. Mr. and Mrs. Pickens have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

The death occurred last week also of Miss Olive Glen, of Percy, aged 25 years, who has been ailing for some months. She is survived by her father (her mother having died some years ago) and a younger sister, to whom much sympathy is extended in this their hour of bereavement. The funeral, which was held on Wednesday last, was largely attended, testifying to the high esteem in which the deceased was held. The remains were interred in the T. V. cemetery.

Sleighing Party.

A party of young people, to the number of about 25, enjoyed a pleasant sleigh ride on Friday night to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Collins, where the evening was pleasantly spent in various kinds of amusements. During the course of the evening, delicious refreshments were served, including oysters, etc. ,to which ample justice was done, after which the merry group wended their homeward way, reaching Hastings none the worse after some trying experiences.

Mr. George Carter, an aged resident of this vicinity, was taken to the County House of Refuge at Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson were host and hostess to a large party of their friends on Wednesday evening last, where the evening was pleasantly spent.

Mr. Hugh Yeartx of Toronto, paid a business visit to Hastings on Friday last.

Mr. John Carter and daughter Helen of Westwood, accompanied by Mrs. A. Hore, of Percy, spent Wednesday with their niece, Mrs. Gordon Reavie.

Mr. Basil McKee is suffering from an ugly wound in the neck, caused by a bite from one of his horses, and which came to him very unexpectedly. Medical assistance was summoned and the wound was dressed.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Howson of Otonabee, visited last week at the home of Mr. Duncan, Fife.

Mr. and Mrs. Downar of Western Canada, are renewing acquaintances here.

The employees in the local stores are rejoicing over the announcement that the stores will close every second night for the next three months at 6.30 p.m.

Mr. John Doherty of Norwood, gave us a call on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Smart are entertaining a young bridal couple, Mr. and Mrs. McQuade, of Napanee.

The gathering on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Howard, was reported to be one of the most enjoyable of the season.

Miss Lily Carter has been visiting her aunt and cousins in Keene.

Miss J. Brooks of Peterborough, spent a few days last week with her cousin, Miss Daisy Brooks.

Mr. Coleman Elliott of Norwood, was in town on Friday.

Mr. Stanley Laing and sisters, Mable and Elsie, of Norwood, spent Sunday with friends near town.

Those who attended the concert in the Town Hall on Thursday night report a huge crowd and a very good programme.

Mr. W. Scott of Guelph, is with his father, Mr. Robt. Scott.

We had a call from Dr. West of Campbellford on Friay last.

Mr. Ben Hicks has gone to join the second contingent en route for the scene of action.

Mrs. J. Beavis is steadily improving and hopes to soon be able to resume her household duties.

Mrs. M. J. Christie of Peterborough, is with friends near town.

Reports are to the effect that Mr. Jas. Stevenson, Sr., is about to dispose of his property. The supposed purchasers is Mr. Sloan Patterson of Percy.

The recent thaw has materially affected the roads, the icy pavements being in a somewhat dangerous condition for pedestrians.

Mr. and Mrs. John Doherty have returned from a pleasant visit with friends in Keene.

Some of our sports went over to Norwood to attend the hockey match there.

GERMANS GOT SUPPLIES

U.S. Red Cross is a Teuton Organization Says French Agent

TORONTO, Jan. 13. — The most startling story of pro-German intrigue and political machination that has been revealed in America, at least, since the outbreak of war was laid bare last evening by Dr. L. E. Brown-Landone of Paris, France, who is here to address the Canadian Club. Dr. Brown-Landone is in America primarily to make an appeal for the hospitals of northern France, where the most appalling conditions prevail at the present time, but, being an American by birth and having been in the United States during the past few weeks, his story last night concerned mainly the intense activity of pro-German sentiment in his native country.

In short, according to Dr. Brown-Landone, the Red Cross organization in the United States is nothing more nor less than a pro-German agency. Although given the nominal connection with the United States through the name of President Woodrow Wilson as Honorary President of the organization, the Red Cross Society has for its president, Jacob Schiff, a German Jewish banker, and on account of certain revelations in connection with the sailing of the Red Cross ship from America last fall it has been identified as strongly sympathetic with the German people.

"In the first place," said Dr. Brown-Landone, "the officials of the Red Cross Society in the United States wasted $67,000 in chartering a special ship to carry hospital supplies, which British, Holland and French lines of boats offered to carry free of charge. Then," he continued, "after the ship had left port a protest from Great Britain and France over the predominantly German personnel of the crew resulted in her return to New York. The crew was reorganized, and those who left carried off all the iodine and chloroform in the ship. That the supplies went to Germans almost exclusively is proven by the replies from German soldiers to the notes of good cheer enclosed in the packets."

Flubdub—"What did your wife say when you came home last night?"

Henpecke—"When you have five or six hours to spare I'll tell you."

Contradicts Death Of Grand Duke

PETROGRAD, Jan. 13—In view of the fact that an official announcement had been given out by the Turkish Government, relating to pretended victories of Turkish troops, and the death on the battlefield in one of these engagements of Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch, the General Staff of the Russian Army declared to-day that the Turks have gained no such victories. The encounters referred to were nothing more than skirmishes. It is added that Grand Duke Alexander Michaelovitch has not been in the Caucasus theatre of the war. He is in good health.

Peterboro' Juniors Had An Easy Victory Over Cobourg

Were Always In Front And Beat The Lake Shore Team 12 to 5 Last Night—Lornie Rose Starred In His First O. H. A. Game

THE CROWD WAS SMALL

The Peterborough juniors had little trouble in beating Cobourg last night and remaining in the group race. The score was 12 to 5, with the Petes 4 to 1 ahead at the end of the first quarter and 6 to 1 at the close of the second period. Cobourg's light youngsters tried their best, but with their strongest line-up of the season on, the homesters were always in command of the situation. They stick-handled and passed better than the red shirts while they had a big margin in weight and speed, and the result was never in doubt. The Petes were slow in starting, but once they got under way they rapidly increased their lead and had a wide margin to finish on.

It was a pretty fair exhibition of hockey, especially in the last period when the play opened out and goals came rapidly. The teams scored ten goals in the last twenty minutes, the young Petes getting six of them. The best of feeling was shown throughout and the game was free from roughness.

The Petes had Lornie Rose in action for the first time this season and the youngster fitted into the forward line very smoothly. He certainly showed class all over, his skating, stick-handling and shooting being a source of strength to the team. It was his first O.H.A. game, but that did not bother him in the least, and he was always in the game.

Jackson was also going great guns on the forward line, his rushing being high class, while he shot accurately and got the rubber away fast. Richardson and Knapman had the better of the argument over their checks along the boards and neither of the Cobourg wings succeeded in finding the nets. Both were always working.

On the defence, Long and Morrow made a formidable rear guard, using good judgment in their checking, while they rushed nicely. Legros gave a fine account of himself between the posts, the youngster looking better every time out.

For the visitors, the defence was the strongest feature. Bulger played a good game between the posts. True, twelve shots beat him, but all but one of these were scored at point blank range and many times he beat the Petes' forwards when they were inside. Thompson and Horne were very steady on the defence. There was no particular stars on the forward line.

The line-up:—

Cobourg		Peterborough
	Goal
Bulger		Legros
	Right Defence
Thompson		Morrow
	Left Defence
Horne		Long
	Rover
Skitch		Rose
	Centre
Maher		Jackson
	Right Wing
Ewart		Knapman
	Left Wing
Climo		Richardson

Referee—Lou E. Marsh.

The checking was close at the go in, with both teams working hard. From the opening the Petes pressed, but for a while Bulger's good work, and the steadiness of the Cobourg defence kept them out. Finally, Long Richardson and Jackson combined for a close in goal by the latter. Knapman drew a penalty for loafing and Maher of the visitors grew too aggressive around the nets and was also chased. There was nothing doing while the pair were off. The Petes threw away several good chances by careless passing, when in close and it was Cobourg who finally scored, Skitch doing the trick on a long shot, which went into the nets off one of the Petes. Long was benched for hooking and Horne followed him for the same offence. With the sides six a side, Richardson put the Petes ahead on a fluky goal, batting the puck from well out, and it bounded into the nets off Bulger's pads. There was nothing fluky about the next one. Rose slipped down the side and let one drive, which bounced off Thompson. The new recruit followed in like a flash and slammed the rubber past Bulger and the Petes were two ahead. A minute later Jackson made it 4 to 1 when he slipped one through after a combination rush started by Long. There was no more scoring in the period.

The homesters had decidedly the edge in the second period and on the play earned more than the two goals they notched. Bulger beat them a dozen times when they were inside by clever stops, and there were some hair-breadth escapes. The play was all around Cobourg's nets in this period, but it was not until after twelve minutes of play that the homesters broke into the score column. Long got through with a nice rush. Bulger stopped his waist high shot, but he slipped the rubber over to Jackson, who did the needful. The bombardment was resumed, and the Petes' score went up when Knapman passed from behind the nets to Rose, who slammed the disc past Bulger.

The play opened out a lot in the third period. Both teams let up in their checking back and the play was more of the up and down character, with the defences having to handle the attacks unassisted. Early in the period Morrow was banished for hooking and Rose for slashing, and the Petes were two men short. Cobourg took advantage of the opportunity to close up the gap, Maher scoring from a scrimmage. The Petes got it back quickly. Morrow signalized his return by a pretty rush and pass to Jackson, who scored in neat style. Knapman made it 6 to 2 when he scored from a scrimmage, and Long raised the figures to 9—2 when he went in alone. Bulger stopped the first shot, but the defence man followed in and scored. Horne slipped another through for Cobourg in one minute, but the Petes came right back, Rose scoring on a pass from Long. The scoring was fast and furious at this stage. Cobourg tallied on a scrimmage, Maher being responsible for the counter. Richardson and Rose combined for a goal by the latter, but Horne made it 11 to 5 when he scored from close in. With less than two minutes to play, Rose and Ewart were chased for mixing it. Just before the finish, Richardson and Jackson went in together and the former scored the last goal of the game.

The summary:

First Period.

1 Peterborough, Jackson, 5 mins.
2 Cobourg, Skitch, 10 mins.
3 Peterborough, Richardson, 1 min.
4 Peterborough, Rose, 2 mins.
5 Peterborough, Jackson, 1 min.

Second Period.

6 Peterborough, Jackson, 12 mins.
7 Peterborough, Rose, 4 mins.

Third Period.

8 Cobourg, Maher, 5 mins.
9 Peterborough, Jackson, 1 min.
10 Peterborough, Knapman, 2 mins.
11 Peterborough, Long, 1 min.
12 Cobourg, Horne, 1 min.
13 Peterborough, Rose, 2 mins.
14 Cobourg, Maher, 1 min.
15 Peterborough, Rose, 1 min.
16 Cobourg, Horne, 2 mins.
17 Peterborough, Richardson, 1 min.

THE HOCKEY CLASSIC OF THE SEASON

Game Between Picton And The Petes on Friday Night Will Be The Feature Of The Group Race—Excursion From Picton Will Bring Many Eastern Rooters

Every fan in Peterborough is talking about the big game on Friday night, when the undefeated Picton Pests will invade Peterborough and clash with the homesters in a game on which the group championship virtually hinges. A defeat for the Petes will mean good-bye to the group championship, while a local win should ensure a tie up for the district honours. It will be the clash of the season and an enormous crowd will be on hand. Picton will run an excursion here for the battle, and there will be excitement galore all the way through. The reserved seats are on sale at the Morgan Hardware Store, and the pasteboards are going fast. Seats will be in big demand by Friday night. The Petes will have their strongest line-up on and are hopeful of tieing up the district by handing a defeat to the Canners. No lover of hockey can afford to miss this game.

Draw For The Second Round of The English Cup

Ties of Last Saturday and the Postponed Bristol-Southend Game Will Be Played Off Next Saturday—A Noted Player

LONDON, Jan. 12—The draw for the second round of the Football Association Cup was made yesterday, and resulted as follows:

West Ham or Newcastle United v. Swansea.

Sheffield Wednesday v. Wolverhampton.

Fulham v. Southampton.

Brighton v. Birmingham or Crystal Palace.

Everton v. Bristol City.

Bradford v. Middlesborough.

Preston or Manchester City v. Aston Villa.

Oldham v. Rochdale.

Hull v. Millwall.

Bolton v Millwall.

Bury or Plymouth v. Bradford.

Sheffield United v. Liverpool.

Burnley v. Bristol or Southend United.

Swindon or Chelsea v. Woolwich Arsenal.

Norwich v. Tottenham Hotspur.

Queen's Park Rangers v. Leeds.

The games will be played on the ground of the first-named team on January 30. The ties of last Saturday and the postponed Bristol-Southend game will be played off next Saturday.

Stephen Bloomer.

Born at Cradley, Staffordshire, in February, 1874, Stephen Bloomer first came into prominence as a probable player in 1892 while playing with Derby Swifts in the Derbyshire Shield, got into the ranks of Derby County by quite an accident. Derby was down to play Bury in a mid-week game and the late Mr. Hayden Morley was unable to raise a forward line, owing to injuries and other causes, when Mr. Kingscott, whose attention had been drawn to the youthful goal scorer, urged Mr. Morley to give Stephen a trial. From that time forward every one knows his career, he having doubly justified his inclusion in the Derby ranks. Steve is now in Berlin, a prisoner of war. The last time he was in Berlin was when his name as a household word, and in the height of fame there has only been one Stephen Bloomer, and he himself always gave Johnnie Good all the credit for raising him to the standard of efficiency he attained. Bloomer has 23 Association International cups, and has played against the country with whom he is now a prisoner. He was over in Berlin acting as coach.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

Jobey is a general utility man for Bradford, having played centre forward, inside right, and right halfback.

Seven Sheffield Wednesday players have not yet missed an appearance.

Jockey Simpson is now playing better than ever he did, yet he is their only forward without a goal to his credit.

Albert Shepherd's goal record for Bradford City this season, exceeds the best recorded by any one of Newcastle's present players. The latter team's position in the lower half of the table does suggest, something of the "Shepherdless flock."

Blackburn Rovers players on their visit to Middlesbrough took a trip to Hartlepool, the scene of the German raid, and brought back relics in the shape of pieces of shell.

Of the Everton team which won the English Cup in 1906, only Makepeace is now playing in first class football.

Only McNeil, the outside left of the Pensioners has not wet missed a match.

Of the sixteen players that Bristol City have called upon this season, five have been tried at centre forward.

George Travers, who went from the Barnsley's Cup team, to Manchester United, has hardly "made good."

Osborn, the crack shot of Preston, N.E., has almost recovered from his damaged knee.

No fewer than 28 players on Southampton's register have joined the colours.

F. A. New Rule.

Quite a new innovation is the playing of an extra half hour in the event of a draw after 90 minutes' play. The wise proposal of Manchester City has been given the consideration it merited. The cup ties are not likely to boom so much in the public eye this season, and there is a reason for it. The F. A. know the great attraction which cup ties have and mid-week replays would certainly have affected businesses, which at the present time can't afford to lose the services of more men. It is one of the wisest resolutions the F. A. has even passed.

Manchester's New Manager.

The good folk of Brighton are very disappointed over the fact that Jack Robson, who has so ably managed the seasiders, is forsaking them to take up the managership of Manchester United.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The Peterborough Intermediates will practice to-night in final preparation for the big game with Picton on Friday night. A full turnout is expected.

The Belleville Intermediates have defaulted their remaining games. They were hopelessly out of the race. The withdrawal of the Easterners leaves the group standing as follows:

	W.	L.	T.	P.
Picton	5	0	0	5
Whitby	4	1	0	6
Peterborough	3	1	0	6
Oshawa	3	2	0	5
Bowmanville	3	3	0	4
Belleville	0	10	0	0

The Peterborough-Picton game Friday at Peterborough promises some real hockey if the ice is hard. Both have fast, clean teams, and on the big ice Picton should do even better than at home. Petes must win to keep their heads above water, while Picton needs the game to cinch the district. Clarence Morgan is running an excursion from Picton for the fracas.—Toronto Star.

The mother of Dr. Clapp, the manager of the Belleville Hockey Club, died in Rochester yesterday. Harry Morgan, of the Peterborough team, sent a wreath expressing his team's sympathy with Dr. Clapp in his bereavement.—Toronto Star.

Little Halpin, the youngster who replaced Pete Spratt on Peterborough's team, is going to be a hard boy to keep off even with Spratt around. He was the busiest thing on the ice at Belleville last night. Moines has developed into a pretty good right wing, and when he quits roaming will be valuable. With the right wing hole plugged, Peterborough will be hard to beat from now on. Every man on the team played good hockey last night, with Park and Kelly leading the marksmen.—Toronto Star.

Port Hope Juniors defeated Peterborough on Peterborough ice, but that is by no means an indication that the Peterborough youngsters are a weak team. In fact, since the game against Port Hope the Electric City lads visited Cobourg and came back with a victory. They have been eliminating the weak players and strengthening up considerably, so that by Friday night, when they meet the Lindsay Juniors in Lindsay, the fans may expect to see a real fast and exciting game. The Petes will play like Peterborough teams in the past — their very hardest to defeat Lindsay, the old-time rival.—Lindsay Warder.

Friday night will be an eventful one for the Peterborough Hockey Club. Both intermediates and juniors are battling for "a place in the sun." A defeat for the intermediates, who will play Picton here will practically put them out of the running, while the juniors will have to win at Lindsay in order to be in a favourable position for the group honours. An effort was made to have the Lindsay game postponed on account of the game here, but it had already been advertised and the Lindsay management could not make the change.

An exciting game of hockey was played on Monday night between the St. James B. G. and the St. James' W. I. The contest took place on the Sacred Heart rink from seven to eight, ending with the score 4—3 in favour of the B. G.

Sloan and Henry were the stars for the B. G., each scoring two goals. Rebill and Deeland were the stars for the W. I. Both goalkeepers performed well, M. Neary of the B. G. having a little the best of the argument.

The following players will represent St. John's Senior Church League Club in the game against St. Luke's Thursday evening:

Goal—Clarke.
Right Defence—LeBar.
Rover—Stevenson.
Centre—Frost.
Left Wing—Pammett.
Right Wing—Heard.

DOODY—COLCLOUGH.

A quiet wedding was solemnized in St. Andrew's Manse on Monday evening, when Thomas Doody, formerly of this city, was united in marriage to Agnes Colclough of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Rollins.

Mr. and Mrs. Doody will reside in Kingston.

SPRATT—McARDLE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Wolfe Island, when Miss Sadie McArdle, daughter of Mrs. Mary McArdle, Wolfe Island, was joined in matrimony to Thomas Spratt, son of Richard P. Spratt of Lindsay, and nephew of Archbishop Spratt and Father Spratt, of this city. The ceremony was performed by His Grace Archbishop Spratt, assisted by the Rev. Father McGrath. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white brocaded Duchess satin, with veil of Japanese embroidery, caught with Orange blossoms. She was given away by Dr. O'Connor, mayor of Gananoque, Mayor of Gananoque, the bridesmaid being Miss Annie Hickey, who was dressed in coral satin and the groomsman, Peter Spratt of Peterborough. —Kingston Standard.

Orchestra's Annual Concert

Splendid Programme Arranged for February 8th

The annual concert of the Conservatory of Music Orchestra, which will be held this year under the management and auspices of the Women's War Fund Committee, will take place on Monday, February 8th, in the Grand Opera House. The soloists will be Leo Smith, cellist; Frank Oldfield, baritone; Lena D. Adamson, violinist; Ada Richardson, soprano, and Miss Killmaster, pianist. The Conservatory Orchestra has been hard at work and will render some splendid selections. The orchestra concert is always a red letter event in musical circles, and this year promises to be better than ever.

Dedication of New Chancel

Hymn 624, "The Church's One Foundation."

Hymn 653, "We Love the Place, O God."

Offertory anthem, "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem"—E. V. Hall.

"Hallelujah chorus" (Handel's Messiah.)

Hymn 540, "My God, My Father While I Stray."

Vesper 40.

There will be special practice tonight at 8 o'clock. Choristers are asked to bring their copies of Messiah and Judas Maccabaeus.

Recruits Are Still Coming

Mounted Rifles Will Soon Have Their Complement of 150 Men

Recruits are still being added to the strength of Peterborough's contribution to the 3rd Canadian contingent. By this evening the Mounted Rifles will have 120 men on their lists while the infantry recruits will number about 50 men. The enlisting for the infantry is slower than for the first two contingents, the Mounted Rifles proving an attraction to those anxious to go to the front. The mounted men are acquiring smartness and steadiness in their drill, the two sessions a day already having a marked effect. The innoculation process is going steadily ahead. Another twenty men received their treatment yesterday. The first squad innoculated were back at drill this morning, showing no ill effects from the operation, which will be repeated in about ten days' time.

A squad of a dozen mounted men from Bowmanville is expected this evening or to-morrow morning.

The 57th Regiment resumed their weekly drills last evening, with 155 men on parade. Re-organization work only was carried on and the drill proper will not commence until next Tuesday.

The Home Guard will have its weekly drill at the Armouries tomorrow night.

Boiling tomato parings in aluminum cooking utensils will make them bright.

Austrian and German Rulers Have Taint of Madness, Says Dr. Neipp

Vice-President of Swiss Academy of Medicine Thinks Francis Joseph Will End Days in Senile Imbecility and Kaiser Either Die in Battle or Finish in Asylum

In the "Revue de Psychotherapie," of Geneva, Dr. Neipp, vice-president of the Swiss Academy of Medicine, and a well known specialist on nervous and mental diseases, publishes a curious analysis of the physical and mental characteristics of the two allied Emperors. He considers these two potentates, who are politically and morally responsible for the catastrophes under which the world is suffering, to be medically scarcely answerable for their acts.

The case of the Emperor Francis Joseph is simple. With an extraordinarily robust physical constitution, he possesses a nervous and sensitive equipment below the average. His retreating, low forehead, small brain capacity and thick skull are apparent signs of this inferiority. He seems never to have understood, and hardly to have felt, what has been going on around him. The most fearful domestic tragedies and public dramas have left him with an untroubled digestion and a mind free for ordinary occupations and amusements. After summing up a technical diagnosis of his case, Dr. Niepp predicts that the Emperor-King probably will vegetate for a few more years after the inevitable dismemberment of the monarchy and end his days in senile imbecility.

The case of the Kaiser is more complicated. Here we have a nature exceptionally endowed with intellectual faculties, enough to have made him a good officer or public servant if he had been born in private life. But his childhood and youth were passed in the intoxication of the Prussian triumphs of 1866 and 1870, which turned his head, until Teutonic pride was cubed in his brain, at the same time that will power degenerated to such a degree that it was not equal to restraining the abnormal growth of unbridled ambition. To do him justice, it must be allowed that this pathological condition of the Kaiser's intelligence is probably due in a great measure to the state of his physical health, arising from hereditary taints. The symptoms of congenital ailments are numerous—one arm atrophied, swellings of the joints and ear trouble. The Kaiser suffers from agonizing headaches and frequent insomnia.

Dr. Neipp concludes that if Francis Joseph is a victim of want of will power the Kaiser Wilhelm is a hypersecute slave to caprice, and liable to intermittent attacks of melancholy madness or dangerous lunacy. The Professor is of opinion that the Kaiser will either put an end to himself in battle or finish in an asylum.

Ulster's Preparations For Civil War Prove Boon To Many Homeless Belgians

LONDON, Dec. 27.—Had it not been for the plans the Ulstermen made the Belgian refugees could not have been so promptly and effectively cared for.

Infinitely pitiful has been the arrival of the refugees. Of all ages and conditions, some with a few francs and a bundle of their belongings saved from the wreckage of their homes, some utterly destitute, and all with the same cry on their lips: "Everything burned!"

More than 40,000 have already passed through the hands of the war refugees committee, and homes have been found for them. They are treated as guests of the nation. Offers of homes for them have come from all classes, ranging from that of Lord Bute to house 3,000 to that of a working-man, who wrote: "I have five of my own, but I would like to keep a little Belgian." The committee has homes available for 100,000.

Organization Started Before War.

It is strange that an organization capable of caring for the refugees should have existed before there was any thought of war in Belgium, but it did, although prepared for an entirely different emergency.

"Civil war in Ulster" was only three days off" it is said, when the European War started. The word was "Ulster will fight," and 100,000 men were said to be armed, drilled, and prepared to resist Home Rule.

Among measures taken in preparation for the emergency were those for the removal of families of Ulstermen from the potential war zone and 12,000 homes in England had been offered to the organization which was to care for them. With the coming of foreign war, home troubles were forgotten, but the organization was available for helping the Belgians when the need came and was placed at the disposal of the war refugees committee.

Find 1,000 Homes a Day.

Now the committee finds homes for the refugees at the rate of 1,000 a day. The most interesting of the homes for refugees at the present time is Earl's' Court, that combination of Madison Square Garden and Coney Island, with its great halls and open spaces, where some of the more permanent structures of the amusement season still remain.

The big ornamental ponds have been drained and a dejected looking gondola lies stranded on the mud and rocks of the bottom. Everything tells of the emergency which brought about the change in the use of the amusement park.

Eat Meals on Stage

The main men's dormitory is in the great amphitheatre where circuses and pageants have been held. On the tiers of steps that rise from the stage are rows of mattresses and bedding. On the floor of the stage are the tables and chairs where the refugees are fed, a vast and airy dining-room.

The women have smaller dormitories in other halls, fitted with bedsteads, and there is a small hospital in the main room of what was a fashionable restaurant.

Only the Children Laugh.

But the people themselves are far more interesting than their lodgings. They are quiet and depressed, and sit singly or in little groups, thinking of what they have undergone or telling each other of their experiences. Only the children, warm and well fed again, laugh and frolic or ride madly about the corridors on tricycles that some one has provided.

Yarn and needles are given to the women, and to the men pipes and tobacco or cigarettes. A vast amount of mending is necessary.

Next to the headquarters of the committee and more interesting are the headquarters of the refugees. The missing relatives department is besieged by an anxious crowd. Every Belgian is on record, and the committee has been able to reunite more than 7,000 families and can now usually within forty-eight hours find any who may be missing.

The pitiful bundles of the refugees are stored until such time as they are ready to take them to the home that is provided. Among the boxes and bundles, and looking absurdly out of place, are a great doll, a Teddy bear, and, stranger still, two dolls' houses.

489,733 French Wounded Treated Two and One-Half Per Cent. Die

To the Editor of The Herald.

Sir,—Mr. Trousaint, director of the medical department at the Ministry of War, in a report to the Army Commission, has given some very interesting and impressive statistics.

In the two and a half months from September 15th to November 30th the medical corps have dealt with 489,733 wounded, or approximately 560,000, and, it should be noted, this figure is exclusive of the deaths.

But it is also to be noted that many of these wounded did not even go to the hospital many having returned to duty in a few days without leaving the front.

Fifty-four and one-half per cent. of them returned to the firing line. Twenty-four and one-half per cent. were sent out on furlough during convalescence and have since returned to the front. Seventeen per cent. are still in the hospital, to complete their recovery. One and forty-eight hundredths per cent. are unfit for further service. Two and forty-eight hundredths per cent. died from the effects of their wounds.

We would draw attention to the last cited figure, which is, indeed, very reassuring. When one thinks of the serious wounds due to shell fragments or modern rifle bullets, including fractures of the skull, splintering of the femur and various bones of the limbs; when one reflects that in the same wounded soldier we have found and treated successfully a fracture of the femur, one of the humerus and another of the forearm on the opposite side, one can only be astonished at the wonderful results achieved by modern surgery.

On recalling the surgery of 1870, at which period not a single amputation at the thigh was followed by recovery at Paris, one must bless the name of the great Pasteur, to whom all these discoveries are due, and that of Lister, who was the first to apply them in practice.

In fact, it seems that the means of destruction are being perfected at the same time as those of healing, advance in the latter even exceeding that in the former. The deaths alone defy comparison with all previous statistics.

These results are excellent, but we hope for better still. At the present time, considering the youthfulness and vigour of our soldiers as selected for the army, we are definitely of the opinion that if we could receive the wounded without unnecessary delay, that is to say, before the wounds have become so terribly infected, and if the wounded were treated by professional surgeons, it might reasonably be expected that the mortality should fall to one per cent.

And it may be remarked that this is possible by taking care to insure an improvement in the rapidity of removing the wounded and by sending into the hospitals all the surgical students who are not doing any real surgery at the front. This is what we have continually demanded, and we know that efforts are being made to effect these improvements.

It is also interesting to note that France at present has at her disposal 1,925 hospitals, containing 200,000 beds which are more than sufficient.

OBITUARY

LAZARUS PAYNE.

At the family residence, Maple Rise, North Dummer, on Sunday afternoon, occurred the death of Lazarus Payne, after a lingering illness. Aged 68 years and 8 months. He was born May 3, 1846, at the family homestead, near the Third Line cemetery, his parents being the late David and Elizabeth Payne. Two brothers, Robert W. Payne and A. D. Payne, Lakefield, and one sister, Mrs. J. B. Payne, of Asphodel, survive him.

In 1869 he was united in marriage to Miss Rebecca White of North Monaghan, who with two sons and four daughters, mourn the loss of a true husband and father. The family are William of North Dummer, Mrs. Robert Northey, Smith, Ada of Tokio, Japan, Herman, Emma and Clara, at home.

In religion he was a Methodist, and was much devoted to the church of his choice.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Robert W. Payne, A. D. Payne, J. B. Moore, George Payne, Nathan Payne and Alexander Watts.

A large number of friends and acquaintances followed the remains to their last resting place.

Interment took place in the Third Line cemetery.

A memorial service, conducted by the pastor, Rev. M. L. Henton, is to be held on Jan. 24th.

NO TIPPERARY FOR WELSH.

Finest Welsh Singers Will Sing Their Own Songs.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Cymric war songs, sung by a chorus of 40,000 Welsh warriors, are to rival "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" on the field of battle, according to a Cardiff despatch to Lloyd's Keewly. The message adds:

The Welsh recruits include some of the finest singers in the Welsh valleys, men who have competed in scores of Eisteddfods. The soldiers' rehearsals at Porthcawl training camp partake of the character of first-class concerts, which attract to the hall large numbers of residents and many visitors. Miss Gee of Denbigh, an ardent Welsh patriot, is distributing a selection of Welsh war songs among the men, with the request that they be used and that there be less singing of Tipperary.

German Pressure Increasing New Troops Into Action

Additional Forces Are Being Concentrated in the Aisne District And in the North—An Effort to Hack Through

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 14.—The German pressure on the allied lines northeast of Soissons is increasing, the Germans having apparently determined to retake their original positions here no matter what it may cost.

Reports received to-day say that additional German troops are being brought into action here as well as in the neighbourhood of Rheims.

They are again shelling the City of Rheims while their infantry is reported as engaged between there and Perthes, where the fighting is severe.

Activity also is reported to-day along the heights of the Meuse, but elsewhere the early reports indicated that only artillery was in action.

It is now believed certain that the Germans have decided on another offensive to be directed against the angle of triangle formed by the rivers Aisne and Oise.

Reports agree that they are concentrating men and artillery to the north of this line and have also strengthened their positions to the north of Le Bassee and between Ypres and Dixmude. While this originally appeared to be an effort to relieve the pressure in the districts of Upper Alsace, it is now believed that it is an independent movement foreshadowing another effort to hack the way through to the sea, and to destroy the allied lines of communication west of Quesnoy and Peronne.

A New Russian Offensive Begins

Czar's Troops Are Moving Again in East Prussia--Several Villages Captured and Germans Driven Out at Point of Bayonet.

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 13.—While the great Russian and German armies face each other in deadlock in trenches in Central and Southern Poland, the interesting news comes to-night from Petrograd that the Russian commander-in-chief has inaugurated a new offensive movement with his forces in North Poland and East Prussia.

The official report from the headquarters of Grand Duke Nicholas shows that this movement is evidently one of some importance in the general strategical scheme, though the operation has not yet developed sufficiently to show its full proportions. From such details as have been received, it appears that the Russian force that invaded East Prussia from the east many weeks ago, and came to a standstill on the borders of the Mazurian Lakes district, has resumed its forward march across the province, assisted by the cold weather, which has frozen many of the marshes on the route.

Simultaneously, it seems, the Russian force on the right bank of the Vistula, in North Poland, which has been opposing the German army of General von Francois, is pressing back the enemy in the region of Mlawa with the object of invading East Prussia from the south, seizing the German strategical railway at Soudau, and eventually joining the Russian columns now crossing the Magurian Lakes.

The Official Statement.

To-night's Russian official statement describes in considerable detail the operations in progress north of the lower Vistula, which region has been practically ignored in the Petrograd communications recently. What are described as engagements of some importance have taken place on both the Russian fronts in the north. In the Mazurian Lakes, in East Prussia, near its eastern border, a Russian force is announced to have advanced and occupied several villages, the German cavalry and infantry rear-guards being cleared out in some cases at the point of the bayonet.

On the front in Poland to the south-east of the southern frontier of East Prussia the Russians have advanced towards Radsanowa, a town at the junction of the Mlawa and Warka Rivers, south-west of Mlawa. The Germans on their part have undertaken an offensive further south, which the Russians say has been repulsed easily.

On the front, to the west of Warsaw, the Russian statement indicates that there is no important change in the state of affairs. The Germans have continued their unceasing attacks on the Russian positions, advancing against the trenches under cover of shields, but all these efforts have been repulsed.

MASSACRED BY TURKS

Sultan's Forces Over-running Persia Have Slaughtered Many of the Christian Population

MANY ARE KILLED

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 14.—Soudja Ed Dowlah, formerly Governor of the Province of Azerbaijan, Northern Persia, has arrived at Tiflis from Teheran with a story of massacres by the Turkish forces now over-running Persia.

He declares that the Turkish and German agents have been hard at work for months using their influence with the Persians to work up a prejudice against the Russians.

He declares he passed 1,800 troops at one of the Moslem forts and 1,200 at the other, while he with 400 horsemen demanded the bridge, thus enabling the refugees to escape to Maraga.

After ten hours of fighting his guard was annihilated, he said, the Turks bringing up machine guns and using them to advantage. He and three survivors fled to Tiflis and the Kurds massacred the Christian population of Mahidab, the many refugees who had taken refuge there.

All of the staffs of consulate and banks at Tabriz escaped to Tiflis.

AUSTRIANS CLAIM A VICTORY

SPECIAL CABLE:

VIENNA, Jan. 14.—Claims of decisive Austrian successes along the lower Nida, were made by the War Office to-day. It was stated that the Russian attempts to cross the river have been definitely abandoned following the infliction of very heavy losses on the attacking forces.

In Galicia and Carpathians region there has been only minor fighting.

INAUGURAL MEETING

of County Council—Six New Representatives on the Board

THE WARDENSHIP

There will be at least six new faces in the County Council this year—four of the old members having fallen by the wayside in the avalanche of ballots cast at the polls; one did not seek re-election and one enters as a new member, North Monaghan being now entitled to a deputy reeve, making eighteen members in all. The municipalities returning new members are North Monaghan two—Reeve McIntosh who replaces Mr. Howden, and Mr. Herbert Foster the new deputy; Smith sends a new deputy in the person of Mr. A. Jobe, Mr. Fred McKee the former deputy having been raised to the reeveship, replacing ex-Warden Garbutt;—Ennismore will be represented by Mr. W. H. Crough, who takes the place of Mr. S. Killen; Chandos by Mr. Bullied, who fills Mr. D. S. Campbell's place, and Belmont and Methuen by Mr. W. E. Griffith who replaces Mr. Wilds.

The members of the 1915 Council therefore, are as follows:

B. W. Squire—Reeve of Norwood.
Dr. Kindred—Reeve of Havelock.
H. G. Fitzgerald— Reeve of Lakefield.
M. Brown—Reeve of Asphodel.
C. J. Darling—Reeve of Dummer.
C. Coben—Reeve of Galway.
R. Shaw—Reeve of Harvey.
W. A. Anderson—Reeve of Otonabee.
E. Deyell—Deputy Reeve of Otonabee.
M. Walsh—Reeve of Douro.
W. H. Crough—Reeve of Ennismore.
J. McIntosh—Reeve of North Monaghan.
H. Foster— Dep. Reeve of North Monaghan.
Fred McKee—Reeve of Smith.
Andy Jobe—Deputy Reeve of Smith.
Norman Lean— Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther.
Norman Bullied—Reeve of Chandos.
W. E. Smith—Reeve of Belmont and Methuen.

The Council will hold its first meeting on Tuesday, January 26th. The first business will be the electing of a warden for the County for 1915. Dr. Kindred of Havelock, and C. J. Darling of Dummer, are mentioned for the position.

IS STILL UNKNOWN

Actual Toll of Yesterday's Earthquake is Still a Matter of Conjecture

ARMY ON WAR BASIS

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, Jan. 14.—The actual toll of yesterday's earthquake, which left a trail of unprecedented destruction throughout the provinces of Abruzzi, and Potenza, is still unknown.

Efforts to restore communication with the province of Potenza, are being made, and it is feared that when the story of visitation there is known, it will show an enormous casualty list.

The Government is taking energetic steps to rescue the victims and to restore the shattered towns. The military has assumed charge and troops are being rushed into the devastated area with all possible speed.

Doctors and medical supplies are already on the way. The Government is in excellent shape to meet the present crisis, as the army is practically on a war basis, while there are tons of medical supplies stored at various headquarters.

AMERICANS WILL BE CORN FED WHEN WHEAT REACHES $2

A National Agitation to Place Embargo on the Export of Wheat and Flour

A CLOSE WATCH

CHICAGO, Jan. 14—Two dollar wheat will mean that Americans will eat corn, it was stated here to-day by prominent dealers in grain. A national agitation to induce Congress to place an embargo on the export of wheat and flour, as well as on arms and ammunition, will be introduced at the next meeting of the Chicago retail grocers and butchers' association, it was announced. G. Westerfield, chairman of the Trades Relations Committee of the National Association of Retailers, planned to begin in a determined manner a fight against the high cost of flour and incidentally of home-baked bread.

Leaders on change predicted to-day in some instances that if the price of wheat went much higher there would be a general turning to corn in place of wheat bread, both in this country and in Europe. Other dealers declared that bakers' complaints were unwarranted—that a barrel of flour costing $7 would make 275 loaves of bread which the retailer sold for $13.75 at five cents a loaf.

One well-known expert put the breadstuff situation this way: It is not so much a question of price of wheat as a question of supply. Will there be enough to feed two continmean eating corn as never before.

In this connection one of the principal firms on the board of trade made public despatches received to-day, indicating that farmers' ideas as to corn were away up—that many growers said corn would sell at $1 a bushel on the farms. The latest price of May corn in Chicago to-day was 78 1-8 cents.

Washington, Jan. 14—Department of justice officials expressed interest in reports that a loaf of bread was about to jump from five or six cents in New York, Chicago, and possibly other large cities. No complaints have reached the department, however, and no action is in immediate prospect.

Attorney General Gregory has kept a close watch upon any efforts to raise the cost of living through combinations of producers in any line, and it is considered certain that a rise in bread would be looked into at once. It is realized at the department that with wheat above normal figures, bakers undoubtedly have been forced to face the prospect of higher flour. Officials are interested, however, in learning whether there is any conspiracy among bakers over the country to effect a raise in price of their commodity. Concerted action that involved bakers in different States would allow prosecutions under the anti-trust act.

A DEAL IN STOVES

HAMILTON, Jan. 7.—A statement issued by one of Hamilton's stove manufacturing concerns illustrates in a striking way the effect of the Made-in-Canada campaign which has been running for the last few months. Nine weeks ago the factory was closed for lack of orders. To-day it is running four days per week and there are prospects that it may run six days a week before the winter is over.

"We used to find pretty strong competition from a certain Michigan stove concern," said the manager of the foundry referred to, "and largely because there were so many American settlers in the West who had always known the Michigan stove on the other side, we found it very difficult to get the retailers to stock our line, although our prices were a shade lower than those of the American concern.

"One of our best travellers was on his way back from the west at the time. He ran into an informal conference of Retail Hardware men in Regina and found them discussing ways and means of keeping their business open. He wired us for permission to make them a proposition. We consented and an agreemnt was reached whereby these men agreed to handle only made in Canada goods. On the other hand certain makers in the East had to get together and agree to carry these fellows over the hard sledding. The result has been splendid. Banks, retailers and ourselves have co-operated. As a result of a Made-in-Canada slogan, we are able to keep our men employed and our machinery from rusting."

DACIA WILL BE SEIZED IF SHE SAILS FOR BREMEN

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 13. — The British Government has decided to seize the steamship Dacia, recently sold by the Hamburg-American Line, and placed under American registry, should she attempt to sail for Bremen. The Dacia is now at Galveston loading cotton for Bremen.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador at Washington, is being fully informed of the attitude of his Government, so that if the seizure of the Dacia should be made, it will not come unexpectedly.

The possibilities in the case of the Dacia are, in the view of the British Government, so enormous that Great Britain only reluctantly has decided to assert her rights under international law and object in general to the transfer of interned German ships to neutral flags. It also is most likely that France and Japan will naturally adopt the same attitude. This does not mean that in cases where the ships are to be definitely employed in some trade, like that with South America, from which Germany cannot possibly derive benefit, Great Britain would not here waive her right to protest.

Your correspondent learns that at present there are seven steamships before the prize court and that six more are being detained for an examination of their cargoes and of their ultimate destination. Great Britain also has indicated to Ambassador Spring-Rice that release of seized ships upon bail is agreed to in principle, but that the decision in each case must be made by the Admiralty Court. Great Britain has indicated that she is anxious not to reduce further the number of carrying ships unless necessary.

FEDERAL ASSISTANCE TO HORSE BREEDING

The progress that has been attained in the past in Canadian horse breeding has been due largely to individual effort. To the few who have done so much for the advancement of the industry every credit is due. Through the lack, however, of concerted action and co-operative measures on a large scale amongst the breeders, the business has not progressed as rapidly as could be desired.

The want of proper organization, except in the more favoured districts, has prevented the farmers generally from securing and retaining the services of good breeding sires. In a majority of sections, breeders wishing to grade up their horses are forced to use whatever stallions may, by chance, stand for service in their district. Many of these are faulty in conformation and lack in quality, while others, though of better type, remain, either through insufficient patronage or because of failure to leave colts, but a single season in each district. In fact also that there has been no systematic adherence to the use of breed suggests another reason for the lack of progress in the breeding of high-class animals.

It must be recognized, further, that the owner of a valuable horse, after paying for maintenance, insurance, interest on investment and the expense entailed in the collection of his fees, has frequently little left from his outlay, particularly in districts where he has to compete with grade and scrub stallions standing for service at a very low fee. As a result, really high-class stallions can be maintained only in districts where the breeding of horses has been given serious and progressive attention.

Service Fee.

In view of these considerations, the Minister of Agriculture proposes to enter upon a policy which may serve to place the horse breeding industry in Canada in a position comparable to that which it has attained in Great Britain and other European countries. It is believed that by encouraging the organization of breeders' clubs and by enabling such clubs to procure the services of good breeding stallions under favourable financial conditions, the assistance in this direction can best be provided. The encouragement of community breeding will, naturally, of itself, be productive of useful results. The payment to community organizations of a part of the service fee will, it is expected, give a permanent stimulus to the hiring of the best stallions that may be procured and, at the same time, promote the development of a comprehensive movement in the interests of this important national industry.

Stated briefly, the scheme is as follows: The farmers of any district, wishing to work for the betterment of horse breeding, by encouraging the use of sound, individually excellent pure-bred sires, may form a Breeders' Club for the purpose of hiring a pure-bred stallion for the benefit of the members. These Breeders' Clubs, by organizing under and adopting the Constitution and By-laws and conforming to the various Rules and Regulations governing this grant may participate in the Federal Assistance given to such clubs. This consists in paying practically 25 per cent. of the service fee on a guaranteed number of mares.

The Exception.

With a view to encourage the breeding of remounts, the portion paid by the Live Stock Branch to clubs hiring suitable thoroughbred stallions shall be 40 per cent. on all mares except thoroughbred mares.

For the booklet on Federal Assistance and all other information address the Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa, Canada.

INDIA HAS SENT 200,000 TO WAR

Men in Four Districts—Opening of the Vice-Regal Council.

Delhi, India, Jan. 13. — The Viceregal Council opened to-day. The viceroy, Baron Hardinge, in a speech before the Council, disclosed the number of troops which India has contributed to the war, which, he said, amounted to 200,000 man. These soldiers are distributed in France, Egypt, East Africa, and along the Persian Gulf.

Baron Hardinge spoke feelingly of India's proof of patriotic sentiment. In this connection he said that the "noblest sentiment ever uttered" concerning a nation's duty was expressed in the words of Abraham Lincoln: "With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right."

MENINGITIS FATAL

First Cases Appeared at Valcartier—An Expert Secured.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 13.—It is now stated that the Canadians will remain in England until all the meningitis is cured. The epidemic started at Valcartier, the first death occurred at Quebec, and the second at Plymouth on arrival. Of twenty-nine cases there were only two recoveries, twenty-five men died, and the other two cases are in the hospital, incurable. Prof. Ashworth, of the Lister Institute, is studying the epidemic. There are five cases among the children at Salisbury.

A commission has been appointed to investigate the post office corps system, which is inefficient. Several plans are suggested. Col. Currie of Toronto is presiding.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

CHAPTER XVII.

A stronger thing to Juanita Holland than the personal disappointment which had driven her to this work was now her eager, fiery interest in the undertaking itself. In these months she had disabused herself of many prejudices that had at first blinded her. There remained that lingering one against the man with whom she had not made friends.

The thing she had set out to do was an hundred-fold more vital now than it had been when it stood for carrying out a dead grandfather's wish. She had been with these people in childbirth and death, in sickness and want; she had seen summer go from its tender beginnings to a vagabond end with its tattered banners of ripened corn. Autumn had blazed and cared into high carnival.

Close to the heart of this woman lay a worship of the chivalric, not in its forms and panoplies, but in its essence—in its scorn of the mean and untruthful; its passion of simple service; in its consecration to fighting for the weak.

All those deep qualities were intimately wound up and tangled with the lift and work she had undertaken. The laurel had clasped its root tendrils about her being, and to fail would surely break her heart.

She must conquer, she told herself, and unconsciously her thought even fell into the simple tensity of the people about her, and she stood murmuring to herself, "Oh, God, I've just got to win—I've just got to win!"

But as young Jeb had turned on his heel and stalked away, even before the coming of the note, she knew what would happen, and what would happen not only in this instance, but in others like it. This would not be just losing Dawn, bad as that was. It would be paralysis and death to the school; it would mean the losing for all time of every Havey boy and girl.

So she stood there and afterward said quietly, "Milt, I guess you'd better go," and Milt had gone gravely and unquestioningly, but with that in his eye which did not argue brightly for restoration of peace between his house and that of his enemy.

When the two girls had gone together into the cabin, Dawn stood with a face that blanched as she began to realize what it all meant, then slowly she stiffened and her hands, too, clenched and her eyes kindled.

For a while neither of them spoke. Until Jeb's appearance, young Milt had simply been himself to Dawn, now as she looked back it was as if she reviewed the situation with her brother's eyes. She had been permitting a McBriar to walk in the woods with her and she had even smiled on him. Not only was it a McBriar, but with one exception the most responsible and typical of all the McBriars. Into her heart crept something of deep shame. She felt like a nun who has been recreant to all her vows and traditions. It seemed to her that her dead father's spirit was rebuking her and her dead mother scorning her. She would not let Milt speak to her again. She would not wipe her feet on young Milt should he throw himself on the earth before her.

But deep and uncompromising as the clan loyalty was in her blood, another loyalty now stood above it. She was a Havey, but not even Haveys should tear her away from Juanita Holland, the woman she loved and defied.

She came across to the chair into which the older girl had dropped listlessly, and, falling to her knees, seized both Juanita's hands. She seized them tightly and fiercely and her eyes were blazing and her voice broke from her lips in turgid vehemence. For them both the cheery note died out of the din of hammer and saw and the loud voices of the "house-raisers."

The triumph departed from the enspiriting sight of ox teams snaking logs down the mountain-side. The whole dream picture faded. Like some mighty walking delegate, Anse Havey would speak the word and that activity would become useless. He would call a strike and those buildings would stand doomed to perpetual emptiness. After all, Juanita reflected, she was totally helpless.

"I hain't a-goin' ter leave ye," cried Dawn. "I hain't a-goin' ter do it." No word had been spoken of her leaving, but in this life they both knew that certain things bring about certain results, and they were expecting a note from Bad Anse. "I hope not, dear," murmured Juanita without conviction.

Then the mountain girl sprang up and became transformed. With her rigid figure and blazing eyes she seemed a torch burning with all the pent-up heritage of her past.

"I tells ye I hain't a-goin' ter leave ye!" she protested, and her utterance swelled to fiery determination. "Es fer Milt McBriar I wouldn't spit on him. I hates him. I hates his shuddern breed. . . . I hates 'em like—" she paused a moment then finished tumultuously—"like all hell. I reckon I'm es good a Havey as Jeb. I hain't seen Jeb do nothin' yit."

Again she paused, panting with passionate rage. Then swept on while Juanita looked at her sudden metamorphosis into a Fury and shuddered.

"When I wasn't nothin' but a baby I fotched victuals ter my kinsfolks a-hidin' out from revenuers. I passed right through men that war a-trailin' 'em. I've done served by kinsfolks afore an' I'd do hit ergin, but I reckon I hain't a-goin' ter let 'em take me away from ye."

But Juanita was thinking through her daze of grief and fear for the future, that in more ways than one she had failed. This child who had seemd so different from the bloodthirsty people about her was after all cut to the same ungoverned pattern.

She was as wild as the wildest of them. At the first note of provocation every vestige of the applied civilization had dropped from her like a discarded cloak. And now the young girl was standing there teaching the older girl the immutability of the hills.

"Ye're a'goin' ter have trouble es long es ye stays hyar," Dawn said vehemently. "Thar hain't nothin but trouble hyarabouts. I've seed it since I was born. Anse Havey went down about her thin- 'e'sth-itnoibece down below ter ther settlements an' trouble called him home. Ye seed what happened the night ye come. Ye knows what happened since. Hit won't niver end twell ther last McBriar's done been kilt. . . . But ef ye stays hyar I 'lows ter stay with ye."

She halted in her tirade and Juanita's voice came very low with a question.

"And if Anse Havey sends for you, dear, what then?"

The girl stood trembling and white for a moment and then her rage turned into a torrent of tears. She flung herself down on her knees again and buried her face in the other girl's lap; her defiance all converted to pleading. That question was like asking a subject whether he would defy an Emperor's edict.

"Don't let 'em take me," moaned the girl. "Don't let 'em. Hit's ther first time I've ever been happy. Don't let 'em."

Juanita could think of only one step to take, so she sent Jerry Everson for Brother Talbott, whom she had seen riding toward the shack hamlet in the valley.

"Thar hain't but one thing thet ye kin do," said Good Anse slowly when he and Juanita sat alone over the problem with the note of Havey command lying between them. "An' I hain't noways sartain thet hit'll come ter nothin'. Ye've got ter go over thar an' have speech with Anse Havey."

She drew back with a start of distaste and repulsion. Yet she had known that all along. She knew that to let the children who had come to her go back to the old life for which she had unfitted them, with their ambitions aroused to unsatisfied hunger would kill her. Moreover, it would break their hearts. It would be the end of everything. For them she would even humble herself before Bad Anse Havey, but it is doubtful if Judith consented more reluctantly to go to the tent of Holofernes than she to go to the brick house against which she had launched so many anathemas.

"Ye see," she heard the missionary saying, "thar's jest one way Anse kin handle Jeb an' nobody else kain't handle him at all; not that I blames ther boy much. He thinks he's right. I reckon ef ye kin persuade Anse ter reason with him ye'll hev ter promise that young Milt hain't a-goin' ter hang round hyar."

"I'd promise that," she said eagerly. "I'd promise almost anything. I can't give them up—I can't—I can't."

"Ef Anse didn't perfect little Dawn from ther McBriars, Jeb would ter a God's sartainty 'kill young Milt,' went on the preacher, and the girl nodded miserably.

"I don't 'low ter blame ye none," he said slowly, almost apologetically, "but I've got ter say so many bitter things ter Anse. Mountain folks air mighty easy hurt in their pride an' no one hain't nuver dared ter cross him afore."

"No," she exclaimed bitterly, "he will welcome the chance to humiliate and to refuse me. He has been waiting for this; to see me come to him a suppliant on bended knee, and then to laugh at me and turn me away." She paused and added hotly, "And yet I've got to go to him in surrender and pleading—to be refused—but I'll go."

"Listen," said the preacher, and his words carried that soft quality of pacification which she had once or twice heard before. "Thar's a heap-warse fellers than Bad Anse Havey. Ef ye could jest hev seed yore way ter treat him a leetle diff'rent—"

"How could I?" demanded Juanita hotly. "How could I be friends with a murderer and keep my self-respect?"

The brown-faced man looked up at her and spoke simply: "I've done kept mine," he said.

The girl rose.

"Will you go with me?" she asked a little weakly. "I don't feel quite strong enough to go over there alone. While they are humbling me I would like to have a friend at hand. I think it would help a little."

"I'm ready right now," said the missionary and so with the man who had guided her on other missions, she set out to make what terms she could with the enemy she had so stubbornly defied.

It seemed an interminable journey, though they took the short cut of the foot trail over the hills. It was a brilliant afternoon, full of music and sparkle and colour, but for her the life had gone out of Nature's pageantry.

Have You That TICKLING IN THE THROAT SENSATION?

This trouble is most distressing, and caused from a cold which has settled in the throat. How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat? The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

What you want to cure the cold is Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This valuable preparation is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks with which is combined the virtues of the world famous Norway pine tree.

Thousands of testimonials prove that what we claim is true. All we ask you is that when you ask for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup see that you get "Dr. Wood's," and not some no-account substitute.

Mr. Charles S. Chase, Shelburne, N.S., writes: "Coming to Nova Scotia from the State of Maine, I caught a severe cold which persisted for many weeks, and was accompanied by a bad cough and a constant throat irritation. After trying many remedies, a friend handed me part of a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It helped me so much I bought another bottle which completely cured the cough and allayed the irritation. It, is certainly the best cough medicine I have ever tried."

The price of "Dr. Wood's" is 25c and 50c.

WHAT $10 DID FOR THIS WOMAN

The Price She Paid for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Which Brought Good Health.

Denville, Va.—"I have only spent ten dollars on your medicine and I feel so much better than I did when the doctor was treating me. I don't suffer any bearing down pains at all now and I sleep well. I cannot say enough for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills as they have done so much for me. I am enjoying good health now, and owe it all to your remedies. I take pleasure in telling my friends and neighbors about them."—Mrs. MATTIE HALEY, 801 Calhoune Street, Denville, Va.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

ENNISMORE COUNCIL'S INAUGURAL

Special to The Examiner.

The inaugural meeting of the Council of Ennismore was held on Jan. 11th, 1915, with all the members present. After complying with the statutory law of said municipal body, they assumed thir seats as follows:

Reeve—William H. Crough in the chair: Councillors Patrick Y. Crowley, Michael Perdue, Daniel Holland, James Guiry.

By-law No. 364 passed the three readings, appointing township officers, a Board of Health, a Medical Health Officer and a Sanitary Inspector for the year 1914.

Moved by Messrs. Perdue and Holland, that William F. Cavanagh be assessor for 1915 at a salary of $35.00. Moved by Messrs. Crowley and Guiry, that William B. Crough be treasurer for 1915 at a salary of $50.

Moved by Messrs. Perdue and Holland, that Patrick G. Sullivan and Michael Geary be auditors for 1915 at a salary of $5.00.

Moved by Messrs. Holland and Perdue, that the auditors' report be received and adopted and 100 copies printed.

The following orders were drawn on treasurer, viz.: Daniel Cavanagh, for work on road, $3.00; John J. OConnor, for work on road, $6.25; Michael Gear and Patrick G. Sullivan, auditors, $5 each; Samuel Killen, for taking George Williamson to the House of Refuge and car fare, $3.00; Kelley Bros., for gravel, $8.20; Daniel Hickson, constable on election day, $1.50; Joseph Costello, poll clerk, $2.00; John Conway, work on road, $3.75; Paul Costello, swearing in returning officer, $1.00; J. O. Gorman, supplies for Council, $1.15.

This morning we do not see the presence of Samuel Killen, the former Reeve, who removed his name at the nomination. Mr. Killen entered the Municipal Council twenty-six years ago, during which time he has held the confidence of the people and his fellow officers.

BRITISH ORDERS TO CANADA.

Twenty-five Million Dollars Worth Placed in Few Weeks.

London, Jan. 19.—William J. Griffith, secretary to the Lord High Commissioner in London, says in a statement to the press regarding the British purchases of war equipment in Canada.

"In the past few weeks British orders placed in the Dominion have amounted to between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000. The French and Russians have also placed large orders in Canada.

"The United States where productive ability and capacity for quick delivery has never been better shown, is also receiving a vast and increasing quantity of orders from Europe."

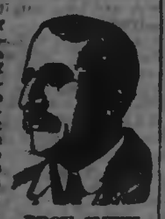
Constipation, Indigestion and Horrible Backaches

Searched for a Cure for Years—Advised to Try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Was Cured.

Where there is poison there is pain. This is a provision of Nature to warn you against conditions that are likely to prove serious.

Constipation of the bowels is undoubtedly the greatest source of disease and suffering. By using one of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at bed-time as often as is necessary to keep the bowels regular you can cure constipation and the consequent indigestion, and remove the cause of backache, rheumatism and other painful diseases.



PROF. SMITH.

"Daily movement of the bowels" is the greatest law of health. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you to form this habit, add to your years, and bring comfort in old age.

Professor A. T. Smith, 1 Mt. Charles street, Montreal, and formerly of Boston, Mass., writes:—"I suffered for many years from bad digestion, constipation and horrible backaches. I have been treated by many doctors, without any results. One day a friend in Boston advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. After using two boxes I noticed great improvement, and after the fourth box I was completely cured. My digestion is good. I never feel any pain in the back. My head is clear, and I feel like a young man. I think Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are one of the best medicines on earth."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS EXPERIENCE

I don't propose to make myself extra ridiculous by calling myself a hero. My solitary, wifeless existence in this secluded grove must not be ascribed to poverty or misanthropy, as I own several nice farms and would graciously permit any middle-aged lady to superintend the said real estate and my piano; but my solitary life is due to my two besetting sins—having loved too many girls and having been too good.

I am myself too far advanced in life to gain benefit from my sad experience, but it might be of value to those who are not too old to learn.

My childhood shall be skipped, with the laconic allusion that I wasn't the worst boy in my native village on the Rhine.

When asked what I intended to make of myself, I always answered by looking at the nearest girl handy. My father, who was a physician of considerable fame, had a burning desire to have me, his son Peter, become a doctor of medicine and surgery. He sent me at the early age of 17 to a celebrated medical college, accompanied by his warmest well-wishes and a bundle of rules in regard to my behaviour while away from home. My arrival at the seat of learning caused some head-shaking among the skull-capped professors and considerable giggling among the students. To remove my bashfulness I was ordered to occupy a dark corner of the school-room—all to myself—where I was told to study the anatomy of a grinning monkey, and to tell what I knew about the bones when the teacher came around.

But, alas! I was disturbed in my anatomical studies by a rattling noise in the back yard. Casting my eyes from the subject into the back yard, I espied a fair maiden pumping cistern water with all her might. She looked up and I again looked down, until the fair pumper had filled the bucket and pumped my heart clear into the back yard.

I forgot to peruse any more the frightful skeleton, but my eyes constantly explored the contents of that fatal back yard.

The fair pumper, my first love, was seen by me no more. I pined and became haggard-looking; my teachers felt my pulse and shipped me home without delay.

I recovered from the fever in about two months, and went to a circus. I became greatly interested in the wax-figures of Cain, who killed Abel, and in the 11 good apostles.

But the curtain rose, when, lo and behold! there stood a lassie with shining golden hair. I loved her without the least preliminaries, and couldn't sleep for many nights on account of the charming circus-girl.

Then I emigrated to this country, where I have been entirely too good, and loved fair damsels by the score.

Ha! didn't I think that by carrying my whole early apple crop to those three Sand Hill ladies the oldest would reciprocate my ardent affection? But she snubbed me as soon as the early apples ceased coming.

And that preacher's daughter, whom I first saw and loved at the Oak Hill camp-meeting. She came near spitting in my face.

The Dipperman girl held out seductive inducements until, when I popped the question, she crawled away with my bleeding heart, telling me that she couldn't leave her parents for such a forlorn-looking wretch as I was.

The Fulton country girl smiled as long as I let father have his own way with my corn and hogs, but talked bad to me as soon as I vetoed his thievish proceedings.

I don't wish to mention the four school-marms I once dearly but vainly adored, nor will I tell the particulars about my short marriage with an ex-war widow, who cost me $7 for the knot-tying and $700 for loosening it.

I am now nearly 70 years of age, lead a frugal life, supply several destitute widows with fuel, and live a hermit life in this patch of timber which some sarcastic local newspaper writer christened Misery Grove, because, as she fiendishly explained, "Old Peter is a miser in misery."

I will persist that I would be as happy as the majority if I were equally mean. But the way it stands I am without a peer in this section, by reason of having loved too many girls, and having practiced that other besetting sin, not having been good enough to myself, but too good to others.

Mad Heart Trouble FOR YEARS.

Weighed 87 Lbs.

Now Weighs 128 Lbs.

Miss Beatrice Longhead, Staples, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had heart trouble for quite a few years. I doctored for it, and altogether my bill amounted to $400, and still no cure. One day when very sick I was lying on a couch close to where some almanacs were hanging. I took one down, and was reading about what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cured, and thought I would try them. I got six boxes to start with; have only taken three boxes and I never felt so well in my life as I do now. I only weighed 87 pounds when I started to take them, and now I weigh 128 pounds. I hope all poor sufferers will be benefitted by them as I have been."

Wherever there is any weakness of the heart, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will strengthen it and build up a strong healthy system.

Capt. D. O. C. Newton of Montreal, killed in action with Princess Pats.—Captain Newton joined the Patricias at Levis, one week before they sailed. He was Captain of No. 3 Company. During the Lord Grey regime he was an A.D.C. at Rideau Hall, and acted as A.D.C. to the Duke of Connaught on several occasions. He was a nephew of Lord Dundonald, and his A.D.C. when the latter was in charge of the Canadian forces. When Lord Grey left Canada, Capt. Newton decided to remain in this country and go into business. He entered business in Montreal as representative of the Canadian Agency, Ltd., and was connected as director with a number of companies. Capt. Newton was a son of George Onslow Newton and Lady Newton.

WHEN SOLDIERS CAMP

Rigid Regulations as to the Placing of the Various Corps

When soldiers camp each unit in the force has its allotted position. Infantry are placed nearest the enemy, for they are able to immediately pick up their arms and make a stand in the event of a surprise attack. Cavalry are of little use when troops are resting, hence they are placed in the rear of the infantry. Artillery squads are also accommodated in a central position away from the fringe of the camp, for guns have to be carefully guarded against damage by night marauders.

The water supply nearest to an encamped army has a strong guard placed over it. Day and night sentries pace close to the stream or well chosen for refreshing purposes. Telegraph tents are also guarded, for by means of wires stretched through the fields communication is kept up with headquarters.

Every man in camp sleeps with little fear of surprise, for the position is carefully looked after by numerous sentries posted round the outer edge of the camp and also well away from it. At dawn the cavalry are astir, and after a short repast they gallop off to endeavor to discover the movements made by the enemy during the night. In the present campaign scouting aeroplanes often carry out this task, as the still, clear air of early morning is ideal for observation work from aircraft.

Each camp has its "police," soldiers whose duty it is to prevent disorder or rioting among the restless "Tommies."

SHELLS FROM BIG GUNS HARD ON THE NERVES

So a Young Officer Found Them—Had Trouble to Throw Off the Mad Under Heavy Shell Fire

The other day I was, with another subaltern, holding a farm in front of our trenches to prevent the Germans massing troops behind its cover and rushing us, wrote a young officer in a letter which was published in the London Sketch.

Well, we held on for perhaps an hour without anyone taking any special notice of us, and then they turned the big guns on us. Within fifteen minutes they put fifty-five shells (weight about 60 pounds and probably 8 inches in size), into and around the farm within a circle of fifty yards' radius. We literally "smelled hell." After that we left the buildings and went into the sick yard, where we could dodge shells better.

Another lot of shells came over, and four of my men who crouched round the base of the spout lay close together and got as near the earth as possible. Three shells went on and burst yards away, the fourth burst some fifty yards to our flank. Immediately it burst, and mingled with the clang of the explosion came a shriek which stopped suddenly, began again, and died away with a horrible bubble and gurgle. A corporal sat up with one arm twisted horribly under and behind. We buried him where he lay in the rick yard, with a rough cross over him, and then we went back to the farm.

The German gunners by this time had shut up shop for some tea, so we were able to get some tea also. Two of the men volunteered to milk the cow, and proceeded to do so when, having half-filled a pail, the old girl kicked and booted them both out of the place. One of them fell into the milk pail, and when he came out the sight defied description. He was one sheet of milk from top to toe, and we simply shrieked with delight at him. So even in war does comedy follow tragedy.

All our work has been in trenches up to the present, and it is rather nerve-rending work. These big shells make a sound exactly like the rip of tearing a starched collar and the whistle of a railway engine mixed. When you are moving along a field there is a sudden crack and you hear a "sssssss—zip" as a bullet goes past your head. On the occasion I am thinking of I did such an ingloriously and hasty dive to earth that the corporal with me thought I was hit, and was just preparing to do the V.C. act when I moved. However the blighter of a sniping German who fired at me got it in the neck, or rather throat, from me a minute later, for we stalked him, and I shot him at about 150 yards range. He leaped about five feet into the air, and I sent his helmet back home yesterday as a souvenir.

When I landed at Havre I was much amused at two awfully pretty girls (French), who were with their father a captain of infantry. The three solemnly advanced on me, my hand was unmercifully pump-handled by the captain, and I was vigorously kissed on each cheek by the two girls. The troop (my men) fairly howled with delight, and I never heard the last of it for two weeks. If ever a girl was seen within a hundred yards the men began to grin at me and nudge each other, and someone would whistle softly, "Chase Me, Charlie," or "You're My Blue-eyed Baby," until I had to threaten to knock their heads together for them. They haven't forgotten it yet.

It's a jolly life and most interesting, but it's a little wearing on the nerves. One doesn't mind shrapnel—that's harmless—but the "coal-boxes" and rifle fire put the fear of God into you. It's lucky that the Germans can't use their rifles well, or we would catch it awfully. They equip their men wonderfully well, and their uniform of grey is absolutely invisible except in broad daylight. At early morning and dusk, two favorite times for attacks, you can't spot them at all.

ITALY HATES AUSTRIA

And the Feeling is Heartily Reciprocated by People of Dual Empire

Just as in Germany the hatred of the people is concentrated upon one of the enemies, so it is in Austria. In Germany it is Britain that is hated. In Austria it is Italy. The Austrians call the British and the French merely "dogs"; but they call the Italians "pig-dogs." There is great rage at the failure of the Austrians who were recruited in the former Italian provinces on the Adriatic to distinguish themselves. It is admitted that many of these soldiers held up their hands so that they might be wounded by the Russians and sent home. Once home they steal across the border into Italy, and confide their experiences to the Italian newspapers, thus increasing the anti-Austrian feeling in Italy, and the anti-Italian feeling in Austria.

But among other elements of the population there is a strong disposition to refuse to fight hard for Austria. It pervades the Czechs to a great extent. In Bohemia the princes are full of people whose loyalty to Austria is doubted. In Bosnia and Dalmatia the sentiments of the people are such that the Austrian Government will not risk a train that does not carry several hostages, Austrian citizens. If the train meets with any accident, the hostages are at once shot. In Dalmatia the surveillance of the people is so severe that they have said they would welcome any foreign army.

Heals Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly

A Simple, Home-Made Remedy, Inexpensive but Unequalled

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant-tasting Home-made cough syrup has caused it to be used in more homes than any other remedy. It gives almost instant relief and will usually overcome the average cough in 24 hours.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any drug store, pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy at a cost of only 54 cents or less. You couldn't buy as much ready-made cough medicine for ten times. Easily prepared and never spoils. Full directions with Pinex.

It is pleasant, certainty and speed in overcoming chest troubles have caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy or throat and chest cold is quite remarkable. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes a painful cough in a hurry. With a persistent, loose cough it stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the annoying hacking.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its splendid effect in bronchitis, whooping cough, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

To avoid disappointment in making this, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

INDIAN SOLDIERS HAVE SPECIAL FOOD

Race and Religious Prejudices Had to be Overcome by Army Officers—Even Horses Dislike Hay

A peculiar problem had to be met by the British commissariat in supplying the various castes and sects of the Indian army with meat food.

The Gurkha, the Rajput, and other Hindus will eat goat or mutton, provided the animal has been killed in a special or orthodox way. The disgust which the strict Hindu feels at physical contact with beef is so intense that he will sometimes vomit at the sight of it; the prejudice is so inveterate that Mohammedans who are the descendants of Hindu converts cannot reconcile themselves to the taste. Happily, pork, the Moslems abomination, does not complicate the question of army rations.

But the crux is not so much the nature of the meat to be provided as the manner in which it is killed and cooked. In the case of sheep the Sikh villager's gorge will rise when he sees meat prepared by the Mohammedan butcher, who kills by his halal or throat-cutting stroke, just as the Mohammedan feels it an outrage that meat should be hung up for sale that has been killed by the jatka—the stroke at the back of the neck affected by the Sikhs. A certain amount of tinned mutton is eaten willingly by the troops, but the great bulk of commissariat meat must be sent alive to railhead and slain there in accordance with prescribed rites.

That the men may know whether they are eating clean or unclean flesh units are detached to a point near railhead, where each man, be he Mohammedan, Sikh, or Hindu, despatches his beast by his own peculiar sacrificial stroke, marks it as clean and sends it on to his comrades in the trenches.

No beef is killed at the front, as the mere proximity of a Mohammedan slaughter house might carry pollution to the Hindus.

For drink the army rations of the Indian troops is rum, but the Mohammedan, being debarred by the Prophet from all fermented liquor, is given an extra ration of sugar and tea.

The huqua being too cumbrous an article for service equipment, the Indian soldier receives two packets of cigarettes a week.

Even the transport animals have their ingrained fads, a kind of caste fastidiousness. Indian mules and countrybreds who might be having the time of their lives nose suspiciously sweet English hay, preferring their own chopped straw, the dryest of provender.

The Gurkha is proverbially an accommodating person and gives his British officer, with whom he is on the friendliest possible terms, as little difficulty as possible. But in Bombay when a regiment was embarking the question arose as to whether they would eat frozen meat. A conclave of officers decided that it would be better to put the case to the men. The Subadar was called, and, after a little wrinkling of the eyebrow, said: "I think, Sahib, the regiment will be willing to eat the iced sheep provided one of them is always present to see the animal frozen to death."

Gathering Souvenirs

I have quite a collection of relics, wrote Private A. H. Williams of the Royal Army Medical Corps. A German soldier's knife, given to me by a Frenchman who had killed him, an ivory ornament, a crucifix from the Holy Well at Lourdes, some old documents from Bruges, and a priest's cap given to me by one of the caretakers of Ypres Cathedral. I also had two German helmets and a Uhlan lance, besides other things, but they were so bulky I had to abandon them.

DANGEROUS WORK DONE BY SIGNALLERS

British Army Depends on Them For Transmitting Messages on Battlefield—Germans Use the Wires

Much of the hardest and most dangerous work of the British army is done by the flag signallers of the Army Signal Service. They have often to stand in the fighting line, waggling their flags or working their flash mirrors, while the German riflemen make their fire against the men who are directing the movement of guns, infantry, and horsemen.

The German army does not use the British methods of signalling. The Germans rely on field telephones and wireless apparatus, kept mainly behind the battlefront. The British troops are just as good as the Germans in this kind of safe signalling, but they find that one flag-waggler in the firing-line is often worth a dozen telegraph and telephone clerks a safe distance away. A good deal of the success of the British in France and Flanders is due to the splendid work of their signallers. Even if half a company becomes detached from the army in the course of an action, it is usually able to "talk" to the main body over a distance of two or three miles.

A squadron of scouting cavalry or half a battalion of advancing infantry cannot, in the rush and heat of a critical action, take a mile of wire and an electrical apparatus with them. But even in a charge, one man can carry a flag, and if the charge is brought up suddenly by an entrenched host of the enemy, the flag-man can at once signal for help. If he hasn't brought flags with him, he can tie a handkerchief on his rifle. He can ask the gunners to rake the trench with shrapnel, and give them the range and tell them if they hit or miss; or he can ask for supports to be hurried up to strengthen the charging columns.

The work of the flag signaller is very simple. He takes a flag in each hand and strikes various attitudes—right flag held high up, left flag held straight down; right flag held sideways, left flag struck up, and so on. Each movement stands for a letter of the alphabet. This is known as the semaphore system. But a message can be sent almost as quickly with one flag. This is waved in two ways—one a long waggle, the other a short, sharp flutter. The long waggle represents the dash in the Morse code; the short flutter stands for the dot.

At the battle of Ypres, some of the British guns got in a very hot corner. The lieutenant wanted another battery, a mile away, to shrapnel a German regiment that had got too close and was shooting his gunners down. There was no field telephone handy, and before anyone could run or ride with a message the Germans would have captured the guns.

But in accordance with the splendid system of training for all accidents, one of the gunners knew all about flag-signalling. He took a handkerchief, and, amid a hail of German bullets, flagged out a message for help. The distant British battery observed the signalling, trained its guns on the enemy, and saved the situation.

"GOD WON WATERLOO"

So Sir John French is Said to Have Told a Couple of Questioners

The following incident in the life of Sir John French, illustrating the devout faith of this great Christian soldier, was related at Grange Road Church, Darlington, by Rev. H. H. Thompson, a report of which appears in The British Weekly. Some few years ago, in the South of England three men who were travelling were interested in the entrance of a stranger just as the train was starting. His bag and sword-case indicated that he was a military man, and after a moment he said: "That was a close shave; I've come from Gibraltar, and specially wanted to catch this connection." Said one of the other men "I am glad you have joined us, for we have been warmly discussing the comparative merits of Napoleon and Wellington. As a military man, we should like your opinion as to which of these was the greater general strategically. We now are of opinion that Wellington was the greater." With considerable skill and gracious ness the stranger proved that strategically Napoleon held the first place. "Ah! Then who won Waterloo?" was the rejoinder. In quiet and reverent voice the stranger said, "God won Waterloo," and the speaker was General Sir John French.—Presbyterian Witness.

Britain's Action In Holding Vessels Explained in London.

LONDON, Jan. 13. — The Norwegian steamers Alfred Nobel and Bjornstjerne Bjornson, loaded chiefly with lard, bacon and other products of Chicago packing houses, have been held with their cargoes in British ports since the middle of November. The cargoes are consigned "to order" at Copenhagen. The Nobel sailed from New York Oct. 20, and arrived in Liverpool Nov. 17. The Bjornson left New York Oct. 17 and was taken into Leith Nov. 17.

It is said by the owners of the vessels that they sailed from the United States before the British announcement of Oct. 29 that all supplies that a belligerent army might utilize must be definitely consigned to some firm or individual.

The Swedish steamer Fridland, which left New York Oct. 26 for Copenhagen, and arrived at Kirkwall Nov. 10, and was taken thence to Shields Nov. 20, also is still being held. Like the Nobel and Bjornson the Fridland is loaded with packers' products.

The Foreign Office was advised that the Fridland's manifest was fraudulent, it being alleged that rubber was listed in it as gum. The cargoes of all three ships have been held for prize court.

The Foreign Office says that the delay in bringing the cases to trial was due to the request of the owners for time to complete their evidence.

TURKEY'S PRICE.

Germany is To Keep Her In Munitions, Money and Officers.

PARIS, Jan. 13.—A news despatch received here from Dengatch, Bulgaria, says there has been made public there a synopsis of a treaty recently concluded between Germany and Turkey.

This treaty provides that Germany shall furnish Turkey during the war with munitions, material and the money necessary for the Turkish army, and supply also a sufficient number of German officers and specialists to meet Turkey's requirements.

In case of victory, Germany agrees to pay Turkey one-fifth of her war indemnity; in case of defeat, Germany will introduce into the peace treaty a clause guaranteeing the integrity of Ottoman territory. Each country agrees not to conclude peace without the other.

Turkey, under the terms of this agreement, is bound to make war against Great Britain and Russia. France is not mentioned in the document.

Soldier Kept Joffre Out.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—A British soldier writing to a friend in London says: "I have made something of a name for myself by refusing to allow Gen. Joffre to enter the house used as the headquarters, owing to the fact that he had no permit from our general, whose orders to me were to allow nobody to enter without a permit. Gen. Joffre was not upset, however, and went off with his aide-de-camp, who was upset, though, that made no difference to me, to our general and obtained the necessary permit."

Rainbow To Help Galiano.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13. — The cruiser Rainbow has been sent by the Naval Department to the assistance of the Fisheries Protection cruiser Galiano, which has gone ashore near Esquimalt on the Pacific coast. The crew of the Galiano are reported safe.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

Really small boys wear the Russian suits as much as anything, and smaller boys wear little suits like the one illustrated. In cap, linen or serge, this kind of a garment suits the small boy to perfection. It may be belted or not, according to choice, the belt held in place by straps at the side seams. The hand suits of sailor sleeve are strictly tailor made. The pattern, which is numbered 6,891, comes in sizes one and two years.

The boy's overcoat is like his father's this year, made of wool mixture, with raglan sleeve, big patch pockets and a belted flare from the shoulders to the lower edge. This is not the only type of coat, but it is the most comfortable and probably the most suitable for everyday purposes. Flat styles are too numerous to mention, but the cap is the prime favorite with the boys themselves and will result lots of comfort and pride for little boys.

Price, 20 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

JOFFRE AND FOCH HONOURED ALIKE BY KING GEORGE

Gen. Foch Was In Fact The Hero Of Two Battles On The Western Front, The Marne And The Yser

BORDEAUX, Dec. 22.—When King George visited the front he gave the same order to Gen. Foch (the Grand Cross of the Bath) as to the Commander in Chief of the Allies, Gen. Joffre. This is the highest distinction the King of England can confer on a General for purely military services.

Owing to the completeness of the French Censorship, which prevents any General from being singled out for publicity, and the small attention paid to the work of the French generals in the English press, people were mystified in England when Gen. Foch, a person unknown to them, should have been singled out for this compliment by their King.

Hero of Two Battles.

But the fact is that Gen. Foch was the hero of the battles of the Marne an Yser, and is likely to go down in history as the greatest figures of the war on the French side, next to Gen. Joffre. Joffre plans, Foch executes; Joffre is the headpiece, Foch the right hand of the French army. Each likes and respects the other. Foch's confidence in his chief's tactical genius is unbounded; Joffre knows that when it comes to an offensive movement he has an instrument in Foch on which he can place entire reliance. In private life the two men are more than comrades in arms; they are close friends and never more happy than when they can sit down over a pipe and discuss military reminiscences. For both are veterans in the strictest sense of the word. Their ages differ but by a few months; their birthplaces are but a few miles apart.

Ferdinand Foch was born at Tarbes, in the Southern Department of Gers, on Oct. 2, 1851. His father, Napoleon Foch, was Secretary of the Prefecture at Tarbes, where his three sons, of whom Gen. Foch was the eldest, attended the local college. Each boy chose his profession, one the law, another the church, and young Ferdinand the army. Ferdinand soon made his mark and at the age of twenty-six was nominated artillery captain. Rapidly he rose to the post of professor of tactics, with the title of Commandant, at the Ecole de Guerre, or Military School, where he remained five years. His lectures and military works have been translated into many languages.

Called an Alarmist.

Having been created Brigadier General in 1908, Foch now succeeded to the directorship of the Ecole de Guerre, one of the most confidential positions in the War Department. He left this post to take command of the Thirteenth Division and afterward of the Eighth Corps at Bourges and finally the Twentieth Corps at Nancy.

The war did not take Foch by surprise. He was among those who felt it was inevitable in the near future, and had even been looked upon by a section of politicians as an alarmist, much as Lord Roberts was in England by the corresponding political party there. Joffre, who has the leader's instinct in choosing his men, immediately selected Foch for the responsible position of commander of the Fifth Army at La Fels-Champenoises. How he acquitted himself here is a matter of history.

Early in October Foch succeeded to the command of the three armies of the North. He is now Joffre's right hand man and is looked upon as the "Vice Generalissimo" of the French army.

An Unsought Appointment.

The story of Foch's appointment to the Military School is not generally known. Clemenceau was then Premier and he had to choose a Director for France's great Military Academy. Many Generals coveted the position and the strings were being pulled on all sides for ambitious candidates. Clemenceau, over a cup of coffee, decided to choose for himself. Foch had to confer one day with his Minister, who asked him to stay to dinner. The Ecole de Guerre was not mentioned during the meal, and Foch had no intention of applying for the post.

Between the fruit and the coffee Clemenceau suddenly turned to Foch and said somewhat brusquely:

"By the way, I've a good bit of news for you; you're nominated Director of the Ecole de Guerre."

"Director of the Ecole de Guerre!" ejaculated Foch, taken aback. "But Monsieur le President, I'm not a candidate."

"It's possible," said Clemenceau dryly, "but you're appointed all the same; and I know you'll do excellent work there."

Foch thanked the Premier, but he still had his scruples.

"I fear you don't know all my family connections," he said bluntly. "I have a brother who is a Jesuit!"

"Jesuit be damned!" roared Clemenceau. "Let him go to —— I beg your pardon, Mr. Director—for you are the Director of the Ecole de Guerre; all the Jesuits in creation won't alter the fact."

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red, vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

PRAYERS FOR PEACE

(The Christian Register.)

It is strange to find the word "intercession" used to designate meetings held for the purpose of praying for peace. One is at a loss to know whether it denotes a misconception concerning Deity, or simply the perpetuation of words and phrases outgrown. The term denotes the belief that God is able to stop the war and will not do it unless there is special supplication on behalf of those who suffer therefrom. Surely no modern mind can believe in such a conception. It repudiates the love and wisdom of God, and harks back to the Deity whose favourable action might be secured by frenzied appeal. To pray for peace may express the normal desire of the individual, but to beg God to "intercede," postulates either a God outside the universe or careless of what happens within it. Is it not rather true that God is doing for peace all that human power and will permit, and that the only kind of intercession that has any unpagan significance is that with those men and women who have the power to will and achieve peace? Is it not true that God through all the centuries has been praying to man to bring about the realization of the Christ-song of peace and good will, and that the highest duty of man is to discover within himself the answer to that prayer?

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast; continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

THAN PEOPLE CAN INCREASE WEIGHT

This man and woman who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" flesh should take a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It is a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you eat into that rich, ripe fat you're most anxious for on the slender and blood-producing form which the added pounds usually assume. All this nourishment first passes from the body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.

Leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

SALVATION ARMY OFFICER AMONG THE HARTLEPOOL DEAD

The Bandsman and Songster, published at the Salvation Army headquarters, London, England, publishes the following story of the loss of Adjutant Avery in the shelling of Hartlepool:

Amid the debris of the Hartlepool Officers' Quarters may be found a battered musical instrument; it is the one upon which Adjutant William Avery played whenever he helped the band upon occasions when it was short of players. That battered old euphonium, if we could get it photographed for the "B. L. S.," would prove a powerful argument—an argument for the maintenance of the spirit of musical helpfulness within our ranks.

The Adjutant, who (as fully reported in the current issue of "The War Cry") was promoted to Heaven with such tragic suddenness on the morning of Wednesday, December 16th, when a German squadron bombarded Hartlepool and destroyed, among many other buildings, the Officers' Quarters, killing the Adjutant on the spot, stood well for the spirit, which surely all the bandsmen and songsters who have served under his direction in Ireland, the South and North of England, and in other parts of the British field, are ready to recognise, was exemplified in his life and character.

Amid the ruins of that shattered little homestead, too, is an organ, the property of one of the daughters of Adjutant and Mrs. Avery, and that instrument also, though its music will never be heard again, is another example of the inspiring spirit which, when it is manifested in the lives of parents, appears subsequently in those of the children. There is more of discord than harmony in some families, but it was a joy to our promoted comrade, as well as to Mrs. Adjutant Avery—for whom we request the prayers of our readers in this hour of deep sorrow—that their children had started to serve in the ranks of the music-makers.

THIRTY-EIGHT APPOINTMENTS.

The singing of the Salvation songs in the home of Adjutant and Mrs. Avery was more than it appeared to be; it stood for all the families the Adjutant and his devoted wife had been able to help during their twenty-six years of officership at their thirty-eighth appointments. When the Hartlepool bandsmen, and those other musical comrades from Wingate and neighbouring places assembled on Saturday to take part in the funeral service, and marched to the cemetery through the sorrow-stricken town, they doubtless bore in mind the lesson of the brave years of helpfulness and music-making for which the Adjutant's life stands.

There will be many musical comrades at Middlesborough I. and III., Guisborough, Bishop Auckland, Spennymoor, Consett and other north-country places who, though they were not able to be present, will think of the Adjutant and the life of music-making which has been as a song of thanksgiving to God.

The funeral service at the Citadel was conducted by the British Commissioner, and was continued at the graveside by Colonel Jeffries. Immense crowds were attracted, and the deepest sympathy was manifested by all classes.

OUR BOYS BEING CONSCRIPTED

They Will Train Behind Shelter Till Vacancies Occur.

GALASHIELS, Jan. 13.—Owing to the recommendation of the Canadian Expeditionary Force eight surplus officers from every battalion are being posted in various parts of Britain until vacancies occur through casualties at the front. In the meantime they will help to train the new army.

Among the Ontario men recently appointed from the 3rd Battalion have been posted as follows: Lieuts. R. H. C. Davis and J. A. Cameron to Westbrigh; Lieuts. N. F. Kelly and C. L. Clarke to Portsmouth Fortress, and Lieut R. M. W. Chitty to the Aviation Corps. Corpl. Mulholland, of Toronto, a member of the Artillery Corps, has received a commission in Kitchener's army.

Vatican Demands Reparation.

ROME, Jan. 13.—"The German denial that Cardinal Mercier was arrested in Brussels is treated only a technical grace," says The Tribuna in a special edition.

"The cardinal was not physically arrested and brought away from his residence, but he nevertheless was placed in a state of siege, within his palace, and was watched by the military.

"The holy see has asked that reparation be made by the German Government.

"The nation of Germany is awaited anxiously."

STAYS AT HIS TASK.

Bishop of Arras Refuses To Leave Post Despite Dangers.

NORTHEAST BRANCH, Jan. 13.—One of the noblest figures in French ecclesiastical circles at the present moment is the Bishop of Arras, Mgr. Lobbedey, who, undaunted by German shells, has ministered to those of his flock who remained in their cellars in the bombarded area and to the sick and wounded among the French troops. Since the tide of invasion ebbed, Arras has stood at the apex of the enemy's roughly-drawn, obtuse-angled triangle.

The Germans still hold the hecatombs of chalk to the east of the city—natural entrenchments, from which they must be starved or smoked out. Hidden batteries here play on Arras and its purlieus practically every day. Not a single church remains, but the bishop has lived underground with a few scores of elderly members of his congregation, who prefer to be buried under the ruins of their homes rather than to go out into the new and strange world that they know not. So far, the bishop's palace has escaped the enemy's fire, except for a few broken windows, and keeps the prelate holds his services for the devoted few.

Lieutenant Continues Admirably For Loss of Formidable.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, retired, in a letter to the press yesterday discusses the loss of the battleship Formidable, which was destroyed recently in the English Channel by a German submarine.

"The ship was lost," says Lord Charles, "under conditions which repetition after the losses of the Aboukir, Cressy and Hogue, we thought impossible. In both cases heavy ships were sent into waters infested with submarines without the protection of torpedo boat destroyers, which are the natural enemies against the submarine. The folly of the destroyer is shown by the fact that submarines are unable to injure the British squadron off the Belgian coast. It is unquestionable that officers and men should be thus gratuitously exposed to conditions under which they are sent to the bottom without a shot being fired."

Gen. Hughes To Go West.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—Maj.-Gen. Sam Hughes will leave Ottawa for the west to-morrow night, if his injured knee is sufficiently strong to enable him to leave the hospital.

Italians Meet Hero's Body.

ROME, Jan. 13.—A great crowd assembled in a severe storm yesterday to meet the body of Constantine Garibaldi, grandson of the famous Italian soldier, who was killed while serving in the French army. In the crowd were veterans of the Garibaldi campaigns, wearing their red shirts, and representatives of various political parties.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Jan. 13.—A few years ago Mr. Ballantyne, of Montreal, caused a flurry in dairy circles by stating that in a few years in his belief, Canada would have practically no export trade in cheese. Ever since Mr. Ballantyne's prediction, our exports have dropped steadily. From 1912 to 1913 the falling off was nine per cent of the previous year. Figures are just to hand to show that the year 1914 will show a further falling off of about 225,000 boxes, or 5.5 per cent of a decrease. There is a possibility, however, that new prices may revive consumption for 1915 and our exports be increased. It would seem, however, that the general tendency is toward a decline in the export dairy trade. At the same time, factory-making is on the increase, and this year for the first time we have made quite extensive exports to Great Britain.

A feature of the shipments of the past week has been the growing strength in the stock. Even the generally accepted cable offers, during the last few days, showed an advance on previous quotations.

WHEAT

Wheat is even stronger this week than last. Ontario wheat, for instance, has advanced from $1.21 to $1.22. This strength of the market may be explained by the fact that there is not enough to go around. The demand at least by the farmers of the Dominion, is unsatisfied, owing to the impossibility of them using their northern ports and the blockade of their Baltic and Black Sea ports. After it is evident that there will be no great increase in the area of the spring wheat districts this year. No. 1 Northern, $1.40; No. 2, $1.37½; No. 3, $1.37½; Ontario, $1.22 to $1.23.

COARSE GRAINS

Ontario oats have now started to share in the upward progress of quotations, jumping from 40c to 42c. Other grains are generally strong or advanced. Oats, C.W., No. 2, 42c; No. 3, 41c; Ontario oats, 40c to 42c; corn, 78½ cents, $1.75 to $1.80; barley, 48c to 52c; buckwheat, 85c to 90c; rye, 77c, $1.05 to $1.07. At Montreal quotations are: Oats, No. 2, 43c; No. 3, 42c to 42½c; barley, feed, 65c to 70c; malting, 77c to 78c; corn, 80c to 82c; peas, $1.75 to $1.80; buckwheat, 87½c to 90c.

HAY AND STRAW

The market for hay is firm; supply has proved adequate. No. 1 hay, $14 to $ 450; No. 2, $13.50 to $14; No. 3, $11 to $12; baled straw, $7.50. Montreal quotes No. 1 baled hay, $18.50 to $20; No. 2, $16 to $18; No. 3, $14 to $14.50; inferior, $12.50.

MILL FEEDS

Quotations here are: Bran, $25 to $26; shorts, $27 to $28; middlings, $28 to $30; feed flour, $3 to $4. At Montreal bran is quoted $25.50 to $26; shorts, $28 to $29; middlings, $30 to $32; feed flour, $34 to $36.

POTATOES AND BEANS

Farmers have formed a strike, but there is little chance of quotations advancing appreciably. On this market Ontario's are quoted 80c in car lots and New Brunswicks, 65c. Montreal reports the market quiet but steady, with Green Mountains, 90c car lots.

Beans are here quoted: Primes, $2.75 to $2.90; hand picked, $2.90 to $3. Montreal quotes three-pound pickers, $2.60 to $2.80; hand picked, $2.65.

EGGS AND POULTRY

New laids are being received in increasing quantities and are now selling to the trade at 40c to 45c; selects, 35c to 38c; storage, 28c to 30c. Montreal reports a market that is firm, with new laids at 45c; No. 1 storage, 37½c to 38c; selects, 40c to 42c.

Dressed poultry is quoted here as follows: Chickens, alive, 16c; dressed, 18c; fowl (a.), 12c to 14c and (d.) 15c to 16c; ducks (a.) 14c and (d.) 16c to 18c; geese (a.) 14c and (d.) 16c to 18c; turkeys (a.) 14c to 18c and (d.) 20c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

Real good butter is scarce on this market. Inferior stuff has been coming in in liberal quantities. This, which is more or less the usual situation at this time of year, explains the long range between the different grades: Creamery prints, 32c to 35c; dairy, 28c to 29c; bakers, 26c to 27c. Montreal reports a further improvement in the butter market. Sales have been made at Quebec and Ontario points, and cablings have been received from Vancouver. Small lots have been going forward to Englan. Creamery butter has ranged from 32½c to 33½c.

LIVE STOCK

After a period of weakness and sorehalp averaging, the cattle market seems to have settled down to sustained quotations. Reports current this week that the market has realized better and is on the upgrade. The manager of Harris Co., of Chicago, is buying the entire holdings of Hershey cattle of John Sheridan, of Toronto, for May delivery, and this gives new blood, quite seems to indicate that markets are looking forward to high quotations next year. Receipts of the week totalled 2,000 cattle, 1,000 sheep, 1,000 hogs and 1,000 calves. Trade in cattle was quiet; prices, $7.75 to $8.25; handy choice steers, $7.75 to $8; good to choice, $7.50 to $7.75; cattle to feed, $6.50 to $7.25; steers, $5 to $6.25; choice cows, $6.25 to $6.75; cows to feed, $5 to $6.50; butcher bulls, $6.50 to $7.25; feeders (400 to 900), $6.50 to $7.25; canners and cutters, $4.25 to $5.

Milch cows are quoted $50 to $85; springers, $60 to $90; calves, $4 to $8; heavy calves, $6 to $8. Calves are quoted $4.25 to $9.

Lambs: Yearlings, $8.50 to $9; light ewes, $6 to $6; heavy sheep and bucks, $4 to $5; culls, $3.50 to $4.

Hogs are now quoted f.o.b. $7.25 to $7.40.

The French Retire Along The Aisne Make Gains However At Soissons

FLOODS COMPEL THE FRENCH TO RETIRE ACROSS THE AISNE RIVER

Temporary Bridges Were Swept Away and in Order to Preserve Their Communications it Became Necessary to Withdraw From the Positions Won on the North Side of the Aisne—Cannonading in the Midst of Fog in the North.

GERMANS TRY TO RECOVER LOST GROUND

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, January 14.—(Official noon, Thursday)—The admission was made to-day that the French troops holding positions north of the Aisne have been compelled to retreat to the south side of the river. The severe floods which carried away the temporary bridges and not German attacks, is given as the cause. It is stated that it was necessary that this movement be made in order that communications should be preserved. The fighting around Soissons continues with the Germans throwing heavy forces into action in an effort to regain the lost ground. Despite this, the French are said to have gained some slight advantage at certain points.

In the extreme north the cannonading continues despite the fact that a thick blanket of fog now shrouds the entire countryside. The artillery exchanges are extremely violent especially in the Nieuport and Ypres regions.

The Belgians are reported to have dynamited a munition depot in the region of Stuyven-Kenskake, killing many Germans and destroying large quantities of ammunition. All along the Aisne the artillery exchanges are in order with practically no change in the situation. Fighting is in progress along the heights of the Meuse, but the snow and the fog have prevented any renewal of the offensive in Alsace and the Vosges.

LONDON, January 14.—Special Cable).—It is thought here that Italy's earthquake disaster, although for the moment giving the government all it can attend to to look after the dead and badly injured, will eventually be a factor that will decide that Italy will enter the war on the side of the allies. Despatches received here to-day indicate that the bulk of the Italian people, who are generally superstitious, are sure that the earthquake disaster was sent upon them by God, because they have not entered the fight against Prussian militarism. This view is encouraged by the bishops and the priests. Vast crowds gathered in Rome to-day to give an indication of this belief, and influence of such weight of public opinion must soon tell on the government.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Additional British troops have to-day been assembled near Soissons to reinforce the French lines and check any determined German drive.

The Board of Education

Will Meet Again To-night—Some Interesting Discussion May Be Expected

To-night, a special meeting of the City Council will be held to discuss the question of making application to the Provincial Legislature for a measure to enable the Council to pass by-laws from time to time, without the assent of the electors, to borrow money by the issue of debentures, for the use of the Public Utilities Commission. Some varied discussion may be anticipated.

A counter attraction to this will be the meeting of the Board of Education. The bill of fare will be a further discussion of the proposal to ask the Minister of Education to appoint a commission to investigate the affairs of the Board, also the amendment brought in by Mr. G. N. Gordon, to have the investigation conducted by a judicial officer. The Board as a body claim that they have been discredited in the eyes of the public, by the pre-election statements alleged to have been made by Mr. Gordon. The Board claim to resent the alleged injury done to their "name and fame."

Governor Blease of South Carolina Has Pardoned Over 3000 Criminals

Examiner Special:

COLUMBIA, S.C., Jan. 14.—Disregarding the attacks of critics, Governor "Cole" Blease, who goes out of office in a few days with the record of having pardoned or paroled more than three thousand convicts, to-day declared he was proud of his "Record of mercy."

Included among persons for whom Blease signed clemency papers were more than 500 men and women serving terms for killing their fellowmen. Every known crime from robbery to murder was represented in the list.

Regular Meeting of Mothers' Club

Was Held in the Y.M.C.A. Last Evening—Officers Elected

The Mother's Club of the Y.M.C.A. held their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon and had their annual election of officers. Reports of the different committees were read on the work of the past year. All were very satisfactory, indicating the progress the club has made. During the year mothers' circles or branches of the club have been formed at several of the schools. Others will be formed during the coming year, so that each school will have a mother's circle, which is greatly needed. Much good work has already been accomplished by those already formed.

Mr. Connal, President of the Y.M.C.A., and Mr. Meserve, Secretary, each gave a very interesting and instructive address, which was followed by the election of officers.

Officers Elected.

President—Mrs. Gumpricht.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Conway.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Rutherford.
Recording Sec.—Mrs. Lamb.
Corresponding Sec.—Mrs. Cantill.

NOW IN COMMAND

Appointment of Major T. J. Johnston of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons is Gazetted

LATEST MILITARY NEWS

His friends are to-day congratulating Major T. J. Johnston of Otonabee on his promotion to the command of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, which has just been gazetted. Major Johnston, under instructions, has been acting as officer commanding since the departure of the first contingent of Lt.-Col. O. H. Rogers, commander of the corps. The command has now been officially given to Major Johnston.

The Mounted Rifles are rapidly approaching the 150 men asked for, and they are a splendid body of men on the whole, the medical examination having been very strict. The inoculation process, at least its first stage, will be completed to-night, and the squadron will have to face the music again in ten days' time. The men are being drilled twice a day under the direction of Sergt. Robt. Biggs, and are making rapid progress.

The recruiting for the infantry is not proceeding as rapidly as in the case of the mounted rifles. The latter appears to have a fascination for the recruits. However, the 57th Regiment have fifty-two men enrolled out of the 150 they are expected to recruit for the 39th Battalion, and once the Mounted Rifles list is complete, the infantry ranks will fill quicker. For the infantry, the recruits come almost altogether from the city, while the Mounted Rifles are getting additions from outside. The 57th squad is being inoculated and has also commenced drilling.

Pte. Robt. Lavoir of the 57th's contribution to the first Canadian contingent, has been invalided home and is confined to his residence, 620 Harvey Street, where he is being attended by Dr. Cameron.

Millbrook Stock Judging Course

Was a Decided Success—The Prize-winners

MILLBROOK, Jan. 14.—The Stock Judging Course held in the Millbrook Armouries was a decided success in enthusiasm as well as in attendance. Beef Cattle and Dairy Cattle were discussed on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. John Gardhouse of Weston, discussed Beef Cattle, while Mr. R. S. Harding, of Thornedale, handled the subject of Dairy Cattle. Mr. Gardhouse and Mr. Harding are practical farmers and have followed the shows for years hence many practical points were brought out, from the feeder's and showman's point of view.

Thursday morning, Mr. W. J. Lennox, Seed Inspector for Western Ontario, and Mr. G. S. Peart, of Burlington, discussed the seed question.

Thursday afternoon, Mr. Gardhouse discussed the subject of light horses.

Friday morning, Mr. Gardhouse took up the subject of heavy horses. All sessions were well attended, 200 to 300 being present at each session.

An important part of the course was the Judging Competition for farmer's sons under 20 years of age. Classes in Beef Cattle, Dairy Cattle and heavy horses were judged by the boys. The papers were marked on the basis of 60 per cent. for correct placing the 40 per cent. for reasons. The winners were as follows:

Beef Cattle—Lloyd Sutton, Willard Lord, Milton Fallis.

Dairy Cattle—Lloyd Sutton, Harry Earle, Wilfred Elson.

GERMANS CLAIM COMPLETE VICTORY

Official Statement Announces That a German Attack in Force Took the French by Surprise in a Driving Rain and Carried Their Trenches.

SPECIAL CABLE:

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—In reporting the results of the attacks at Vregny, yesterday, the German official statement says:

"To the northeast of Soissons, a German attack in force yesterday on the plateau of Vregny, resulted in a complete German victory. The French were taken by surprise in a driving rain, and their trenches were carried; 14 French officers, 1130 men, 4 cannon, 4 machine guns, and a searchlight were captured by the Germans."

ROME, JAN. 14.—THE DEATH LIST IN YESTERDAY'S EARTHQUAKE IN THE PROVINCE OF ABRUZZI WAS THIS EVENING PLACED AT APPROXIMATELY TWENTY THOUSAND BY OFFICIAL REPORTS.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., January 14.—Fifteen specially designed 14-inch guns, said to be as powerful as the Krupp 42 centimetre guns, passed through Minneapolis last night for Russia. They will go via Vancouver and Vladivostock. Railway gossip said that they will be used against the fortifications of Przemysl. The guns came from Bethlehem, Pa. They left for the west on a special train. The train was under a special escort of private dectectives and guns.

ZEPPELINS AND TAUBES HOUSED AT GHENT READY FOR PROJECTED ATTACK ON DOVER

GENEVA, Jan. 13.—Germany has housed four of her latest designs of Zeppelins, together with several Taube aeroplanes, in a new aviation park which has been established near Ghent. It was from this point that the recent raid on Calais was made and from which the projected attack on Dover will originate.

GERMANS BREAK ICE ON MAZURIAN LAKES

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Germans are utilizing ice breakers on the Mazurian Lakes in East Prussia to prevent the lakes from freezing, according to a Reuter despatch from Petrograd. There is a double object in this—to enable the German gunboats to continue their operations and to render it impossible for the Russians engaged in East Prusia to cross on the ice.

Some Activity Defined For Inquisitive Journalist

PARIS, Jan. 11.—A key to reading the official communiques has been given by the soldiers in the trenches. The brevity of the official communications in this war has astounded and disappointed the entire world, which naturally felt that it had a right to something more than the almost brutally terse reports of the belligerent Governments. However, the fault was not with the communiques, but with our inexperience. Anyone who had actually been at the front was able to conjure up a vivid picture.

In this connection a Parisian journalist reports his experience. He arrived near the Aisne front and obtained as his conductor an artillery officer. The two proceeded at night toward the trenches, halting from time to time.

At one of these halts they were overtaken by a regiment of French infantry, which was hastening toward the faint sound of German machine guns. The officer and the journalist continued on the way and suddenly heard the sound of crackling volleys ahead.

"The infantry is nervous," said the officer.

Then the French heavy artillery fired, the Germans replying. One, two, three, four—one, two, three four—thundered the French guns, the German reply coming with less regularity.

It gave the impression of two mighty storms. Great guns, with elevated muzzles, were hurling shells toward the skies; there was a terrifying whirr of heavy shells hurtling seven miles through the dark air, while green and red flames danced in the distance. The journalist impressed the opinion that a great battle must be in progress.

"Calm your imagination," said the officer. "To-morrow the world will read: 'There was a steady cannonade along the Aisne. The enemy's artillery showed some activity.' Listen! There is now only one storm growling, or, as the communiqué will say, 'Our batteries had a marked advantage.'"

ANNUAL CONCERT AT ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

Children Gave Creditable Performance Last Evening

The Sunday School room of the little Church of St. George in South Peterborough, was crowded last evening on the occasion of the second annual children's concert. This entertainment is managed and equipped entirely by the children, themselves. They inaugurate it, manage it, and provide the programme, and very creditably indeed do they acquit themselves.

It is surprising what initiative there is among the youthful section of this go-ahead little Church.

As usual some of the supporters of St. George came from St. John's Anglican Church to encourage the little daughter Church, and their presence is always appreciated.

GAME OF CARDS ENDS WITH ASSAULT

Inmates of House of Refuge Before Magistrate Langley

Paul Godfrey, an inmate of the County House of Refuge, is appearing before Magistrate Langley, in Lakefield, this afternoon on a charge of having assaulted another inmate, Wesley Morrow, about ten days ago.

The offence occurred during the progress of a game of cards in which Godfrey and Morrow were participating. Godfrey, it is claimed, lost his temper and hit Morrow, who was laid up for several days but is almost recovered now. Morrow is about 60 years of age, while the accused is about 20 years his junior.

The case is being tried in the Town Hall, Lakefield.

CLOSING OF CANTEEN HELPED MEN'S HEALTH

Heavier Work is Being Undertaken—Ball by Officers for People at Salisbury

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The principal officers among the Canadian contingent are arranging a ball for the leading residents of the district in acknowledgment of many hospitalities and good-will shown all ranks by the people of Salisbury and the neighbourhood. This will take place about the end of next week. Every effort is being made to render the function completely representative of the contingent, and the importance of the military force of the Empire.

The beer canteen has now been closed for just over a week. A chaplain belonging to the contingent, who would be generally acknowledged as far from a bigot in the matter of temperance, tells us the improvement in the general health of the contingent during the last ten days has been simply marvellous. On the first day of the no-beer regime, he says, half a dozen regular customers of the canteen presented themselves to be enrolled abstainers. Ever since there has been a steady stream of men to do likewise. The closing of the canteen incidentally has synchronized with the undertaking of much heavier work and brigade movements.

MILITARY EUCHRE

A Military Euchre and At Home will be held under the Auspices of the St. Peter's Ladies Literary Society, Thursday Night in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum at 8 o'clock. Admission 25c.

RISK FOR PROFIT.

It is stated that copper which can be purchased for $200 a ton in the United States, is bringing $425 a ton in Germany. This Shylock profit appeals so strongly to some United States patriots that they go to the extent of concealing copper in bales of cotton, destined, and permitted to reach Germany. They do this at the risk, which is perhaps not very great, of a breach of the friendly relations between Britain and the United States. And "perfidious Albion" is held to blame because she aims to put a stop to such rascality.

HAVE NOT QUALIFIED.

A correspondent of the Star forecasts the result of the success of the allies of the Entente as the liberators of the smaller state of Europe from German and Turkish domination. Poland and even Hungary are to be given autonomy, and Palestine is to be freed from the influence of the Turks and placed under the guardianship of some Christian nation. It is suggested that this nation be the United States. What claim have the United States to be regarded as the champion of Christianity? Without a word of protest the United States has permitted Germany to outrage every sentiment of Christianity. It has seen, without protest, Germany reinforce her cult of brutality by an alliance with the most un-Christian of all nations, Turkey. It is fair to ask if in the attitude of neutrality, unprotesting, in the face of outrage of the laws of nations, and in disregard of the oblization of all free nations to, at least, speak out in protest against the enslavement of weaker nations by the remorselessly strong, the United States, as a nation, has measured up to the role of a protector of Christianity. Like Saul at the stoning of Stephen, it stands by consenting, while the martyrdom of Belgium is being ruthlessly wrought. By no law of logic, by no consideration of fitness, is our neighbour qualified to be the champion of Christendom as suzerain of Palestine in the interests of the sanctity of the holy places of the cradle of Christianity. In like manner Italy cannot expect her share in the territorial adjustment that will follow the war. She speaks of getting possession of Trentino and Trieste, wresting them from the hands of Austria. The nations of the Entente are waging a chivalrous warfare for the protection of the weak and the vindication of the right, with infinite expenditure of life and treasure; and neither Italy nor any other country, sitting back at ease and taking no part in the struggle—making no contribution to victory, can expect the Allies to pull her chestnuts out of the fire. Italy in her present attitude, and the United States in hers, cannot expect to be a sharer of the spoils, or share in the final arbitriment. Only the labourer is worthy of his hire; to the victors alone, those who have made the victory, belong the spoils or their disposal, which will be as just as the way of winning has been, high of purpose and lavish of sacrifice.

BE TRUE TO OURS AND OURSELVES.

We Canadians must not be a nation of pretenders. When we preach the doctrine of buying Canadian made goods, in order to keep our factories running, "it is up to" the factories to make goods worth buying. We must put our professions into our products. We are in this war in earnest. We are straining every nerve. We are reinforcing contingents as regularly and as liberally as a matter of course as we pay our light bills and water rates. We are not only sending soldiers to fight, but we are equipping them.

There is no doubt of the quality of our soldiers; but there seems to be a doubt of the quality of our equipment. It seems that we have been careless of both the bodies and soles of our soldiers. There has much been said of the defective quality of the shoes supplied our soldiers. Of course the contracts for shoes were hurriedly filled. That may be an excuse for bad workmanship; but it is no excuse for being in too much hurry. Many new must never hinders work. It is not according to Kitchener's way to hurry things unduly. If we "slammed" together boots for our soldiers so hurriedly that they won't hang together till the wearers get into the firing line, we have done wrong; have acted in panic. There was no necessity for such haste. The men were shipped from our shores, three and a half months ago, clad in our hurry in paper-soled shoes; and they are still in training, and it may be as long as three months more before they get into action. Kitchener takes his time, no doubt, on the theory that a soldier should not be put to work before he is throughly fit.

This same theory should be acted upon in equipping our soldiers. So much was said of the quality of the shoes supplied our soldiers that there has been an official investigation, and the investigators have reported. Their report is not yet made public, but it is said that the excuse for bad boots is "the haste with which the work had to be done." That may be good enough as an excuse; but we want good boots for our soldiers, not excuses. The boots, as it appears, are themselves excuses. If there is one part of the equipment of a soldier that should be of the best, it is the boots in which he has to do his hard marching. If a soldier's feet are kept comfortable and dry; the rest of his clothing does not count so much. Health depends very largely on dry feet, clad in strong, water-tight, comfortably fitting shoes.

If the boots supplied the first contingent were defective, through hurried manufacture, then take more time. Soldiers are not wanted in the firing line who are not in every way fit. If the boots supplied the first contingent were defective through dishonest workmanship, then the contractor is a scoundrel who deserves no quarter, and if this dishonesty is covered over and condoned by excuses, the authorities share his dishonesty. The soldiers stand to face enough danger, from the guns of the enemy, without having their health and lives imperilled by dishonestly made equipment.

We must provide to insure our soldiers being provided with the best equipment—whether boots, clothing, guns, or saddle, or harness, that, skill can make, and good sound material contribute to. We must have rigid inspection, and as a contemporary suggests, "every boot and saddle and garment made should have the name of the contractor stamped on it or sewed into it." No honest contractor will object to it; and it may make a dishonest contractor honest.

We have abundant reason for seeing that supplies, and equipment for our soldiers should be honest, so that the men we send to face danger and hardship, shall have so far as we can provide, a fair chance for life and comfort. Then we do not want our patriotism in contributing men to fight the Germans, to be stained with the German characteristic of dishonesty and crookedness. And we do not want our manufacturing reliability get a black eye. We are filling large orders for various kinds of war equipment, for Britain, France and Russia. If we furnish defective or carelessly made goods we shall have our inefficiency or carelessness advertised the world over—wherever war news is read. We shall be badly equipped for competing in the struggle for entering new avenues of trade the war provides, if we do poor work and have it well advertised.

CONSISTENT.

The Toronto Star has the following suggestive paragraph:

Instead of turning swords into ploughshares, the Germans are melting church bells to make cartridges. And they are stealing the bells.

With all her faults, Germany is consistent. She preaches the gospel of force, the practice of lying, spying, and all manner of crookedness. And she does more than some of her critics; she lives up to her preaching. Germany has at least one virtue, she is consistent.

THE THIRD CONTINGENT.

The first contingent was mobilized at Valcartier. It was a most unsatisfactory arrangement, because the men poured in from everywhere under officers who did not know whether they were going to be sent to the front or not. The whole thing was a scramble.

The men of the second contingent have been assembled at divisional headquarters, and the change has worked so well that the Government has decided to recruit the third contingent at points more local still, at the various battalion headquarters, and there the men will remain for a time for preliminary training.

That these changes are in the right direction cannot be doubted. There will be keener enlistment and the whole country will be brought into touch with the big work that is under way and aroused by the spirit of the times.—Toronto Star.

Shall The Transcontinental Be Used To Promote Settlement?

Are the brave and enterprising men and women who went into the wilderness of the North to make homes for themselves to be abandoned? The National Transcontinental Railway, built by the money of the people of Canada, was intended to be instrumental not only in the carriage of through traffic to and from the West but in the settlement of the fertile lands of Northern Ontario and Quebec. How little has been done to make good the pledges of the people to the pioneers is plainly set forth in a letter to The Globe from James H. Burns, a settler of Riviere Bell. The letter is assuredly worthy the immediate consideration of Sir Robert Borden and the members of his Government. Mr. Burns says:

"I address these remarks to you hoping you will give them prominence and thereby, through public sentiment, force the Canadian Kaiser —the Dominion Minister of Railways and Canals, to do simple justice and prevent much real suffering. I know the facts whereof I speak, and can have them vouched for by the whole community affected by his unwarrantable and unjust action. Our town, known as Notteway, Riviere Bell P. O., Quebec, is situated 18 miles east of Cochrane, and consists of three general stores, hotel, and saw mill, and there are a number of settlers, including many women and children.

"This place has had the benefit of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway operated from Cochrane. The Quebec Government caused a townsite to be surveyed, and the sale of the lots was widely advertised and considerable numbers of them sold, the inducement being that it was on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. I bought a lot and with many others came here and settled in 1912. The powers at Ottawa, notwithstanding the sale of the townsite lots and the enticing of us here, now cut off all railway communication with the outside world. Harricanaw, a town forty-five miles west of here, is the nearest point where provisions can be obtained. We are forced to pack our food and supplies by dog teams this forty-five miles or starve.

"Many of the inhabitants have no dog teams or the means of getting them, and the increased cost of transporting supplies, now 9c per hundred-weight, plus the freight rates to Harricanaw, makes living almost impossible. We did not come here as land-grabbers, but bought the land as settlers, and came to make homes for ourselves and families. We have appealed to the Grand Trunk Pacific officials without avail, also to Hon. F. Cochrane; now I am asking you to aid by publishing this letter. Many of the people here are sorely in need, but all we ask is simple British justice.

"The spies and enemies of our country are apparently getting better treatment at the hands of the Government than her own citizens; they are housed and fed, whereas we, after being enticed here, are left to our own devices to live or die. Surely some redress is possible, but unless it reaches us soon the hardship to many will be very great."

The agreement between the Grand Trunk Pacific and the country for the operation of the National Transcontinental should either be abrogated at once or made operative. The picture Mr. Burns puts before us of supplies being packed by dog teams while a railway of most modern construction lies unused and rusting is not a pleasant one. If traffic conditions warrant nothing better, a mixed train for the accommodation of the settlers should be sent across Northern Ontario and Quebec once or twice a week. The Globe is assured that in a stretch of at least 100 miles and perhaps much more, the stations water tanks, and other facilities required for the operation of the road are left without anyone to look after them. This is no time for the reckless expenditure of public money on operating pioneer railways, but the obligation of the people to the settlers of the North cannot be set aside entirely. Mr. Cochrane can afford to be less of the Kaiser and more of the friend of the pioneers.—The Globe.

CANADA AT WAR

(By Julian Street in Collier's).

By taking considerable journeys to points where men are being trained, I saw as many as seven or eight hundred recruits at a time being put through a sharp drill, under the eyes of smart-looking officers in leather leggings, brown greatcoats, and jaunty Scotch caps. Some of these recruits were in uniform; others in civilians' attire. This gave the ranks a ragged look, but it somehow seemed to humanise them. Instead of rows of soldiers all alike, they were rows of men—men of all kinds, educated and uneducated, married and single, rich and poor, all levelled in lines by the great steam-roller war. Most of them were there because of patriotism, because of enthusiasm, or because of a sense of duty, but here and there in the ranks was a pathetic, shuffling figure in a threadbare suit who had but too clearly became a soldier for the sake of getting work. In the hotels women were knitting as one sees them knitting in this country for the soldiers. Shop windows were full of uniforms, guns, automatic pistols, and travelling cases. But in all my stay in Canada I heard but once the tune of "Tipperary," and that was when a dapper, callow youth, who looked as though he would not go to war until Lord Kitchener should come and pull him out from under the bed, demanded "Tipperary" of the orchestra at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Montreal. It was at tea time. The young man and his companions set down their cups and applauded violently. By far the larger portion of the tea-time crowd, however, sat still after the piece had been played, showing in their attitudes and in their faces signs of cold disapproval.

It was then, somehow, that I seemed to begin to catch the present point of view of Canada. Those people would have thrilled at hearing "Tipperary" played by a band as a marching tune for men, but to hear it lifted off by a hotel orchestra, at the request of a young fop, to hear it applauded by hands too soft to hold a gun—that outraged their sensibilities. It sickened them in the same way (only more) that it sickens some Americans to hear "Dixie" cheered by a half-drunken crowd in a Broadway cabaret.

There is very little of the cheap jingo spirit. Canada is past the cheering point; she is too deeply stirred to enjoy superficial demonstration. That gay popular tune which, by a mere coincidence of time and psychological effect, has come to mean so much more than the sum of its words and music, sounds in the ears of the British Empire as a sort of anthem. Instead of making people cheer and clap their hands, it makes them think of men on battle fields, far away.

How To Gauge The Truth of War News

The following credibility index has been compiled by the military expert of London Punch. One hundred, he says, stands in the table for absolute reliability; nil for the perfect and utter lie:

None Rescued From Disaster.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 14. — (Via London.) — Information received at Berlin is to the effect that none of the officers or men were saved from the German cruiser Scharnhorst, sunk off the Falkland Islands by the British squadron. Seven officers and 171 men were saved from the Gneisenau, seven from the Nurnberg and four officers and fifteen men from the Leipzig.

Australians Will Leave For France.

LONDON, Jan. 14. — Lewis Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies, addressing a gathering of Australians yesterday, said it was not likely that the Australians who were guarding Egypt with New Zealanders, Indians and English Territorials and regulars, would have much fighting to do there, and that they would soon be in France.

Spinal Meningitis Is Now Under Control at Salisbury.

SALISBURY, Jan. 14. — Canadian troops here are to discard their Canadian-made boots, which have been declared to be too light and not waterproof. The troops will be refitted with British ammunition boots.

Camp surgeons announced yesterday that they believed they had effectively checked the epidemic of spinal meningitis.

During the past week the weather has shown wonderful improvement, and the Canadians are taking advantage of this and getting in some good hard training.

Every indication points to an early move; everything is being made ready to move at an hour's notice and the orderly rooms remain open all night in case of the expected order being given.

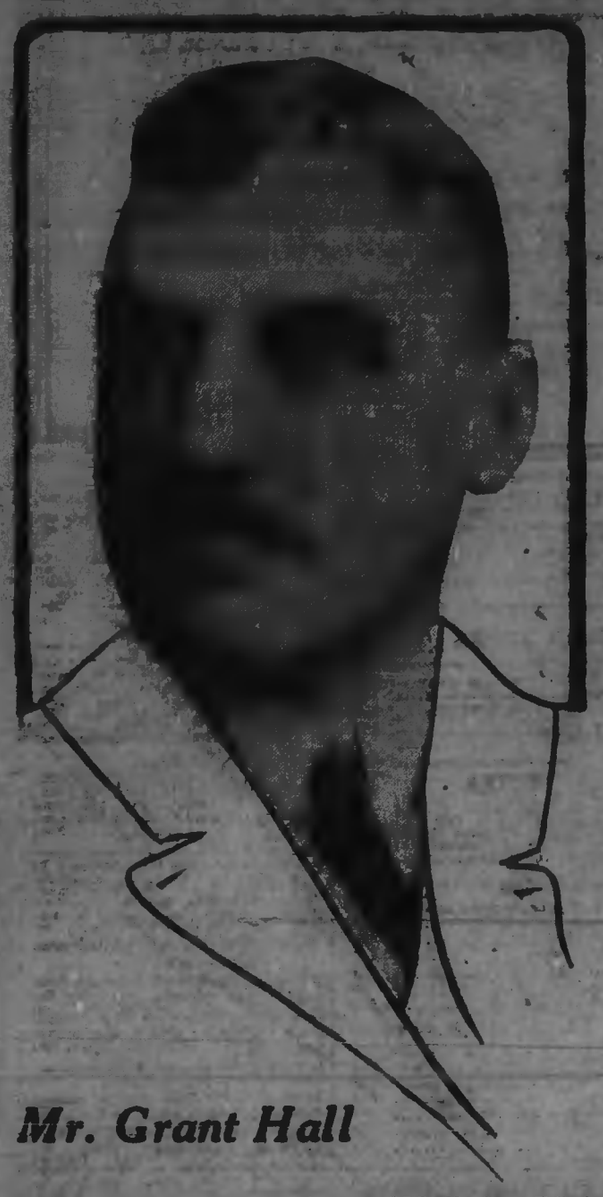
Notice of Annual Meeting

The Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of this Company for the election of Directors, Reception of Annual Report, and other purposes, will take place at the Company's Offices, George Street, Peterborough, on Friday the 22nd day of January, 1915, at 2 o'clock, P. M.

W. G. MORROW
Managing Director

Peterborough,
January 8th, 1915



Mr. Grant Hall

LIKE so many of the higher officials of the C.P.R., Mr. Grant Hall, the new Vice-President in charge of Western lines, has risen by sheer merit from the ranks. An official circular was issued a few days ago by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the company, announcing the appointment of Mr. Grant Hall vice-president and general manager, at Winnipeg, of lines west of Port Arthur, reporting to Mr. Bury, who has been elected vice-president of the company, with headquarters at Montreal. Mr. Grant Hall who has for the past two years been the general manager of the Western lines of the Canadian Pacific, was born in Montreal, on November 27th, 1863, and was educated at Bishops' College School, Lennoxville, Que. He entered the railway service in 1883 as apprentice machinist at Montreal, and in 1890 he joined the ranks of the Canadian Pacific. In 1893 Mr. Hall left the C.P.R. and became general locomotive foreman at Moncton for the Intercolonial Railway, but in 1896 he returned to his old love and was locomotive foreman at Montreal for twelve months. He was transferred to McAdam as general foreman and remained there for another twelve months when he went to Winnipeg in a similar capacity and from there he was transferred again as master mechanic of the Pacific Division at Revelstoke. He became assistant superintendent of rolling stock of Eastern lines of the C.P.R. in 1902 and two years later went back to the West as assistant superintendent of motive power of Western lines, a position he occupied until he was made superintendent in 1906, which position he held until 1911, when he was elevated to the position of assistant general manager of Western lines. In 1913 he rose to the general managership, which he still holds with the additional honor of being vice-president of Western lines.

SANE EATING BEGETS HEALTH

Mrs. James Putnam, Brome Co., Que.

I am a one time believer in the old maxim that the best compliment to the cook is to partake libera" of her cookery. "My boys just can't eat enough," says the proud mother, whose boast is that she can cook more acceptably for her family than anyone else could. You have heard this expression dozens of times. So have I. But I am no longer a believer in this old maxim. I have a better one. "The best compliment to the cook" the health and vitality of her family."

There is a big difference between these two maxims. The change from the one to the other means a revolution in all of our ideas on the subject of dietetics. The old fashioned cook filled in the first course of the meal with the plain materials that filled the hungry men and women and boys and girls. Of these the family partook of as much as the appetite demanded. The demands of nature were satisfied. The second course consisted of more appetizing foods, calculated to attract the already satiated appetite and cause the diners to eat of this course, in addition to what they really needed.

Such was my table a few years ago. Now things are changed. We have all trained ourselves to eat in proportion to our needs. Cakes, pies and puddings, which represented an immense amount of work, have been almost entirely done away with. I find that men appreciate the simple things more than fancy cookery once they become accustomed to a simple menu. I know that I am frequently criticised by my neighbors because of my plain cooking, but my family are delighted with the results.

We are healthier now than we were when I was tempting the appetites of my family with sweet and highly seasoned cookery. Our living expenses have gone down. It may be hard to believe it, but it is true, that our meals are more appreciated than they were before, as we bring to the table a healthy appetite. If there is one idea I would like to impress on other women who like myself, must do their own housework in addition to cooking for a large family, it is that simplicity in eating begets health and reduces labor.

A BRONCHIAL COUGH, PERHAPS WEAK THROAT USE "CATARRHOZONE"—DEAD SURE CURE

Wonderful Success Reported in Thousands of Bad Cases.

How many thousands are there who would gladly pay any sum to be cured of bronchitis or catarrh? Many could be cured if they would just use common sense in selecting their remedy.

Bronchitis of course is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes which were made for the passage of air alone, and neither the moisture of an atomizer nor the liquid of a cough syrup can get where the trouble really is. The diseased parts can only be reached by a remedy that can force its way through all the breathing organs. Doctors who have used "Catarrhozone" say it is the most successful for bronchitis. It cures by inhalation. You breathe in the healing balsams, inhale its soothing antiseptic vapour and relief is immediate.

Simple to use, delightful and pleasant—nothing compares with Catarrhozone which is the cure of the day for all bronchial and throat troubles.

Mr. H. B. McLAUGHLAN, the well-known representative of Perth and Blackwell, Toronto, says: "I have used Catarrhozone for years and can honestly say it is the only remedy that relieves me from a painful attack of Bronchial Catarrh. The inhaler for Catarrhozone is always in my pocket and I simply couldn't get along without it. I firmly believe Catarrhozone is a wonderful remedy."

WHY PROPER BREATHING REDUCES CHANCES OF CATCHING DISEASE

One of the important functions of government is that it shall provide against invasion of a foreign foe.

This is also true of the human body.

Metchnikoff discovered that the little round white cells, called leucocytes, do police duty for the body by catching and destroying the harmful bacteria which has gained entrance into the system.

But the policy of the cell as a sociologic organization is to prevent invasion and, as far as possible, to fortify against it. Accordingly, in harmony with nature's method of specialization, she formed certain cells into special, flattened, tough, pavement cells, which then became spread out into a great layer, covering the entire body and forming its skin.

Every person, therefore, is surrounded by a sort of Chinese wall, and so long as no break nor cut is made affecting its integrity it imposes a fairly reliable defence against the hordes of hostile bacteria which everywhere are around us.

But a way must be provided for the entrance of food and air, for the body cannot exist independent of the outside world and must extract therefrom material necessary to its sustenance, growth and development.

The nose and mouth must be regarded as open ports for the entrance of needed imports, but necessarily attended with the danger that along with them will come much that is undesirable and harmful.

The act of breathing is not only an absolutely indispensible function of the body, but it is one of constant activity.

Now if the respiratory tract were nothing more than a mere tube for the purpose of carrying the air to and from the lungs it might have a hard, impervious lining like that of the skin; but the respiratory functions begin with the interior of the nose so that we find the entire tract lined with specially constructed cells forming a soft, yielding moist membrane of extreme delicacy.

Just beneath this thin, vulnerable membranes are numerous glands and nerves and a rich network of blood-vessels which might be easily affected by injury and disease, upsetting function and giving rise to infection.

"Our Poor"

"The poor always ye have with you."—John xii., 8.

These words are as true now as on the day so many years ago, when Christ said them, and they will be true, as long as there is oppression, wrong and injustice upon our fair earth.

We all have some poor neighbors. They may not be where we can often see them, but if we will to know, we can find them near, very near, our own homes.

In three small, dark rooms one found a slender 14-year-old girl, who apologized for looking untidy because she had just finished the scrubbing, and said: "No, I do not know of anyone that needs help"; then added with dignity: "There are five of us children, but ma goes out all the time working." She evaded questions about her father, but as the ladies were leaving she handed over the two-weeks-old baby with an endearing "You little terror, you!" to a little sister who took it with a beaming look of loving pride and followed them out into the alley. "Please, our father is in jail for drunkenness," she said, "and the children don't know."

In another case, in a poor, dilapidated house, a fair, delicate looking woman with six children answered: "Yes, there's a widow woman that wants work and clothes for her baby. She used to earn $12 a month, and then could manage nicely, but now since the war she gets only $8 and that not regular. Of course we and the children can't get them go without, so we just share up." Then she said in an awed tone: "No wonder the poor thing has had the 'flu.' She stole her mother's wedding ring to be married with."

As our Saviour lived among such people and worked for them and loved them, may each and every one help to get work for those crying pitifully for it, and all the necessities for those needing them so sorely.—I. H. N.

Money for Money— Pound for Pound

—there's no food that equals Grape-Nuts in concentrated food-strength.

A pretty big claim, but listen—

"All-wheat food" sounds good to most people, but Grape-Nuts goes one better. It not only contains the entire nutriment of wheat, but also the rich nourishment of barley.

More! Grape-Nuts is long baked and digests quickly. Most wheat foods—bread for instance and some so-called breakfast foods—require 2½ to 3 hours for digestion.

Grape-Nuts food digests generally in about one hour.

Being highly concentrated, there's more actual food value, weight for weight, in Grape-Nuts than in some other foods sold in bigger packages.

Grape-Nuts contains the vital bone, muscle and nerve making phosphates necessary for health and life, but lacking in most wheat foods—white bread especially. A daily ration of Grape-Nuts readily makes up for this lack.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Kidd Byrne Is Still Seeking Fortune Left Him Some Time Ago

Man Who Was Born Within A Few Miles Of Peterboro', Seeks To Establish The Death Of His Father—Byrne Is Now In Ottawa—Conducted Meetings In Peterboro' About A Year Ago

David S. K. Byrne (nee Kidd), is still chasing the fortune that was left him by an American millionaire. Byrne, who was born near Peterborough, and is well known in this city, has arrived in Ottawa, where he will attempt to remove one of the last obstacles in the way of his receiving the fortune.

Mr. Byrne, who, in compliance with a condition of the will of Wellington George Byrne, the millionaire whose daughter he saved, changed his name from Kidd by a deed poll, the cost of which was 70 cents, is in Ottawa to establish the death of his father, who he states dropped dead at Cyrville, as the result of a bursting blood vessel, on July 29, 1885.

An inquest was held, and the deceased was buried in Beechwood cemetery. Later the body was removed to the family plot at Bewdley, Ont., which is at the head of Rice Lake.

David S. Kidd, the man who rescued Miss Lucy Byrne, and was adopted by the millionaire father, was born at Bewdley, near Peterborough. The doctor, who was coroner at the time of his father's death, has no official record of the event, and Byrne is now gathering evidence of the death from other quarters.

A Romantic Story.

Miss Lucy Byrne had left the home of her millionaire father when her parents objected to her marrying the man of her choice. She went to Chicago, and in April, 1907, Mr. David S. Kidd, who was a traveller for a tea firm, was in Chicago attending a religious convention. He wandered into what he thought was a lunch room, looking for a directory.

It turned out to be the annex of the Manning & Bowes saloon building. A young lady approached him and asked him to have a drink. He read her several passages from a Bible he had in his possession and finally his efforts to reform the girl were successful and resulted in the young woman returning to the home of her father. The family had long thought she was dead, but there was great rejoicing after father and daughter were reconciled.

The life the young woman had been living affected her health and she went into decline, dying some time later.

To show his gratitude to Mr. Kidd the millionaire expressed a desire to adopt him as a son.

Proving His Claim.

The millionaire, G. W. Byrne, was an illiterate and this fact makes it considerably harder for the adopted son. He must prove his identity before the courts and not the solicitors of the estate.

The estate, according to documents, shown by Mr. Byrne, amounts to $9,000,000, and consists of money and holdings in the United States, Spain, Australia and countries in South America. There are eight beneficiaries. Over a million and a half dollars goes to the establishing of the Lucy Byrne memorial building at Toronto, and $318,000 was left to servants. The mother gets one-third of the balance. He gets a quarter and is the sole trustee of the memorial building.

The testator directs in the will that a sworn correct statement of the value of the holdings in the different countries be made before it is probated. It does not need to go for probate for 84 months. This time is up next fall, and before that Mr. Byrne says he has to make a trip to Spain.

Byrne was in Peterborough a little over a year ago. He stayed at the Grand Hotel and while here conducted a number of religious meetings.

Horses Will Be Abolished

RIVERDALE, Toronto, Jan. 14. — The efficiency of the Department was greatly increased yesterday with the installation of a motor hose waggon now at Bolton Avenue Hall. A hook and ladder motor truck is also to be added this week.

The new hose waggon is of the latest design and carries a two-tank chemical outfit with a capacity of 70 gallons. In fighting small fires this apparatus will be used exclusively. It can also be used with great effect at fires adjacent to the city limits.

The purchase and installation of the trucks is the result of much effort on the part of the various Riverdale Ratepayers' Associations, who have repeatedly urged the need of motors for better service for the northern districts, as the long climb over the hill south of Danforth Avenue tries asking the impossible of horse-flesh.

Many citizens, however, express regret at this new departure, and no wonder when they detect that the hose [illegible] at Bolton Avenue are [illegible] in the City. At the same [illegible] they realize that the step was [illegible] the firemen themselves [illegible] interest in the change, [illegible] feel the loss of [illegible] friends.

The boys of the George Street Methodist Church will practice hockey on the "Y" rink from 7 to 8 o'clock. Social evening in the game room.

Saturday.

Jr. School boys' Bible Club, 9 o'clock.

Jr. Collegiate Bible Club, 9.45 o'clock.

The School boys will have a tramp to the woods Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The boys will meet at the building. Bring your snow shoes or a small toboggan if you have one. A good time is promised. Bring your chum.

Boys' carnival on Friday evening, Jan. 30th.

The Senior Gymnasium Class spent a most enjoyable evening at the toboggan slide, last night, about thirty of the boys and their ladies participating in the fun.

They left the building at 8 o'clock, returning about 10.30 to feast on beans and brown bread, and enjoy music and games. Everybody had a good time and will look forward to the next event of this kind.

Mr. T. L. Roy is Chairman of the Social Committee for this class and last night's affair was under the supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Roy.

These socials will be run once a month during the winter season and the boys and their friends may look forward to more times of which last night was only a sample.

For delicious flavour and all round fine quality choose "Ceylon" tea. "Salada." And then it is not disappointing with dust as many teas are.

A NATIVE OF SMITH DIES IN MANITOBA

On Jan. 7th, at Elgin, Man., there occurred the death of Mr. Jas. McEwan, well known in the Peterborough district, where he spent his early life. He was born on the fourth line in Smith township in 1856, emigrated to Manitoba in 1886, whither four years later he brought his bride. There he settled near the present village of Elgin. As a citizen he took a great interest in all public questions, keeping himself well informed on the great issues and showing a fine spirit of independence in his judgments. When loyalty to party called for any compromise with his convictions, his party could not command his support. For many years he was secretary-treasurer of the local School Board, and under his fostering care saw the little rural school grow to the fine consolidated school of the present, with its eight vans reaching out over eighty sections, daily gathering in the children. For many years his home was the home for all the Presbyterian missionaries labouring in that district. To them he was ever loyal and each in turn owed much to his quiet encouragement, wise counsel and steadfast support. He was present at every communion service held in his church from the day of his arrival until a lingering illness compelled him to his bed on his return from the great congress in Toronto in 1913. He leaves to mourn him besides his wife and his mother, his niece, Mrs. John W. Little, of Shoal Lake, Man., his brother William, of Elgin, and his sister, Mrs. W. J. Robinson, of Davidson, Sask.

GIVINGS OF CHURCH WERE MUCH HIGHER

OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Murray Street Baptist church last evening was the most largely attended ever held in the history of the church, and the reports of the different organizations and societies in connection with the church, which were presented and adopted were of a very encouraging nature.

Rev. J. R. Webb, the pastor, occupied the chair.

The treasurer's report showed that the church had contributed $7,856.29 during the year. The expenses were $7,717.77, or $138.00 more contributed than the year's expense. The sum of $1,369.59 was given through the weekly envelopes for mission purposes.

The building and interest fund showed that $1,285.00 had been paid on the church during the year besides the interest.

The weekly giving for local expenses was 3% per cent. higher than ever in the past and for missions 30 per cent. higher than ever before. The report of each department was read and showed a gratifying increase over other years.

Mr. John Riddell was elected to the honorary disconate and will serve for life as deacon of Murary Street Baptist church. Messrs. R. Harding, P. White and T. G. Gillespie were elected to the vacancies on the Diaconate.

The following officers were elected to the other positions:

Clerk—Mr. A. J. Reddon.

Treasurer—Mr. F. M. Somerville.

Financial Secretary—Mr. F. M. Somerville.

Assistant Fin-Sec.—Mr. T. G. Gillespie.

Treasurer of Building and Interest Fund—Mr. T. F. Matthews.

Treas. of Fellowship Fund—Dr. W. D. Scott.

Baptismal Committee—Mesdames Ellis, Cottingham, Pringle and Montgomery.

Finance committee—Messrs. R. Harding, S. Cottingham, Geo. H. Duncan, L. J. Pettit, B. Thompson, R. C. Read, Thomas Walker, J. Dallen, John Rossel, W. Sills, Dr. W. D. Scott and James Lewis.

Music committee—Messrs. T. F. Matthews, Joseph Wearing, R. Harding, W. R. Breyfogle, Dr. W. D. Scott, J. P. Cunningham and a representative to be elected by the choir.

Auditors—Messrs. W. R. Breyfogle and V. Eastwood.

The total givings from all departments of the church during the year was $8,768.74, the figures given above having been from the church, apart from its societies.

A resolution carried unanimously was moved by Messrs. Harding and Somerville expressing the church's appreciation of the work of the pastor and his wife, also hoping that they may be for many more years in Peterborough.

Messrs. H. J. Webber and A. J. Raddon were made responsible for a reception committee to serve at the door of the church at each service during the year.

A resolution of appreciation of the work of the choir was passed with the heartiest of applause.

During the evening a resolution of thanks was tendered to Mr. T. F. Matthews, who during the year had conveyed by deed to the church ten feet of ground on the west side which he had retained when selling the lots which he had acquired at the time the church was built. Mr. Matthews also sold subject to certain building restrictions which have preserved the interests of the Murray Street congregation for all time.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE IN EAST GROWS IN VIGOR

Reports of Defeats of German Cavalry, Would Indicate Retreat of Enemy In East Prussia

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Russians, according to official despatches from Petrograd, continue to keep the Germans in check on the Warsaw front, and to carry on a vigorous offensive in East Prussia; southern Poland and on the Transylvanian border. Several villages were occupied in East Prussia, the defeat of German cavalry indicating an affray between the Russians and the German rearguard.

A special London Times' despatch from Petrograd says:

"The suggestion is made that the Germans are preparing for a general attack on the Bzura-Rawka positions, but this is not supported by conclusive evidence. It is not improbable however, that a general regrouping of forces is being undertaken by the enemy.

The fighting on the Bzura already has cost the Germans over 250,000 men. To take the Russian times would probably cost as many if not more.

The Russians have resumed the offensive in East Prussia, while the Germans continue to attack them in Poland, and they are again trying to cross the Nida river in southern Poland, which is held by the Austrians.

The renewed activity of the Russians in East Prussia indicates that the freezing over of the Masurian Lakes, for which they have been waiting, has at last occurred, for otherwise it would be impossible for troops to advance through the narrow defiles defended by the Germans.

The Turks have occupied the Persian town of Tabriz, which is a Russian sphere of influence, and are battling with the Russians in the Caucasus, and are reported to be making preparations for an invasion of Egypt.

French and Belgian Officers Give Romantic Colour to London Cafes

One Limps Into Fashionable Restaurant With Soldierly Salute, and Belgian Officer Enters Tea House and Eats Pastry, Placing Captured German Helmet on a Chair

LONDON, Dec. 26.— For the first time in their lives many thousands of Londoners are seeing the French military officer. He is to be met with everywhere. As he strides down the Strand, smoking the inevitable cigarette, looking a little worn and slightly dusty, he brings a breath of the Continent to these grey streets and provides just that dash of colour which, as the poets say, is so conspicuously absent from the drab workaday life.

London is cosmopolitan, it is true. The turbaned men from Asia jostles the Chinaman in the streets, but no mingling of nationalities and no number of ordinary tourists could give that continental atmosphere to the streets imparted by the gay French officer.

If you are sitting at your cafe in Paris, sipping the absinthe of youth, the officer strolling by under the trees, brave in his blue jacket, his maroon coloured breeches and his cap curiously crushed toward the brim, attracts your attention and strikes you as symbolising the romantic soul of a nation which, having lost the Latin Quarter of Henry Murger, is not bankrupt in the picturesque.

The British officer looks practical; the German officer looks incurably romantic. And here they are in London to-day, French and Belgian soldiers, colouring the black London crowd by their strange uniforms, taking an interest in everything English and generally making the best of circumstances which have spelled a temporary exile from their own land.

It is good to see that the English people deliciously insular and suspicious of anything strange and foreign have taken these men to their hearts.

A charming incident was witnessed regularly recently by the diners in a well known London restaurant. Every evening a Belgian officer, a grizzled man of middle age, would limp into the dining room and, when on the threshold, would draw himself stiffly up, click his heels together and give a military salute.

[illegible] recognizing the compliment, were in doubt how to receive it. The problem was solved by two young men in khaki, who rose quickly and saluted. The next time the old warrior paid his respects to the gathering there was no quick witted response, but there was no lack of smiles, sympathetic and appreciative.

The other day a Belgian officer walked into a popular tea house. He was carrying a Gladstone bag; he had obviously just landed in England. He took something which was linked to his arm and placed it carefully on a chair. It was a German helmet.

Then he composed himself to eat pastry and drink tea. All around fashionable women threw back their thick black furs, drew off their scented gloves and talked of the thousand things women talk about at tea. Between the tables neat waitresses carried sugared cakes, and in the midst of it all sat this strange, war stained man with a grim relic beside him.

Yet people are always crying out for "romance," for the vigorous days of the Lion Heart, while all the time deeds as noble and as dreadful as any the Middle Ages saw are being done at these very doors; the spirit of the Crusades is alive to-day, and among the many strange people which the war is sending to these shores few are stranger to the Londoner than the gens de guerre who placed his fooman's helmet upon the chair of a London tea shop.

Population in Peterboro' County Increased By 112

Twenty-two Counties in Ontario Show Signs of Depopulation—Peterborough County is Among Those That Can Claim a Place in the Progressive Side of the Column

The statistics of population gathered by the Ontario Department of Agriculture from the returns of municipal assessors have been proved by the Dominion census a trustworthy source of information. They showed, according to an analysis made some time ago, that from 1911 to 1913 the rural or township population of Old Ontario decreased in forty counties 30,185 and increased in five counties 3,046. There was a net loss in two years of 27,139.

The tide seems to have turned. Comparing the statistics of township population in these counties taken from the assessment reports of last spring, with the statistics of 1913, it appears that only twenty-two counties show the following losses:

Bruce	966
Dufferin	188
Dundas	148
Durham	505
Elgin	113
Grenville	204
Grey	569
Hastings	82
Huron	499
Lambton	598
Lanark	280
Leeds	97
Lennox and Addington	186
Manitoulin	788
Muskoka	113
Norfolk	45
Northumberland	283
Peel	314
Perth	33
Prescott	485
Prince Edward	140
Stormont	25
Total	5,981

The following counties show gains:

Algoma	197
Brant	658
Carleton	2,445
Essex	349
Frontenac	650
Glengarry	289
Haldimand	199
Halton	389
Kent	30
Lincoln	266
Middlesex	189
Ontario	589
Oxford	289
Parry Sound	76
Peterborough	112
Renfrew	187
Russell	1,289
Simcoe	284
Victoria	30
Waterloo	285
Welland	1,079
Wellington	283
Wentworth	1,250
Total	12,059

The township population, therefore, increased during the year 1913-14 by 6,068. The condition of the farm population is, however, not so favourable. An increase in Ontario County is due to the inclusion of the inmates of the asylum in East Whitby. The gains in Carleton, Brant, Middlesex, Wentworth and York are due almost entirely to urban overflow. The gains in Lincoln and Welland are due to the new Welland Canal. There is probably an error in the figures for Russell, as there is in those for Durham, which ascribe a loss of nearly five hundred to the township of Hope.

The change in the movement of the farm population, which is clear in the figures for the counties removed from public works and urban overflow is due to the contraction of credit in the early fall of 1913. It proves that the main motive of rural depopulation was the pursuit of gain. Although we are sure that the assessment reports for 1915 and succeeding years will show an increase of the farm population, we are not hopeful that the cult which makes its living by exhortation will become less zealous or turn as it ought to the promotion of measure to increase the profit of farm industry

GIRLS! STOP WASHING THE HAIR WITH SOAP

Soap dries your scalp, causing dandruff, then hair falls out.

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

TURKS NOT BEATEN YET

Turkish Remnant Has Rallied and is Fighting Hard

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The fighting in the Caucasus, according to Petrograd despatches, reveals surprising tenacity on the part of the Turkish remnant, which has rallied and faced round, keeping up a vigorous defence for nearly a week, aided by reinforcements from the garrison of Erzerum.

The Turkish rearguard is holding on obstinately on the western bank of the River Olti, 35 miles west of Kars. The Russians report the capture of the 32nd Regiment of Infantry, including 11 officers, 3 surgeons and 1,500 men, and the partial destruction of the 52nd Regiment. Of the latter 250 men and one officer are reported captured. The Russians also stormed a height occupied by the enemy and captured a quantity of artillery and supplies.

India is Unmoved

Action of Young Turks Has Not Received Moslems

DELHI, India, Jan. 14.—The viceregal council opened yesterday. The viceroy, Baron Hardinge, in a speech before the council, disclosed the number of troops which India has contributed to the war, which, he said, amounted to 200,000 men. These soldiers are distributed in France, Egypt, East Africa and along the Persian Gulf.

Lord Hardinge at the outset, expressed regret at the participation of Turkey in the European conflict as an ally of Germany, and reviewed the events leading up to that event. His Excellency proceeded:

"I am well aware that many of the leading Moslems of India have done their duty to the utmost to avert war; but the authorities at Constantinople turned a deaf ear to all pleas. It is a striking fact that while thousands of Moslems are now fighting in the ranks of the British, French and Russian armies, not a single Moslem exists in the German ranks. It is no exaggeration to say that Enver Pasha's military clique, under Germany's compulsion, betrayed the interests of Islam, and that the Turkish Government in submitting to it has abdicated its sovereignty, and Turkey must now face the consequences of those actions. But however the tide of events may shape, there can be no doubt that the holy places shall remain inviolate, and that Islam will still be one of the great world forces.

"From the moment that the intervention of Turkey appeared probable, it was clear that amongst the Moslems of India there would be a natural sentiment of sympathy with a great Mohammedan power. But when the character and motives of this war became fully known and realised by the Moslems of India, any such sentiment was absolutely swept aside by their feelings of unswerving loyalty to the King-Emperor and to the Empire whose cause they recognized to be that of freedom, honor and justice."

Turks Bombarded Own Troops.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 14.—A curious incident concerning the proceedings of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea has been reported. It seems that the Turkish cruiser Breslau, by mistake, bombarded certain positions held by Turkish troops near Liman, which is to the north of Hopa. Following this bombardment our troops occupied without hindrance the positions from which Turkish soldiers had been driven by the fire of their own cruiser.

Von Hindenburg To Go To West.

LONDON, Jan. 14—An Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says that travelers arriving there from Germany report that in response to a popular demand Field Marshal von Hindenburg, commander of the German campaign against Russia and the popular hero of Germany, is likely to be transferred to the western front in the spring.

BERCHTOLD PUT OUT.

Hungarian Takes Place of Austrian Foreign Minister.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Count Leopold von Berchtold, Austrian Foreign Minister, has resigned, and his resignation has been accepted, according to The Vienna Fremdenblatt. Count von Berchtold will be succeeded by Baron Stephen Burian von Rajecz, Minister of the Royal Court in the Hungarian Cabinet.

It is stated that he had long desired to retire for "impetrant personal reasons."

As Austrian Foreign Minister Count von Berchtold was largely responsible for formulating the policy which resulted in the declaration of war on Servia. The appointment of a Hungarian to succeed him is believed to indicate that henceforth Hungary will assume a more prominent place in shaping the policy of the dual monarchy.

The announcement has caused a sensation in diplomatic circles in Europe.

Hungary, while at one with Austria in regard to the principle of the war, has shown dissatisfaction with the manner in which it has been prosecuted.

Baron Burian was at one time Austro-Hungarian Minister of Finance, and latterly he has been Hungarian Minister to the Royal Court — evidence that he is in royal favor.

A Berlin despatch comments that the "change came unexpectedly."

IN STATE OF SIEGE.

Hamburg, Lubeck and Cuxhaven Evidently Fear Trouble.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 14.—Hamburg, Lubeck and Cuxhaven have been declared in a state of siege. No explanation is offered for such a course, but it is supposed to be a precautionary measure against the possibility of British attack.

Submarines Were Not Sunk.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The port authorities deny the report current here to-day that two German submarines were fired upon and sunk by the coast batteries off Dover.

Rumors current yesterday, as they have been on several previous occasions, that German submarines had made an attack on Dover and that two of them were sunk. The authorities deny that any submarines have been sunk, but give no explanation of the firing of the guns of the forts which occurred late Tuesday night.

THE BEST THING FOR DYSPEPSIA

WHY PEPSIN, PANCREATIN, ETC., SO FREQUENTLY FAIL.

An international specialist whose articles on stomach trouble have been printed in nearly every language, recently stated that to treat the average case of stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia, etc., by doctoring the stomach, killing the pain with opiates, or by the use of artificial aids to digestion such as pepsin and pancreatin, was just as foolish and useless as to attempt to put out a fire by throwing water on the smoke, instead of the fire. He claims, and facts seem to justify his claim, that nearly nine-tenths of all stomach trouble is due to acidity and food fermentation; and that the only way in which to secure permanent relief is to get rid of the cause, i.e., to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation. For this purpose he strongly recommends the plan now generally adopted throughout Europe of taking a teaspoonful of ordinary bisurated magnesia in a little water immediately after eating or whenever pain is felt. This immediately neutralizes the acid, stops the fermentation and permits the stomach to do its work in a normal manner and thus by removing the cause, enables nature to quickly restore the inflamed stomach lining to a perfectly healthy natural condition. For the convenience of travellers it may be noted that most druggists are now able to supply bisurated magnesia in 5 grain tablets, 2 or 3 of which will almost instantly relieve the most violent attacks of indigestion.

PETERBORO' RETAILERS REPORT AN INCREASE IN NUMBER OF HOUSEHOLD COMMODITIES

Among Those Might Be Mentioned Rolled Oats, a Few Lines of Canned Goods, Biscuits and Washboards--Plug Tobacco Will Be Reduced in Size.

As announced in yesterday's Examiner, the price of flour in Peterborough was raised forty cents a barrel, thanks to the activity of the bull operators on the Chicago wheat market and the disconcerting rumours that are emanating from various points of the universe. On top of this comes the report that rolled oats have suffered an increase in price to the extent of five cents per five pound package. A package of this size retailed at twenty-five cents until a few days ago. When the concern that manufactures this particular commodity announced a rise in the wholesale price, the retailers found it necessary to raise the retail price to thirty cents.

A German Product.

Canary seed is said to be a product of Germany. If so it is about the only thing to be found in a grocery store that bears that distinction. The retail price has increased from ten to fifteen cents a package. If German grown seed is necessary for the sustenance of canaries, better do away with the latter. Of two evils choose the least.

Canned Beans.

The succulent possibilities of the toothsome beans will be sharpened by the fact that it has increased in price. Ten cents has been added to the wholesale price of a dozen cans. This increase will be borne by the retailers, however, so there will be no excuse to the consumer. They might undertake to furnish a formula for finding the pork in so-called pork and beans. This would create a demand and solve a vexatious question.

Plugs Will be Smaller.

In an attempt to keep the retail price of plug tobacco down to the standard price of ten cents a plug, a number of the manufacturers have decided to lessen the size of the plugs. Instead of putting up nine plugs to the pound they will make ten plugs equal a pound. This means that each plug of tobacco will suffer a depreciation of one-tenth of a pound.

Miscellaneous Increases.

Washboards have increased in price from twenty-five cents to thirty cents each. The reason for this is not stated.

A number of local merchants, among whom might be named Mr. James Sutherland, of 333 George Street, have experienced difficulty in securing a supply of woollen socks. The manufacturers are willing to supply quantities of lumbermen's socks, but will not fill orders for medium weight socks. It is evident that the available supply is being conserved for the use of the militia department.

Other commodities that have increased in price during the past few days, are biscuits, sardines, sugar and candies, to a perceptible extent.

There is also a prospect of an increase in the price of tea.

Inaugural Meeting Of Lakefield Council

Following are the minutes of the first meeting for 1915 of the Lakefield Council held in the Town Hall, Monday, Jan 11th, 1915:

There were present, H. G. Fitzgerald, Esq., Reeve, and Councillors Charlton, Griffin, Kennedy and Madill.

The Village Clerk's report as to the result of the election, was received, also he certified that all had taken the required declaration of office.

The minutes of the statutory meeting of 15th December, 1914, were read and approved.

The following committees were appointed:

Finance committee — Councillors Kennedy and Madill,

Street and Bridge committee—Councillors Charlton and Griffin.

Property committee — The Whole Council.

Charity committee — Councillors Charlton and Griffin.

Communications from the Municipal World Limited, were read, asking for renewal of subscriptions.

Moved by Coun. Madill, seconded by Coun. Kennedy, that the clerk be authorized to order six copies of the 'Municipal World' and that an order be drawn on the treasurer for the same.—Carried.

Mr. Balsdon on behalf of the band, addressed the Council and asked for the use of the Town Hall for band practice on Tuesday evenings. The request was granted.

Mr. Jos. Lemay appeared on behalf of Mr. E. Casson and wished to sell the stone in his building, which was burned. Mr. Lemay also registered an objection to the boys sleigh-riding on the sidewalks.

The matter of the purchase of the stone was referred to the Property committee and the Chief of Police was asked to look after the people sleighriding on the sidewalks.

The Finance committee presented a report recommending the payment of the following accounts:

PRESENTATION MADE TO MRS. (REV.) CLARRY

Interesting Event at the Annual Meeting of the Treasure Seekers' Bible Class of St. James' Church

OFFICERS ELECTED

The Treasure Seekers, Adult Bible Class of St. James' Sunday school, held their annual meeting on Tuesday night, Jan. 12th, 1915, for general business, election of officers and social evening. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and showed that the class were in a flourishing condition, with a membership of 75 names on the roll.

A communication was received and read from the Ontario Sunday School Association, inviting delegates to the Adult Bible Classes' convention being held in Toronto on January 29th and 30th, 1915. Hon. President Mr. Charles Kitney and President Mr. Andrew Kent were unanimously elected to be the delegates from this class.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was as follows:

Hon President—Mr. Charles Kitney.
President—Mr. Andrew Kent.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. Harry C. Robinson.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Levi Emery.
Teacher—Mrs. (Rev.) J. N. Clarry.
AAst. Teacher—Mr. Sargent.
Secretary—Mr. C. J. Hicks, 499 Albert Street.
Asst.-Sec.—Mr. John Fairbrother.
Treasurer—Mr. John Arthur.
Auditors—Mr. H. C. Robinson and Mr. J. O. Fife.
Librarians— Mrs. Jas. Palmer and Mrs. F. Rooke.
Ushers— Mrs. J. G. Plunkett and Mrs. E. Porter.
Ushers—Mr. R. J. Bannon and Mr. J. Manly.

Committees.

Sick Com.—Mrs. Charles McIntyre (convener), Mrs. Alex. Fife, Mrs. Jas. Ruth, Mrs. E. Porter, Mrs. Geo. Rawlings, Mrs. Rehill, Mr. H. C. Robinson, Mr. John Arthurs.

Lookout Com.—The Whole Class.

Social Com.—Mrs. A. Wilson (convener), Mrs. Jas. Rahmey, Mrs. A. McIntyre, Mrs. J. Bannon, Mrs. S. Sherwood, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. J. Manly, Mrs. J. Plunkett.

Mothers' Com. — Mrs. C. J. Hicks (convener), Mrs. J. Plunkett, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. A. Sherwood, Mrs. Rose Payne, Mrs. J. Fairbrother, Mrs. Thornbeck.

The business part done, a very pleasing event then took place, when the teacher, Mrs. (Rev.) J. N. Clarry, was asked to step forward. The second vice-president, Mrs. T. Emery then read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Clarry,—We the members of the Treasure Seekers' Bible class have felt for some time that we would like in some way to convey to you some expression of our united love; you have made our lessons pleasant and profitable and taught us by example as well as precept, lessons which we shall never forget. We shall never forget the pleasant social hours spent together as class and teacher.

We will always look back with real enjoyment whenever memory recalls these hours, and our hearts will warm toward you as they do to-day. It is with great pleasure that we offer to you this purse, asking you to make your own selection of whatever you would like best.

(Hon. President Mr. Charles Kitney with a few kind and loving words then presented Mrs. Clarry with a purse of gold.)

It is but a poor symbol of our feelings, but we know that you will receive it kindly as a slight token of the attachment we each hold in our hearts for you. May you always be as happy as you have tried to make the class. We thank you for all the kind endeavours and pray God's richest blessings may always rest on you and your family, and following your example may we all strive to be faithful and each make our lives a success and be admitted to a higher school in the life to come.

Signed on behalf of the class.

Mr. C. Kitney.
Mr. A. Kent.
Mrs. L. Emery.
Mrs. E. Palmer.

Mrs. Clarry was taken wholly by surprise and after recovering herself thanked the class for their kindness and thoughtfulness towards her and hers.

After a few words by the chairman, Sunday School Superintendent Mr. A. E. Prest and Rev. Mr. J. N. Clarry, the class then adjourned to the basement of the Sunday school, where a very enjoyable social time, with refreshments, was spent. The class then dispersed to their various homes with feelings which will stay with them for many a day.

ALIENS JOIN CANADIAN CORPS

Belgians, Russians and Hollanders Take Part in Rush at London, Ont.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 13.—To-day's recruiting at all points in the district smashed all previous records. Among the volunteers were several Russian, Belgians and Hollanders. A feature is the number of Irishmen and Scotchmen who are joining. The volunteers are all fine specimens and many of them reservists. Two of the Belgians, who walked 60 miles soundly clad, had only what food they could carry in their pockets.

BOY SCOUT WILL MEET

All members of the Junior Troop Boy Scouts will meet on Friday, Jan. 15, at 7.30 p.m. in their new quarters, Labour Hall, George Street.

This is an important meeting, so all are asked to attend. Officers for the patrol will be selected also. There will be no disbanding of the Troop.

American Flags Torn, as Germans Wreck Chateau

French Home of United States Citizen and Bedridden Wife Pillaged and Mined at Rosoy-en-Multein, Despite the Stars and Stripes.

(Special Dispatch.)

London, Jan. [illegible]

The Daily Telegraph publishes the following:—

We have received from an American gentleman resident in France an extraordinary account of the barbarous conduct of German troops in the Yonne area. Mr. [illegible] at which he resided. The Huns of the military in occupation of the district are found there in possession of the chateau, and it is situated at Rosoy-en-Multein, about 12 miles from Sens, twenty-five miles from Montereau, and a similar distance from Coulommiers, and thirty-eight miles from Paris. The writer says:—

"The Huns arrived at the chateau on Wednesday, September 2, and out of respect for the three American flags conspicuously displayed, the officers did not enter the chateau, but slept in the chauffeurs' bedrooms, in the outbuildings, in the park, and elsewhere. The English officers, being greatly fatigued, asked our head gardener if it was possible to have a bottle of good wine. The gardener answered that the American proprietor had the key to the wine cellar, but that he had the key of the [illegible] wine, which he offered [illegible]. It was accepted, and the officers were quite satisfied.

"The next day, September 3, as the Germans were approaching in great numbers, the English left, without showing any disagreeable behaviour to our property. The Mayor of Rosoy, the town policeman and myself advised the remaining individuals not to go [illegible] to Rosoy that the Germans arrived on the 3d in great numbers and occupied our chateau, as well as those of the friends and tenants from that date to the 12th, when they were pushed back toward Montereau half Meaux by the Allies. They also installed that the three American flags would have downfor the Germans on arrival, large one from the front of the chateau and two smaller ones from the two entrances.

Furniture and Rugs Complete.

"You would ask describe the condition inside the chateau, of the lawns, the alleys and the wooded part after the Germans had left. In fact, of the many thousands of francs worth of personal property there is left [illegible] left of value to pay translation to Paris and confirmation de vols. All the armchairs, sideboards, virtuel, writing desks, [illegible] and clocks were opened by bayonets or heavy tools and all broken to many pieces [illegible]. All drawers taken from them and either broken, torn up, destroyed or taken away. All objets d'art of value were taken away.

"All genuine silver, such as tea and coffee services, dining room service, gold and silver dressing toilettes, silver mirrors, silver candlesticks, were taken away. All that contained were a gold glove stretcher, a silver nail brush cover (fastened out and destroyed) until a candlestick broken of three pieces and some plated silver. All table and other glassware and most of the porcelain table service, all of a large [illegible] plate, perfumeries, &c., were taken or smashed into small bits. All chinese [illegible] tea curtains, lace pillow cases and valuable pieces of [illegible] linen, as well as household linen of every sort, were used for the wounded, to wrap around the dead before burying, torn up or taken away.

"Fourteen bedrooms in the chateau and [illegible] were furnished complete. Not one blanket, sheet, pillow case or eiderdown covering, American or foreign, remains. All curtains were pulled down and either with them and with [illegible] torn up, destroyed or used for covering the wounded. All bed [illegible] mattresses, palliasses, springs and furniture were soaked with blood, medicine or filth, &c. . . . No clothing, shoes or hats were left of over $20 value belonging to my wife, myself or my eight servants. Some dresses of my wife were slashed with knives and left hanging in the armoires. Shoes were taken, or what were left and pieces cut out or stamped out in them across the top with.

Wines Cellar Emptied.

"Out of over a thousand bottles of wines, including [illegible], 1881, 1889, 1893-1895-1898 champagnes, some in magnums and jeroboams (containing four quarts), 1892, 1899 port, very old red, white and Rhine wines, [illegible] old cognac, liqueurs, whiskey, [illegible] &c., not one bottle remains. Only broken and empty bottles were found strewn all over the chateau and park.

"The chateau and grounds were strewn with indescribable filth. Plants of rare, ancient Italian and Spanish lace were torn up and put to the lowest uses or taken away. All household articles were broken, destroyed around, or carried away. Straw and hay were used for the many hundred soldiers sleeping on the lawns, besides for the wounded in the house. The stone walls are torn down or destroyed all around the chateau and park. In about twenty large places walls were pulled down to the ground for the soldiers to go in through.

"The three kitchen gardens of over three acres were partially destroyed, and part of the high wall torn down. All vegetables, American and foreign, from the three cultivated acres were taken or destroyed. Of the thousands of rare fruits not one remains.

"Many German dead were buried on the lawn near the billiard room, and a German officer was buried a few yards apart, with a cross placed over his grave. Other Germans were buried in the chicken run. Of all our pries hens and cocks, numbering about 150, not one was left. All were either eaten or taken away. Dead horses were buried on the lawn directly in front of the house and beside the pond, and many dead horses lay all around the place. All water was run off from the pond and every fish killed. All vegetation, including rare red and blue pond lilies, was destroyed.

"The pond in the river, which carries water to the chateau for the three bathrooms, toilets, gardens, [illegible], &c., was [illegible] and thrown [illegible] flowers, including thousands of rare roses in blooms, were all destroyed. The three septique and pump at the chateau were broken. Liquors, &c., were poured over the cloth of the billiard table.

Library to Turn Up.

"All our library of American, English and French books, hundreds of photographs, all correspondence, papers, bills, &c., were torn up or scattered all over the place. Mirrors were broken all over the chateau. German names were written on doors; armoire doors or panels were broken up and used for kindling wood, &c. Many cords of wood and much coal were burned by them in the chateau.

"Candelabra, ancient plates, [illegible] armor, heads of game, service guns, ancient fifteenth and sixteenth century powder, old brasses, ancient firearms (escopettes), an ancient piece of tapestry, all paintings and engravings, were destroyed or taken away. All ancient rugs were carried off. Only the ruined carpets and a few cheap rugs were left. In fact, the ruin is complete, and our American flags are attached to the front of the chateau and the other two to the two entrances, instead of being respected by the German officers and the army whose country is today represented by our Ambassador in Berlin, were pulled down from the home of a peaceful American citizen living with his paralyzed and bed-ridden wife in France. Their home and property are totally destroyed. All that the Germans left behind as a payment for their invasion of an American's home is one German plate, two German rifles and one half of a German book."

Bitter Newspaper War in England; Lord Northcliffe Versus Mr. Gardiner

(Special Dispatch.)

London, Jan. [illegible]

Fleet Street is at present identified with the most bitter journalistic controversy ever waged in the British press. Lord Northcliffe, directing spirit of the Times, the Daily Mail and other publications, on one side, and Mr. Alfred G. Gardiner, editor of the Daily News, one the other, have locked horns before the public in a merciless duel, which will probably not end until one or the other can no longer stand the shocks of public criticism and personal abuse or satisfactorily reply to the open charges. It is a fight to a finish.

It started over sarcastic criticisms of the peace prophecies of the Daily News before the war contained in a six-penny pamphlet, "Scaremongerings of the Daily Mail," which was inspired by Lord Northcliffe and sold by street fakers in various parts of the city. Fleet Street was only mildly interested in it, for it was obviously a money making scheme and an advertisement, comprising mostly carefully selected quotations from the Daily Mail tending to show that this newspaper had been the true prophet of war with Germany. But it likewise contained selected quotations from the Daily News and other liberal newspapers tending to show that they had been the false prophets of peace. The first direct and stinging attacks on the Daily News placed that newspaper in the position of having worked for "peace at any price" and of having endeavored to uphold the cause of "horrible commercialism" above military considerations.

Selecting Mr. George Cadbury as the chief object of its attack, the Northcliffe pamphlet succeeded to its own satisfaction in covering the Daily News with odium and in covering the Daily Mail with a cloak of self-glorification.

"We warned against war with Germany, we kept the war spectre constantly before the public and now the war is here. We can justly congratulate ourselves—we were right!" This in substance was the challenge issued by the Daily Mail. The first round was easily Lord Northcliffe's with the champions of the Daily News and liberal papers held up to public scorn and apparently without defense.

But the defence came in the second round when Mr. Gardiner took up the gauntlet flung down by Lord Northcliffe, and in an open letter published in the Daily News he speedily put matters in another light.

"Your claim to be the true prophet of the war does not call for dispute," he said. "It has always been your part to prophesy war and cultivate hate."

A [illegible]

Mr. Gardiner then proceeded to show by the Daily Mail's own records that Lord Northcliffe's war prophecies and war incitations were by no means confined to Germany, but that he had preached war against the Boers, war against France, war against Russia, war against the British government itself.

"When you preached war against the Boers," said Mr. Gardiner, "it was not that you hated the Boers or loved England; it was only that you understood how to sell your papers. When you preached war against France, told her that she would cede to Germany if she did not, it was not that you had any rooted antagonism to France, but that you knew how to exploit the sentimentary passions of the British mob. When you called for retribution against Russia over the North Sea incident it was not that you did not know that there had been a mistake, but that you knew that a cry for war was a good newspaper thrill. When last spring you set all your papers from the Times downwards prophesying 'civil war' and sent to Ulster to organize your brigade of war correspondents and triumphantly announced that 'the storm was about to begin,' it was not that you cared for Unionism or hated Home Rule. You cared for neither and have acquitted with both. It was only that you thought that Parliament was going to be beaten and that you would be the prophet of red ruin and the [illegible] of hate. Even your love of [illegible] is meaningless as your [illegible]. When you covered the Kaiser with adulation, called him 'Our Friend in Windsor,' and pleaded for an alliance with Germany it was only to make your [illegible] war with France more effective. [illegible] you have been the inventor of journalism for twenty years—German ever ready to set the world in a blaze to make a newspaper placard.

"Do you say that this is malice dictated by personal feeling? You are mistaken! I am conscious of no feeling for you except contempt. And I think a little pity, for [illegible] a big boy you're in a think of pity. [illegible] the late Lord Salisbury said [illegible] about you long ago. The Daily Mail, he said, was eminent by office boys and though you have sold to the Times space, [illegible] have only succeeded in [illegible] it with the odours of the office boy's mind. For just as it was the Daily Mail which proclaimed the massacre of Peking so it was the Times that proclaimed the rout of the British army.

Worked for Peace.

"But you say that we prophesied peace. Yes, we not only prophesied peace, but we worked for peace just as you prophesied war and worked for war. We lost and you won. And you rejoice in a victory that has made Europe a shambles. [illegible] a matter for [illegible]? A million men have died on the battle fields of Europe already and a million more will [illegible] millions of lives are being [illegible] millions of [illegible] murdered by death and suffering. Is it really a subject for a newspaper advertisement [illegible]?

The effect of Mr. Gardiner's letter can readily be imagined. Lord Northcliffe at once saw the necessity of firing back and regaining lost ground. The question was whether it would be better for Lord Northcliffe to reply personally or to have some champion enter the ring for the third round and endeavor to break down Mr. Gardiner's merciless onslaughts. Mr. Robert Blatchford, the socialist, finally appeared in the arena.

The Daily News, he said, suffered neurasthenia at the hysterics of "scaremongering." Having, of course, the impression that this explained the attacks or counter attacks. Mr. Blatchford accused the Daily News of doubling the [illegible] and made his best parry when he quoted the Daily News on the eve of the war as saying:—

"If we remained neutral we should be, from the commercial point of view, in precisely the same position as the United States."

"A great gospel!" said Mr. Blatchford, and the effect on the public was particularly striking at this time which naturally [illegible] British citizen before the suggestion of Great Britain having remained neutral. The third round was won by Lord Northcliffe by a narrow margin.

But Mr. Gardiner was quick with his reply, and before many hours he had returned to the charge with more vigor than ever.

Addressing Lord Northcliffe in an open letter he said:—

"Your reply on Saturday to the letter I addressed you ten days ago calls for a final word. I say 'your reply' because although the writer of that reply to Mr. Robert Blatchford you have adopted it as the only answer that you have to offer. The public understands the shrinking modesty that makes you shield yourself behind the scientific socialist whom you employ. You have a past. You shudder lest your name should be associated with your works. You have spent your life [illegible] Mail in a calling of which you be not wish to be reminded. And when you are dragged into the light you ask that Mr. Robert Blatchford shall take the stripes. But the public is not concerned with Mr. Blatchford. It is concerned with you, Lord Northcliffe, the owner and inspirer of the Times, the Daily Mail, the Evening News and a multitude of other organs from Answers to, I think, Comic Cuts. It is you with whom we have our account, and it is you with whom we shall settle.

"You say that I have reported [illegible]. The public will judge. My letter is on record. It has been read by millions and will be read by millions more. It is idiotic [illegible] you to say then the charge is [illegible]. It is to tell the plain facts of your career—which you would have forgotten but which you dare not dispute—as to shame you, then I am guilty.

"You know now as well as I know that your attempt to [illegible] the [illegible] commercial [illegible] has been a disastrous failure. You would recall your scrapbook if it were possible. You know that it has struck a discordant [illegible] note at a time when the public mind is stirred to its depths by issues that have blotted out all the petty things of life."

So far there is no indication that Lord Northcliffe will return to his defence.

AFTER THE CONDORS' FEAST

A Vision of Peace.

[By George Willard Beale.]

WITH downward sweep, from weeping skies
To battle grounds of woe,
The condors come with ruthless cries,
Their hungry eyes agleg;
Upon each ghastly, gore stained pate
There rests a gilded crown of state.

A helmet gleams upon the plain,
A shattered blade, a shield;
The broken skull of some man slain
Grins from the crimson field,
And in among the sand swept stones,
By buzzards gnawed, a few white bones.

The loathsome group of condors black
Surveys the grewsome scene;
Each preens his glistening, feathered back
And picks his talons clean;
For they have gorged themselves—the broth
Of each bespeaks the feast of death.

The orphaned crib, the empty chair,
The listening ear, the start,
The broken heart, the vacant stare—
All tell the hopeless part
That woman plays in this wild game,
That monarchs might have wealth and fame.

A pall of purple smoke enshrouds
A pyre of tumbled thrones,
And from the embers 'neath the clouds
The stench of burning bones;
For fiery tongues do not reveal
From death beneath the bloody seal.

But when upon the tear drenched sod
The sun shall shine again,
The world will see the hand of God
In mounds of slaughtered men,
And from the ashes of the pyre
Will blaze a new and glorious fire.
The light of which shall set men free;
Earth's will have liberty!

Germany Is Short of Ammunition and Copper Famine Is Threatened

Shop Fronts, Staircases, Gas Brackets, Electric Light Fittings and Everything Else Containing the Metal Are Seized to Provide Krupp Works with Material for Army in Field.

(Special Dispatch.)

London, Jan. [illegible]

If any proof were needed of the straits in which the German army finds itself in regard to guns and ammunition, it is furnished by a copy of the confidential instructions issued by the German War Office about two months ago and which has fallen into the hands of the French Secret Service.

Starting off with the damaging admission that "even if working night and day, 24 full pressure German industry cannot continue to keep up an inexhaustible supply of ammunition," this document proceeds to lay down, from detailed information regarding the use of the artillery in order to obtain the maximum of results with the minimum expenditure of ammunition.

These instructions begin by stating that it is absolutely necessary to economize ammunition, consequently there is [illegible] more indeterminate shell fire and [illegible] bombardments are also to cease, unless it is known for a fact that they have got a proper range and are causing real damage. The issue of these instructions fully explains the great activity which has come over German circles in the last week or so.

The shortage is regarded from the point of view, for nothing risen [illegible] with unarmed workmen [illegible] of the revolutions would [illegible] the German [illegible] would [illegible] at least [illegible] ammunition wagons which were lying neglected and rusted, in a field near Metz.

A trustworthy Swiss, just over from Berlin, says that shop fronts, staircases, gas brackets, electric light fittings, [illegible] in short, everything that may contain any copper, are being pulled to pieces all over the country in order to provide the Krupps with the precious metal. Notwithstanding, copper is daily becoming scarcer, and the authorities are at their wits' end to know how to deal further with the problem.

While England has been freely criticised in America for keeping about a watchful eye on copper exports, and while Germans would have it believed that the British navy's grip of the cards entirely debars them at all, there is sufficient evidence that the copper famine in Germany is growing a very big [illegible] in the side of the German Government.

An informant who has just arrived from Alsace says that the authorities are in despair throughout the province at their inability to replenish their supplies of raw material of every description. The cloth for German uniforms ran out long ago and a kind of substitute is now being used. Phosphatic steels were from the first impressed by the War Office and can no longer be turned out to keep pace with the [illegible] wear they undergo. It is the same with automobiles. Although German agents are scouring all Italy with the object of buying up every car they can get, [illegible] of price. Large orders for new [illegible] have been placed with [illegible]

Holland Paying Heavy Price for Neutrality

Dutch, While Determined to Avoid War, Are Under Great Financial Burden Through Mobilization—Feeding Belgian Refugees a Big Drain on Resources.

(Special Dispatch.)

Amsterdam, Jan. [illegible]

One cannot help but admire the Dutch without realizing that their attitude as neutrals is rigidly correct. Neutrality has been described as neither offence nor defence, but sitting on the fence. The Dutch government has from the beginning of the war acted [illegible] to this ideal, and [illegible] "sitting on the fence." So far from the [illegible] a little of Napoleon, seems visibly that it occupies and will continue to occupy a position in which the consideration of purely Dutch interests will be its paramount concern.

Holland is free to carry on trade with either of the Allies or with Germany without any infringement of her neutrality. She resents keenly the suggestions which have appeared in some English papers that she is showing special favors toward Germany, and that she is importing large quantities of [illegible] from Great Britain and other countries, including her own East Indian colonies, for the sole purpose of selling them again to the Germans. She maintains that her own needs in view of the uncertainty of the duration of the war are the sole [illegible] of her policy.

And Holland—a small State like Belgium [illegible] not at war, is suffering from the war. She has had to mobilize her forces at a cost of almost [illegible] per day over and above her normal expenditure. This expenditure, instead of diminishing, is likely to increase, and while the resources of the Netherlands are in a sound and healthy condition, they are not in a position to bear for a prolonged period such a strain as is now put upon them.

Already the question of future ways and means is engaging the anxious attention of the authorities at The Hague. The resources of Holland, too, are suffering severely. From a population only slightly in excess of 5,000,000 the mobilization of the army and navy has withdrawn 250,000 men. This, of itself, means a substantial reduction of available industrial labor, and, in addition, there is the depression arising from the inevitable dislocation of a world's war.

Industry Suffers Severely.

The busy port of Rotterdam is but a shadow of its former self, and nearly every class of industry has been hit more or less severely. As a prominent merchant in Amsterdam remarked, "You may begin with [illegible] and work down the table to picture postcards. Every industry is affected. Diamond cutting is one of the great industries of Amsterdam. It is the centre of the diamond trade. Nobody is buying diamonds just now, and our diamond factories are closed down. Antwerp, the biggest of them all, has been turned into a home for Belgian refugees."

And these "Belgian refugees" mean a great deal to Holland. She is paying for mobilization in order to safeguard her neutrality almost as much as if she were at war; she is losing on her industrial resources and her overseas trade, and is facing, also for many months to come, consumption, and on top of all this in a noble and generous spirit of humanity she has shouldered cheerfully the burden of sheltering and feeding the hundreds and thousands who have been driven from the neighboring territory of Belgium. Just after Antwerp fell nearly one million Belgian refugees found a home and a welcome in Holland. The number now has been reduced to about three hundred and fifty thousand. Holland is providing these unfortunate victims of war with food and shelter at her own expense. She has refused financial assistance from England, for the Dutch are a proud people as well as a generous people. The wife says that Holland is doing all this is prima facie evidence that the sympathies of her population are not on the side of the "bully" which is made in Germany.

Indeed, there is no question that Holland, while not at war, is paying a heavy price for the maintenance of her neutrality. It is true that Holland is armed to the teeth and ready to bathe into the fray, but she will not be tempted to break her neutrality unless it is [illegible] by some deliberately overt act on the part of one or another of the belligerents. The official attitude of the Netherlands admits of no ambiguity.

People Largely Anti-German.

With regard to the feelings of the Dutch people, it would be a fair summing up to say that eighty per cent of them are anti-German. They put not their trust in German professions of friendship. They are profoundly suspicious of Prussian military intentions, and the triumph of which the mission to which Holland, if Germany were successful in this war, might fall a victim. The Dutch are an intensely patriotic people to the core, and would fight to the last ditch to maintain the integrity of their country and their own independence. They [illegible] to country [illegible] Germany which is ready to [illegible] any [illegible] of their independence. Allied to this, they have a profound sympathy for their Belgian neighbors.

But anti-Germanism does not of necessity mean pro-Anglicism. Many Dutchmen have not yet forgiven England for the South African war, though the average Dutchman recognizes Britain's just predominance at the Board and contrasts it favorably with what would happen in similar circumstances to a territory conquered by Germany.

While Holland does not want a war at all, it will never be against the Allies that she will "set her face" in the cause of Amsterdam Dutchmen did nightly for "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," which they regard as the new British national anthem, and in one of these hotels you can [illegible] cheered by an Austro-Hungarian band.

Lying in Trenches, Shot At by 'Jack Johnsons,' Tries the Nerves

Wounded London Scottish Tells of Famous Charge at Messines, Where Regiment Was Almost Cut to Pieces but Held Position Against Germans.

(Special Dispatch.)

London, Jan. [illegible]

A train-load of wounded men brought from Southampton to London the other day included a dozen members of the London Scottish, whose wounds had sealed afresh fidelity to perfect at their removal from the base hospital to Prince.

A vivid narrative of life at the front all experienced by the London Scottish was gathered from one of the men who had arrived from the district around Ypres.

"It was through it right from Messines," he said, "where our company got it very hot, only some forty-eight answering the roll after we had been relieved. With some nineteen or twenty others I was in an advanced trench, where we lay for some hours under a perfect hail of shells of all sizes and descriptions.

"The din was horrible, to say nothing of the huge showers of earth that covered us when a shell exploded near enough to do.

"Suddenly the shells set fire to a mill on our left and some haystacks [illegible] to add to our danger we had a full moon almost behind our position. Any movement on our part was [illegible] [illegible], and Germans snipers [illegible] aware of that fact.

"About [illegible] I should think it must have been about midnight—we heard that we were going to be attacked. A heavy fusillade of rifle fire was rendered even more deafening by the roar of the big guns. Then slowly, out of nothing, we saw large bodies of men approaching at a steady march. All of us opened fire, supported by those in the advanced trenches on either side of us, but in spite of a ghastliness and deadly fire, the advancing mass rolled on. How long this lasted I don't know, but gradually they were almost up to our trenches, and the order was given to 'charge.'

"At it we went, yelling and screaming our heroest, although most of us were mad right apart from the madness that we had before—lying in the trenches to be shot at by 'Jack Johnsons' and other monsters of that family in the most exhausting and nerve wrecking manner I can.

"Although we re-formed and charged again, some of us three or four times, the available [illegible] of men was almost overwhelming. We were reached, and, our supports coming up in the nick of time, the enemy was held and at last turned back. We had done our bit, and although it cost us dear, [illegible] A, B and F companies, our stand held, and, as you know, we were complimented all around on the work we had done.

A colonel of a regiment next to us said afterward that he would be soon be in command of the London Scottish as of his own shot.

"Perhaps the most weird experience at Messines was the shooting of a would-be spy.

"During the engagement some one, wearing a staff officer's uniform, walked up to Captain ——, and said:—'The battle will cease fire.' Captain —— asked who the officer was, and looking at him noticed some feature about his dress that was not English, and, with a moment's hesitation, shot him through the head. We examined the unpacked staff officer's body, and found that underneath his khaki jacket he had a German officer's uniform.

"Even in the midst of these grim realities one cannot help noticing a touch of comedy. Part of the time we fired with bayonets fixed, and sometimes one would fall off. It was really laughable to see a shell reach over the top of a trench and claw at his bayonet, which he would relax and continue firing as if nothing unusual had happened, although he had been clear of the trench.

"Well, every bullet has its billet, and at last one found its way through my overcoat collar into my back.

"What struck me most in the marvellous way the country there is overrun with German spies. We suspected often that after we had met men, apparently engaged in rural occupations, the German artillery [illegible] found you out. When we were shelled [illegible] were properly [illegible]

THE WORLD OF SPORT

RECORD CROWD WILL SEE PICTON AND PETES BATTLE TOMORROW NIGHT

With Picton taking 200 reserved seats for to-morrow night's intermediate battle at Brock Street Rink, it looks as if a record crowd will be in attendance The "Canners" are confident of repeating their victory over the Petes, while on the other hand, the homesters expect to beat the Petes and tie up the district. Lou Marsh, who refereed the game in Picton, and will handle to-morrow night's struggle, says that it will be a grand game between two fast, clean teams. It will be case of go early and avoid the rush, and the rink will contain one of its old-time crowds when the game gets under way. The Petes are all in good shape with the exception of Maines, who had a toe broken at Belleville. They had a lively practice last night and look fit to go the distance against Walter Knox's Easterners. The game is called for 8.30 o'clock.

Junior City Hockey League Will Likely Be Organized

Efforts are being made to reorganize the Junior City Hockey League for the present year. At a meeting held last night, the President, Mr. M. J. Maher, stated that no action had been taken because it was felt that the boys might find some difficulty in financing their teams. Again, he had considered it best to wait until any other leagues which might be more readily financed, got under way. Then, if there were still players enough for Junior City League purposes the matter might be taken up. A number of the older followers of hockey have expressed their wish to have the younger boys brought out into fast company in order that recruiting amy be carried on for future O.H.A. teams.

The League last year produced the very best results. An extra game was required to settle the championship, and now this year the Junior O.H.A. team is composed largely of boys who played on city league teams. Knapman, Jackson and Smith played with the Y.M.C.A. team, Rose with the Bostons and Legros and O'Connell with the Alerts. If the work of one year were a boost for City League hockey, by all means it should be continued. It must be confessed that some of the players mentioned above were going fast before the City League was formed.

At any rate, there are four teams in prospect with age limit the same as last year. The boys will know by Saturday night what they can do, and if it is decided to proceed with the formation of the league, for there is still plenty of time, it is hoped that those who can help the teams will do so. Home-grown talent is the surest method of producing hockey players, and they have to pass through the kindergarten period first.

THREE GAMES IN THE CHURCH HOCKEY LEAGUE

Murray Street vs. George Street.
St. Andrew's vs. St. Paul's.
St. John's vs. St. Luke's.

Last Thursday evening was the opening of the Senior Church Hockey League, and much to the delight of the teams they were well supported by their churches.

To-night the above teams have been scheduled to play. A large attendance is expected. Come and cheer for your Church team.

Interesting Game In The Junior Church League Last Night

Last night George Street and All Saints' clashed in the first game of the Junior Church League, resulting in a win for George Street by 7 to 1. Rev. Canon Davidson addressed the boys before the game, telling them to play clean hockey and uphold the honour of the churches they represented. Then he faced off the teams, threw in the puck and the Junior Church League was started. Neither team showed much team play, but Rutherford, the goalkeeper, and Helson, figured prominently for George Street, while LeBarr and Taylor were All Saints' best. Roy Smyth refereed satisfactorily. The line-up:

All Saints'		George Street
Catchpole	Goal	W. Rutherford
LeBarr	Right Defence	Baxter
Fanning	Left Defence	Simpson
Taylor	Rover	Helson
Field	Left Wing	Hamilton
Johnston	Right Wing	Graham
Gollop	Centre	F. Rutherford

Charlotte Street and St. John's meet this evening at 7 o'clock.

Old Country Soccer News

Queen's Park, the famous Scottish amateur club, has supplied 71 past and present members to the colours, 25 of whom have played for the club in Scottish League football either this or last season. This is a splendid record, on which club and players are to be congratulated.

A Sad End.

An inquest has been held at Stockton-on-Tees on William Johnson (68), a former holder of the 120 yards World's sprint record, an old Sheffield Handicap winner, and a former well-known football trainer, having trained Tottenham Hotspur when they won the English Cup in 1900. Deceased, who suffered from a weak heart, was found dead by the roadside. A verdict was returned accordingly.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

The sturdy Peterborough lads won handily because they had more experience. Their defence pair, Morrow and Long, were good both ways, and the forwards knew how to do effective business in front of Cobourg's nets. Cobourg had a pretty good defence in Bulger in the nets, and Horen and Thompson, but the forwards, though brilliant individually, for such kindergartens, made a sad mess of combination play around the enemy's citadel. Jackson at centre had a little on Knapman and Richardson on the Petes' forward line, while Clemo and Ewart were Cobourg's best forwards. Peterborough is now right back on even terms with Lindsay and Port Hope, and figures on beating Port Hope in Port Hope and tying up the district.—Lou Marsh in the Toronto Star.

Little Bulger, goalkeeper for Cobourg juniors, looks like a mudturtle standing on its hind legs in the nets. The breast pad comes down to his knees and up to his chin, and he looks as if he might at any moment pull his head down out of sight. He is a handy little goalkeeper and nothing scares him.—Toronto Star.

Manager Meharry of the Peterborough Rink, is preparing for a big night Friday, when Picton and Peterborough intermediates hook up in Peterborough. It is the deciding game of the group as far as Peterborough is concerned, and the house is about sold out now, and Picton and Belleville are sending up an excursion. It should be a tidy battle between two clean-playing, fast teams, and on fast ice there is not much to choose between the two teams. The Peterborough team is playing remarkably clean hockey these days, and up to date no one has accused Clarence Morgan's youngsters of pulling anything raw or vicious. The Peterborough crowd appreciates good, clean hockey and are backing this year's management up in their determination to have clean, fair contests.—Toronto Star.

"We may not win a game this year, but watch our smoke next year," says Jack Hayeks, manager of the Cobourg juniors. He is right. He has a team of 16 and 17-year kids who can skate and stick handle right now, but run as wild as young colts on the ice. They need a lot of drilling.

A very fast and exciting game of hockey was played at Brock Street Rink last night between the Junior Arrows and the Northern Seven, and resulted in a draw for the Arrows, the score being 2 to 1. The game was very fast and the many spectators had some time in keeping their eyes on the puck. Sharpe made some fine stops in the nets for the Arrows, while Helson, Sr., and Sharpe, Jr., did a fine lot of checking for their defence. Vuman filled up their right wing with plenty of wood, Munro was at left with lots of speed. Schweier played the essential part for the winners as rover, while Helson, Jr., flew along at centre.

Arrow line-up:
Goal—Sharpe, Jr., Captain.
Rover—Schweier (trainer).
Centre—Helson, Jr.

FRANCE HAS A NEW ARMY OF 400,000 MEN

France's Most Brilliant Tactician Will Lead His New Force Into the Upper Rhenish Provinces

LONDON, Jan. 14. — That the French are preparing to carry the fighting into Germany is disclosed in despatches reaching here yesterday to the effect that a new army of 400,000 men, under the command of Gen. Gallieni, former military governor of Paris, and considered probably the most brilliant tactician in France, is about to invade the upper Rhenish provinces.

For some days Germany has been rushing reinforcements to Alsace, and it is reported that 120,000 men are assembled near the fortified city of Metz, where they can be instantly thrown across the border against the French, and be quickly moved southward to Cernay and Steinbach if necessary.

It is believed here that the recent French advance into Alsace is largely for the purpose of determining the real strength of the Germans. This having been accomplished, it is stated Gen. Gallieni will shortly launch ten army corps on a terrific drive towards the Rhine.

The Germans apparently are having the best of the terrific battle now raging to the northeast of Soissons. Reports from Berlin and Paris War Offices agree that the French are giving ground before the terrific onslaughts of the Kaiser's forces.

This stubborn resistance is Germany's first answer to the new French plan to invade Upper Alsace. While the French armies farther east are presumably preparing to sweep up toward Metz, the German strategy seems to be to hurl such an avalanche of men at the centre that the need of reinforcements from both ends of the line will be great enough to halt the Alsatian march.

As for the fighting at the Flanders' end of the battle-line, where most of the British and Belgian troops are lined up with the French forces, it is not possible by comparing the French and German advices to get so clear an idea of what is transpiring.

Yesterday afternoon's report at Paris said:

"The unfavorable weather conditions, which have persisted along almost the entire front, have hindered operations. In Belgium there has been a sandstorm in the dunes along the coast.

"In the region of Nieuport and near Ypres the French artillery directed an effective fire on the earthworks of the enemy.

"On the Aisne, to the northeast of Soissons, the fighting around 'Spur 132' continued with great severity during all the day of Jan. 12. The Germans brought very considerable forces into this engagement. We maintained our position on the crest of the hills to the west of 'Spur 132.' To the east our troops were obliged to give ground. The fighting here continues.

"Between Soissons and Berry-au-Bac shells from our artillery caused explosions at several different points, in the midst of batteries of the enemy.

"In Champagne, from Rheims to the Argonne, there were yesterday exceedingly violent artillery exchanges.

"In the region of Souain the advance position covering the blockhouse located to the north of the Beausejour farm is still in our possession, and we here have set up a trench distant sixty yards from the German trench.

"In the Argonne there have been rain and wind storms. No infantry activity has been recorded.

"From the Argonne to the Meuse there have been intermittent artillery exchanges.

"In the Vosges there have been fogs and a heavy fall of snow."

GIANTS ARE TO GO INTO MOURNING

Outside the fact that the Giants are going to try a change of luck by shifting the colours of their uniforms and that the deal to sell the Yankees was finally closed yesterday there was little doing in the way of winter baseball in the local circuit. John Foster, secretary of the Giants, said that every one had become tired of the effete violent stripes and that henceforth the sturdy Giants would come to the field with red and black rampant. Next season when the Giants trip on the diamond they will be clad in black sweaters, with a little red trimming to relieve the idea that they are in mourning for the loss of the lately deceased pennant. They will also have socks which will have the combination of red and black, and there is hope that those much more sturdy colours than violet will bring a change to McGraw's forces.

Harry Hempstead, the leader of the Giant organization, arrived in town yesterday from the South, where he had been on a hunting trip with George Stallings and several other noted baseball worthies at Stallings' place in Haddock, Ga. Mr. Hempstead said that he had shot a couple of poor inoffensive squirrels. He added, though, that the New York contingent in the party had taken away some of the Boston world's series mondy in the ancient American game of trying to outguess your opponent on the draw after every one had come home from the quail hunting party.

Chief Meyers has been heard from. He is out in California and he makes an affidavit that he is not playing winter baseball this year. The fans ought to be glad of this, for it was evident that the Chief got too much baseball out of his system in San Diego a year ago. Jeff Tesreau is said to be scurrying back to the old town and ready to get right under the protecting wings of O. B.

As for the other gossip that was heard around the steve, it might be remarked that "Ed" Barrow will probably be the new business manager of the Yankees. A lot of baseball sharps have been gunning for this job, but Barrow, who has been and still is the head of the International League, appears to be the logical favourite.

Barrow is still under more or less of an obligation to serve out his five years in the toils of the International League, but there is no reason why he cannot resign, even if it will cause a lot of weeping and gnashing of teeth by the fobbists who are trying to persuade "Cap" Huston that they are the greatest little managers that ever pushed a pen.

HOCKEY

The Peterborough Juniors will invade Lindsay to-morrow night for a game with Cap. Simpson's braves. A win for the Petes will put them in a favourable position for the group title, and the youngsters can be depended upon to battle the Scugog team all the way. The following players will make the trip: Legros, Long, Morrow, Rose, Jackson, Knapman, Richardson, O'Connell Smyth. The team will leave on the 5.30 G.T.R. train to-morrow afternoon.

Following is the line-up for the Church League game between St. Luke's and St. John's at 10 o'clock, to-night:

St. Luke's—Goal, G. Butcher; left defence, B. Regan; right defence, A. Hagerman; rover, L. Carter; centre, A. Butcher; left wing, G. Phillips, right wing, H. Stewart.

St. John's—Goal, L. Clarke, left defence, F. LaBar; right defence, V. Morshet; rover, R. Stevenson; centre, M. Pammett; left wing, N. Pammett; right wing, A. Heard.

Question Was Discussed at the Inaugural Meeting of the City Council —A Specimen Bill for Groceries Supplied to Needy Family

The inaugural meeting of the North Monaghan Township Council was held in the town hall on Monday, with all members present. The members are Reeve McIntosh, deputy Reeve Forster and Councilors Bell, Rye and Robson.

The declarations of office and of qualification were taken and the minutes of the last meeting were adopted as read, on motion of Messrs. Forster and Robson.

Patriotic relief, general charity and hospital bills and all various kinds of charity was discussed, this taking up considerable time. Discussion also took place in regard to fault found by certain parties in the City about the poor of Monaghan not being properly treated.

In regard to the poor of Monaghan not receiving the necessaries of life the following motion was carried: Moved by Messrs. Rye and Bell that the treasurer be authorized to publish the accounts for charity, in order to give the people of Peterborough an idea of what has been done for the poor.

On motion of Messrs. Forster and Robson, the Reeve and Clerk were appointed a committee to investigate the various bills and report at the next meeting.

Messrs. Forster and Bell moved that the Clerk notify the Commissioner for Road Division No. 5 to stop Thos. Stevenson cutting wood on the public highway, near John Elliott's.—Carried.

The following accounts were presented:

J. D. Manley, provisions	$2.06
J. D. Manley, provisions	10.48
W. J. Byers, provisions	5.14
J. E. A. Fitzgerald, fuel	3.65

R. J. Wolstenholm, fuel	1.75
R. J. Wolstenholm, fuel	2.50
R. J. Wolstenholm, fuel	2.50
David Johnston.	30.75
Total	$169.17

These bills are for charity, from December 15 to January 11. On motion of Messrs. Rye and Forster, the accounts were ordered to be paid.

It was moved by Messrs. Forster and Bell that the Reeve and Clerk be authorized to investigate the system and also the kind of provisions dealt out by the City to the poor, and report to the Relief Officer.

An application was recived from W. R. Morris, chartered acountant, stating that he would audit the township accounts for $50. The Reeve was authorized to confer with Mr. Morris, and the Council will meet at the Court House, Peterborough, on Saturday, January 16th, at 2 p.m.

Moved by Messrs. Robson and Rye that the allowances as fixed by Council be paid:

Wm. Lang, D.R.O. for P.S.D. No. 2	$2.50
Jas. Fowler, P. C.	2.50
A. C. Robinson, D.R.O., P.S.D., No. 1.	2.50
Ken Denoon P. C.	2.50
Geo. Evans, D.R.O., P.S.D. 3.	2.50
And. Kent, P. C.	2.50
W. J. Grady, use of store at election	4.00
Total	$15.00

Moved by Messrs. Rye and Robson that the Clerk notify the City to have the hole in the road at the river bank on Lock Street, built up, as it is a source of danger to cutters crossing the river; also that if the City does not attend to the same the Township will, and charge the City with the cost of the work.

In connection with the above motion, the following specimen bill for groceries supplied to one family is printed to show that the needy are not being collected:

Nov. 18th, 1 peck potatoes, 15c., white sugar 50c., rolled oats 25c., 1 lb. butter 33c., 1 sack flour, 75c., 1 lb. lard 18c., 1 dozen eggs 34c, 1 lb. pickleback 24c, salt 5c., 2 bars soap 10c, baking soda 5c.

Greeks Wanted To Warn Friend

A couple of Greeks, evidently uninformed as to the different methods of communication, called at the G. N. W. Telegraph Office, this morning, and wanted to send a circular telegram to several points in this vicinity to inform one of their countrymen to meet them in Norwood. They were under the impression that this would be the best means of communicating with their friend who, it would seem, is travelling in the vicinity of Buckhorn, and taking in all the villages in the district.

They were so anxious to find their friend, intimating that there was grave trouble in store for him if he could not be found in time to go to Norwood. They said they would give $5 to the party who would convey the necessary information.

It is probable the friend in question has been peddling without a license.

NO MORE COASTING ON CITY STREETS

Chief Thompson is Out To Stop The Practice—Parents Advised To Keep Tab On Children

Chief of Police Thompson has put the ban on coasting on the city highways.

Several accidents, directly or indirectly attributed to the practice of children coasting on the city hills, have been brought under the notice of the Police Department during the past few days and Chief Thompson has issued instructions to his men to stop it.

A communication from Mr. James Marshall, 425 Rogers Street, East City, was received by the police yesterday. Mr. Marshall's son was injured when he was run down by a sat of "Bobs," but when an officer called at Mr. Marshall's house it was found that the lad had not been as badly hurt as at first thought.

As late as last Friday a valuable horse belonging to Mr. Thomas Petrie, of Otonabee, was killed by being frightened at some East City youths coasting on Sophia Street.

The hills most patronized by the youngsters are commonly known as Hunter Street east and west, Murray Street, Brock Street, London Street, Stewart Street, Smith Street, Elm Street, Reid Street and Weller Street, and unless the parents wish to have police court case on their hands they are advised to keep their children from sleigh-riding on the city roads and sidewalks.

In addition to being a menace to pedestrians, the children themselves are in danger of being run down by the different vehicular conveyances. On some streets the course of the sleighs is often over railroad tracks and street car tracks, and parents should be able to realise the danger to which their children are subjecting themselves in the exuberance of youth.

Continued coasting on one hill tends to make the surface very slippery and unsafe for pedestrians and horses, and instances of broken limbs have been reported in former years, and the police are out to stop any repetition this season.

As one of the officers remarked this morning, there are sufficient good hills outside the city limits for coasting and the extra fresh air in the trip to and fro would be good for the children.

"OLD CITIZEN" AIRS HIS VIEWS ON SOME POINTS

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice by the Evening Review that it is still harping on the visit of our Mayor and aldermen to the Capital. Well I for one have read over very carefully all newspaper correspondence in connection with this deputation, and as a large taxpayer and native of this city I must say that I most heartily and unreservedly approve of the visit of this deputation to the Capital and as one of your correspondents signing himself "Peterborough first" has truly said, "surely if the Hon. Dr. Reid, Minister of Customs, visits the Capital on the very same errand that our Mayor and Aldermen did, they have nothing to be ashamed of."

As an old reader and well wisher of your contemporary, the Review, I am sorry to see that it has stooped lower in connection with this small controversy than I have known it to do within the last thirty years. The insinuations thrown out by its editorials as to the conduct and deportment of this deputation—composed of some of Peterborough's most honoured citizens—are certainly scurrilous in the extreme and far below the standard set by respectable and reputable newspapers.

As to the resolution fathered by Aldermen Edgar and Saunders cutting down to a reasonable extent the salaries of some of Peterborough's civic officials, I again as a large taxpayer and native of this city, and as a loyal British subject, most heartily and unreservedly approve. There are at least eight or ten officials in the employ of this city whose salaries can be materially be reduced without any hardship to themselves or loss of efficiency to the city. These men should be prepared to make a substantial sacrifice. We, the taxpayers, who have to pay these officials, have our incomes and salaries cut and cut deeply, and there is no reason what ever why the salaries of these officials should not also be cut to a reasonable extent. These officials must remember that we are at war and that we should all be prepared to make substantial sacrifices at the present time. As the gifted Premier of this Province, Hon. W. H. Hearst, said, speaking in New York on Tuesday night last:

"We are at war; this is our fight, and if we are to win the right to freedom and ourselves to exist on earth, every man must offer himself for that service and for that sacrifice. This is not a case of aid by Canada; it is our fight—we are part of the Empire and our very existence depends on the result."

Yours truly,
"Old Citizen."

RUSSIANS ON MOVE

Their Drive Along the Northern East Prussian Frontier is Increasing in Proportions

FORCING FOE BACK

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 15 — The Russian drive against the German lines along the northern East Prussian frontier is declared to be increasing in proportions.

The entire Russian left wing is now said to be engaged and to be forcing the Germans back on their main defence positions. In order to check it General Von Hindenburg is resuming the offensive along the centre at the junction of the Bzura and Rawka rivers.

He has been bringing up new masses of artillery, evidently depending on his big guns to render the Russian trenches untenable. The Germans have succeeded in advancing beyond the Villages of Bin Skupi and Sucha, northeast of Bolimow, but despite this admission the military experts here claim that it will be impossible for them to gain any real advantage at this point.

Although the German offensive is admittedly increasing Russian correspondents at the front quote the Russian staff as believing that the present move is intended to cover a general withdrawal of the German forces to the westward

They say that there are plenty of evidences that Gen. Von Hindenburg is at last convinced that the Russian defence of Warsaw cannot be broken, and that he is planning to withdraw part of his active forces to send them to France, where the Germans are again essaying an offensive.

The weather has completely checked all the offensive operations in the Carpathian region and in the Caucasus.

Mayor Church Does Not Agree

With Objects of Communication, Copy of Which Has Been Received in Peterborough

TORONTO, Jan. 13.—"Nothing but a blow at the Hydro," was the comment of Mayor Church to-day when the communication from the City of Berlin, was read, suggesting that Toronto join with Berlin in seeking legislation to empower municipalities to place the profits from public utilities in the general account.

"The suggestion, if carried out, "would destroy the whole policy of public ownership," continued His Worship.

"What would we do if we had a profit from our utilities?" asked Controller Spence.

"Reduce the rates," replied Controller Thompson.

Controller Spence pointed out that the situation might arise where it would be advisable to transfer the profit from one utility to another, so as to reduce the rates for the latter.

"That is all a matter of bookkeeping," said His Worship.

A report will be made by the Property and Works Commissioners, and the City Solicitor, before the matter is disposed of.

This communication was referred to the City Council of Peterborough and at the suggestion of Mayor Buller was laid over to be discussed in committee.

Sir Max Aitkin—who, according to a recent Ottawa despatch, is to be the British eye witness with the Canadian troops at the front.

THE ENEMY PREPARING FOR ANOTHER DASH ON PARIS

French Driven From Five Miles of Trenches Near the Aisne and Germans Have Mounted Heavy Artillery.

ALLIES' NEW DRIVE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Despite the optimistic claims of military officials that the Germans will not be able to follow up their successes north of the Aisne, and east of Soissons, where they drove the French from more than five miles of trenches, fears are quietly expressed that the enemy is getting ready for another attempted dash on Paris.

The war office continues to insist that the withdrawal was due entirely to floods now prevailing in "five rivers," and that it was actually of no strategic importance. But reports received to-day show that the Germans already have pushed forward close to the river bank and have mounted heavy artillery in the trenches recently held by the French.

From these positions they are now pouring a heavy fire into the French lines south of the river.

To offset this the allies have instituted a new drive against the German positions along the Yser and especially north of Lombaertzyde and Nieuport. There the land batteries are aided by monitors and torpedo boats operating from the sea. Already it is announced that the German fortified positions at Westende have been very badly damaged.

In an effort to check the fire German aviators have vainly tried to drop bombs on the warships, but so far have failed to strike the mark.

The accompanying screen of destroyers is declared here to have successfully thwarted all attempts by German submarines.

The presence of the Kaiser at Soissons naturally lends the utmost importance to the movement there, and it is admitted here that the French lines in this vicinity are being constantly reinforced.

Not a single word regarding the operations in Upper Alsace has been divulged officially since last Thursday, other than to report the assertion that at Petrograd draws attention to the fact that the Grand Duke's New Year message Russian style) included in the phrase, "the whole front," what hitherto has been kept separate—namely, the right and left banks of the Vistula, together as one front.

Successes in East Prussia.

As a counter-movement to German activity in Poland, the Russians have driven the enemy out of a whole series of villages in East Prussia east ward from Rosog. The enemy's cavalry, with infantry supports, have endeavoured in vain to check the Russians. One of the villages was strongly fortified, and here the enemy's rear guard held on for some time, until driven out by the bayonet in a sanguinary street fight.

German Fortress Turned.

The Russian force operating in this region has succeeded in turning the German fortress of Boyen, guarding the Masurian Lakes. Fort Boyen is 40 miles east of the border, and is connected by rail with Lyck.

Owing to the severity of the weather, the Russian operations in Galicia, Bukowina and the Carpathians have been checked.

The despatches from Berlin and Vienna continue to take an optimistic view of the situation, but the reports of Austrian victories are repeated daily with wearing monotony. The fighting on the Nida is still indecisive, the Austrians claiming success at several points.

RUSSIAN CENTRE IS FIERCELY ASSAILED

Four Fierce Attacks on the Defenders of Warsaw, Meanwhile the Russians Are Advancing in East Prussia

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 14—Reports from Petrograd indicate that the Germans are becoming infuriated by their repeated failure to pierce the Russian lines in Poland, and are hurling masses of troops against the centre, four violent attacks having been delivered within the last forty-eight hours. In this desperate onrush, says a Petrograd despatch, the Germans forced back the Russians and occupied considerable ground. This new and vigorous movement of the Germans centres along a line to the east of Gochaczew and Skierniewice, and here Hindenburg is concentrating all his energies on a desperate effort to break through to Warsaw.

Eleven-Inch Mortars.

The attack was preceded by a terrific cannonade of eleven-inch mortars, brought up specially by the Germans for this attack, and the rear of the big guns, alternating with the rattle of Maxims, field artillery and rifles, continued all night and day, followed by an advance and the winning of some ground. At the same time opinion gains ground in Russian military circles that Hindenburg is preparing public opinion in Germany for a withdrawal from the Warsaw front.

Elsewhere the Russian offensive is being vigorously prosecuted in East Prussia, in the region between Mlawa and the right bank of the lower Vistula, in Poland, and farther south on the Nida.

The Morning Post correspondent

the heavy snowfall is interfering with operations.

Rumours that the Germans have gained a distinct success in the region continue to circulate, despite the immediate denials at the war office, and there is serious apprehension that the campaign there has met with some sort of a check.

THREE LIVES IN A FIRE

Five Storey Tenement Building Swept by Blaze and There Were Many Narrow Escapes

AN ITALIAN HERO

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.— Three persons, two of them little children, perished in a fire that swept a five-storey tenement early to-day. More than a score of scantily clad women and children were objects of thrilling rescues. Antonio Puccielo was the hero of the blaze. Puccielo carried two little children, their nightshirts blazing, to the street and plunged back into the blazing building. Half an hour later firemen came upon his body.

Still held in his arms lay his four year old son, Tony, and two year old Catherine McKinney. All three had been suffocated.

Council Is In Doubt

Will Not Act As A Continuing Guarantor—Will Seek Legal Advice

At last night's meeting of the City Council a resolution was brought in which was designed to constitute the City a guarantor for the indebtedness of the Utilities Commission up to the amount of $75,000. Some doubt existed in the minds of the Aldermen as to whether the adoption of the resolution would commit the City to a continuing guarantee or would be limited to a debit account of $75,000 as stated in the resolution. As City Solicitor Gordon was not present when the matter was discussed, it was laid over.

The Resolution.

The resolution reads as follows:—That, whereas the Peterborough Utilities Commission has applied to the Bank of Montreal for a credit of $75,000 for the purpose of enabling the Commission to undertake and proceed with necessary work in connection with the City waterworks and electric light and power plant, this Council hereby requests the said Bank to make advances from time to time to the said Commission up to the said sum, and undertake to be responsible for the repayment thereof with interest thereon, and guarantees any overdraft of the said Commission up to the said amount, which guarantee shall be a continuing guarantee and cover all amounts at any time at the debit of the account of the said Commission in the books of the said Bank up to the said amount; but this guarantee shall not continue after there has been paid the amount of the said guarantees and debentures shall be issued and delivered to the said Bank by way of hypothecation for the amount of such guarantee.

MAY PASS THE HIGHWAY BILL

Government Anxious to Devise Scheme to Relieve Unemployment

TORONTO, Jan. 15—From information gained yesterday indications are that at the coming session of the Legislature the Ontario Government purpose to make highway legislation the most important part of their legislative duties, and by using this some scheme will be worked out to solve the problem of unemployment. It is believed that the Government will adopt the report submitted by the Highway Commissioners at the last session, which recommended the outlay of $30,000,000 on the roadways of Ontario, spread over 15 years It is practically certain that the bill will be put through the House in skeleton form, leaving, at the option of the Cabinet what proportion may be expended each year. Further plans of the Government are to appoint a permanent Commission of three or more capable men to look after the whole highway system. A further plan is to meet the counties and municipalities in their demands for help in maintenance.

COMPLAINS THAT HE HAS BEEN REFUSED RELIEF

A man living on Chamberlain Street called at the Examiner office yesterday afternoon very much disappointed and put out. He stated he was the father of five children, the oldest 16 years of age and earning $2.00 per week, all the money that was coming in to support the family. His wife went to the hospital yesterday and he stated she would not recover. His complaint was that Mr. Miller would not give him relief. He was willing to work but could get no work to do. He has had relief but twice in six weeks and he is afraid his children will suffer, in fact, are suffering now.

This is the statement made to The Examiner; but no doubt Mr. Miller has facts and reasons for refusal of the relief yesterday if such was the case.

Gained in Weight, Digestion Restored, Health Renewed

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feelings of nausea," writes Mrs. O. A. Dodge of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all sourn of the sea disappear, but I began to crave fod and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines today and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold by all druggists and storekeers, 25c. per box or five for $1.00 Sent postpaid by The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Under the poplar, where she had so often stood to look down defiantly on the brick house far below, Juanita paused, and grew a little faint. She put out one hand and steadied herself against the cool bark of its giant bole. In a faint, self-contemptuous voice she quoted once more, but in an altered and shaken spirit:

"The very leaves seemed to sing on the trees;
The castle alone in the landscape lay
Like an outpost of winter dull and grey."

* * * * * *

The house that had come down to Ansa Havey had been built almost a century before. It was originally placed in a tract so large that elsewhere it would have been a domain, a tract held under the original Virginia grant. Since those days much of it had been parcelled out as marriage portions to younger generations. The first Havey had been a gentleman whose fathers had been associates of Lord Baltimore, and who had fought with Washington for independence. It had taken the stalwart strain several generations to relapse into the ruck of semi-illiteracy. The house itself was a relic of days before the rich traditions of Virginia had faded. It had been put there when such places were wilderness outposts of the culture left behind. In the attic still stood a dust-covered raw-hide trunk that had lumbered west with the early waggon trains of pioneer venturing, and in that trunk mouldered such needless things as bits of colonial silver and brocaded petticoats and breeches with silver knee buckles. Then gradually, as the uprooted tree falls into dry rot, the gallant and scholarly stock had sunk and on it fed the slow waste of decay; just as the moth and the mildew fed on the brocades and satins.

The bricks for these walls had been baked in a home-made kiln, and the walls themselves had been reared like those of a fortress. There was a porch at the front and two floors, but the narrow windows were shuttered as heavily as those of a frontier prison and when its doors were barred the enemy who sought to enter must knock with a battering ram, and sustain a welcome from loop-holes.

Cabins that had once housed slaves, barns, a smoke-house, an ice-house, and a small hamlet of dependent shacks, clustered about a clearing which had been put there rather to avoid surprise than to give space for gardening. The Havey of two generations ago had been something of a hermit scholar and in his son had lurked a diminishing passion for books and an increasing passion for leadership.

The feud had blazed to its fiercest heat in his day, and the father of Bad Anse Havey had been the first Bad Anse. His son had succeeded to the title as a right of heritage, and had been trained to wear it like a fighting man. Though he might be a whelp of the wolf breed, the boy was a strong whelp and one in whom slept latent possibilities and anomalous qualities, for in him broke out afresh the love of books. It might have surprised his newspaper biographers to know how deeply he had conned the few volumes on the rotting shelves of the brick house, or how deeply he had thought along some lines. It might have amazed them had they heard the fire and resonance with which he quoted the wise counsel of the foolish Polonius. "Beware of entering a quarrel, but being in, so bear thee that the opposed may beware of thee." As to entering a quarrel it sufficed his logic that he had been born into it, that he had "heired" his hatreds.

And because in these parts his father had held almost dictatorial powers, it had pleased him to send his son, just come to his majority, down to the State Capital as a member of the Legislature, and the son had gone to sit for a while among law-makers.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In other years Bad Anse Havey remembered days in that house when the voices of women and children had been raised in song and laughter. Then the family had gathered in the long winter evenings before the roaring back logs, and spinning wheel and quilting frame had not yet gone to the cobwebs of the cock-loft. But that was long ago.

The quarter century over which his memory travelled had brought changes even to the hills. The impalpable ghost of decay moves slowly with no sound save the occasional click of a sagging door here and the snap of a cord there, but in twenty-five years it moves — and an inbred generation comes to impaired manhood. Since Bad Anse himself had returned from Frankfort his house had been tenanted only by men and an atmosphere of grimness hung in its shadows. A half-dozen unkempt and loutish kinsmen dwelt there with him, till the ground and ready to bear arms. More than once they had been needed. It was to this place that Juanita Holland and the preacher were making their way on that October afternoon. Through the trees and undergrowth as they came nearer the girl could see that the faded grass had grown ragged and weed-choked in the yard, and that the fruit trees about it were gnarled and neglected and the beegums leaned askew. All softening touches of comfort and ease had gone to wrack and the impression was that of a place where war sat enthroned above the ruins of thrift.

At a point where they should go down to the road and make their way around to the front the girl halted and stood resting, a little palpitant with the prospect of eating humble pie, and more than a little frightened at the probability of failure. The missionary shook his head as he rested on a fallen log and contemplated her expression. There was beauty and pride and gallantry in her pose; lissome grace to ensnare a lover; charm to captivate an observer, but little of that humility which befitted one who came, stripped of power, to sue for terms. Defiance still shone too rebelliously from her eyes.

At the gate they encountered a solitary figure gazing stolidly out to the front, and when their coming roused it out of its gloomy reverie it turned and presented the scowling face of Jeb McNash.

"Where air they?" he demanded, wrathfully, wheeling upon the two arrivals, and then he repeated violently, "By God, where air they? Why hain't ye done fotched Dawn an' Jessie?"

"Jeb," said the missionary quietly, "we done come ever hyar fust ter hev speech with Anse Havey. Whar's he at?"

"I reckon he's in the house, but ye hain't answered my question. I'm ther one for ye ter talk ter fust. Hit's my sister ye've done been sufferin' ter consort with murderers, an hit's me ye've got ter reckon with."

Brother Talbott only nodded. "Son," he gently reassured, "we aims ter talk with you, too, but I reckon ye hain't got ter call ter hinder us from havin' speech with Anse fust."

For a moment Jeb stood dubious, then he jerked his head toward the house. "Go on in thar, ef ye sees fit. I hain't got no license ter stop ye," he said curtly, "but don't aim ter let ye leave 'thout seein' me, too."

Several shaggy retainers were lounging on the front porch, but as Good Anse Talbott and Juanita turned in at the gate, these henchmen disappeared inside. They would all be there to witness her humbling, thought the girl. It would please sion about him. Then she saw another figure emerge from the dark him to receive her with his jackal pack yelping their sycophant derision about him. Then he saw another figure emerge from the dark door to stand at the threshold and the flush in her cheeks grew deeper. Bad Anse Havey stood and waited and when they reached the steps of the porch he came slowly forward and said gravely, "Come inside." He led the way and they followed in silence.

Juanita found herself in the largest room she had yet seen in the mountains; a room which was dark at its corners despite a shaft of sun that slanted through a window falling on a heavy table in a single band of light. On the table lay a litter of pipes, loose tobacco, cartridges, and several books. Down the stripe of sunlight the dust motes floated in pulverized gold and the radiance fell upon a volume which lay open, throwing it into relief, so that as the girl stood uncertainly near the table she read at the top of a page the caption, "Plutarch's Lives."

But she caught her breath in relief for the retainers had disappeared.

Her first impressions was that of a place massively and crudely timbered, where even the sun attacked the murk feebly. She had always thought of this house as a castle of the enemy, and now that she had entered it the impression seemed rather strengthened than lessened, but it was a mediaeval castle, crude and smoke-stained. It was the home of entrenched darkness.

Many of the details of the room bore the atmosphere of other days. The stag horns over the mantel shelf were trophies of long ago, and the long-barreled percussion-cap gun which hung across their prongs with its powder-horn and shot-pouch belonged to a past era. The aged hound that rose stiffly from the floor to growl and lie down again with much awkward circling looked as though he had been dreaming of trails through other decades.

Bad Anse Havey stood just at the edge of the sun shaft, with one side of his face lighted and the other dark.

But, if to the girl the whole picture was one of sombre composition and colour, it presented a different aspect to Bad Anse himself, as the young mountaineer stood facing the door. Juanita Holland was also at the edge of the sun shaft and the golden motes danced around the escaping curls of her brown hair and seemed to caress the delicate colour of her flushed cheeks, kissing her lips into carmine, and intensifying the violet of her eyes. Her slender figure stood very straight in the blue gingham gown, and her sunbonnet had fallen back and hung by its loosely knotted strings.

And at her side stood the bent figure of the missionary, neutral and drab as though painted into the picture with a few strong strokes of a brush that had been dipped in only one colour, and that colour dust brown. When he spoke his voice, by some fusing of elements, seemed in keeping with the rest of him—colourless.

"We've done come ter' hev speech with ye, Anse," he began. "I reckon ye konw what hit's erbout."

The Havey leader only nodded, and his steady eye and straight mouth line did not alter their sternness of expression.

He saw the stifled little gasp with which the girl read the ultimatum of his set face and the sudden mist of tears which, in spite of herself, blurred her eyes. He pushed forward a chair and gravely inquired: "Hadn't ye better set down, ma'am?"

Could Hardly Straighten Up For The Pain in Her Back.

Many women suffer from an excruciating pain in the back. They are not even able to look after the common duties of their housework, and cannot even walk at times.

The whole trouble is that the kidneys have become affected, and when the kidneys get "out of kilter" the whole system becomes deranged. On the first sign of a weak, lame, aching back you should not neglect it, for if you do, you may be sure that some serious kidney trouble will follow.

What you want is a kidney medicine, for kidneys only. This you will find in Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they're made for kidneys only.

Mrs. George Craigie, Rose Valley, P.E.I., writes: "I am writing to tell you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills did for me. I was suffering with a lame back, and for several days I could hardly straighten up for the pain. I had used quite a lot of other kind of pills, but received no relief. Just then my sister told me about what "Doan's" had done for her, so I decided to try them. I used three boxes and I am completely cured. I do not hesitate to recommend them to all."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

FLAG COMES DOWN.

U. S. Ambassador Made Turk Remove Offending Bunting.

PARIS, Jan. 14. — Advices from Constantinople, by way of Petrograd, to The Temps, report the arrival at the Turkish capital of many wounded from the Dardanelles, where the bombardment continues. Some of the wounded came from the French hospital, over which the Turks flew the Turkish flag.

"The American ambassador," the despatch adds, "protested against this and insisted that the Turkish flag should be replaced by the American flag, because French interests were in the care of the American embassy." This was done.

Mercier Adheres To Letter.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 14. — Cardinal Desideratus Mercier, the Primate of Belgium, declines for the present to discuss what he defines the "vexatious measures" of the German authorities in Belgium with reference to him and to the pastoral letter written by him on Christmas.

In a formal statement the cardinal says he will withdraw nothing from his pastoral letter.

Gen. von Bissing, German military ruler, admits he confiscated the pastoral letter, but denies any interference with the cardinal's personal liberty.

King Honors Slav General.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—King George has commemorated the advent of the Russian New Year by appointing Grand Duke Nicholas an honorary grand commander of the Bath. The King has also conferred the order of Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George on Gen. Yanouchkevitch, chief of the Russian General Staff; Gen. Danilloff, director of military operations; Gen. Russky, commanding the northern armies, and Gen. Ivanoff, commanding the southern armies.

Wholesale Desertion of Germans.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—"The real reason for strict guarding of the Belgian-Dutch frontier," says The Matin's correspondent at Havre, "is an epidemic of desertion, which began in the German rank after the battle of the Yser. From Nov. 15 to Dec. 15 there were 11,000 desertions from the garrison at Bruges alone."

THRILLING LIVES

THE FIRE CHIEF'S CHAUFFEUR

BY WILLIAM ALLEN JOHNSTON.

"WHURR-RRR-RR"——

It is the theatre hour for Broadway and the great thoroughfare is white with the glare of electric lights and black with crowds of pleasure loving humanity streaming out of the playhouses. Motor lunged "starters" are whipping into line the tangles of automobiles, carriages and cabs, and street cars and cross street cars are clanging desperately for right of way.

All is din and deep confusion; it is almost impossible for a pedestrian to cross the street; and yet out of the night and into the disorder sounds that hoarse, sinister scream of a siren whistle. Some one, something wants a right of way over everything else, demands it with an ear splitting shriek—and gets it.

"Urr-llll!"— The siren is screeching now like an evil bird. Cabbies lash and swing their horses to the curb, automobiles dart this way and that with frightened spurts; pedestrians crowd back and scurry for safety. There's a momentary clang of a bell, a red flash that travels faster than the sound of that useless bell—and the thing is gone. Out of the night again and away up the thoroughfare, rising clear above the clatter and clang of the city's night traffic, but growing fainter every instant, sounds that savage, insistent scream—"urr-llll!"

Just a red flash, a gleam of polished brass—and the momentary outline of a big automobile with two figures sitting tensely upright in it!

That man in the tonneau, whose face even when in repose looks as if he were studying the problem of a hopeless fire, is Chief Croker. The man in the front seat, gripping the wheel and steering that flying car through the most populous street in the world at a mile a minute—dodging through lanes of vehicles where often a clearing space scarcely more than the thickness of a sheet of paper intervenes on either side—is the Fire Chief's driver, Captain Rush.

Both are remarkable men, decidedly worth meeting, studying, knowing. Their positions are altogether different. One is Fire Chief of New York City, the other drives his car. Upon the presence of one at every fire of consequence depends its mastery; the duty of the other is to get him there in the shortest possible time. But the two men are alike in these respects—that each is absolute master of his particular calling, is altogether concentrated in the pursuit of it, has no other apparent interest in life save his work.

Each Man a Master.

Each man, in consequence, is a product of his calling and its stern, strenuous exactions. He could not be otherwise. Such a life either makes a man or breaks him.

The story of Captain Rush's daily life is largely written in the figures on the dial of the speed register of his car. They say that the car since it was put in service less than four years ago has travelled thirty-five thousand miles.

Consider the distance and what it means—once and a half around the world and every mile of it through crowded city streets at the speed of a fast express! Ten thousand miles a year of racing speed with never a rod of clear track! Imagine the strain of it! How many men could stand it?

There is little or no relaxation in this life. If you think there is visit any fire house in the city and note the portentous, almost sinister solemnity of the place, the keen, watchful faces of the men, how even the horses stand in their stalls with one foot forward ready to spring forward at the clang of the gong and the drop of the chains in front of them.

Nor is there any time for anticipation. It is one thing to prepare for an automobile race, to train for it, to be ready for its every reaction when the starter says "Go!" It is quite another to awaken in the dead of night at the ring of a gong, to slide down a pole half awake and without word or hesitation to jump to the seat and pilot a flying car under as great a strain of eye and muscle as any work ever demanded.

The famous red car stands to the left as you enter the Great Jones street station, right alongside the big "extra first" and "relief" engines. A mechanician in shirt sleeves is hovering busily over her, grooming her till not a speck of dust is visible on the shining red and brass surfaces, squirting oil into engine and gear, keeping her constantly "tuned up" to top notch service. A turn of the crank makes her sing and quiver, jumping impatiently like a fire horse in harness, ready and eager for the mad plunge to the flames.

Up stairs in his tidy quarters sits the man who runs her, Captain Rush. He is just the kind of man you have already formed a mental image of, as fitted to sit, day in and out, night in and out, behind the steering wheel of this fire car—an athlete in the pink of condition, clean cut in face and figure, well groomed, tanned a leathery brown by constant exposure to sun, wind and rain. There is not a line of hesitation in his features, not an ounce of superfluous weight on him, not a bit of foolishness in his system. If he ever had any such weaknesses they have been trained out of him.

Not Given to Talk.

"Why, I can't tell you anything," he said, sharply. "Have a chair." And the conversation might here ended then and there, for if the Chief's driver won't talk about his work there is absolutely nothing left. He has no interest in any other subject. Several times I introduced extraneous matters in the way of queries, only to be met with the laconic response:—"I don't know. I never had the interest to inquire."

But you are used to firemen. They never talk offhand about themselves. There is only one way to interview them—to get the story first from another and then first hand from them as they try to wriggle out of it.

"Well, you lost a wheel one time?" I suggested.

"Oh, yes," he said. "The night I got one. That happened on Second avenue last year, about three in the morning. We ran two blocks before the car stopped. I thought at times we would turn turtle. But we didn't."

"How did you manage it?"

"Just juggled the car. Swung her one way and then lifted the hub by swinging in the other direction. It was quick work; we were going fifty miles an hour."

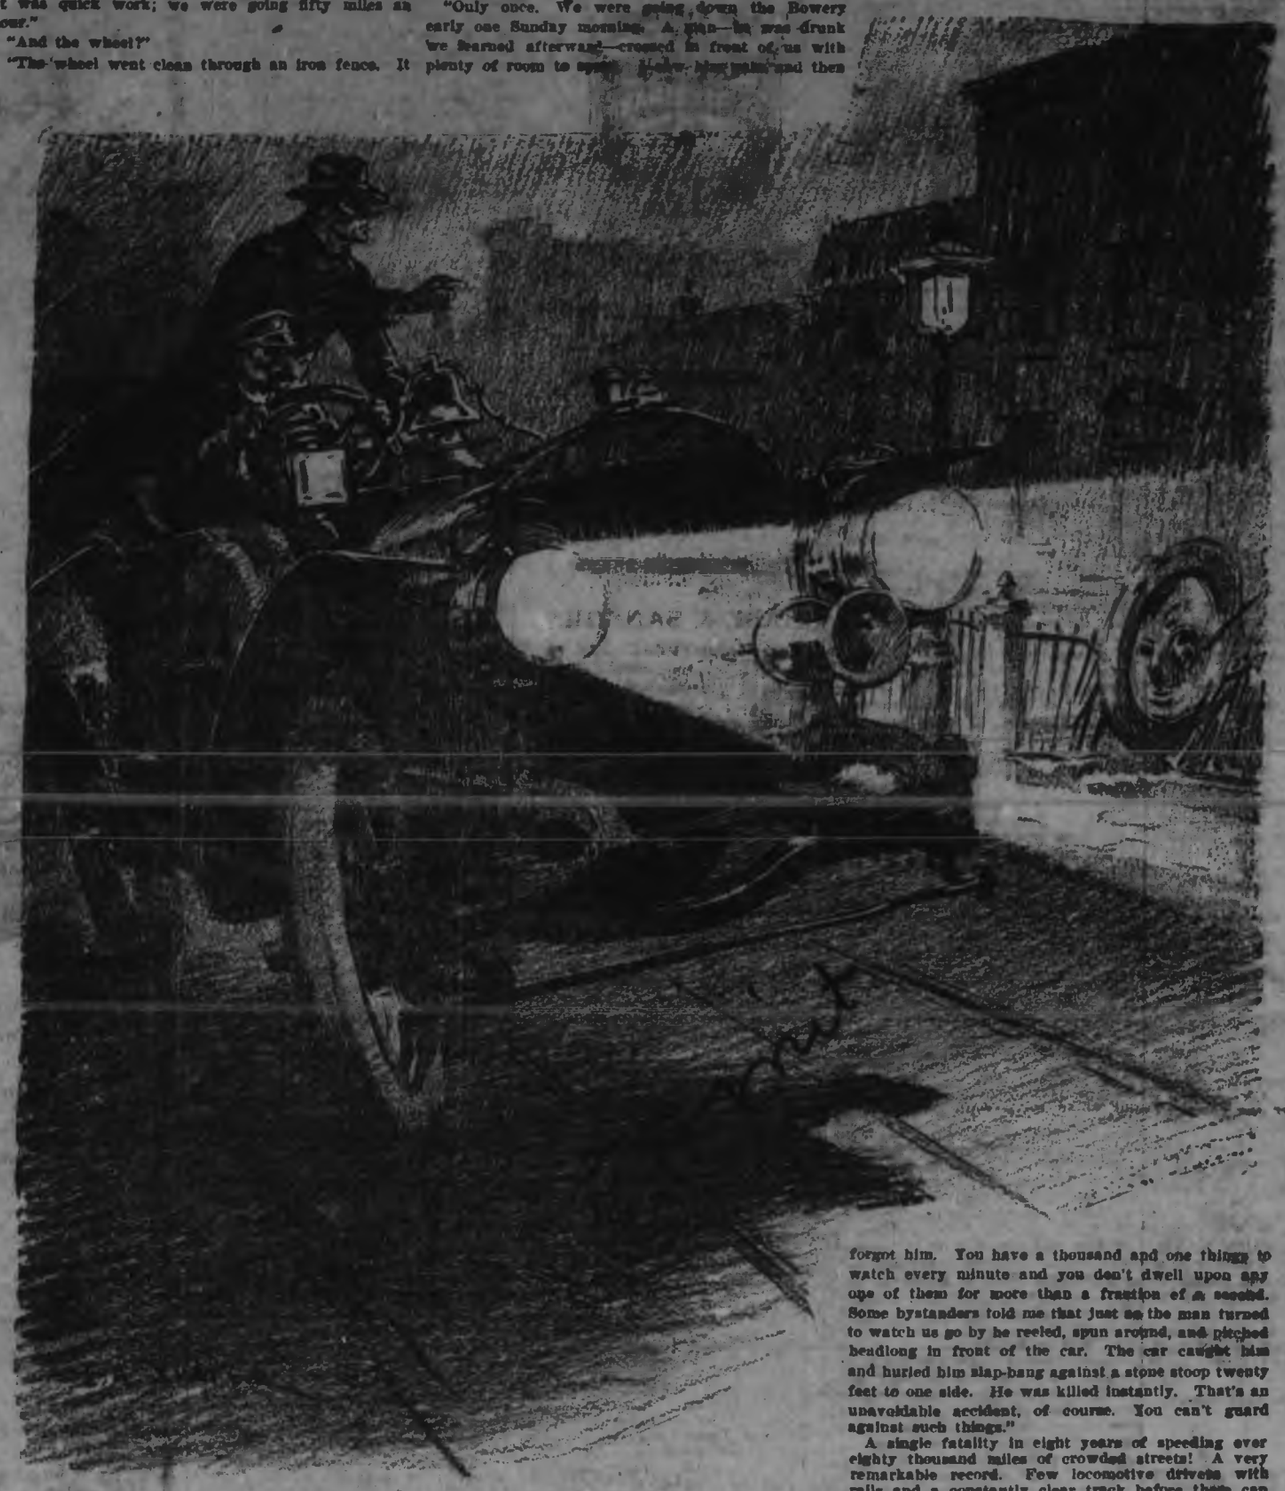
"And the wheel?"

"The wheel went clean through an iron fence. It was lucky the streets were deserted. That wheel would have gone through a crowd like a cannon ball."

"Ever run over any one?"

"Only once. We were going down the Bowery early one Sunday morning. A man—he was drunk we learned afterward—crossed in front of us with plenty of room to spare. He lay [illegible] and then forgot him. You have a thousand and one things to watch every minute and you don't dwell upon any one of them for more than a fraction of a second. Some bystanders told me that just as the man turned to watch us go by he reeled, spun around, and pitched headlong in front of the car. The car caught him and hurled him slap-bang against a stone stoop twenty feet to one side. He was killed instantly. That's an unavoidable accident, of course. You can't guard against such things."

A single fatality in eight years of speeding over eighty thousand miles of crowded streets! A very remarkable record. Few locomotive drivers with rails and a constantly clear track before them can claim so good a one.



"THE WHEEL WENT CLEAN THROUGH AN IRON FENCE."

Any narrow escapes? Captain Rush smiled at the query, and I recalled then the experience of a reporter who once rode with him to an uptown fire. They rushed through a great crowd of school children, who, somehow, some way melted away in safety on either side of their tearing path; they passed the sleeves of pedestrians, skimmed the flanks of work horses; almost locked wheels with automobiles that came whirling without warning out of side streets, but at last the reporter shut his eyes, gritted his teeth and crouched hopelessly in his seat, waiting for the crash of collision that seemed inevitable. He had barely closed his eyes, he thought, when the car stopped with a crunch of the wheels and he opened them upon a flaming tenement. "Here we are!" said Rush coolly.

Watching the Crossings.

Narrow escapes? Yes. Crowded into every mile of the yearly ten thousand, into every minute of the daily drive.

"In fact," said Captain Rush, thoughtfully, "that's about all there is to it. It's just one constant dodging. My muscles ache sometimes at the end of the drive. You see, they're at high tension every second. You can't relax them."

Captain Rush says he never watches the cross street he is about to pass; it is always the one ahead which claims his attentions. The statement sounds curious at first thought, but the tactics are natural enough. At the speed of fifty miles an hour it takes only three and one-half seconds to pass by an entire city block—three and one-half seconds only, and that brief lapse of time is altogether needed to pick out a lane through congested traffic or for a wide swoop or any quick manœuvre to avoid a bad collision. So he cherishes these few seconds and jumps his eye ahead one block the instant each cross street is passed.

It is not pedestrians he fears most, nor even children, for the New York urchin, says Captain Rush, is the wariest animal in existence and the quickest at dodging; nor are trucks and cabs dangerous. They know well that scream of the siren whistle and halt at its distant sound. It is rather the reckless taximeter of the night traffic and the law breaking "joy riders" who come catapulting out of the dim side streets with horns tooting so loudly they cannot hear his own siren. It seems little short of marvellous that no accidents have happened.

Many absurd stories are afloat in the streets regarding the Fire Chief's driver. Some are to the effect that drivers are changed as often as each week, on account of the terrific strain involved. These are all imaginative tales.

There have been only two chauffeurs in the service. The first, Oswald, was badly injured at a Brooklyn fire. Chief Croker tells of the incident in his laconic, unemotional way. It was simply one of the daily grist of the Fire Department accidents.

The fire, a serious one, was under control, and Chief and driver were walking back to the car when a big, ragged wall toppled and fell. The Chief jumped and cleared the flying debris, the driver stumbled and was caught. He recovered from his injuries, but was never fit again for the exactions of the steering wheel.

Then came Rush, in 1911, with eight continuous night and day years to his record up to date and the running title of captain in the service. His first car was a small runabout steamer with a capacity of thirty miles an hour. There's a photograph of it on the wall of his room.

This room, by the way, is unique in its decorations, like the occupation of the man who spends his waiting moments there. In orderly array along the wainscoting are electric batteries, gauges, parts of engine and gear, all ready for instantaneous insertion in event of breakdown. Upon the walls are alternating photos of big fires and racing cars. Fire and speed! A sharply defined, thrilling orbit for a man to move in with never a stray path of relaxation.

Some Record Runs.

"You made a record run once to Spuyten Duyvil," I suggested.

"Oh, well, that's nothing. It simply showed the speed we travel at. There's no argument about that, I think.

"We went out of the station here on the third alarm, and a minute or so after we reached Spuyten Duyvil we went in a special alarm for a fireboat. They say here at the station that the 'special' rang just twenty-two minutes after we left.

"How far is it to Spuyten Duyvil? Oh, as many miles, I should say. From here to Kingsbridge the route is fairly direct; after that it is very devious. Such time is common, however. Just the other day, we came here from 177th street and Amsterdam avenue in ten minutes flat. The car is a 40-45 horse power, with a speed of sixty to sixty-five miles. On the down grades, of course, she goes faster," concluded the Captain, with a suggestive light in his eye.

As we talked in the Captain's room the celebration throughout the city of our great national holiday was in progress. The Fourth of July each year means enormous work for the Fire Department. In the morning it was fairly quiet, but in the afternoon things began to warm up. Small boys whose souls were stirred with patriotism and inspired foreign citizens who could not tell the name of their nation's President were getting in their deadly work all over the city and the profitable results were winging their alarms into Station 58.

"Clang! Clang! Clang!" With each baneful report of the gong the big station house stirred all over. Downstairs chains clanked and the shod hoofs of horses clattered over the clean brick floor, and shadowy, ghostlike, blue shirted forms came sprawling down the gleaming brass poles.

"First alarms," said the Captain, "but the third—that means us—will come pretty soon."

It did come, scarcely ten minutes later, from Harlem's "Little Italy," a splendid tableau of patriotic observances. The Captain made a single move out of his chair and over to the brass pole in the next room.

By the time I had scampered down the stairs and across the main floor two figures, Chief and driver, were sitting tense and upright in the big red car and the mechanician was swinging the crank.

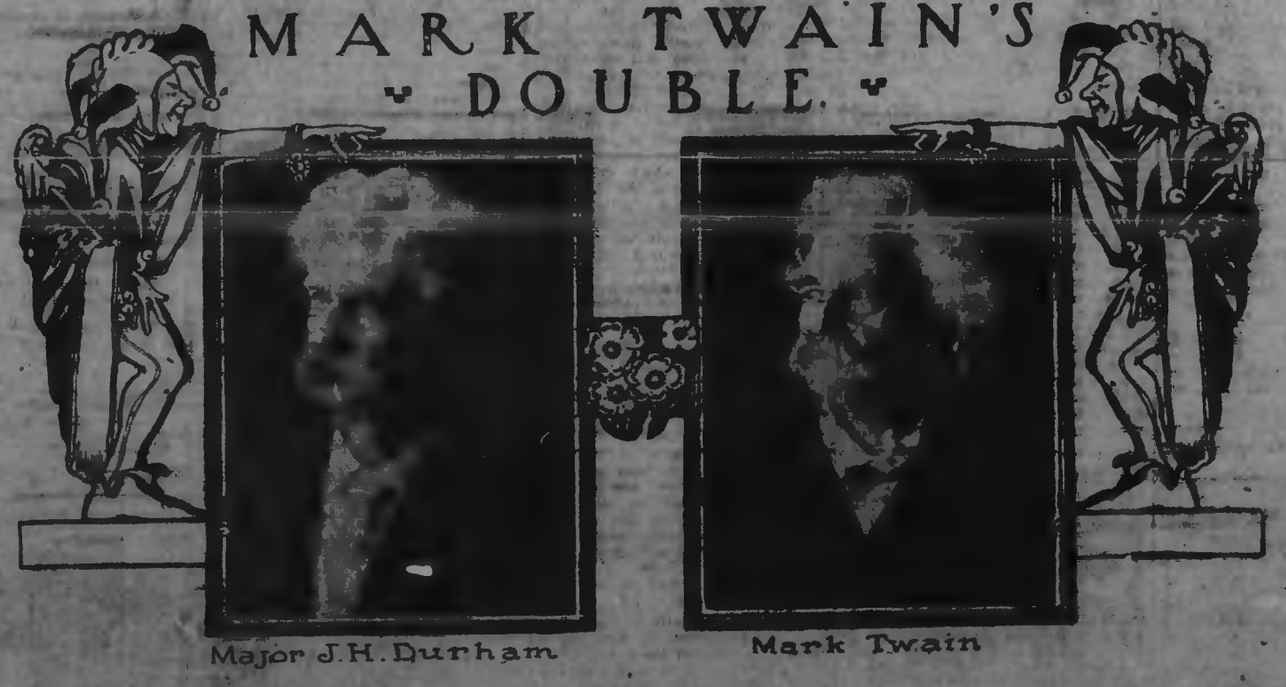
"B-r-r-r-r-r!" sang the eager engine and "clank!" ran the dropped chain at the door. A group of admiring youngsters jumped back and stood tightly pressed against the outer wall.

"Whurr-rr-rr-rr!" The station house rang with the blast of the siren, and the car lurched through the door. A truckman a block away pulled up his horses and backed around a corner.

"Chunk! chunk!" go the clutches, and with each grip the animal-like car gives an answering leap. Already she is gathering speed and swerves around the corner, splitting a lazy street car by scarcely an inch.

"Chunk!" Another clutch, another tremor, and she's off up the avenue in her wild flight, past elevated posts, crowded corners, dangerous crossings and alley way exits, on, on, "Gosh-fi's a mercy!" said the mechanician, "that one counted back whole." He likes this big red-painted car as one grows to love a horse he watches over. "It's a mercy, yes," he added, "but she's got a true hand on the wheel."

MARK TWAIN'S DOUBLE



Major J. H. Durham Mark Twain

AMONG the residents of the St. Lawrence River resorts none presents a more picturesque figure than Major J. H. Durham, known to all Thousand Island summer visitors as "Mark Twain's double." The resemblance of the Major to Samuel's famous humorist is remarkable. Hundreds of persons have mistaken the Major for Mark Twain, and the Major is never more pleased than when he can [illegible] otherwise practising such a deception.

The Major lives in the picturesque Cape Vincent, near the point where the waters of Lake Ontario flow into the St. Lawrence. Many of the summer visitors pay visits to the "Cape," as the village is called, to see the old man and talk with him. Even did he not bear such a striking resemblance to Samuel L. Clemens he would be a noteworthy figure.

The Major is eighty-eight years old, but is as active nearly as he was when a young subaltern on the plains. A crack pistol shot and a good horseman are qualities which have remained with him, and to-day he can ride many miles a day without fatigue. His picturesque figure is seen about the Thousand Islands any pleasant day in the summer garbed in white flannels or blue serge and wearing a yachting cap, skimming about the river in a launch or strolling about the lobbies of the summer hotel, where he is daily mistaken for the famous author and is addressed as such.

Hotel clerks enter into the spirit of the affair and recognize the valuable advertising his presence gives, so they admit that it is Mr. Clemens, but admonish them to say nothing about it, as he is travelling incognito gathering material among the summer resorts for his next book.

ALLIES' ARMY IN FIELD BETTER FED THAN ANY IN HISTORY; NEVER HAVE TO FALL BACK ON RESERVE RATIONS

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY AT THE FRONT, Nov. 30 (by mail to New York).—Probably no army in the world, actually in the field, was ever better fed than is that of the Allies.

Every French soldier in the field is entitled to 23 1-3 ounces of bread a day; 3 1-2 ounces of rice, beans or peas; 10 ounces of meat; 1 1-3 ounces of sugar; 1 ounce lard; 2-3 ounce salt; and a little more than 2-3 ounce of coffee.

These articles constitute the daily ration under ordinary conditions. There are times, however, when circumstances are extraordinary, when fresh meat, new bread, dried vegetables, and regular coffee can not be delivered daily to the soldiers. Under such conditions the French fighting man falls back on his "reserve rations," which are:

Ten ounces of "biscuit" or "war bread," as hard tack is known in the French army; 10 ounces of canned meat; 2 2-3 ounces of sugar; 1 2-3 ounces of soup essence, in cube form; 1¼ ounces of essence of coffee also in cube form, and .0625 litre (1-16 of a quart) of brandy.

Back of the fighting line the French soldier has never had to fall back on his "reserve" rations. He always has his fresh beef, mutton or other meat; his coffee, made from the coffee bean; his fresh bread and the rest. Furthermore, these things are quite good. I have lived for days with the private soldiers and eaten their food, so can give personal testimonial as to its excellence. I have eaten their "reserve" food also, their canned meats (monkey meat, the soldiers call it), and tackled their hard tack; drank their "cube" coffee and perhaps of the bullion made of their soup cubes. It is all wholesome and nutritious. The brandy is good and stimulating and, administered in medicinal doses, as the good Marianne of France administers it can not harm the brave fellows standing in trenches which are hot and cold at one and the same time. Some of this brandy is of the "Salvados" brand, and is made of ripe, tasty apples, and in sipping it, the smell and taste of the apple are quite noticeable.

The revictualling of the Allies, under ordinary circumstances, is carried on by Britain and France separately. That is, France feeds her own troops and Britain feeds hers. It rarely happens—though the circumstance is not unknown—that the French have to feed the British or vice versa. The British eat more tinned foods than the French, one reason being their means of transport are more difficult. They also consume tea in enormous quantities, whereas the French are little addicted to the tea habit. In France I heard this story of a British mother who had just received a letter from her son at the Front:

"My poor boy!" the mother distractedly exclaimed. "He is undergoing enormous sacrifices and hardships! He writes me that a few days ago he was obliged to go from 9 o'clock in the morning until six that evening without lunch and no tea was served that day at all!"

Were the war to stop at this moment my mental picture of a British soldier would be a very healthy looking individual standing by the side of a newly opened packing case eating roast beef from a tin. I have seen him at numerous points along the line, and it seems to me he is always eating.

The Frenchman has two meals a day, plus his morning coffee. The two big meals are at or around 11 o'clock in the morning and 5.30 or 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Usually his meat and vegetables are served together, as they are cooked, the mixture being a stew prepared in huge pots or boilers. His ration is served him by the cook who ladles out a piece of meat and the regulation amount of rice, beans or peas, in his "gamelle" or "casserole," which is part of his equipment. If you have ever seen a picture of a French soldier in full marching order you have noticed this utensil strapped to the top of his knapsack. He eats his meals with his pocket knife or fingers unless he has provided himself with one of the many varieties of collapsible knives and forks.

But where does all this food come from? How does it arive at the Front How is the food collected and handled? Who baked the bread? Where and how?

In France there are some 20 revictualling stations well out of harm's way back of the line. Then there is what is called a "central," which bureau unifies the thing and prevents too much of any material going to one station and too little to another.

Long before war was declared the war department had tabulated the average output of foodstuffs in each department of France. It was already understood that, in case of war, each department was to furnish so much of this or that article. The thing works automatically now that it is started, the government paying the departments for everything as it is bought. The departments send to pre-arranged destinations, otherwise to a certain one of the score of revictualling stations.

Coffee, tea, part of her flour and so on, France buys abroad and the revictualling stations are supplied from central warehouses in the various ports.

The revictualling stations handle flour, but not wheat. The flour is made into bread at these stations, tons of gigantic ovens, in long rows, being employed, soldiers, formerly bakers, doing the work.

The flour goes first to the station warehouses upon its arrival. From there it is taken to a "standardizing" room above the mixing pans. In this room, flours from the United States, South America, Canada, Russia, France, and elsewhere, are mixed or blended so that the quality will always be the same. Were this not so, one soldier would get a loaf of superb white bread, while his bunkie got a dark-looking and less palatable loaf. By blending the flour of all nations the ultimate loaf is standardized. The flour is poured out upon a metal-covered floor and mixed with shovels.

Nearby are holes in the floor. These holes are chutes leading to the giant cast iron dough mixers below. These mixers are steam-operated, great paddles and wheels turning and working the dough to the proper consistency. Once properly worked, the bread is put into a basket holding about 200 pounds and passed on to the weighers and then to the ovens.

I have the word of the soldiers themselves that they get all they want to eat and that what they get is "good."

A SCANDINAVIAN ENTENTE CORDIALE

The conference of the Kings of Sweden, Norway, and Denmark at Malmo, says a contemporary, does not mean that the three countries are about to form a triple alliance. It probably does indicate the establishment of an entente which should be useful in increasing the importance of the Scandinavian factor in Europe.

Singly neither Sweden, Norway nor Denmark would be of weight in European councils. Any one of them could be crushed at will by one of the great Powers. United even by an informal understanding the three states assume a new importance. Swedes, Norwegians, and Danes are among the sturdiest of European races, liberty-loving men and fine fighters. Their combined military establishments would be worthy of serious consideration.

It is rather remarkable that the three peoples so closely akin have so frequently been antagonistic. There have been many Scandinavian wars. In the eleventh and twelfth centuries the Danes and Norwegians were frequently fighting. During the course of the seventeenth century there were no less than five different wars between Denmark and Sweden. Norway and Sweden fought early in the nineteenth century, and nearly fought again in 1905, when the final separation of the two kingdoms was effected.

By the union of Colmar in 1397 the three countries were united under a single ruler, Queen Margaret. Margaret and her successors held the three nations together till 1523, when Sweden seceded and made Gustavus Vasa king. The union of Norway and Denmark lasted till 1814, when Norway was turned over to Sweden.

Under the Vasa kings, the greatest of whom were Gustavus II. and Charles XII., Sweden occupied an important place in European politics. Denmark, usually in opposition to Sweden, was also a state to be reckoned with. Norway has never held a prominent place in European politics, as she has for five centuries been compelled to stand in a subordinate position, first to Denmark and later to Sweden.

Both Sweden and Denmark are poorer in territory than they were at the height of their military greatness. The combined population of the three kingdoms is now about 10,365,000. This is not impressive, but it is not negligible in any alignment of European Powers.

There is no possibility that Sweden, Norway and Denmark will ever again unite under a single government. Experience has taught that such a union is detrimental to the interests of each. But a friendly understanding such as is sought by the three sovereigns should be of definite and immediate value. The entente is specially desirable at a time when the map of Europe is about to undergo radical changes.

"Pape's Diapepsin" digests food when stomach can't—Cures indigestion.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favourite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

BELGIAN LITERARY FAME IS SECURE

In her brief national life from 1831 to the present year, says the Tacoma Ledger, Belgium gave to the world literature that will not die, whatever may be the fate of her more material achievements. Taking high rank in general literature are at least four Belgian writers — Maeterlinck, Verhaeren, Eckhoud, and Rodenbach.

"A much larger nation than Belgium might boast of having produced four writers of their value in one generation," says Charles C. Clarke, in the Yale Review.

While these men write in French, they are of Flemish, or Teuton, element of the Belgians, rather than the Walloon, or Latin, element. Verhaeren is called the poet of Flanders, though the French look upon him as one of themselves. Mr. Clarke says he is not only one of the French, "but he might be thought the greatest living French poet," and he adds that "certainly he is the most virile, most varied, most resonant, most spontaneous of the symbolists." The "colour" of his poetry may be reproduced in English translations, "but they cannot give us his crashing music."

Americans know more about Maeterlinck than any other Belgian author. His productions are widely read and they have been popularized on the stage in this country. In the opinion of Mr. Clarke, the Americans and the British have a special admiration for Maeterlinck because he has more thought than other Belgian writers of note. While his dramas are based upon philosophic ideas, the ideas are conveyed in language which appeals to the simpler emotions. Maeterlinck is a symbolist, too, like many of the other Belgian writers, but there is something more substantial in his works. There is less vagueness in thought.

"We are not, as are the French and Belgians, susceptible primarily to art," observes Mr. Clarke. "To us art is a desirable thing, but accessory. We welcome it in Maeterlinck; we could not imagine him without it; but we read him because like Ibsen and Tolstoi, he contains thought and because he does not give it up to us witsout exacting that expenditure of effort by which we measure value."

Yet Maeterlinck is full of the mysticism which fascinates us without our knowing just why.

Maeterlinck speaks and thinks in French, but it is Mr. Clarke's judgment that he uses French not as an acquired language but as a second mother tongue. While he writes in French he is far from "abandoning the didactic, reflective spirit of Teutonic thought."

The future of Belgian literature is very dark indeed at this time, but whether or not the war destroys Belgium as an independent nation, the work of such men as Maeterlinck and Verhaeren will live.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

The Call of Gideon. Judges vi:11-40.
Golden Text—Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord.

1. Verse 11—What reason, if any, is there to believe that the word angel as used in the Bible sometimes simply means a messenger?

2. Would you say, or not and why, that this angel was a supernatural person?

3. Why did Gideon have to hide his threshing from the Midianites?

4. Verse 12—What reason, if any, is there to believe that God in these days ever sends an angel to visit any person on earth?

5. Verse 13—What does Gideon mean when he asks the angel, "If the Lord be with us, why then is all this befallen us?"

6. Does God ever permit anything to happen to good or bad nations, or to good or bad individuals, which is not for their ultimate good? Why?

7. What would you say is the proof that God has performed miracles in the past and that he does not perform them to-day?

8. Verses 14-16—How does God in these days call men to their individual or special work?

9. Is the call of God to-day so clear, and unmistakable, that any true man may absolutely depend upon it, or not, and why?

10. Verses 16-18 — Gideon was a "mighty man of valor," but weak in faith; how much was he to be praised for the one or blamed for the other?

11. What is the ground of our faith that we shall certainly be successful in the work to whom God calls us?

12. Verses 19-21—Is real hospitality among well-to-do people, a decreasing or an increasing virtue? Give your reasons.

13. If God should perform similar miracles to-day, how much would it increase the faith of real Christians, and what proportion of sinners would it turn to righteousness?

14.—Verses 22-24—In every-day life, we suffer for our ignorance as well as for our sins; does the same rule obtain in our spiritual life as well? Why?

15. Which is to be preferred, and why, a face-to-face talk with an angel, or a message from God to our inner senses?

16. What benefit would it be to us to make some enduring record when we have had some signal experience with God?

17. Verses 25-27—What effect does it have, when the family of a religious reformer are living contrary to His teaching?

18. When is it necessary, if ever, for a good man to be good by stealth?

19. Verses 28-32 — What dangers confront godly men to-day for being faithful to God?

20. Verses 33-35—If God calls us to do a work why may we depend that He will give us all the help we need?

21. Verses 36-40—Was Gideon to be praised or blamed for asking God for more miraculous evidence?

WHEN RUN-DOWN, WEAK AND NERVOUS

What Should a Man Do? Suggestion of Ohio Druggist to One Such Man Saved His Life, So He Says.

Nelsonville, Ohio.—"I was all run-down, weak and nervous and had no appetite at all. In fact I was very much discouraged until our druggist told me about Vinol and asked me to try it. I did so and it has certainly been a life saver to me. I can gladly recommend Vinol to anyone who needs a blood and nerve tonic."—S. S. STEINROD, Nelsonville, Ohio.

When a man is run-down, weak and nervous, he needs a good appetite, good digestion, better blood, more strength, more vitality, and we do not know of any medicine that will supply it so quickly as Vinol.

It is the active medicinal principles of cod liver oil aided by the blood making strengthening properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol, which makes it so efficient in building up health and strength for weak, nervous, run-down men and women.

Weak every weak, nervous, run-down person in this locality to try Vinol on our guarantee, and if it fails to help you we will return your money.

RODIN SAYS WAR IS KILLING ART

ROME, Jan. 19.—"There is no art. The whole world is brutalized. The war is the outburst of this brute force which has been struggling to dominate mankind for over a hundred years."

Auguste Rodin, the greatest sculptor since Phidias, gazing with sad and pessimistic eyes over the magnificent vista of the Eternal City, which has become his refuge from "barbarism," to-day gave utterance to these sentiments to a United Press representative.

"There can be no true understanding or appreciation of art where there is war and destruction," he continued.

Rodin confessed that so terrific is this power of force in our degenerate times that he had fled from Paris, fearing that the Germans would advance upon his beloved home. He has established his studio in Hatoun—the exclusive tea room in the Coloma palace.

"I have come to Rome because I must find a place to work," he continued. "It is impossible to work in Paris or London, for the barbarians are too near. This dominance of brute force has been evidencing itself for years. War is but another manifestation of an age which sends men in slavery into the bowels of the earth in the midst of danger to work in coal mines for a pittance in order to enrich others, which keeps little children standing in factories, which crushes everything beautiful out of life before the juggernaut — commercialism."

Relative to his plan for the future—he is at present working on a memorial to Belgium—the aged artist said: "I will stay in Rome until the war breaks in upon us, for of course Italy will eventually enter the conflict."

"Why not neutral America?"

The master shook his head. "America is the land of the future—and I am no longer young. But we all look toward America and we hope."

GALWAY COUNCIL IN SESSION

Following are the minutes of the proceedings of Galway and Cavendish:

Moved by John McKinley, seconded by James Allen, that the minutes of the last meeting, as read, be adopted.—Carried.

Moved by John Clark, seconded by Edward Grieves, that John J. Allen be reappointed Clerk of the Township of Galway and Cavendish for the year 1915 at the same salary as last year, namely $60, and that he is to perform all the duties in connection with said office; and that Henry Cohen be reappointed Treasurer at the usual salary, and that the Corporation seal be attached to give this motion the effect of a by-law.

Moved by John Clark, seconded by John McKinley, that Robert White [illegible] be appointed to audit the Treasurer's books and accounts for 1914, their salary to be $3 each.

Moved by John McKinley, seconded by John Clark that Dr. Frost be appointed Medical Officer of Health for Galway and Cavandish for 1915; that Chas. Coben and James Allen be members of the Board, and J. J. Allen be Sanitary Inspector and secretary of the Board.—Carried.

Moved by John Clark, seconded by James Allen, that John Allen get permission from the Pathmaster to do two days' statute labour by cutting brush on the roadside on the Cavandish road, and upon furnishing a certificate from the Pathmaster that such work was performed the Collector will give him credit for the same on his tax bill.

Moved by John McKinley, seconded by Ed. Grieves, that the appointment of Edward Allen, as Assessor, be confirmed.—Carried.

Moved by Ed. Grieves, seconded by John McKinley that the following accounts be paid:

John J. Allen, half-year salary, $30; John J. Allen, half-year postage, $2; John J. Allen, selecting jurors, $1.50; Mrs. J. McGee, use of house, for meetings, $7.50.

"NERVILINE" STOPS EARACHE IN 10 SECONDS FIXES TOOTHACHE IN 2 MINUTES

It Seems to Possess Almost Some Divine Power Over Pain.

RUB ON NERVILINE

Toothache is usually due to neuralgia in the gums or to the congestion and swelling of the nerve pulp.

As "Nerviline" relieves congestion, you can easily see why it cures toothache.

Nerviline does more—it cures any ache or pain—in any part of the body.

It matters not where your pain is. It may be in a joint or muscle; it may be neuralgia or lumbago; it may be surface pain is deeply situated in the back, side or chest. Nerviline will reach it; Nerviline will drive it out.

What is Nerviline, you ask? Just a liniment, but very much stronger in pain-subduing power than [illegible] liniments—one that penetrates more deeply in the tissues than any other liniment. It is a liniment that cures quickly, that gives permanent relief.

You might spend ten or a hundred dollars, but you couldn't buy as much relief as you get from a single bottle of Nerviline.

We guarantee Nerviline; we refund your money if it does not relieve you.

In many lands it is a household trust, a remedy that has justified itself under the experience of those who have used it. Guaranteed for neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, rheumatism, pleurisy, strains or sprains; the large 50 cent family size bottle is more economical than the 25 cent trial size. Dealers everywhere sell Nerviline, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

A SOLITARY WAY.

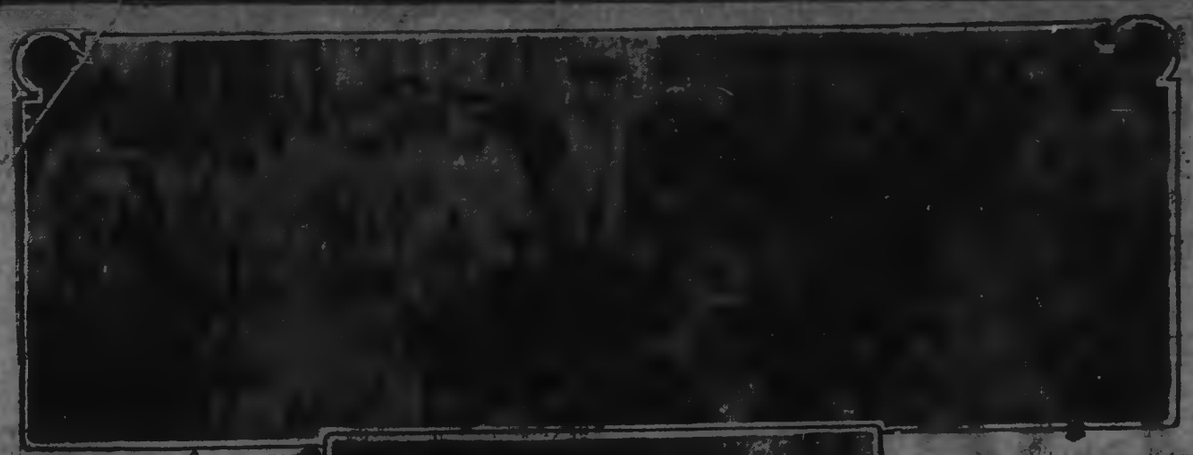
There is a mystery in human hearts,
And though we be encircled by a host
Of those who love us well, and are beloved,
To every one of us, from time to time,
There comes a sense of utter loneliness.
Our dearest friend is "stranger" to our joy,
And cannot realise our bitterness.

"There is not one who really understands,
Not one to enter into all I feel;"
Such is the cry of each of us in turn,
We wander in a "solitary way,"
No matter what or where our lot may be;
Each heart, mysterious even to itself,
Must live its inner life in solitude.

And would you know the reason why this is?
It is because the Lord desires our love.
In every heart He wishes to be first,
He, therefore, keeps the secret key Himself,
To open all its chambers, and to bless
With perfect sympathy and holy peace
Each solitary soul which comes to Him.

So when we feel this loneliness, it is
The voice of Jesus saying, "Come to Me";
And every time we are "not understood,"
It is a call to us to come again;
For Christ alone can satisfy the soul,
And those who walk with Him from day to day
Can never have a "solitary way."

And when beneath some heavy cross you faint,
And say, "I cannot bear this load alone,"



A GROUP of TOMMIES COME in THEIR SHEEPSKIN COATS—POSE for CAMERA

A BRITISH SQUAD IN AMBUSH

Some Pictures of the British Soldiers in action in France and Belgium.

You say the truth. Christ made it purposely
So heavy that you must return to Him.
The bitter grief, which "no one understands,"
Conveys a secret message from the King,
Entreating you to come to Him again.

The Man of Sorrows understands it well,
In all points tempted He can feel with you.
You cannot come too often, or too near.
The Son of God is infinite in grace,
His presence satisfies the longing soul,
And those who walk with Him from day to day
Can never have a "solitary way."

If You Could Only Be A Stomach

You'd Go to Bed Rather Sore at the Work You'd Have to Do.

Fancy a master that works a horse so long, without rest, that the poor old beast at last has to go to a bone pile.

Fancy yourself doing the same thing with your stomach—the noblest of all our physical organs.

Just imagine yourself devoting hours of ceaseless work to the digestion of a meal which you cannot digest because of wrongful ingredients given to you by the blood.

Is not a man very foolish to imagine a raw sick stomach capable of good work when the juices it receives are so filled with alkali or acid that they actually eat the stomach membrane?

Do you not know from a common sense point of view that to continue such a course means not only the impairment of your stomach but of all digestive organs as well?

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into your stomach just like food. They are so powerful in health giving qualities that almost instantly the work of digestion is improved. They ease up the stomach's work. They go into the blood and balance it perfectly. Thus, when the stomach calls for new juices at your next meal you are able to furnish them.

Your common sense will tell you that so great an aid to digestion as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets could not be in every drug store, unless demanded after trial by all classes of stomach sufferers.

No more are they a doubtful quality. They have passed a rigid examination by all manner of stomach and digestive tests, and they have been awarded the diploma of American patronage. Their's has been the practical test.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at 50c a box.

Send coupon below to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample free.

They Had His Number.

London Daily Telegraph.

A day or two ago a French dragoon officer presented himself at the War Office in Paris to make inquiries about a fellow-officer who was reported to be missing. He was received by a clerk, who was most courteous and talked freely about the conditions and prospects of the war. The dragoon departed in his motor-car, and reached the gate of Vincennes, where he was stopped by the sentry. The indignant officer showed his papers, which were all correct, and protested against the delay.

"Sorry, sir," said the sentry, "but we have orders to stop the car which has your number."

The guard was turned out, and the officer of dragoons was escorted to the gendarmerie, where he was discovered to be a German officer who had stolen the papers, and the uniform of the missing officer about whom he had been inquiring at the War Office.

Hughes Leaves for West To-night.

OTTAWA, Jan. 14. — Gen. Sam Hughes came out of the hospital yesterday, after being there for 11 days. He leaves Ottawa for the west to-night and will be away two weeks, going through to the coast and inspecting the troops at all the mobilization centres.

"Mystery of August" in European War Has Light Shed Upon It By Accredited Correspondent With the Warring Armies

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY AT THE FRONT, Nov. 25 (By mail to New York)—After talking with officers here who have taken part in the fighting and who have since made an exhaustive study of the situation, I am now able to throw additional light on the "mystery of August," that period of the war leading up the battle of the Marne and about which practically nothing thus far has been made public.

The official communiques during August were short and contained no details. All that the world knew was that fierce fighting was in progress; that the French and English armies were in retreat; that Paris was in gloom, with most of her lights out, her population fleeing southward and the government preparing to move to Bordeaux. Just what was going on at the front the public did not know. Rumour had it, towards the first of September, that the Germans were in the Paris suburbs, and the exodus was increased, railway stations were packed and many people with first class tickets were glad to find plank seats in freight cars bound for the south.

At this precise moment, without the public knowing it, the tide had turned; the Germans had abandoned Paris as their objective; General Joffre had outplayed Generals von Kluck and von Bulow, and set the stage for the Germans' check and retreat.

It now appears certain that General Joffre deliberately led the Germans into believing his army definitely beaten and the British expeditionary forces completely done for, letting them think all they had to do was to let Paris go for the moment, follow up the French and English and crush them for good and all. Over confident, the Germans were caught off their guard, just as Joffre expected they would be and as he is believed to have planned and the so called battle of the Marne ended in a victory for the allies and the consequent saving of the capital.

How did Joffre lead up to his victory? By refusing to play the grand stand, by attending to his job regardless of what the public might think.

The French Commander-in-Chief decided to retire the bulk of his forces east of Paris to positions south of the Marne and the Ornain and there prepare his offensive. On the first of September this movement was well under way and, so far as I can gather, it was the rapidity of this moment which fooled the German commanders and led them into the error of believing the French and English armies to all intents routed.

From this supposed definite retreat of the Allies, the German commanders took to their cue. They had two alternatives before them; either they would have to pursue the Allies with the bulk of their armies, in the moment neglecting Paris or else let the Allies go and take Paris, a result apparently ardently desired from both military and political points of view. If they chose the first course, they risked envelopment in a country cut by numerous water courses—Marne, Grand Morin, Petit Morin, etc.—but if they chose the second such a vast number of troops would be necessary that elsewhere their lines would be so weakened that an offensive by the Allies might prove disastrous.

So they chose the first course, since apparently the Allies were practically defeated, determining to pursue them and annihilate both French and English. Thus came to be fought the Battle of the Marne which was not really the Battle of the Marne at all, but of five or six other rivers as well.

The battle commenced around Sept. 5. The danger of the enveloping movement probably foreseen by the Germans but discounted because they thought the Allies definitely in retreat and incapable of serious fighting, at once became apparent. The French and English pressed in from the west, making a pocket the bottom of which was in the region of Coulommiers, Courtacon and Esternay, and here Generals Foch, d'Esperey and others resuming the offensive, began their smashing blows. The rest of the story is known. The Germans retreated precipitously leaving behind considerable material. The French praise the German commanders for escaping at all. Under less able leaders, the French say, they could not have extricated their armies so well prepared were the plans of General Joffre.

Among military men, foreign as well as French, General Joffre is regarded as a fox for strategy and utterly free from pose. These two qualities, they say, permit him to plan his movements carefully and without an eye to the bleachers or an ear to public opinion. He fights for France instead of for his own glory.

London Is Itself Again After War's First Shock

LONDON, Jan. 12—London has recovered herself. The stunned condition which followed the start of war has given place to a normal vitality. The day when the last shot is fired still may be a long way off, and meanwhile German raiders may continue trying their favourite game of slipping through darkness and fog to smash houses, set fire to churches, killing innocent women and children in defenceless towns on the English coast, but every body feels that Germany is already licked, and that she feels it, too. It is now simply that she is determined not to give up until she has done all the mischief she can. That, at any rate, is the opinion you hear expressed in club, restaurant, train and 'bus.

Theatre agents say that, so far as amusements are concerned, the tide has turned, and that plays of an amusing and gay characters now are drawing crowds. Officers and soldiers home on leave turn to the play as an antidote to the dreary gloom of the trenches. Women worrying about their friends at the front have discovered that a pleasant play breaks the monotony of their thoughts and restores their balance.

"There is practically no booking in advance," said a well known agent. "People do not now lay plans for an evening's amusement at the theatre. They engage seats as the result of a sudden mood or a desire to escape from themselves. Nobody wants problem or tragic plays. As far as Christmas is concerned, the grown-ups did nothing, but Punch and Judy, marionettes and conjurers for children were as much in demand as ever.

Cannon explosions, big bangs, battlefields, pistol reports, trenches, soldiers, and German spies, Huns and barbarians, are among the items provided at the cinematographs, and decorous placards try to reinstate the "dance tea" of the west end.

Bond street is almost itself again. The gaudy, barbarous colourings of collars and hat trimming which prevailed a few weeks ago have given place to dark navy blue. Though a considerable amount of black is worn, little mourning is to be seen. The very modish mondaine, who when the war broke out looked strangely like a derelict from other days, has recovered her funny little air of insolent assurance, and her high heeled shoes tap the pavements as confidently as ever. Sometimes, too, she carries her little pampered dog, who temporarily disappeared from public life in those trouble days when fear drove out frivolity.

Fashionable photographers' shops have undergone a transformation. Instead of self-conscious, smiling fashionable beauties and actresses, with carefully adjusted "pleasing expressions," the windows show the grave, intelligent faces of young officers and soldiers in khaki or of great generals and commandants, and the change is welcomed, for London has been fed on sugar till it has nearly lost the taste for anything more stimulating. The "picture postcard smile" — the smile of the teeth and not the soul—had dominated London long enough.

The craze for knitting seems to have subsided. In tube or 'bus only a woman here and there plicks her way through woolly intricacies. In a fashionable Bond street shop a well-dressed woman may be seen smoking a cigarette as she knits. That result is inharmonious.

The man in khaki is reviving the lost art of courtesy. In the trenches he has learned that to stand a few minutes' journey is not a hardship. It is he who always leaps to his feet in tube or 'bus to proffer his seat to a woman, and the civilian, shamed from his "inglorious ease," grudgingly does likewise.

Character is coming into its own again. Before the war intellect was worshipped. Now the simple qualities of the soul—courage, sincerity, heroism— are the qualities that count. They fit the present hour.

London at nightfall, however, is still a city of mystery, of shadow and haunting terrors. Before and behind is a deep blackness, in which omnibuses look like huge monsters with glowing eyes. The faces of the passing crowd, white against the inky background, look like the faces of the damned, doomed to wander about in the blackness forever. The revolving advertisements which chained one to things of earth by their sparkling insistence on whiskeys and pills and patent medicines have ceased from troubling, and London at night time now is more beautiful than it has been within the memory of the present generation.

A HAPPY CHILD IN JUST A FEW HOURS

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

AFRICA WOULD HAVE CONQUERED THE WHOLE WORLD IF SHE HAD HAD ONE AEROPLANE OR WIRELESS OUTFIT 2121 YEARS AGO

(By Herbert Quick)

Only one country in Africa is now really independent — the mountain kingdom of Abyssinia, which guards the fountains of the Nile.

Africa is a slave continent. But if there had been a single aeroplane or wireless telegraph in the possession of the richest and most inventive people in existence 2121 years ago, the world would have been conquered by Africa.

Carthage was the name of a city in Africa, but it meant an empire.

But, aside from the shores controlled by the Greeks and Romans, the Mediterranean was a Carthaginian lake and their ships sailed the Atlantic ocean as boldly as did those of Spain when Columbus came to America.

Carthage had her teeth set in the throat of Rome. Her great general, Hanibal, had been in Italy with an army for 11 years, and the Romans could not drive him out. Think of the condition of France, let us say, if a German army had been ravaging her cities and fields for 11 years. And think of the despair should it be learned that another great army had come in from Germany, under another great general.

Such was the situation in Rome that year. Hannibal and Hasdrubal were sons of a great Carthaginian general, Hamilcar the Thunderbolt. These sons of the Thunderbolt were greater than their sire. Hannibal's army, wasted by 11 years of war, was still too much for the Roman legions, but he could not, unaided, bring Rome to earth. He was in the very south of Italy when Hasdrubal crossed the Alps with another mighty army. All was over with Rome if these two hosts could once unite.

But they had no airship, no wireless, and Hannibal did not know where Hasdrubal was nor when he reached the valley of the Po. Hasdrubal sent messengers to carry the news and give advices as to a point of junction. A consul named Nero was watching Hannibal's army in command of the Roman forces, and took prisoner the messenger of Hasdrubal. He learned the plans of Hasdrubal, but Hannibal did not.

Then Nero did a wonderful thing. When we read the name Nero, we invariably think of the emperor of that name and his monstrous career, but the Consul Nero saved Europe from becoming African. He is the really great Nero. He left men enough before Hannibal's camp to keep up a show of an army, and marched north to join the other Roman Army against Hasdrubal. He defeated and destroyed Hasdrubal's army in the battle of the Metaurus River—another battle on which the world turned as on a pivot.

As Hannibal lay encamped a few weeks thereafter, messengers came to him with a ghastly object which had been thrown over the walls of his camp. It was a human head. He looked at the swollen lips, the glazed eyes and through all the disguise of putrefaction he recognized that other son of Thunderbolt, his brother Hasdrubal. He raised his head, and, looking long at nothing as a man in a trance, he sighed. "Rome," said he, "will now be mistress of the world."

He knew that Hasdrubal's death meant the defeat of his army, the defeat eventually of Hannibal's army and the final defeat of Carthage. This removed the last of Rome's rivals — and the lapse of centuries was required before the German tribes of the north could do to Rome, what Carthage could not do.

One airship, one wireless installation, would have advised Hannibal of Hasdrubal's approach and given the world to the Semites of northern Africa.

THE GENEROUS STRANGER

Lord Kitchener Acknowledged His Nationality to Soldier's Mother

There was a certain old woman in Dundee whose son was fighting at the front. He was wounded and brought to a hospital in the south of England. She greatly wanted to see her son, so some friends clubbed together and got enough money to pay her fare.

While she was in the ward talking to her son she noticed a tall, military looking stranger talking to the men. Presently he came over to her and asked where she came from. "Dundee," she said. "But you aren't Scotch?" he asked. "No" she replied, "I'm Irish." Whereupon he slipped half-a-sovereign into her hand, and went to the next bed.

The old woman was so excited over this that she said to her son: "I wonder if he's Irish?" The tall man looked round and replied, "Yes, I'm Irish, and my name is Kitchener."

Russia's Monitor Aeroplanes

A good deal has been heard concerning the British and German aeroplanes, but the great Sikorsky biplanes used by the troops of the Czar have been rather overlooked. These machines, invented by a Russian named Sikorsky, are by far the biggest aeroplanes being flown in the war—in fact, they are the largest in the world. They stand 14 feet high and are about 100 feet wide. The Sikorsky can carry almost as many passengers as an airship. Twenty men can be accommodated in the large passenger cabin, which is constructed of metal and contains numerous windows. In this machine three engines are fitted, which give a total of nearly 1,000 horse-power, for, owing to the Sikorsky biplane weighing in itself one and a half tons, and having so large a crew to carry, it demands high power to pull it off the ground and keep it in the air.

The weight of the machine has necessitated an elaborate landing chassis, composed of numerous springs and pneumatic tubes, so that the huge biplane can alight safely on rough ground at a speed of sixty miles an hour.

AUSTRIA IS EAGER TO BREAK WITH GERMANY, SAYS OBSERVER OF WAR

Austrian and Hungarian Civil Populations on Verge of Uprising, Declares Mr. Thomas Slidell, Who Has Covered Both Theatres of Conflict

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Austria is eager to withdraw from her fighting compact with Germany, according to the observations of Mr. Thomas Slidell, of this city, who returned last week from the war zone, where from the beginning of hostilities, he has represented the London Times and other publications.

Mr. Slidell has studied the war situation from Dunkirk to Galicia. In a light automobile, accompanied by an interpreter, he traversed many hundred miles of road, talked with the people of the countries at war, watched the progress of opposing armies, and studied public sentiment.

He is of the family to which belonged John Slidell, Confederate Commissioner to France in the Civil War, who afterwards made his home in Britain. He had exceptionally good opportunities of meeting leaders in the army and in diplomatic circles and has been in close touch with all phases of the situation in Europe. Mr. Slidell has seen military operations on both the western and eastern lines. He has been in the cities and towns of Northern France; he was in bombarded Rheims, he watched the trend of affairs in Cracow, in Vienna, and in Budapest. His belief is that the fate of the Germanic alliance is trembling in the balance, for he sees every evidence that the soldiers of Austria are demoralized by the attacks of the fierce soldiery of Russia, to which are added the terror of ravening wolves which beset them in a land swept by the blasts of winter.

War a Siege of Germany

"The war has resolved itself into a siege of Germany," said Mr. Slidell yesterday. "Germany insists, of course, that its fighting is not being conducted in her own territory but in that of her foes she is not beleaguered, but as a matter of fact siege conditions exist.

"Her food supplies will probably last six months longer, and she is already considerably embarrassed by the lack of petrol, due to the seizure by the forces of Russia of Galicia, with its oil wells. The fact that in this war the means of defence are far more efficient than those of offence tends to prolong the struggle. What with wire entanglements and machine guns it is possible for troops to hold off a force ten times their own number. The development of a more effective offensive would be an important new factor in the situation. As it is now Germany is besieged on the east and west and Austria, her ally, is becoming more and more disaffected. I do not doubt that there will be civil riots in Austria-Hungary before long, and it may be that dissension will appear in Germany itself.

"It would be very difficult to stay in Austria any length of time just now without feeling how unpopular the war has become. High and low, rich and poor, would make almost any sacrifice to have it over.

Balk at Field Service

"The original idea was that Germany should do all the heavy work while Austria smothered Servia, yet the first week in August saw the entire Austrian army, which had been carefully assembled on her southern frontier, moved quickly north to strengthen Field-Marshal von Hindenburg, where it has remained to this day. Instead of Germany helping Austria it is precisely the reverse. Servia now has nobody to fight. Servia is at peace and Austria is at war, and this is hard for the Austrians to bear.

"Roumania also has been very bothersome. Early in the war she received $40,000,000 to keep quiet, but now that the great natural gasfields and petrol have been developed in Transylvania the temptation of annexing that province has appealed so strongly to Roumania that Austria is becoming greatly alarmed. It looks very much as if Transylvania would change flags.

"Austria is unhappy. A few months ago the authorities in Vienna were trying to float a popular loan, and so they sent a small force into Servia with the idea of cheering things up. But the Russians hurried ammunition down to her ally. The result is now generally known. The Austrian force went blindly in, thinking the enemy had no powder. When they had been permitted to go so far that retreat was impossible they were promptly massacred. The Servian army with ammunition in very dangerous.

Criticizes Austrian Officers

"The Austrian as a soldier is probably the equal of the German, but his officers are extremely inefficient. Many have been replaced by Prussians. The Hungarians, on the other hand, is not even fitted temperamentally for fighting. He is a quiet, peaceful person who often sickens at the sight of blood. He knows and cares nothing for the arts of war and is a hard man to make fight resolutely. Many of this type are no match for the Russians, and especially for those Siberians of Mongolian ancestry, giants in strength and more fierce than the Tercos, who are now being sent against the Austrians and the Germans. These warriors are eager to fight, and so cold that discipline is enforced with whips by their officers.

"There has been a great deal of unnecessary alarm among the Allies over Russia's withdrawal from Lodz and Bocthein, but from very close quarters this movement is made easily understood. From the beginning the Russian generals have experienced difficulty through their restricted battle front. Between Lodz and Cracow there is much ground over which it is impossible to fight. From a military standpoint these two places are cut off, one from the other. Field-Marshal von Hindenburg, with his twenty-two army corps, had little difficulty in closing up the comparatively small gaps back of these points of attack, and so the Russian forces retired to a broader area, where they could force the Germans into a highly extended battle front and so bring into operation their vastly superior numbers. That move was in no sense a retreat. Field-Marshal von Hindenburg will be very careful how he ventures in the direction of Warsaw. He himself blew up all the roads and bridges last summer and they have not been properly repaired.

Cold Menaces Invaders.

"The winter in Poland is the most severe in all Europe. The snow is deep, the wind very strong, and the cold intense. One gets an idea of the cold in which the armies are fighting when it is known that the steel bits of the horses must be removed and hemp used in their place. It is hard to realize, for instance, how a Saxon army corps could live under such conditions. Perhaps they won't.

"There was cholera at Cracow and some at Budapest. The wolves have also caused trouble. They come down from the mountains in packs of ten or twenty and attack the wounded and those who have dropped behind with bad feet. They do not eat the bodies. They will devour only such prey as they themselves have killed. I saw several soldiers in the hospitals at Budapest badly bitten about the neck and back. The curious thing about these wolves is that before the fighting began they were comparatively few. I was told by a Russian of high standing in Galicia, but there are many now. They gather like buzzards, it would seem.

"In Vienna there is a desperate attempt to keep up appearances, but the underlying strain must be exhausting. For example, the money situation is bad. Twenty-nine kronen $5.80) are required at the present time to buy a sovereign ($4.84).

Expects Outbreak Soon.

"Austria with especial reference to Hungary, is dreadfully sorry now that she embarked on her war career with Germany as a chaperon. I should not be at all surprised to see in the not distant future some outward expression of this growing feeling. There are many interesting things developing in Austria-Hungary and the Balkan States as a result of the war.

"To all intents and purposes Galicia has become Russian. She is ruled over by the Russians and the guide posts along the roads bear Russian characters. The province seems satisfied under the administration of the Tsar, so much so that there are 100,000 refugees in Vienna who would like to get back there, but they are not permitted to do so. It develops, too, that many of these Galicians are American citizens. They had worked in the coal mines of the United States for years. It is required that they report themselves every three years, and they have done so. Now they are appealing to our Ambassador in Vienna, Mr. Penfield, to be sent back to the United States, and he is providing tickets for them. They are very hardy citizens and will add considerably to the population, for they have many children. I saw one Galician woman at the Embassy who had ten.

Hungarian Agitators Busy.

"Thousands of Hungarians who had been serving throughout all the countries of Europe as cooks and waiters and in similar occupations have been driven back to Hungary. They came originally of a peasant stock, attached to the land and knowing little, as there are few schools in Hungary. These men have acquired several languages and considerable knowledge of the world, and they are a restless element. They are going about among the Hungarians and are agitating for a new order of things. It would not surprise me if Hungary should at any time form a separate State.

"If any one feels charitably disposed it seems to me that in Servia a fertile field might be found. The Servians are actually destitute. This is their third consecutive war. Their casualties have been 100 per cent.; they are without ammunition. I doubt if they have soap any, or bandages or similar hospital supplies for wounds. Nothing could have saved them from complete extinction but the fact that a free hand. And now the Germans continue to keep up their campaign.

"Not long ago I saw many Servian women held as prisoners. They had gone to greet Austrian troops, carrying bouquets in which were bombs which exploded and did terrible execution when the floral offerings were hurled at close range. The Servians are struggling blindly on, fighting their enemies from time to time as they present themselves. Such a people must have a great soul."

Finds Dupe Hamilton Effective.

Commenting upon the probable outcome of the struggle, Mr. Slidell said that it depended largely upon the means of the development of offensive warfare. He thinks the most effective weapons so far used are the pondorous howitzers made by the Austrians and used both by the Austrians and the Germans. Little is known about them, even now, as they are handled by a small corps of men who are forbidden to talk about them. The shock absorber attachments and some secret method of spinning the projectiles in the gun before they are fired are considered the most important factors in their usefulness. The aeroplanes, he has observed, have reached a marvellous state of efficiency, so that now no movement of infantry is undertaken without them.

"It is my opinion," said Mr. Slidell, "that this war will come to an end as suddenly as it began. It might easily be closed, for example, by some internal strife in the nations engaged. Some sudden blunder may even bring peace before we realize what has taken place. But it will terminate only when the question of the supremacy of the world is settled. Germany has challenged Britain, just as in time past other nations have, and have been defeated. And every time Great Britain asks her toll and takes out a screw from the machinery of the oppressing nations so that it won't work. She did this when she took Gibraltar from Spain and occupied many years ago the Channel Islands of France. Moreover, the British enjoy fighting. We see them going about it gaily. The soldiers of Britain are in fine condition on the firing lines. Even there they are well groomed, clear skinned, well shaved, and good tempered. They have the air of men enjoying a holiday.

"And I am told on high authority in Britain that there will be a million more of them across the Channel by Easter, ready to tighten the ring and to carry on this long and stubborn siege of the Fatherland."

Rev. S. R. Heakes Gets Commission.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 14. — Rev. S. R. Heakes, former curate of Cronyn Methodist Church, this city, who left for the front as a chaplain with the first contingent, has secured a commission with the Seaforth Highlanders of Vancouver, according to word received from Salisbury Plain, and will go to the firing line as a combatant. Rev. Mr. Heakes, before going into the ministry, was a mining engineer, and is well known in the Cobalt district.

Turkish Attack Imminent.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 14.—"An attack upon Egypt from Syria cannot be long deferred," says an official statement made by Sir Arthur McMahon, the new British High Commissioner.

"The Germans continue to collect large forces for the Turkish army in Syria, but it is foredoomed to failure.

"The Germans are underscored by the Turkish subordinates in the Caucasus. They might better to win victories for the Turks, but to distract the attention of Great Britain from the campaign in Flanders."

KAISER'S CHIEF SPY ONCE MET THE KING

"Steinhauer of Potsdam" Directs Vast Network of Germany's System of Espionage—Lives in London

The British Kaiser's most Minister enemy today is a German member of the Berlin Police Department named Oberst Steinhauer, who was promoted from Lieutenant of Police, and actually shook hands with King George.

Without Steinhauer and the knowledge which he alone possesses, neither the Kaiser nor his army and navy and Zeppelin Zeppelin combined would make an effectual move against the British Isles.

Officially he holds no defined position under the German Government. Yet for the past five years every report sent to Berlin by German secret agents in England, Scotland, Ireland, or Wales has been perused by him, and in almost every instance he has directed the movements of these gentry. He sits in an office hidden away in the Imperial Palace at Potsdam, the centre of a web of espionage which covers all the countries of the world, but which is woven most finely over the dominions of George V.

Steinhauer comes of good burgher stock, and the early part of his career differed in no wise from that of thousands of other civilian servants of the German Empire. After serving his time in the army he became a non-commissioned officer and eventually graduated into the Berlin Police Department. From the first month of his employment as a policeman, however, he displayed so marked a talent for detective work that it speedily attracted the attention of high Governmental authorities and he was drafted into the Intelligence Department of the German navy.

"STEINHAUER OF POTSDAM

Had Talents For Spying

Recognizing that Great Britain was the power from whom the Fatherland had the most fear, Steinhauer concentrated his energies on the British branch of espionage to such good effect that, within little more than a year he was placed in charge of all matters concerned with the secret investigation of British armaments. That was about five years ago. It was not until two years later, however, when he had the opportunity to demonstrate his skill under the very eyes of the Emperor himself, that he attained the unique position he holds to-day. Officially the Kaiser went to England in 1911 to attend the unveiling by the King of the Queen Victoria Memorial. His real purpose was intimately concerned with the fact that Steinhauer was a member of his suite.

This unobtrusive gentleman was little in evidence at the grand ceremonies and entertainments held in honor of Wilhelm II.'s visit to George V. His duties were of a character that took him to strange haunts in the East End, and to quiet little hostelries in seaport towns, and even to the naval bases in Scotland. After each of these trips he returned to Buckingham Palace and reported to his monarch. He had put a new code into effect, he had received exhaustive reports from every German spy in England—(200 known spies were arrested at the outbreak of the War)—

Thoroughly Detailed

That was how he was known to the less important agents—simply as Steinhauer of Potsdam. Beyond that they knew nothing whatever of him, except that he was a well-groomed man of about 40, who always wore an affable manner and the best clothes that London tailoring can produce. Even his hats were made to order in London. Like every cog in the German wheel of Government, he is absolutely thorough in his methods.

The devices originated by Steinhauer to aid the activities of his [illegible] were too numerous to dwell upon in any detail. It was he who invented the system of signalling by automobile and bicycle headlights from points on the English or Scotch coast to submarines or other vessels in the North Sea. It was he who realized the value of disguising spies in the uniform of Boy Scouts or scout masters—a scheme which has caused all kinds of trouble to Sir Baden-Powell. His genius found a way to signal by hidden wireless from the very heart of London and to conceal stores of petrol for German aeroplanes in the Scottish Highlands. He stops at no obstacle, and the means placed at his disposal are practically limitless.

and he has arranged, with the Kaiser's approval, to have every item of military or naval information collected in the United Kingdom sent by direct or indirect route to "Steinhauer, Potsdam."

NEWS IN BRIEF

The object of the meeting of Anglican bishops of Ontario in Kingston on the 21st is to consider the question of the vacant bishopric of Ottawa. Bishop Thornloe, of Algoma, to whom the post was offered, does not care to accept.

William Tait, a graduate of the University of Toronto, and now one of the government engineers preparing a plan for the proposed Ottawa federal district, has received word that his brother has been killed while fighting in France with the Honourable Artillery Company.

During the past few days about thirty cases of typhoid fever have developed in Brockville, some serious. Four samples of water sent to Dr. Connell, of Kingston, bacteriologist of Queen's University, showed contamination. The Board of Health will now take action.

A special meeting of the Kingston Presbytery has been called for Belleville on January 21st to consider the call extended to Rev. Dr. MacTavish from the congregation at Madoc. Dr. MacTavish is a former pastor of Cooke's Church, Kingston, and for some time has been serving as one of the field secretaries for the Dominion Alliance.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

TWO VIEWS OF A FACE

A Story For Hallowe'en

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

It is singular how certain callings will be considered criminal in one age and respectable in another. There was a period—the early part of the nineteenth century—when the professional gambler in what is now the middle west was quite a prominent personage in the community. So in England there was a period when the highwayman, especially he who robbed the rich and gave to the poor, was regarded a very good medium for the equalizing of funds. Some of England's best blood has been represented on the highway.

One evening a couple of hundred years ago a gentleman and his daughter were bumping along in a chaise on an unpaved road that led from London to their home near Clough when they were stopped by a masked horseman who appeared at the window and demanded their valuables. Sir Evan Brierly, the father, produced his money and his watch without resistance, but Evelyn, his daughter, demurred.

"I will give you, sir," she said, "the only valuable article I have, which you cannot take from me by force, provided you will give me a glimpse of your features."

"Pray what may that be?"

"I shall not tell you."

The robber hesitated, then lifted his mask, and by the side light on the chaise Evelyn saw the face of a young man, singularly handsome and refined. She remained silent for a time, and the highwayman said:

"I have kept my part of the contract. It only remains for you to keep yours. What is this article that I may not take by force?"

"My heart."

At that moment there was a sound of horses' hoofs coming, and the highwayman rode away with the words:

"So be it. I shall some day call for it."

Evelyn Brierly was but seventeen when she made this bargain. When questioned as to her intent when she made it she replied that she could not explain what induced her to say that in exchange for a view of the man's features she would give the only valuable article she had, nor had she framed a reply as to what the article was. She only knew that when she saw the strikingly handsome features of a gentleman the answer came to her from she knew not where and her reply was involuntary.

That was a period when Cromwell's Ironsides had defeated the forces of King Charles I. and Cromwell had made himself lord protector of England. The king's adherents were deprived of their fortunes and scattered. Some of them sought service in the armies of foreign sovereigns, and some, in order to make a living, took to the road. Among these was Lord Walter Wheatleigh, whose father, the Earl of Portland, had been killed at Naseby fighting for the king. Walter, the last of his race, had served under Prince Rupert, and after the beheading of the king his estates had been confiscated, leaving him penniless. He was one of those who took to the road for a living, and it was he who had stopped the chaise of Sir Evan Brierly and made the singular bargain with Evelyn. He afterward joined the young king (Charles II.) on the continent and at the restoration returned with the king, who restored to him his ancestral estates.

Meanwhile Evelyn Brierly grew to be a handsome woman. The face of the highwayman and the mysterious influence that had induced her to pledge him her heart in exchange for a glimpse of it never left her. The years went by, and he did not return to claim his own. Sometimes she dreaded he would and sometimes feared he would not. After awhile she began to think that he had suffered for his crimes on the gallows.

One October evening—it was Hallowe'en—Evelyn stole out of her home and went across the fields to the river bank. The moon was but a few days old and was dividing the day and the night. Evelyn stood on the river bank among scattered trees and, raising a mirror she held in her hand, said aloud:

"Good moon, show me my future husband."

There was a sound of breaking twigs behind her, and a face appeared reflected in the glass. It was the well remembered face of the highwayman.

"Mistress Brierly," he said, "one night some years ago I gave you a sight of my face for your heart. To give you good measure I give you another sight of the same unworthy object."

Evelyn dropped the mirror and turned.

"The highwayman!" she exclaimed.

"The repentant highwayman, formerly Walter Wheatleigh of Prince Rupert's army, then reduced to make a living on the road, now Earl of Portland."

"I did not know what I was saying," said the girl, turning away. The young earl caught her, saying:

"Nevertheless you said it, and I have come for my own."

Evelyn Brierly became Countess of Portland and for a short while a member of the court of King Charles. But the profligacy of the court soon drove her to her husband's home near Windsor, where she remained, living a somewhat secluded life with her husband and her children.

CLASH WITH CIVILIANS.

Germans Punished Citizens Who Did Not Provide Food.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 14.—The failure of the residents of Magnault, in the Province of Hainaut, to meet the military requisition of food and fodder for a cavalry troop, resulted in an encounter between civilians and soldiers on Monday night, in which three civilians were killed and a soldier was wounded, according to a refugee who crossed the border into Holland yesterday.

The Germans demanded that the residents of the village produce the burgomaster. They replied that the burgomaster has been missing and is thought to be dead. Maintaining that the village official was not dead, but in hiding, the Germans arrested five elderly men of the town. The Germans also looted the co-operative store.

U. S. Consul Saves British.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—How the vigorous intervention of the American consul at Jerusalem, coupled with the dramatic appearance of the United States cruiser Tennessee, enabled the last five British subjects remaining in the Holy City to escape is related by one of them, a clergyman, who arrived in London yesterday.

Only by the untiring efforts of the consul, said the clergyman, were they able to obtain permission to leave Jerusalem on Christmas Eve.

Was Troubled With Eczema.

Would Nearly Yell With Pain.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED HIM.

Mr. R. J. Swales, Harriston, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer with eczema. I tried all kinds of salves, but they did me no good. Sometimes I would nearly yell with the pain, and would pass little white worms. I was told to get at the blood, so I used four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it has made a complete cure."

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, boils, pimples, eruptions, ulcers, etc., are all caused by the blood becoming impoverished, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble, and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters will cleanse the blood of all its impurities and by this means cure all skin and blood troubles.

This valuable preparation has been on the market for the last forty years, so you do not make any experiment when you give it a trial.

THE KING'S WAR NEWS

His Majesty Immediately Learns of Every New Movement at Front

When King George visited a military hospital on a recent occasion the wounded with whom he chatted were astonished at his Majesty's extensive and accurate knowledge of the officers under whom they had served, and also the information he possessed of the movements of the troops on the Continent. As a matter of fact, King George and Lord Kitchener undoubtedly know more concerning the activities of the British troops than any men in England. Sir John French's private despatches to Lord Kitchener are shared by King George. Almost every day the newspapers report that the Secretary of State for War has visited the King, and it is during these consultations that the vital facts concerning the troops are laid before his Majesty.

Of course not the slightest rumor of what has occurred at these meetings ever leaks out. Directly the King has left his private apartments a secretary enters and destroys the contents of the wastepaper basket or any odd scrap of paper which might afford a clue as to what took place during the interview. These precautions are taken before any servant is allowed to enter the room. Important military despatches King George keeps locked in his safe and desk, of which there are but single keys, which his Majesty carries with him.

It was a wounded soldier who said that "King George carried the army list in his head," but the enthusiastic "Tommy" in question would probably be more surprised if he knew the full extent of his Majesty's knowledge of military and naval affairs. During his many years in the navy the King had ample opportunity of studying British and foreign coast defences. He knows every weak and strong spot on the North Sea and Channel coast, and of recent years he has especially concerned himself with the growth of English coast defences. King George has also obtained extensive practical knowledge of naval tactics by taking an active part in all the big naval reviews.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Grey, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour, and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

JELLICOE A BOXER

In the British army and navy the great game of boxing has long been the most popular sport of both officers and men.

Perhaps a majority of the officers and tars of the British navy to-day are clever boxers, but, age and weight considered, there isn't a better fistic gladiator in His Majesty's navy who can give a better account of himself than Vice-Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, the commander of the North Sea fleet. The admiral has passed his fifty-fifth milestone, but he is still active and strong and fond of a stiff bout with the mitts.

In his younger days the little sea fighter—he is only five feet four inches in height—was the bantamweight champion of the British navy. Stories of his fistic prowess are still current and it is said that he scored many victories over lightweights and welter weights. In those days "Jelly," as he was popularly called, always entered the ring a favorite. At Bottingdean where he received his land education, he was a famous football player, although he weighed only about 11st pounds.

Through his fondness for strenuous sports he developed a constitution which was strong enough to bring him through many perils on sea and land and without which he would never have lived to reach the high honors he holds to-day.

German History in Three Lines

"The following 'History of the German Empire in Three Lines' deserves mention," says a Petrograd correspondent:

"'Kaiser Wilhelm I. was its maker,
Friedrich Wilhelm, his heir, just its taker,
And "I" by the grandest, its breaker.'"

GENERAL HENDERSON FLIER AND ORGANIZER

Head of Royal Flying Corps a Practical Aviator Holding a Pilot's Certificate

General Sir David Henderson is the link between the vast machinery of the British army and the delicate machinery of flight.

Not every master of an old-established craft—a craft based upon centuries of military experience—was ready to take the leap into the blue, and the British War Office was fortunate in finding a highly trained soldier ready to volunteer for the laborious, difficult, and speculative task of bringing the brilliant achievement of the individual and independent British aviator into line with military usage.

Sir David set quietly to work and got his pilot's certificate. He was never anxious to do the fancy tricks that have been the ambition of the civilian aviator, but a working knowledge of air-craft he deemed necessary to the proper superintendence of the Royal Flying Corps. Flying came easily to him; he has the hand that instinctively gets to the right lever, and the sense of touch which runs, it is said, through all the fibres of a flier's body.

But it is not as a practical aviator Sir David is valued, but because he was one of a very few soldiers who grasped the aerial situation before the outbreak of war. "From the time that troops leave ship or railway," he had said, "they will be under observation. If they move by day, the most stringent precautions will not suffice to conceal them, and such precautions are certain to cause delay. Even if they move by night, large stationary forces are not easy to conceal by day. Aerial scouts will no doubt make mistakes; troops may be reported in places where there are none, troops in other places will remain undiscovered. But it must be expected that the principal dispositions and movement will be disclosed, and the fog which formerly obscured the initial strategic design will be cleared away."

We know the result. Sir John French paid this tribute: "I wish particularly to draw attention to the admirable work done by the Royal Flying Corps under Sir David Henderson. Their skill, energy, and perseverance have been beyond praise. They have furnished me with the most complete and accurate information, which has been of incalculable value in the conduct of operations. Fired at constantly both by friend and foe, and not hesitating to fly in every sort of weather, they have remained undaunted throughout. Further, by actually fighting in the air, they have succeeded (at the time of writing) in destroying five of the enemy's machines."

To these lines must be added General Joffre's testimony: "The precision, exactitude, and regularity of news brought in by members of the Royal Flying Corps are evidence of their perfect organisation, and also of the perfect training of pilots and observers."

The organiser is Sir David. He is the go-between. On the one hand, you have the general, with every sort of thing to think about except the exact capabilities, or limitations, of the all-daring aviator who possesses everything but the larger knowledge of a general's strategy. To both of these Sir David is invaluable.

A soldier of over twenty years' experience, with distinguished service in Egypt and South Africa to his credit, he is able at a moment's notice to bring the demand and the supply into working relationship. Moreover, he is a strict observer of vital economies and does not squander useful men.

What Britain Stands For

"Britain in almost every age has been the friend of the enslaved and the protector of the weak. Where she has gone liberty has followed. Justice has been her motto, and liberty and freedom so far as was consonant with law and order. Britain has been an altruistic nation to a greater extent than any nation in the world."—Sir George Foster, in a speech at Toronto.

War and Religious Work

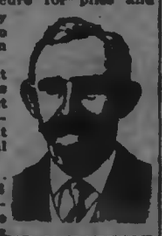
One of the most serious spiritual effects of the war, says the Missionary Review of the World is the dismemberment of many international Christian organizations. "The Christian Endeavors of different lands have been obliged to break off friendly correspondence and to become enemies." Over 300,000 members of the Y.M.C.A. are in the various armies of Europe.

PILES Do not suffer with Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and in a short time, in most cases, permanently cure you. 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Cured Fifteen Years Ago of Piles and Eczema

By Using Dr. Chase's Ointment—Certifies That the Cure Was Permanent.

Some people have tried so many doctors and so many treatments in their search for cure for piles and eczema that they find it difficult to believe there is an actual cure.



MR. KETCHESON

The strong point about Dr. Chase's Ointment is that it not only brings relief promptly, but brings about actual and lasting cure.

In 1897 Mr. Ketcheson, 66 Deure street, Peterboro', Ont., wrote as follows:—"I was troubled for thirty years with itching piles and eczema. I could not sleep at night, and when I got warm the itching was terrible. Eczema covered my legs down to the knees, perfectly raw. I have tried every preparation I could hear of. Seeing Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised, I procured a box, and this Ointment effected a complete cure."

On Sept. 28, 1912, Mr. Ketcheson wrote as follows:—"I received a letter from you to-day, saying that you found on file a statement made by me 15 years ago. I have always given Dr. Chase's Ointment a good name since it cured me, and shall tell you how I came to use it.

"I had suffered for many years from eczema and piles, and had tried doctors and everything I could hear of in vain. Reading about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I purchased it at once, and was soon completely cured. That was fifteen years ago, so there can be no doubt of the cure being a permanent one. I have met a great many people who have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

"Now since I've been spared to knit them,
"I hope your feet will fit them;
"And when you're sittin' ahint
the rocks,
"You'll mind the auld body that knitted your socks.
"For I'm aboon eighty-three."

CITY COUNCIL WILL MAKE APPLICATION TO PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE

This Decision Was Reached at a Special Meeting of the Council That Was Held Last Evening--Formal Notice Will Be Gazetted.

The City Council has endorsed City Solicitor Gordon's draft of a notice to be gazetted of the Council's intention to apply for legislation to amplify their borrowing powers in respect to the Peterborough Utilities Commission. The report covering this matter was adopted last evening, on motion of Aldermen Johnston and McIntyre, at a special meeting of the City Council. The report also embodies two ither items of legislative necessity. Some of the Aldermen took exception to the phraseology of certain parts of the three clauses, but withdrew them when it was pointed out that the submitted form of notice contained sufficient latitude to allow of any changes that were deemed necessary, providing nothing new was added.

COPY OF THE REPORT.

The report, which was the product of the committee of the whole Council, is as follows:

1. That notice be given of the intention of the Council to apply for legislation to authorize the granting by the Council, without the assent of the electors, of the sum of $10,000 to the Peterborough Patriotic Fund and Relief Association, and to authorize the passing by the Council, without the assent of the ratepayers, of a by-law to meet the cost of such grant by the issue of debentures.

2. That notice be given of the intention of the Council to apply for legislation to authorize the Council to pass by-laws from time to time, without the assent of the electors, to borrow money by the issue of debentures of the Corporation to replace money which has been expended by the Peterborough Water Commissioners or the Peterborough Utilities Commission in the construction of the waterworks dam and in permanent improvements in the waterworks or the electric lighting and power system of the City—for the purchase and installation of an additional pumping unit for the waterworks, and money that may hereafter be expended in laying additional feed mains; the purchase of land for a substation and other buildings required by the said Commission and the erection thereon of the necessary buildings and the equipment and furnishing of same and improving and extending the electric lighting and power system of the City.

3. That notice be given of the intention of the Council to apply for legislation to authorize the making an arrangement with the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada for a lease to the Canadian General Electric Company (Limited) of a part of the right-of-way of the Peterborough and Chemong Lake branch of the said railway as a testing track for electric locomotives and authorizing the crossing of highways by the same in the City of Peterborough, and with the approval of the Council thereof in the Township of Smith.

PRO AND CON.

Ald. Green was of the opinion that the borrowing power sought by the City should in some way be limited to a prescribed amount. He believed that the Private Bills Committee would empower the Council to issue debentures only up to a certain amount.

"This thing of borrowing money without the assent of the ratepayers, is something that doesn't appeal to me," put in Ald. Duffus.

The report was adopted by the Council.

SEVENTY ITALIAN TOWNS ARE HEAPS OF RUINS

Earthquake Took 20,000 Lives in Thirty Seconds and One Million People Were Rendered Homeless--Relief is Being Rushed.

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, Jan. 14.—Twenty thousand lives lost, thirty thousand persons injured, a million homeless and in need of relief, 70 towns and villages wholly or partly destroyed, a territory 200 miles long and extending from the Adriatic to the Tyrrhenian Sea devastated, irreplaceable works of art ruined—this is measure of the catastrophe caused by the earthquake which held Central Italy in a merciless grip for thirty seconds yesterday morning.

As the hours go by and communication with the outlying districts is restored, appeals for aid from every section are pouring into Rome, and are being answered instantly by every means at the disposal of the Government, the people and the clergy. The King, the Pope and Premier Salandra are among the leaders in the great work of relief, and trains are being sent as fast as possible with doctors, nurses and supplies to every part of the shaken area.

The greatest damage done was at Avezzano, 56 miles east of Rome which was totally destroyed, with a total loss of life of more than 6,000. In this district the shocks parallel those at Messina in 1908, when some 76,000 persons perished.

The King left for that city by automobile last night, and will remain there until the distress is alleviated.

In Rome the damage was relatively small, not a single life being lost. At Naples and Florence, which also felt the shock, there were no casualties and very little destruction.

70 Towns Destroyed.

The Cabinet met this afternoon and adopted measures of relief on a large scale. Fifty thousand dollars has already been appropriated for the work and more will be spent as needed. The military authorities have sent out 5,000 soldiers to prevent looting, and to preserve order in the seventy towns which have been wholly or partially destroyed. To still the growing feeling that the disaster would be even worse than imagined, the following official statement was issued to-day:

"The district of Sulmona is badly damaged, and the victims are numerous. Twenty persons are killed and many injured at Villago. Rescue work has been started at Popoli and Pentina, where many houses were damaged.

"The damage is extensive at Aquila and Isola Delliri, and many small towns in the Province of Rome. The village of Sora has been razed.

"Loss of life is feared at Chieti and other towns in the Province of the Abruzzi, but it is believed that disaster will not be so great as at first apprehended."

Thousands Killed Here.

Unquestionably the city of Avezzano has virtually ceased to exist. Of a population of nearly 14,000 persons only 1,000 are known to have escaped entirely. The number of dead is placed at 8,000, but it is thought that this figure will be reduced as order is restored and accurate investigation of the casualties is made.

In this district of the province of the Abruzzi the disruption parallels the worst scenes of Messina. Hundreds upon hundreds of men, women and children were crushed to death by the walls of their dwellings, scores were swallowed into the earth and many, were killed in wild rushes for safety.

The dead in Avezzani include, it is reported, the sub-perfect and the members of his family, the whole staff of the prefecture, the Mayor and the members of the Municipal Council. Of the 180 soldiers in the local garrison there only a few escaped, and most of the police and Customs officials also perished.

One Avezzano refugee tells of hearing from the ruins of the College for Young Women a pitiful cry for help. As soon as possible it was given, and 140 women were found to be still alive although many were badly hurt. The town is described as an immense cemetery, with dwelling houses serving as sepulchres for hundreds.

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL REPORT GIVEN

SPECIAL CABLE:

Petrograd, Jan. 14.—The following official statement was issued from General Headquarters to-night:

"Yesterday we made progress on the right bank of the lower Vistula, our troops changing positions in a manner favourable to them. The cavalry of the enemy operating in this region was repulsed, leaving Sierpc in the possession of our vanguard.

"On our other fronts nothing has occurred other than skirmishes and artillery duels. Our reconnoitring parties have been active.

"On the left bank of the Vistula isolated German attacks were easily repelled by our fire.

"On various portions of our Austrian front the enemy tried to cannonade our positions with heavy guns, but the efficient fire of our batteries soon silenced the Austrian artillery."

An earlier despatch from Petrograd says: Important bodies of Russian troops have pushed northward from Warsaw in the movement toward the western end of the East Prussian frontier. They have reoccupied a number of villages between Mlawa and Prasnysz, hitherto held by the Germans.

Reckless Sacrifice of Lives.

The London Daily News' Petrograd correspondent, referring to the German attacks on the Warsaw lines, says: Yesterday before dawn they sent a strong column in dense formation to seize a small farmhouse, where they must have known the Russians were ready and waiting for them. The Germans had to charge across stretches now dazzlingly lighted by two searchlights from the Russian side, and were shot down like rabbits, with scarcely any loss to the Russians concealed behind earthworks.

"German Attacks Progressing."

Berlin, Jan. 14.— (Wireless, Sayville.)—"In the eastern theatre Russian attacks southeast of Gumbinnen and east of Lautzen have been repulsed. Several hundred Russian prisoners have been taken in north Poland. West of the Vistula the German attacks are progressing. Nothing of importance has occurred on the western bank of the Pilica."

GILLETT'S LYE

CHURCHES HARD HIT BY 'QUAKE

Arrival of Refugees and Wounded in Rome Presents Pitiable Scenes

HOSPITALS FILLED

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, Jan. 14.—A feature of the earthquake, outside of the number of human victims, is the number of churches severely damaged. The Pope has sent instructions to the clergy for distribution of food and the opening of the convents and Monasteries to receive the refugees. Where churches have been rendered untenable, His Holiness directs that temporary altars be erected in safe places for the use of the faithful.

Stories are coming in from the scene of the disaster of many marvellous escapes and terrible episodes. One couple left crouching in the doorway of the second story in a wall surrounded by ruins, who could not be reached by ladder, as the wall was rocking, eventually jumped into the mattresses, the man breaking his arm and the woman a leg. The wall collapsed fifteen minutes later. In many cases one member of a family only survives to abject poverty, as the property is absolutely destroyed. The arrival of refugees and wounded in Rome strongly recalls the episode of the Messina disaster — women half-dazed, children crying from hunger and men unconscious through wounds. Fortunately, the earthquake did not occur at night, so that the refugees are fully clothed. The hospitals are overflowing. Public assistance is generous and abundant.

The despatches show that many castles throughout the country that withstood earthquakes for centuries are destroyed.

Simplicity as well as economy style points are combined in the dress pictured, pattern No. 6008, in sizes fourteen, sixteen, eighteen and twenty years. The flare skirt attached to the deep yoke is very new, as everybody knows who has been wearing narrow skirts for the last few years. This moderate flare is a safe choice for the woman or girl who dislikes flying to extremes, as the full circular skirt must be considered. The waist, with set-in sleeve, cut long and plain, is in good taste, and the linen collar and cuffs add the correct finishing touch.

For little dresses like this serge and poplin are suitable, silk and cotton crepe de Chine, challis and gabardine. The collar and cuffs, if not of linen, may be made of piqué, silk or satin. With a plain material for the dress it would be pretty, especially if for a young girl, to have collar and cuffs of striped or plaid silk. Very gay colors are not in style this year, generally speaking, but economists continue to. It does not take much imagination to decide that this apron can be put together quickly and with very little trouble.

Price 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

BRITISH REINFORCEMENTS SAVED THE DAY HELPED FRENCH TO RECAPTURE POSITION

JUDGE WILL INVESTIGATE

Mr. Gordon's Amendment Passed by Board of Education and County Judge Will Hold Enquiry

ONE CHARGE IS PRESSED

That the City Council be requested to have a judicial investigation made under Section 248 of the Municipal Act into a matter contained in memoranda submitted by G. N. Gerdon, was an amendment passed at a special meeting of the Board of Education, last night, on motion of Mr. Gordon, seconded by Mr. Eastwood.

Upon the passing of this measure the way will be opened to an investigation of certain charges made by Mr. G. N. Gordon, prior to the recent municipal elections.

Section 248 of the Municipal Act provides that where the Council of a municipality passes a resolution requesting a Judge of the County (Judge Huycke) to investigate any matter relating to a supposed malfeasance or breach of trust, etc., or rather, misconduct, on the part of a servant of the Corporation etc., etc., or to inquire into any matter connected with the good government of the Municipality or the conduct of any part of its public business, the Judge shall make the enquiry, etc

One Point Raised.

Mr. Gordon submitted only one of the number of charges he had previously made, but asserted that he withdrew nothing. The question which he said the Judge would be asked to decide, whether Section 119 of the Public School Act applied to Mr. Hill. Clause No. 1 is as follows: A trustee shall not enter into any contract, agreement, etc., either in his own name, or in the name of another and either alone or jointly, with another in which he has any pecuniary interest, profit, or promised or expected benefit with the board of which he is a member, or have any pecuniary claim upon or receive compensation from the Board for any work, engagement, employment, or duty on behalf of the Board and every such contract, agreement, engagement, or promise shall be null and void, and a trustee violating the provisions of this section shall, ipso facto, vacate his seat."

Mr. Gordon stated that it was in connection with the sale of insurance upon school property to the Board by Mr Hill that he asked for a ruling by the Judge.

ALL MEMBERS PRESENT.

Mr. Ackerman presided, with all the members present. Mr. Percival Webb, Mr. Alex. Gibson and Mr. R. Winch were constituted a representative audience.

It will be remembered that at a previous meeting of the Board Mr. Gordon's resolution had been made in the form of an amendment to a motion that an investigation be made under the jurisdiction of the Department of Education. All the members last night expressed the opinion that some investigation should be held into the charges Mr. Gordon had made, only in regard to the tribunal was there any opposition of opinion.

Mr. Crane read Section 4 of the Department of Education Act, as follows: "The Minister shall have the administration and enforcement of the statutes and regulations respecting public schools, high schools, etc., supported in whole or in part by public money, etc."

Mr. Gordon replied that where the Department was interested in the expenditure of $10,000 a year the people of Peterborough are interested in $95,000 of their money.

Mr. Gordon entered into a preamble of the situation as he considered it should be dealt with. He had reached a stage where he was questioning the right and propriety of the Board's overdrawing their account to the extent of $15,000 when they had no assurance, he said, that debentures for that amount would be issued.

Mr. Crane rose to a point of order on the ground that Mr. Gordon was attempting to make of the meeting a board of inquiry.

Mr. Gordon—I'm not giving evidence. I have a right to speak to the amendment.

Mr. Ackerman—We did not come here for a lecture.

REASON FOR JUDGE.

Mr. Gordon continued that the

BRITISH TROOPS TURNED THE TIDE

Germans Wrested Positions at St. Paul from the French But British Reinforcements Arrived in Time and the Lost Trenches Were Regained After a Stubborn Fight

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Severe fighting continues to the north-east of Soissons. It was officially announced this afternoon that the Germans had taken the French positions at St. Paul in that region, but the French were immediately reinforced by the British and regained the ceded position after a stubborn fight. North of Arras, also, heavy fighting continues, the French Zouaves having taken one of the German positions, following a series of bayonet charges of a most brilliant but destructive nature. Following the Sea to the Lys positions it is stated severe cannonading continues, with the allies progressing slowly in the vicinity of Lombaertzyde and Becelaere. In the region of Targette, St. Laurent, Andechy and near Roye, the French artillery is declared to have succeeded in silencing the German guns, and slight gains have been made. Near Craonne and Rheims violent cannonading continues, with the honours resting with the French. Slight successes are also reported in the Vosges.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Unarmed, unready, undefended, the United States offers a standing invitation to aggression and attack, and the idea, still popular, or used for purposes of oratory by some people, that we can meet all dangers by springing to arms when the moment comes, is a dream so wild that it would be grotesque if it were not tragic."

This was the statement of Senator Lodge of Massachussets to the Senate this afternoon in urging the adoption of a resolution providing for an inquiry into the military preparedness of this country.

"I want an adequate national defence, and speaking broadly, I care little what it costs if we can obtain it.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—The War Office, in commenting upon the operations to the north of Soissons, says that the conditions "are similar to those of the battle of Gravelotte in 1870." It is said the French were defeated so signally that they abandoned quantities of supplies and all the wounded. The northern banks of the Aisne, it is declared, were literally covered with dead and wounded.

The Corporation's Private Bill

Will Incur an Initial Expenditure of $100

The City's private bill which will go before the Ontario Legislature, will cost the sum of one hundred dollars, in addition to other incidental expenses, including a trip to Toronto for the City Solicitor and other City officials who may deem it expedient to be present when the matter comes before the Private Bills Committee. Included in the one bill are three items of Legislative necessity. It will cost no more for the three than it would for one. The one hundred dollars will go to cover advertising and other fixed expenses. Notice of the City's intention will appear in the Ontario Gazette on three consecutive occasions.

Rev. Riddiford Will Lecture

The Rev. W. C. Riddiford, who is preaching morning and evening at Park Street Baptist Church, on Sunday, Jan. 17th, has kindly consented to stay over Monday night and give a lecture. The lecture is entitled "Essentials of Service," and is being given under the auspices of the Young People's Society. A collection will be taken, and the proceeds will go to church expenses. A good crowd is expected.

RUSSIA EXPELLING ENEMIES' SUBJECTS

PETROGRAD, Jan. 13.—German and Austrian subjects between the ages of sixteen and sixty have been ordered expelled from Petrograd and its environs, and also from those Russian provinces which border on the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic Sea, including the Gulf of Riga. The order of expulsion provides that all persons concerned must be clear of these provinces by January 27.

The territory affected comprises Livonia, except a portion near Riga; Esthonia, the city and province of Petrograd; Novgorod, with certain exceptions; Viborg, Newland, Tavastus and Abo Bernbourg. The exceptions in Novgorod apply to certain portions inhabited chiefly by non-Russian Lutherans.

MURAL TABLET IN MEMORY OF LATE WILLIAM VAN EVERY

One of the most interesting incidental features of the dedication of the chancel of All Saints' was the dedication by the Bishop of Toronto of a beautiful mural memorial tablet to the late William Van Every, placed by his wife, and one that derives special significance, as it is the first tablet of its kind erected in All Saints. The tablet is very conspicuously placed, over the baptismal font on the right hand side of the chancel, looking from the nave. It is of Italian marble, furnished by the Moore Monumental Company, supported by a console of the same material. It bears the following engraving in black lettering:

Sacred to the memory of William Van Every,
who died Dec. 18th, 1912,
aged 71 years and 5 months.
"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."
This monument was erected by his loving wife, Lois.

$30,000 DUTIES HOLD UP TROOPS' CIGARS

PARIS, Jan. 14.—Two and a half tons of tobacco and cigars, half of a shipment recently made by several Americans as a gift for the Allies' soldiers in the trenches, arrived here today and caused perturbation in the fiscal department, as the duties were 150,000f. ($30,000). The government offered to remit the duties if the tobacco were intended for hospitals, but the donators wanted it to go the men in the trenches. The shipment has not been cleared yet, but it is said that the decision is certain to be favourable.

The shipment includes a case of cigars, pipes and tobacco for General Joffre, commander in chief of the French forces "from his American friends." There is also a case for Albert, King of the Belgians. Special cases are included for Brigadier Buelle, of the Twenty-second French artillery, and Sergeant Coterel, of the 153rd French infantry, both of whom have been decorated with the military medal.

The French people have been much touched by this new manifestation of American generosity and the papers to-day comment at length on the gift.

DEATH LIST IS SWELLING

Every Hour Adds to the Horror of the Earthquake Disaster—The Wounded Will Reach 100,000

30,000 ARE DEAD

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, Jan. 15.—Every hour swells the casualty list of the earthquake disaster. Official and unofficial reports reaching Premier Salandra, in charge of the relief work, shows that towns heretofore immune, have suffered. The latest estimates of the dead say that at least 30,000 fell victims of the 'quake. The list of injured may reach 100,000. The Minister of Public Works, who is on the scene of the dister to-day, wired Premier Salandra that every city, town and village in Lera Valley has been damaged, with many of the inhabitants dead and wounded. Many of the victims are still entombed in the ruins of their homes. Additional troops were sent to the quake zone to-day. Hundreds of wounded victims are streaming into Rome and all of the public buildings have been ordered opened and turned into temporary hospitals to relieve the pressure on the regular hospitals already crowded to the limit. Minor shocks, which still continue, have added to the terror, and thousands of residents of the poorer quarter of Rome have refused to return to their homes, but remain quartered in the open squares of the city.

Refused To Get Off Engine Pilot

Young Smith Farmer Was Troublesome on Port Hope Train —Fined $10.10

A young Smith farmer appeared in the Police Court this morning on two charges, arising out of a drunk on December 24th, and it cost him $10.10. He was first charged with having unlawfully obstructed or impeded an officer of the Grand Trunk Railway, namely, Mr. McCarthy, a conductor of the said railway, in the execution of his duty upon a train of the said railway, by getting on the pilot of the engine of the said train and refusing to get off it, contrary to the statute in that behalf.

The train in question arrives in the City about 5.30 p.m. from Port Hope. The defendant, upon arrival in the City, also obstructed the right-of-way at the Charlotte Street crossing, and when Mr. Harry Zealand attempted to have him removed he was assaulted, and the prisoner faced that charge this morning as well.

Mr. Widdifield acted as counsel for the accused. On behalf of his client he entered a plea of guilty to both charges. The Magistrate made the fine $2 and costs of $8.10 on the first charge and a fine of $5, without costs, on the second, with ten days to pay. Mr. Widdifield thought defendant might be let off on the second instance, but His Worship was very emphatic in his contention that the railway should not be interfered with.

Conductor McCarthy suffered from a blackened eye as the result of his attempt to remove the offender from the pilot of his engine. He slipped and the optic connected with a piece of projecting iron.

G. T. R. Detective Tisdale, of Toronto, was present at the trial.

WANTS VAULT ROOM.

At last night's meeting of the Council, Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Property committee, stated that he had been conferring with Mr. Henry, City Assessor, regarding vault room required for his books and papers, and the matter will shortly be brought before the Property committee for consideration.

BRITISH STORM GERMAN POSITION

After Preliminary Shelling Forces Captured a Strongly Entrenched Strategic Point Near Labasse, Advancing a Mile—Many Germans Taken Prisoners.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, France, Jan. 15.—The Havas Agency has received a despatch from Bomer, dated January 10, which relates a British victory and an advance near Labassee of one mile. The message says:

"The British, by an impetuous attack, stormed a strongly entrenched German position near Labassee at two o'clock this afternoon after a vigorous preliminary shelling. This is an important strategic point and its occupation represents an advance of one mile. The British losses were slight but the Germans lost heavily. Many Germans were taken prisoners."

PARIS, France, Jan. 15.—The Journal des Debats registers its opinion that hostilities are rapidly emerging from a war of siege to a new phase of semi-independent and furious battles between heavy masses on narrow fronts.

"This," says the newspaper critic, "is the consequence of a successful French offensive against various minor points.

"Thus I foresee a series of battles of extreme bloodiness and desperation, wherein victory will rest with the side most enduring and able to bring up the greatest numbers.

"Surely the Russian successes, coupled with the improvement of our reserves, and the approaching utilization of the new British armies, ought to ensure the final supremacy of the allies. The new phase brings the end of the war in sight."

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 15.—The correspondent of the Daily News at Petrograd, telegraphs:

"The Russian new year opens with a sweeping victory over the Turks on the Caucasian frontier. In the Olmey Valley, the Turkish rear guard was completely destroyed and, simultaneously, another Russian army routed the main Turkish force at Kabourgan. The Russians captured the entire supply of mountain guns which the Turks brought for the campaign, together with their ammunition. They also took the Turks' complete stock of field artillery and all their cattle, both for slaughter and transport.

TWENTY-FIVE OF HOME GUARD FOR THE FRONT

450 Were on Parade at the Weekly Drill Last Night and Great Progress Was Made

THE HONOUR ROLL

The Home Guard had 450 on parade at its weekly drill last night, and great progress is being made. The evening was a most profitable one, and the improvement in the efficiency of the regiment was noticeable. Twenty-five members of the Home Guard have volunteered for active service. Here is the roll of honour:

Hon. Colonel Lieut.-Col. T. W. H. Young, O. C. 10th Brigade, C.F.A.
Lieut. G. N. Young, No. 1 Company.

The following orders were read:

By Orders of the Officer Commanding this District the Home Guards will practice drill as laid down in the manuel for "Infantry Training 1911."

Arrangements have been made with the Peterborough Examiner to publish this drill in a military column from day to day and all members are requested to carefully study this drill so as to assist all ranks to become proficient in both Company and Battalion Drill.

Arrangements are being completed for a class of instructions for commissioned and non-commissioned officers and all such officers are expected to attend such class, and qualify for their respective positions.

A supply of instruction books has been arranged for and will be sold at cost to members of the class.

Officers commanding companies are requested to hand into Orderly Room at once, names of all non-commissioned officers provisionally appointed.

Members are requested to settle all accounts for membership dues or badges with the Orderly Room as soon as possible.

By Order,
F. D. Kerr, Capt.,
Adjutant.

THIS CITY A CENTRE

Squadron of Cavalry and Company of Infantry Will Be Organized and Possibly Mobilized Here

LATEST MILITARY NEWS

That the greatest units into which will be organized in Peterborough may remain here for some time and will probably be uniformed equipped and drilled here is evident from the statement made yesterday by Major General Hughes, explaining the plan of organization of the third contingent. It is evident that Peterborough is to be an organization centre and that the intention is to have the squadron of mounted rifles and a company of infantry receive their preliminary training here and be equipped before being sent to the mobilization headquarters at Ottawa and Belleville. This process will take weeks to be accomplished. The statement is as follows: "The mobilization of the second contingent is well advanced, and the third contingent is being raised and mobilized on the following system:

"There are three classes of centres, recruiting, organizing, and mobilization. Recruiting centres will be at every company and squadron headquarters or at any town or centre in the battalion district. Recruiting officers will visit these places at regular intervals, if no officers are already there. The organization centre will be where the company or squadron units will be located. The recruits on being selected in the various localities for the contingent will be sent in to these organizing centres promptly. These will be billeted, receiving all information. They will be under control of their officers, and when fully organized, equipped, and drilled, the complete active militia company, picked of all ranks are expected to take active interest as recruiting officers, each for his own company, and the men recruited from each locality should be entered on the local active militia company roll before being forwarded to the organizing or company centre. When each company is organized it will be forwarded under its officers to the mobilizing centre for the whole battalion. Officers of all ranks, both of the active militia and those selected for the overseas force, are each and all expected to take personal interest in the organizing, and the success or failure in any active militia company or battalion centre will be explained by the active militia officer in these localities."

The 57th company of the 39th Battalion it is stated, will be commanded by Capt. Spence of Millbrook, who is expected here shortly. Lieuts. Ross Cameron and W. Eastwood of the 57th will be attached to the company as subalterns, while Capt. A. G. Carruthers of the 57th will be quartermaster of the battalion.

The local squadron of the mounted rifles will likely be commanded by Major S. T. Medd of Peterborough. With him will be Lieuts. Rogers of Peterborough, Johnston of Otonabee, Smith of Napanee, and Hughes of Bowmanville.

The 57th overseas company had a short march yesterday afternoon and the men enjoyed the march in the open air. The distance will be increased each time out. The infantry men are at present drilling two hours a day, the work including setting up drill.

A census of the first 250 men enrolled for the Mounted Rifles here, shows that over half are Canadians. The figures are as follows: Canadians 54, English 40, Scotch 7, Irish 1.

A Belgian applied for enlistment in the Mounted Rifles this morning. He has been three years in Peterborough, employed at the Canadian General Electric Co. and the Bell Telephone Co., and is very anxious to get to the front. The local authorities have referred his case to Kingston. As he is not a British subject either by birth or naturalization, it was not considered advisable to enlist him until his status had been pronounced upon.

HEALTH CONDITIONS AT SALISBURY.

There are rumours that the health conditions in the Canadian Camp at Salisbury are far from satisfactory; that there is an alarming amount of serious illness. When we read, as we have been doing from time to time of these things, we naturally expected that some one or more of Peterborough's representation in the camp, which is a pretty large one, would be affected so far we have not heard of any considerably serious cases of illness of Peterborough men. We may infer, therefore, that the reports of unhealthy conditions are greatly exaggerated. That there should be a great deal of sickness in Salisbury Camp is to be expected. The weather conditions are, and have been, very bad, and one cannot expect the sanitary conditions to be perfect. The camp is a sudden city of 20,000 inhabitants. With the important relations of the camp to the public—it is in fact public property—we hear the details of disadvantages and bad happenings with great promptitude and completeness, if not with great reliability. Peterborough has twenty thousand inhabitants living under the best of modern sanitary conditions. We don't hear of a great deal of illness which, in the aggregate, there must be. But if Peterborough were placed under the searchlight of the war correspondents; if every case of sickness were smelt, cut and concentrated into a war despatch, plus a good deal of imagination, we should be astounded with the showing. We must take our news of the Canadian Camp at Salisbury as we must take the most of our war news, not labelled "official," with a generous pinch of salt. It is probable that in view of the conditions, which are terribly difficult, there is not much more illness per thousand soldiers at Salisbury than there is, per thousand, in Peterborough under ideal sanitary conditions.

GOOD GROWTH.

The dedication of the new chancel representing the completed new church of All Saints, though in one sense a matter of denominational interest is, more broadly regarded, a matter of vital concern to the whole city and its best life and highest interests. Every advance in church progress, material or moral, represents a distinct forward movement, strengthening the foundation of the true progress of the city. While the material building speaks of a growth of wealth and development of district and neighbourhood, the moral edification involved has a far deeper significance. To appreciate the progress of the church and its community environment, one must carry memory back to a quarter of a century ago. Then the religious movement now represented by a large congregation with all the accessories of church activity served by a splendidly substantial church, one of the most elegant and largest in the city, was represented by a little handful of Sunday school children that could have been accommodated in the vestry room of All Saints.' The growth of the church and its interests have been of the measure of the growth of the city in the district constituting its parish; and if the growth of the city in this district continues to advance, All Saints' will in a few years be found inadequate in accommodation for its purposes. The growth of the interests of 'All Saints' is a credit to its rectors, past and present, and to the cooperation of earnest and faithful congregations. All Saints' church in its completed form was due to the south ward, which has suffered, or will suffer, in the matter of church structures, by the removed of one church across the boundary in the centre ward, where Trinity church will be to that ward what All Saints' and other fine churches are to the centre ward, where Trinity church structures the south ward is pretty well abreast of any ward in the city. More power to it.

THEY MISS THE POINT.

We are told that some of the new members of the Port Hope town council threaten to resign their new honours because, in the organization of the council, they were not made chairmen of some committee. We have in Peterborough examples of a similar missing of the point. A certain alderman, because he could not get the chairmanship of a certain committee, refused to head another committee, as he had done before, necessarily leaving its duties unfilled. Another form of misconception of the true point of public service is found in the claim of Mayor Buller, as others have done before him, that he should have a second term of the mayoralty as a right. In all these positions taken the real object and utility of representative responsibility is lost sight of. Good men, public spirited citizens, anxious to serve the municipality, seek election to serve this purpose only, not themselves. When men claim civic positions as favours, and regard them as simply an honour conferred upon them, an honour that entitles them to further honours, they miss the mark. The office of a mayor or alderman or councillor, rightly regarded, is by no means a matter of favour. It involves not honour and glory necessarily; it involves hard work and faithful attention to duty. The people do not elect representatives as ornaments, but for purpose of service. Such election is indeed an honour—that they should be regarded worthy of a great responsibility and given the responsibility and given the privilege of hard work. But this honour becomes tarnished unless the work is done, the faithful and effective service given. The highest place in human affairs is the place of service. The honour comes from the way of giving this service. In municipal matters all cannot be chairmen of committees; the best place of service may be elsewhere. We should have a great smash if every cog of a machine aspired and succeeded in becoming the "governor." The cog does its best work in its proper place. We shall have better municipal service when all civic representatives regard their election as a mandate to work, to give good honest effective, painstaking service in whatever capacity, circumstances fits them into. We necessarily have bad and ineffective service when representatives think themselves defrauded if certain coveted offices, or honours do not come to them; when they see to hold office to serve some personal ambition or secure some personal advantage; when desire to serve the public and promote the public interests, with all the involved hard work is not the animating motive of seeking the exacting position and arduous duties of faithful representation.

HE PUT US ON THE MAP.

A great truth in a few words is expressed in the reference of Saturday Night to the Knighthood of Sir Clifford Sifton:

"Sir Clifford Sifton has enjoyed all the joys, sorrows and rewards of Canadian politics, and it is only natural that he should round off his career with a Knighthood. If Knighthood pleases him nobody in Canada will begrudge it, because he was largely responsible for putting Canada on the map."

Sir Clifford Sifton began map-making when, on November 17th, 1896, he became Minister of the Interior in the Laurier Cabinet. He found the immense Canadian West comparatively a desert; its fertile areas untilled; its lands unpeopled, after a quarter of a century of opportunity unseized. He saw the opportunities; he saw his duty. He began to open up this country; he began a campaign of publicity; he fostered immigration by an intelligent and aggressive policy. People began to pour into this country, and its potential wealth of soil products began its realization. The country filled up rapidly, and the annual wheat yield grew from thousands of bushels to millions. "Canada, the Granary of the Empire" was the slogan, and it is due argely to Sir Clifford Sifton, as a member of the Laurier government, that Canada, through the marvellous development of her great West, has a place of prominence in the world to-day. It is largely due to him that the Empire, in its hour of need, can look with confidence to Canada as her larder. We hear frantic injunctions from the present Government to Canadians to increase the production of wheat and all the fruits of the soil. If someone would arise like Clifford Sifton, who made the dead bones to live, who replaced wide solitudes with the hum of the reaper, who replaced sterility with harvest, who made lands, cropless for centuries to blossom, as the rose, who replaced mere existence with productive life—if somebody could work a spell upon existing conditions, as Sifton worked them on conditions a fifth of a century ago, the call for more production would not be made in vain. Sir Clifford Sifton was a statesman in the true sense—a statesman whose genius is creative or developmental. His place in politics changed, but his usefulness to Canada remains, and as Chairman of the Conservation Commission he is exerting a generally beneficent influence that if responded to by rulers and people will work wonders in productive development of our great resources.

The Neutrality Question And Germans In The United States

Herman Ridder, who publishes a German daily paper in New York, which, since the war started, circulates among Germans in all parts of the United States, has issued a call for all German-Americans to "organize."

Just what he means by that is not made plain, but the call has gone forth and thousands will take it up. When the German-Americans have "organized" they will do for Germany whatever will help her most in the war, and whatever will most injure the cause of the Allies.

This, you will observe, is to take place in a neutral country. The President of the United States, at the outbreak of the war, enjoined the strictest neutrality on all Americans, and the President and Government have been at extensive pains to preserve, through thick and thin, an attitude of aloof and remote neutrality.

A nation dedicated to liberty looked upon what happened to neutral Belgium with the same unseeing eyes with which the Statute of Liberty gazes out of New York harbour upon whatever may happen there.

But this neutral attitude, it seems, is not to be preserved by Americans of German birth and descent. They are free, it appears, to regard themselves as Germans, not as Americans. They are to organize as a nation within a nation, and wage such warfare as they can from within a country that is at peace. We have said that they are to organize. We might better say that they are to perfect an organization they have been building up for five months and which they now consider strong enough to bring into the open for more active service than it has yet done.

If eight or ten million German-speaking citizens of the United States are free to organize to promote the success of Germany in this world-war and flout the neutral policy of the nation whose citizens they are, will the eighty or ninety million English-speaking citizens of the Republic, whose sympathies are largely with Belgium and the Allies, still feel called upon to observe a colourless neutrality of which the agents of Germany are taking active, aggressive, and insolent advantage?

A neutrality that is to be observed only by the great body of the American people who speak English, and is to be openly and actively disregarded by that minority of American citizens who can talk and plot in German, will not be neutrality at all in the way it will work out.

If Americans who want Germany to win in this war are to organize so that they can help her to victory, the vastly greater number of Americans who want the Allies to win cannot sit still, and they will not. They will organize, too; they will find leaders, and they will take the aggressive, if forced to do so by the Bernstorffs, Dernburgs and Ridders. These men are making mischief in the United States with their plots and their underhand contrivings to embroil the Republic with the Allies.

As the New York Telegraph said not long ago, there is no such thing as a German American. A man is either a German or he is an American. If he is a German he ought to be in Europe. If he is an American he ought to sit down and be neutral if he expects his neighbours to do the same. And if he is wise he will be satisfied to see the American people neutral and passive in this world struggle. If there is to be neutrality the average American may well say, in the language of the great Frenchman: "Let the assassins begin first."—Toronto Star.

A BRAVE BOY.

The London Times gives a wonderful story of the recent fighting round Ypres. A young lieutenant had posted himself in a tower a few hundred yards from the German trenches. He had telephoned his orders regularly for half an hour. Then he said, without any trace of excitement, to the operator on the other side: "I hear the Germans coming up the stairs. I have my revolver. Don't believe anything more you hear." With these words he dropped the receiver; and he has not been heard of since. So passed to his long rest another "very gallant gentleman."—Journal of Commerce.

MAKING WAR SUPPLIES.

A Huron County manufacturer, who is a Conservative, informs The Star that the industries of his county are being almost entirely overlooked by the Government in awarding contracts for war supplies. He declares that goods are being bought in the United States that could have been produced in the County of Huron, and that different manufacturers from towns in that county have in vain solicited orders, being always put off with empty words. "It is not," he says, "for political reasons that the industries of Huron County are being treated in this way. I am speaking of manufacturers who are Conservatives and whose names are on the patronage list of Ottawa."

These men have their grievance, and Huron County may fairly object if work is sent to Michigan that could be done in Goderich and similar towns. There is, however, another point raised by this protest. Why should there be a patronage list at a time like this? We are well aware that a type of small politician declares that nobody who has not been a supporter of the Government ought to get a contract from the Government. At ordinary times that view finds some acceptance, but these are not ordinary times.

Nobody asks the young men who step forward to enlist what their politics are. Nobody wants to know. The whole people of Canada are supporting this war, and upholding the Government in prosecuting it, and on the whole people of Canada will feel the cost of success or the consequences of failure. As a people we stand united with the population of the Empire, making common cause against a powerful enemy.

Is it necessary or advisable that at so extraordinary a time, in a struggle against an enemy using the last ounce of his resources in an effort to master the world, that here in Canada there should be "a patronage list" on which a man's name must appear with the O.K. of a local politician or he cannot share in the work of producing the clothing or equipment of our soldiers who go to the front?—Toronto Star.

Montreal To Build Twenty Submarines

MONTREAL, Jan. 15. — A fleet of submarines for the British navy is under construction at Montreal. An order for twenty under water craft of the English design has been placed with the Canadian Vickers Company, of Montreal, and work has been started on ten of the craft.

The company is a branch of the English shipbuilding firm, Vickers, Sons & Maxim, of England, which built the first dreadnought and many of the powerful vessels for the Admiralty. They commenced the construction here of a floating dock and a shipyard five years ago. The dock has been in commission for some time; but the yard is just being completed. It has one feature which is found in no other shipyard in the world. This is an immense shed of steel and glass, large enough to permit two first-class cruisers to be built simultaneously. The building shed was thought to be necessary if construction work upon ships was to be carried on during the severe weather experiences in Montreal in winter.

The shed affords room for the construction of ten submarines simultaneously.

It is stated that the submarine work has no relation to the order which Mr. Charles M. Schwab obtained from the British government for submarines, to which the Washington government objected as involving a breach of neutrality.

The company here recently bought out a large force of experts from their British yards and several hundred workmen. It is proposed to build both the engines and the hulls of the submarines in the Montreal yards. The plate and some of the parts will be obtained both in England and the United States, but the actual work of construction will be done in Montreal.

As the St. Lawrence river is closed by ice in November each year and remains closed for five months, a special effort will be made to complete the construction of the the submarines now under way before the season of navigation next closes, so that delivery of the craft may be made to the Admiralty in time for use next winter.

Plagues Rage Through Vienna

VENICE, via London, Jan. 13—Private reports from Vienna and statements appearing in the Austrian newspapers show that conditions in the Austrian Capital are daily becoming more serious. Smallpox, cholera, and typhoid fever are prevalent, forty five cases of smallpox being officially reported in Vienna during the first nine days of January. Many cases of contagion are also reported from various centres of lower and upper Austria, Styria, Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia and Galicia.

Great numbers of fugitives have arrived from Bukowina and many more are expected. Many of them are on the verge of starvation. The price of staple foods is increasing and delicacies are no longer obtainable.

All Hands On The Main Deck

Ald. Green Wants to Get a Report of All Public Work That May Be Undertaken This Year

Ald. Green, chairman of the Board of Works, has issued a manifesto to every member of the Board, calling upon them to submit a statement of the work that it is proposed to undertake in each of the wards. This includes the construction of sewers, sidewalks and any other work that may require attention during the ensuing year. Ald. Green wants to have this part of the work cleaned up so as to pave the way for an early start in the spring and give the labouring man a chance to get to work. As the whole Council comprises the Board of Works, this will be a job for all hands, including the Mayor, who is an ex-officio member of the Board.

The Legal Committee

Will Be Asked to Decide Whether City is Liable for the Death of a Horse

Mr. Thomas Petrie has asked the City to share half of the loss that he suffered, one week ago to-day, when a horse, valued at $300, was killed, as the alleged result of being frightened by a number of children who were tobogganing on one of the City's streets in the East Ward. According to Mr. Petrie's letter to the Council, the children on the hand sleigh would have collided with Mr. Petrie's team had they not crowded into the ditch, where the sleigh was overturned and Mr. Petrie thrown out. The horses then ran away. Before they were recovered one of them was smothered to death by the other falling on top of it. The animal was a four-year-old Percheron colt, and was valued by Mr. Petrie at $300. He asks the City to bear at least half of the loss. The matter has been referred to the Legal Committee of the City Council.

"CHARITY" FOR SOLDIERS' WIVES IN N. MONAGHAN

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Would you allow me a small space in your valuable paper to make a few comments?

In Saturday's paper the report from North Monaghan said the poor were being well looked after, but never a mention as to what they were doing for the soldiers' wives. Ask them what they are doing in that respect.

Granted the soldiers' wives in the city are being well looked after, and if they want for anything it is their own fault, but not so in North Monaghan. They can shift for themselves.

I happen to know one woman in particular who asked to be allowed the same as those in the city. This woman was given to understand that it was not charity they were receiving, but simply what was due them. This lady I mention was given an order for groceries, and it was put down in the report as charity.

How would any one of the Council men in North Monaghan like it if they had gone to fight for their country and their wives were treated the same way? It goes to show their patriotism is more talk.

It is to be hoped that the same story will not have to be told to the married men of the Third Contingent who are going from North Monaghan as had to be told to the men who have gone with the other two. Thanking you, Mr. Editor.—I remain,

"One Who Knows."

COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

The annual meeting of the Local Council of Women will be held on Thursday, January 21st at 3 o'clock p.m. in the Assembly Hall of the Public Library. Reports of the various committees will be received, also reports from delegates to conventions of societies. Election of officers. The public is invited.

THIS is a Manchester Event that will, we believe, cost into shadow all previous sales held in this Town. Mind you, the Winter season is really just beginning. We seldom have spells severe weather before Christmas, but after it comes three months of actual Winter-time! Any apparel you buy now may be worn plentifully for the next three months, and will probably be in good condition to wear again next season.

SOME STORES wait to cut prices until there is no demand for their goods. We do not! It is our belief that the best time to effect a clearance of stocks is when the goods themselves are in the height of demand. Our January Clearance Sale is in accord with this belief, offering as it does fine, seasonable apparel at extraordinary low prices.

IN our determination to effect a clearance of stocks we have not hesitated to reduce prices. The bargains that this sale offers are the most remarkable we have ever given you. The sale starts on Saturday, January 16th and Continues for 10 Days. The following are among the scores of bargains that you will find here!

The Sale Starts Saturday January 16th and Continues For 10 Days.

THE REID CO.

Where The Styles Come From

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Mr. Percival G. S. Webb, 282 Charlotte Street, is developing into a keen student of municipal politics. Last evening he attended the meeting of the School Board, after which he journeyed down to the City Hall, where the City Council was in session.

INTEREST IS LACKING.

There are few ratepayers who are sufficiently interested in the transaction of the City's business to the extent that they will attend one meeting, much less two meetings in one evening. Whenever the Mayor spots one or more ratepayers in the gallery, he stops the meeting long enough to enquire whether they wish to address the Council, taking it for granted that they would not be there unless they had some business to transact with that august body.

TO PROTECT THE RECORDS.

Some steps will be taken to provide vault space for the books and records of the assessor's office. As it is they are kept in cupboards. Ald. McIntyre, of the Property Committee, has promised that the matter will be looked into.

SURFACE DRAINAGE.

At last night's meeting of the City Council, Ald. Weir asked if plans were being prepared for a sanitary drainage system in East City. Ald. Green, of the Board of Works, assured the enquiring Alderman that the matter was in the hands of City Engineer Parnaby.

DISCARD PENCILS "MADE IN GERMANY."

Patriotism is taking practical form in the Toronto Board of Education Offices. A brand of pencil "made in Germany" has been discarded, and a British brand substituted.

PLAN TO INSURE SECOND CONTINGENT.

Mayor Church, of Toronto, took the first steps towards the city insuring the Toronto members of the Second Contingent when he communicated with General Logie, camp commandant, and asked for particulars concerning Toronto men.

A NEW RULE.

Mayor Waldron, of Hamilton, has notified heads of departments that they must not pass accounts for which there is no appropriation.

350 WOODEN GUNS PURCHASED.

Wooden guns—350 of them—are to be bought by the Toronto Board of Education for the use of cadets in the schools. Mr. Wm. Kerr, clerk of supplies, recommends that Geo. Rathbone and Co. get the contract at 35 cents per gun.

APPLY FOR AN INJUNCTION.

The Hamilton Board of Trade will apply for an injunction restraining the Hamilton-Toronto Roadway Commission from proceeding with the work until the Government has considered Hamilton's request for a change in the proposed route.

Installation Of Officers

At the regular meeting of Peterborough Council, C. O. C. F., on Thursday evening, Jan. 14th, Mr. H. E. Harding occupied the chair. The following officers were duly installed in their new offices:

Past Councillor—H. Easterbrooke.
Chief Councillor—D. McQuaig.
Vice-Councillor—C. Wheeley.
Recorder—E. Walsh.
Financier—W. Payton.
Prelate—Mrs. Sabine.
Marshall—S. Harding.
Warden—Mrs. McQuaig.
Medical Examiner—Dr. Brown and Dr. Morgan.
Trustee for one year—Mr. D. McQuaig.
Trustee for two years—Mr. W. Payton.
Trustee for three years — Mr. H. Easterbrook.

M. Walsh, Reporter.

REGIMENT AMALGAMATED.

The regiment, now at Salisbury Plain, known officially as the 7th Royal Montreal Regiment, consists mainly of three small battalions from Montreal, viz., the Victoria Rifles, the Grenadier Guards and the 5th Regiment of Montreal. These have been amalgamated.

This regiment, it is stated, is about to leave the training camp, near Salisbury, for the front.

STEPS TO AID VICTIMS OVER 25,000 DEAD

Italian Government Initiates Immense Measures to Provide for Wounded and Homeless

LONDON, Jan. 15.—According to The Rome Tribuna it is estimated that the victims of the earthquake number between 23,000 and 25,000.

A despatch to The Morning Post from Rome says:

"In the Marsi, the region around Lake Fucino, at Avezzano, there are 30,000 victims of the earthquake.

"Of the 12,000 inhabitants of Avezzano only 100 survive."

The estimates ran last night from 25,000 to 50,000 dead and injured, and yet there are several sections which undoubtedly felt the earthquake in full measure, from which no estimate can be obtained.

King Victor Emmanuel is on the scene at Avezzano, and 30,000 soldiers have been despatched to the various centres where the force of the disturbance was greatest.

Premier Salandra told his associates at the Cabinet meeting in Rome yesterday to provide relief for the inhabitants of the stricken area that has suffered the loss of life which reach 30,000, and the number of injured 30,000. He said the disaster was second only to that of Messina.

Tremendous relief measures have been put in motion. King Victor Emmanuel has left for the vicinity of Avezzano to lead the rescuers. Queen Helena, deterred by illness, delegated the Duchess of Aosta to represent her. The duchess has gone to Monterodunl, where she immediately installed herself as a hospital nurse to care for the wounded.

Trainload upon trainload of injured are rolling into Rome. Every train arriving from the province of Abruzzo brings hundreds of persons who have been wounded. The refugees are distributed among the hospitals and private dwellings. The mayor of Rome, Prince Colonna, has placed at the disposal of the refugees several public buildings.

The latest information received here confirms previous reports that the greater parts of Santolimo, Paterne, Pescina, Cerchio, Collarmele and San Benedetto were destroyed.

ROUND THE STORES

AT REID'S.

The Reid Company's New Year opens with a shower of bargains. Beginning to-morrow, there will be two solid weeks of lowered prices in the smartest lot of ladies' coats, suits and dresses. When the mass of people are curtailing expenses to meet war-time conditions, this opportunity afforded by The Reid Co. will be a treat for thrifty ladies. On page eleven will be found some of the underpriced features that will open to-morrow morning, with a rush. Early buyers will profit by them.

AT BARRIE'S.

The present Barrie Fur Sale is most important—important because of the unusual opportunities for money-saving, and because of the high qualities maintained. Included in the present sale, at the lowest prices for twenty-five years, attractive offerings are being made in Women's Fur Coats, in all fashionable lengths and modes—Hudson Seal, Persian Lamb, Mole, and Alaska Seal. Also in men's fur and fur-lined overcoats, caps, gloves and robes.

AT WHITE'S.

There is a probability of the Government putting a war tax of 5c or 10c per pound on tea. This talk may or may not be true; no one knows only those who will not tell; but it seems certain that some tax will be put on. However, Porter S. White, the Market Square Grocer, will not advance his tea prices. You can still buy the best value in bulk teas at 30c and 40c per lb. It might be wise to buy ahead just now. The package teas remain as usual. In jellies, jams and marmalades, present prices at White's are ruling below the regular in various makes.

AT SCHNEIDER'S.

"Geraldine, isn't that a beautiful chime clock? It's just what I've wanted in the house for years."

So spoke the mother, as she and her daughter were leisurely shopping in Schneider's. The price was found satisfactory and the daughter was proud to tell her mother that she could gratify this little wish of her's. There are some surprising prices just now at Schneider's. It is inventory time and overstocks in some lines are being considerably reduced.

AT "THE EXAMINER"

Are you in a hurry for bill-heads, statement forms, printed envelopes, loose leaf ledger sheets, letter heads, counter blanks, day books, or any need now. It can duplicate any special account book that you now have in use. Ask about any book form you use in your business. Calling cards, invitation cards, wedding stationery and Society printing done in correct style.

INTERNED AS AN ALIEN

Nephew of Gen. Von Mackenzen Held at Vancouver

VANCOUVER, Jan. 15. — Baron Gisrl von Mackenzen, former officer in the famous Prussian Death's Head Hussars, and a nephew of Gen. von Mackenzen, who is now leader of the German forces in Russian Poland, together with Dr. Otto Reddlioch, a German lawyer, and Hans Merselick, a German reservist, were all arrested yesterday as prisoners of war, and lodged in New Westminster Jail. It is expected that they will be detained until the end of the war.

Von Mackenzen, who is young and delicate looking, and Dr. Reddlioch, were arrested two weeks ago by the provincial authorities and later released after they had made explanations. Von Mackenzen at that time showed a copy of a letter he had sent to the German consul at Seattle, refusing to obey the summons to return to the colors, and he stated that before war was declared he had applied for naturalization as a British subject. Yesterday the authorities decided to re-arrest and detain the men.

THE "I WILL" MAN PLEASED

To visit the Grafton store, and see the looks of appreciation on the faces of the crowd of shoppers there, was all the evidence that was needed to prove that the "I Will" Man had abundantly pleased them with the superlative values in every kind of garment for men and boys. That he has fully lived up to every promise is clear to all, and the liberal way in which the orders are reducing the heavy stock is the best proof of the genuineness of the bargains.

On another page there is another big list of the "I Will" Man's offerings, but the store management says it is only a small part of the immense array of bargains that are on display, space allowing only a partial mention of items selected at random from the hundreds shown.

Invasion Continues

Russian Troops in East Prussia Make Great Headway

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Russians are advancing in two columns, one by way of Guru Humora, and the other by way of Kimpleng, into southernmost Bukowina, according to advices reaching here yesterday. The Russians now hold Valepuntza and are preparing to march through Petstchamisch Pass, the last Austrian stronghold in Bukowina.

Information comes from the army to the effect that the Germans are preparing another grand stroke in the district north of Warsaw. The Germans have brought up their 11-inch motars to the Russian front, and on Tuesday began a general bombardment which lasted all night and the day following along the whole front from their artillery, heavy and light guns, mortars and rifles. That means an imminent attack, which probably is in course of delivery now. It is noticeable that the grand duke's bulletin, dated the last day of the Russian old year, for the first time includes in its phrasing, "the whole front," what hitherto has been kept separate, namely, the right and left banks of the Vistula, together as one front.

Evidently the Germans have again sent in a considerable force north of the Vistula. The Russians have made a counter move in East Prussia, where a whole series of villages eastwards from Rosog, have been captured. German cavalry, with infantry supports, failed to check the progress of the Russians. One of the villages was strongly fortified and was defended for some time by the Germans, who were eventually only driven out at the point of the bayonet. The position in which this Russian force operating in East Prussia now finds itself, seems to indicate that the German force guarding the Masurian Lakes at Boyen, has been turned.

Four terrific attacks have been delivered by the Germans in central Poland in the past forty-eight hours. The Russians, it is said, have been driven back with considerable loss of ground.

Moved by M. Coughlin, seconded by Geo. Hamilton, that Denis McCarthy be appointed a member of the Board of Health for the year 1915.—Carried.

Mr. J. E. Galvin and Wm. Condon applied for the office of assessor for the year 1915.

Moved by Geo. Hamilton, 2nd seconder, that J. E. Galvin be appointed assessor for the year 1915 at a salary of $65.—Lost.

Moved by M. Kennedy, seconded by M. Coughlin, that Wm. Condon be appointed assessor for the year 1915 at a salary of $60.00.—Carried.

By-laws No. 805, 806, and 807, appointing the municipal officers, were passed.

Mr. Stuart Brown came before the Council with a petition signed by a number of the ratepayers in Ward No 4, asking that help be given Mrs. Mary Armstrong, who was so unfortunate as to have her house and contents destroyed by fire during the past year.

Moved by M. Coughlin, seconded by R. Moloney, that the Reeve do issue his order to Mrs. Mary Armstrong for $12 as charity.—Carried.

Moved by M. Kennedy, seconded by M. Coughlin, that the Reeve be appointed to let the printing contract for the year 1915.—Carried.

Moved by R. Moloney, seconded by Geo. Hamilton, that the collector be authorized to collect the balance of taxes for the year 1914 forthwith.—Carried.

Moved by R. Moloney, seconded by Geo. Hamilton, that a resolution passed on Feb. 9th, 1914, granting aid to the amount of $2.00 for month to Mrs. Maud Wall, be rescinded.—Carried.

Moved by M. Coughlin, seconded by Geo. Hamilton, that the sum of $25.00 be granted for the purpose of repairing bridge on line of road between con. 1 and 2 in front of lot 9 and the treasurer is hereby authorized to pay this amount on the order of M. D. Kennedy.—Carried.

The following accounts were passed, viz.: B. Dench, cost of repairing ballot box, 50c.; P. G. Towns, making out financial statement, $5.00; H. Daubuy, refund of dog tax, $1.00; Taylor and Hall for 6 30-inch tiles, $13.80; J. J. Moore, half cost of barrels used for transportation of goods donated to Belgian Relief Fund, $17.94; Stephen Murphy, repairing road grader, $2.75;

Moved by M. Kennedy, seconded by R. Moloney, that Council adjourn, to meet at a call from the Reeve.—Carried.

German Names Removed From Russian Council

PETROGRAD, Jan. 15.—What virtually amounts to an entirely new Council of Empire is being created today, the last day of the Russian year, by the annual appointment of new members. The general interest in the selections, which are to be made public before the day is over, is intensified by the expectation that many Russians with German names will no longer serve the Empire in the capacity of councillor.

It is practically certain that the new president of the Council will be Mr. Ivan Golouboff and that the vice-presidency will be given to Mr. Serge Manoukhine. Both these men are Russians. The Council of Empire corresponds in importance to the American Senate, but in addition it yields certain powers which in the United States are vested in the President and the Supreme Court. Many of its members are appointed by the Emperor, while the remainder are elected by the Zemstvos. Since the elected membership is seldom complete, and as it always includes a number of non-residents, the appointees of Emperor Nicholas always are in a majority in the Council, which, after the Emperor himself, is the most important governing factor in the Empire. The President and the Vice-President always are appointed to office.

Russian officials bearing Teutonic names predominate in the government of Poland. These men also are being gradually replaced by born Russians, thus removing one of the complaints of the Poles. After the capture of Baron Korff, some week ago, he was replaced by a man named Von Essen. Later Von Essen was supplanted by the head of the Emperor's Chancellry, a Russian named Lubinoff.

Japan is trying to introduce silk raising into Korea, purchasing 1,000,000 cocoons in China and engaging the services of Chinese experts in sericulture.

A SOLDIER'S KIT SERVES AS AGENT IN FRENCH ROMANCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Cupid has been discovered dodging bullets in the trenches of the French army. But he was a lucky little fighter, for one of his arrows has pierced the heart of a soldier and revived a pretty romance which began in Nancy seventeen years ago and may have its sequel in America. News of the romance was received at the headquarters of the Lafayette Fund, No. 13 East Thirty-Third Street.

It all happened because Miss Adele Louveille, of Plaquenine, La., sent $2 together with a card bearing her name, to the Fund to pay for one soldier's kit. Out of the eight thousand which have been forwarded to the French soldiers by this organization only this one, so far as is known, has served as a love link between a fighting hero and an American girl.

The card in the kit, No. 1,148, fell into the hands of Maurice Dubois, of the Twenty-Seventh Company of the Sixth Cavalry, dismounted, of the Fourth Army Corps, fighting in the Argonne.

When Dubois unpacked his kit on Christmas Day and saw the name, it recalled a delightfully pretty little schoolmate he once had in Nancy. So he wrote to the committee of the Lafayette Fund asking them to find out if Adele Louveille knew and remembered him.

"We went to school together in Nancy seventeen years ago, when I was twelve and she was eleven," wrote the French soldier. "I have never heard of her since she left there. Will you find out for me if she is the same person, my little girl and schoolmate? If I survive this war I am coming to America to see her."

In her reply to the committee Miss Louveille said she was delighted to hear about her friend of long ago and that she prayed for his welfare and his coming to this country.

This romance, growing out of packing kits for the soldiers in the trenches, gave a new interest to the work as groups of women assembled warm woollen garments and tied them securely in canvas bags, each containing the name of its donor.

SIDEWALKS TO BE SANDED

Wherever and Whenever It Is Thought Necessary

The question of sanding the sidewalks whenever they become slippery came up for discussion at last night's meeting of the City Council. Ald. Green, chairman of the Board of Works, wanted to know how far he should go in that direction. Mayor Buller then became reminiscent, recalling the time when he was chairman of the Board of Works, and the extent to which the sidewalks were sanded. It was customary for the chairman of the Board of Works, the City Engineer and the Street Commissioner to undertake the responsibility of deciding upon the streets or districts that were to be sanded.

Ald. Green wanted to know whether the City was prepared to sand all the streets or merely those in the more travelled parts of the City.

Ald. Duffus—"We can't afford to overlook any streets that require sanding, no matter where they are located."

"We should make every possible effort to meet the conditions as we find them," put in Ald. Johnston.

Mayor Buller—"We all agree to that. I don't see why we should waste more time discussing the matter. Leave it to the discretion of the Chairman of the Board of Works.

APPRECIATION IS EXPRESSED

Major Bennett Writes to the Canadian Kitchener League

Mrs. Grady, treasurer of the Canadian Kitchener League, has received the following letter from Major Bennett, Commanding the Peterborough Detachment in the 2nd Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force:

Bustard Camp, Dec. 26, 1914.

Dear Mrs. Grady:—I beg to acknowledge the parcel of woollens which was sent to the members of A Company (Peterborough Detachment) by the Canadian Kitchener League. The parcel reached me this morning, and on distributing the comforts it contained the boys desired me to extend to you, to be conveyed to the League, their deepest appreciation of your kindly thoughtfulness on their behalf. For them and myself I want to assure you all that it's just such attention as this which touches our tenderest memories of those beloved ones at home, and encourages us to do the things which duty teaches that we ought to do—and one of the first is never to forget that your hopes and prayers are with us, and for us now and for all time, and it is our sincerest hope to return to you all after having honourably served our beloved country truly and well.—Very sincerely yours,

G. W. Bennett, Major,
A Company, 2nd Battalion.

WILL LOOK INTO MATTER

Mayor Buller, Aldermen Johnston and Green have been appointed a committee to look into the matter of an account that is said to be outstanding against the Romaine Street sewer. The Chairman of the Board of Works has signified his intention of cleaning up this matter, and with that object in view, has asked for a full report. Willis and Chipman, consulting engineers of Toronto, are pressing for settlement of a bill for services said to have been rendered the City.

Mayor Buller suggested the possibility of the whole Council going to Toronto and "have another little jaunt."

GERMAN INFANTRY DRIVEN FROM NIEUPORT REGION

Flood on River Aisne Combined With Vigorous Attack by Germans Compels French Troops to Give Ground in Local Engagement

LONDON, Jan. 15. — A Morning Post despatch from Amsterdam yesterday says: "The allies operating in the region of the Yser have lately been advancing more quickly than before, especially north of Lombartzyde and Nieuport. They have bombarded heavily the German positions near Westende and Baina, acting in co-operation with British torpedo craft, which shelled German fortified positions along the coast. German batteries answered their fire and shelled one of the suburbs of Nieuport, from which it is clear that the German infantry has been completely driven back from the Nieuport region. The German fire did not cause much damage, but Germans are showing increased activity with their aircraft.

Both French and German official statements record a victory by the Germans on the heights of Vregny, northeast of Soissons. The Berlin statement claims that the Germans charging through rain and mud, took trench after trench at the point of the bayonet, clearing the heights and capturing more than a thousand prisoners.

The French official bulletin of last evening says:

"Last night our troops were successful in a sudden attack with the object of overwhelming the trenches recently constructed by the Germans to the northeast of Fontenoy-court, north of Roye (Department of the Somme).

"The attacks of the enemy in the region to the north of Soissons have been stopped.

"As has been said in the communication of this morning, the flooding of the River Aisne, which destroyed several of our bridges, had rendered very precarious the communications of our troops operating on the first slopes of the right bank. We were thus prevented from sending them reinforcements. This has been the essential cause of the withdrawal of those troops which were fighting under difficult conditions.

"We were obliged to abandon several cannon as the result of the breaking down of a bridge. We have rendered all of them unfit for use.

"The Germans have made prisoners, particularly of wounded men, who, in the withdrawal movement, we were not able to take with us. On our side, we have made a number of important prisoners, not wounded, belonging to seven different regiments.

"To sum up, the success is a partial one for our adversaries, which will have no influence on the operations as a whole. In fact, by reason of obstacles presented by the Aisne and the dispositions which we have taken, the enemy will be unable to utilize the south of the river, the success of which is of purely local character.

"On the rest of the front there is nothing to report.

"In Belgium the firing of our artillery was interfered with by the rain; nevertheless the cannonading yesterday was very spirited in the vicinity of Nieuport and around Ypres. Certain detachments of Belgian troops blew up, at a point to the southeast of Stuyvekenskerke, the buildings on a farm which were serving the enemy as a depot for his ammunition."

"Between the Lys and the Oise, in the region of Lens, our artillery were successful in dispersing a group of German pioneers on the outskirts of the Hamlet of Angres, and it bombarded effectively the German trenches to the southeast of the chapel of Notre Dame de Lorette.

"To the north of Soissons there was determined fighting all day yesterday. The engagement was localized to a section of ground situated to the north of Crouy. We held only the first slopes of these hills. On our left in this field our counter-attack made slight progress, but without succeeding in recording a material advance. On the centre we retained our positions around the Village of Crouy, in spite of the repeated efforts of the enemy to dislodge us, but on the east, in front of Vregny, we were obliged to yield.

"In Champagne, the region of Perthes continued to be the scene of local engagements for the possession of German trenches on the second and third lines of defence. To the north of Beausejour we blew up some of the enemy's positions, to make impossible the laying of mines. The Germans, believing they were being attacked, manned their trenches. We then opened a violent artillery and infantry fire on these positions.

"There is nothing to report on the rest of the front."

Officers Installed

Enjoyable Event Under the Auspices of Court Chemong No. 530 Last Night.

The semi-monthly meeting of Court Chemong, No. 530, Independent Order of Foresters, was held last night in the W.O.W. Hall, with Bro. D. Wallace, C.R., presiding. The annual reports of officers were read and adopted, and the usual business transacted. The officers for this year were then duly installed by Bro. G. Metcalfe, Court Deputy, in their respective chairs of office.

The following is the list of officers: P.C.R., A. E. Miscampbell; C.R., D. Wallace; V.C.R., H. C. Wilson; R.S., J. W. Buyers; F.S., G. W. Powell; Treas., W. Madill; Orator, J. Ingram; Organist, Mrs. A. Bradshaw; S. W., O. E. Gross; J.W., A. Gillespie; S.B., E. Wright; J.B., L. Christopher; C.D., G. Metcalfe; Trustees, W. G. Walker, W. Brown.

The ladies having prepared refreshments, the members retired to the dining hall. The croupiers at the table were: Bro. D. Wallace, Bro. G. W. Powell, Bro. W. Madill, and Bro. Dr. Carmichael. In the toast list the responders for the ladies were Bro. G. W. Powell and Bro. W. Brown, and a vote of thanks was tendered to Companion Mrs. Bradshaw and Companion Miss Rhodehouse for their thoughtfulness and kindness in preparing the banquet.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The "Cheerful Workers" Ladies' Bible class of St. James' church, held their annual business meeting in the class room on Tuesday evening, Jan. 12, 1915. The secretary treasurer read an excellent report of the past year, showing each department to be up to standard record.

The election of officers and committees for the year was as follows:

Teacher—Mrs. J. Welbourn.
President—Miss A. Barrie.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. J. H. Fry.
Sec.-treasurer—Mrs. C. Hill.
Asst. Sec-treas.—Mrs. Mahood.
Membership Com.—All members of class.
Visiting Com.—Nine members of class.
Social Com.—Eight members of class.

Miss A. Barrie and Mrs. Mahood were appointed as delegates to the Adult Bible class convention in Toronto on Jan. 29th and 30th.

The class decided to again hold themselves responsible for one hundred dollars ($100) to church building fund during the next three years. Also to continue the "self-denial plan," the proceeds to be devoted to the missionary fund. The President here remarked that through this plan last year the amount collected for missionary work was $18.00.

Rev. G. N. Clarry was present during part of the meeting, and addressed the class, congratulating them on the splendid report and the year's work.

Refreshments were served by the teachers and president, and a pleasant time spent in social intercourse.

After a prayer of thanksgiving to God for His presence with them during the past year, and asking His help and guidance during the year 1915, the class dispersed to their homes.

BOUGHT A DISEASED TURKEY

Liver Sent To Agricultural College For Examination

A party in this town purchased a turkey during the holidays. Upon dressing it she found that the liver was diseased and consulted with others about the matter. The liver was sent to the Guelph Agricultural College, where microscopic examination revealed the fact that the turkey had been infected with Entero-Hepatitis, commonly known as "blackhead," which is a disease that affects turkeys in the United States and Canada, and which of course renders them unfit for consumption. The liver becomes affected early and later the head of the bird becomes black.

This incident will doubtless prove a warning to citizens to examine fowl carefully and also to question cars as to where they purchase them.—Port Hope Guide.

DEDICATION OF CHANCEL OF ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

The Beautiful Complement to the Completion of a Beautiful Church, Formally Dedicated

The dedication services in connection with the beautiful new chancel of All Saints' Church, which virtually marks the completion of one of the most dignified and substantial [illegible] in the city, was humanly speaking, a great success. A large congregation filled the beautiful, newly-decorated nave, and there was a large [illegible] of local and vicinity clergy. The simple, but impressive ceremony of dedication was performed by the Lord Bishop of Toronto. He was assisted by the visiting clergy, the number of nine —Ven Archdeacon Warren, Toronto; Rev. Rural Dean Hartford, Brighton; Rev. Canon Davidson, St. John's; Rev. W. L. Armitage, St. Mark's, Toronto, first rector of All Saints'; Rev. [illegible] Pryce, St. George's; Rev. F. [illegible], St. Luke's; Rev. Edward [illegible], Peterborough; Rev. John Gibbs, St. John's, Lakefield; Rev. C. W. [illegible], Havelock, and, of course, Rev. R. B. Gardiner, rector of All Saints, under whose administration the church and chancel have been completed.

The church and chancel have been described in our columns, but no description prepared the congregation for the appearance of the new chancel, spacious, lofty, dignified, a blaze of light, revealing its rich but dignified furnishings. The altar, reached by a rich crimson carpet, was bright with flowers, which showed strikingly in front of the deep red of the reredos.

After the simple, but solemn, service of dedication, performed by the Bishop, followed the service of Evensong. This was conducted by Ven. Archdeacon Warren, assisted by Rev. Dean Pickford and Rev. F. J. Sawers. The lessons were read by Rev. Canon Davidson and Rev. W. L. Armitage. The sermon was preached by the Bishop, and was worthy of his scholarship and devotional character.

The Right Rev. J. Fielding Sweeny, Bishop of Toronto, took for his text the 10th verse of the 3rd chapter of the First Epistle of St. Paul, the Apostle to Timothy — "And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory."

"There is no season in the Church's year more important than the season of Epiphany. It is our festival; the Gentiles' festival, and we should esteem it and observe it as a festival and season for our spiritual betterment.

In the Book that chronicles the four gospel records we have the record of the acts of some of the Apostles and not the acts of all the Apostles. We have the acts principally of two of the Apostles. There are many other things which might have been put in the Book.

I want you to think of the Gospel records, the expressions of Jesus Christ, and the passions of Jesus Christ, and the manifestations of His goodness.

Every one of these instances that you see scattered here and there of the Gospel is such manifestations of His goodness and tender mercy. The compassion of Him who bears our sufferings, conquering the forces of disease, conquering the forces of nature, conquering the forces of the devil.

Oh will you not have an added interest in these Gospel records when you take the sufferings and experiences of Jesus?

And someone may ask what are the purposes of these manifestations. The answer may be found in the Gospel according to St. John — "That ye might have life through His name." He left us that we shall follow His steps.

How much of this aspiration of your Church is kept. There may not be a single day in the Church of England to which you belong, for which there is not an Epiphany. There is not a single day that has not its divine Epiphany and its divine message to influence us.

"I truly join and rejoice with you to-night that this building, which has needed the addition so long, has at last attained it. I congratulate the Rector, the Building Committee and the people. I am pleased to see this sanctuary filled by choristers, some of whom are from our own sister churches and the congregation augmented to-night by members of other churches.

In conclusion, I do not want you to simply have an exterior knowledge of this building. I want you to have a serious acquaintance with it, and hope that you will oftentimes come in here and kneel in prayer and feel the blessings of God, and that every time you do God may manifest Himself in Epiphany to you. Never in the history of our Church, or the British Empire, have we passed through such serious times as the time in which we live. Do let us understand that in the midst of all these dreadful changes He may be found by those who are seeking in the house of prayer.

The Musical Services.

A special reference is due the music which was under the capable direction of Mr. George Chandler, with Miss Mowers at the organ. The choir, which had been very effectively strengthened for the occasion, principally from the choir of St. John's, was sixty in number, well balanced, and it led the singing and did its special work with very agreeable success. The hymns incidental to the service, were of the old sterling type, such as—"All People That on Earth Do Dwell", "The Church's One Foundation", etc. They were not only appropriate in character and sentiment, but were sung by the congregation, led by the splendid choir, with an inspiration derived from the occasion that made them veritable [illegible] of praise. The choir sang as the offertory anthem, Stall's "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem." This was followed by—in a musical sense—the finest of the evening, "The Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's Messiah. As the congregation rose to the listening so did the choir rise to the requirements and this magnificent hymn of praise. It was splendidly sung; not only was its spirit caught, but its harmonic wonders were delightfully brought out. Altogether the choir acquitted itself remarkably well. The harmony of the choir itself was an exemplification of the harmony amongst the choirs that cooperated for the occasion, and there was more than mere courtesy and grateful acknowledgement involved in the gracious thanks tendered by Mr. Grobb, in the choir vestry, to the choristers from St. John's that gave their services for the evening.

The dedication of All Saints' chancel was, from every point of consideration, a gratifying success, and without cant or irreverence, it may be said that both rector and congregation, at this new starting point of progress, may thank God and take courage.

JUDGE WILL INVESTIGATE

question of commissions on contracts received by any person while a member of the Board was a proper case for disposition by a judicial officer who understood the sifting of evidence. The Minister of Education might appoint a man who would be incompetent and would merely whitewash. We want an investigation before a judicial officer, who does not depend for his next job on how he handled the last one.

Mr. Crane pointed out that with this as the only charge for consideration, many of Mr. Gordon's pre-election statements appeared to be eliminated.

Mr. Gordon—I don't intend to eliminate anything. The calling for tenders was a matter of policy and business administration. A commission would have no right to deal with that. It does not come under," I think, "any matter connected with the good government of the municipality."

Mr. Crane—You went further than that.

Mr. Gordon—What did I say different?

Mr. Crane—"I will see that no stone must be put up to sell supplies."

Mr. Gordon asked the chairman if Mr. Crane was in order.

Mr. Crane—I think you have received special consideration.

MR. EASTWOOD.

Mr. Bonbo said the sooner the question was dealt with the better. He did not want an investigation resembling the Trent Canal affair.

Mr. Crane—We all want this cleared up. Our standing has been impugned and we want it cleared up. I think it better to go to the Minister. Mr. Gordon thinks the other method better.

Mr. Hill declared that he was quite ready to meet the charges. He seconded the motion, but Mr. Gordon pointed out that according to the regulation Mr. Hill could not vote nor move or second a motion.

Mr. Eastwood said he felt the matter could be settled without reference to the Minister or County Judge. He did not wish a heavy expense to be incurred. If it came to a question of a commission, the County Judge is regarded quite sufficient. The matter need not go beyond the City. Mr. Eastwood said he had had no collusion with Mr. Gordon, nor had spoken to him, but to bring the question to the fore he would second the Gordon amendment.

Mr. Smith said the cap did not fit him.

Mr. Eastwood—You are in it as much as the rest of us. That's a rotten excuse.

Mr. Smith wanted to [illegible] that he had given any information from the Board to Mr. Gordon.

Mr. Ackerman—There's nothing to give.

Col. Miller said he was satisfied with the County Judge. He sincerely hoped, he said, that the year's work was not to be impaired by any wrangling over the matter. Let it be decided in a regular way by the Judge.

Mr. Eastwood—I will not be a member who is going to fight out a thing of this kind for twelve months.

WHEN IT CAME TO A VOTE.

Mr. Gordon resumed his former position that he wanted a finding as to whether a member could have dealings with the Board which brought him pecuniary gain.

Mr. Crane—Isn't that merely a question of the interpretation of that clause?

Mr. Gordon admitted this, and said that his opinion had been supported by other lawyers whom he had consulted.

Those who supported the amendment were: Messrs. Deane, Smith, Eastwood, Gordon and McGrath; opposed: Messrs. Miller, Burnham and Crane.

Orangemen Elected Officers

At Annual Meeting of District Orange Lodge, Dist. No. 1, West Peterborough

The annual meeting of District Orange Lodge, District No. 1, County of West Peterborough, was held in the Orange Hall, Downer's Corners, last evening. District Master, Bro. J. A. Holden, occupied the chair. After the general routine of business was transacted the election of officers took place, and resulted as follows:

Dis. M., Bro. D. M. Anderson, No. 457; Dep. Dis. M., Bro. E. Wicker, No. 321; Dis. Chaplain, Bro. D. Hamilton, No. 457; Dis. Rec. Sec., Bro. W. G. Bartley, No. 321; Dis. Fin. Sec., Bro. G. Brown, No. 457; Dis. Treas., Bro. Charles Kitney, No. 321; Dis. Dir. of Cer., Bro. C. Scott, No. 2440. Dis. Lecturer, Bro. A. Rennie, No. 494; Dis. Dep. Lecturers, Bro. Leckie, No. 2440, Bro. Stewart, No. 321 and Bro. Braddell, No. 457.

The newly elected officers were duly installed by Past Dis. Master Bro. R. Riddle.

After the election of officers all members present were entertained to a sumptuous repast.

After the above meeting was brought to a close the members of the Royal Scarlet Chapter assembled in due form—W. C. in Com. Comp. Wm. Anderson in the chair. All the officers were in their respective places. Although the night was far spent, it was no trouble to do the business of the night, and in due time the following officers were elected for the coming year:

W. C. in Com., Comp. T. C. Holden, No. 321; Ex-Comp. [illegible] Comp. E. Hutchinson, No. 2440; Comp. Chaplain, Comp. David Hamilton, No. 457; Comp. Scribe, Comp. W. G. Barthy, No. 321; Comp. Treas., Comp. A. E. Robyns, No. 457; Sr. Herald at Arms, F. Lockington, No. 457; 1st Lecturer, E. Brown, No. 457; 2nd Lecturer, J. A. Holden, No. 321; 1st Con., J. Brown, No. 457; 2nd Con. A. Rennie, No. 494; Inside Herald, E. Wicker, No. 321; Outside Herald, A. Bell, No. 457.

The officers elected were duly installed by Comp. J. C. Walden, Past County Master of West Peterborough. This brought to a close a well spent night in the advancement of the Orange Order.

It might be said that this is Bro. Bartley's sixteenth selection as district secretary.

WAITED ON GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 15.—At noon to-day the Government received the annual delegation of representatives of the Dominion Trades and Labour Council, who presented resolutions adopted at the annual meeting of Congress, which this year was held in St. John City. One of which urged the adoption of the eight-hour-a-day bill on Government works. Sir Robert Borden received the representatives in sympathetic manner, and said various proposals would receive the serious attention of the Government.

HOCKEY

The Executive of Murray Street Church hockey team have entered a formal protest against the game that was played with George Street, last evening. At the end of the hour neither team had scored so that the referee decided to let the play continue until a decision was reached. The protest is based on three complaints, namely: That the players did not get a rest before being called upon to play overtime.

That the players were allowed to disperse before being notified of the referee's decision to play overtime.

That the only notice given the players of the referee's decision was the ringing of a bell from the centre of the ice, and that George Street scored the only goal of the game from the right wing, when the opposing player of that position was absent from the ice.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

EVERYTHING READY FOR TO-NIGHT'S BIG GAME

Despite the mild weather the ice at Brock Street rink is in good shape for to-night's game between Picton and the Petes. That there will be a grand crowd goes without saying and that the game will be a thriller all the way is equally certain. The reserved seat plan was completely sold out last night, all the reserves, including the new seats built in the balcony having been taken. There is plenty of accommodation, however, the east side and more than half of the west side being open for general admission. The game will be called at 8 o'clock sharp, with Lou E. Marsh handling the bell.

The Peterborough team will be picked from the following: Janes, Dwyer, Hunter, Pethick, Spratt, Halpin, Moines, Park and Kelly.

Picton's line-up will be the same as in their previous games.

Three Good Games In The Church League

A big crowd saw three hard-fought games in the Senior Church Hockey League last night. All three games were fought to a finish and some good hockey was shown.

The battle of the night was the opening clash between Murray Street Baptist and George Street Methodist. When time was called neither team had scored. In the over-time George Street scored the only goal.

St. Andrews beat their brother Presbyterians from St. Paul's, by 4 goals to 1, while in the final game St. Luke's won from St. John's, 2 to 1.

BOWLING

In the Y.M.C.A. Bowling League last night the Examiner took two out of three games from the C.G.E. Shop, all three games being close and were decided in the last two frames. The scores were:

JUNIOR CHURCH LEAGUE.

Last night in the second game of the Junior Church League, St. John's won from Charlotte Street by the score of 5 to 4. St. John's led at half-time by 2 to 0, but Charlotte Street tied it up in the second half—4 to 4—only to lose the game by one of their men banging the puck into his own goal. Charett for Charlotte Street, was the fastest man on the ice, while Thompson and Williamson were also good. Pidgeon, the goal-keeper, and Heard and Parks were St. John's best. The line-up:

St. John's — Goal, Pidgeon; right defence, Esobichon; left defence, Seward; centre, Parks; rover, Heard; right wing, W. Common; left wing, Flowers.

A Loss to London.

When Charles Buchan was serving up a wonderful display of football at Tottenham on Saturday, Mr. T. A. Descock, of that club, must have blessed (?) the directors of the Leyton club who deprived the 'Spurs of Buchan's services. Just previous to his transfer to Sunderland Mr. Descock had practically arranged terms with Leyton, and was going over to complete the business when he was notified that Buchan had been transferred to the Wearsiders; a notification that had the effect of making Mr. Descock indulge in a few pointed remarks, for none knew better than he how great a player the 'Spurs had lost.

The feeling must have been intensified on Saturday, for the ground conditions so favoured Buchan that he gave a brilliant display of clever and effective football that could not have been bettered by anyone. Indeed, the probabilities are that no other man in the game have reached the same standard.

MUSSULMANS HELD BRIDGE.

Only Four of Four Hundred Survived Battle With Turks.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 15.—The correspondent of The Bourse Gazette at Tiflis sendsa statement made to him by Sahedja Wa Daoulah, the former governor of the Province of Azerbijan, Persia, who has arrived in Tiflis.

He is one of four survivors of a guard of 400 horsemen who defended the bridge at the entrance to Miandoab, "the gateway of Persia." He fought 4,000 Turks for ten hours, enabling refugees to escape to Mahurita, fifty miles south of Tabris. All Christians who remained in Miandoab, he stated, were massacred.

"When I heard that the Turks were advancing," he said, "I posted 1,500 troops in one of the Miandoab forts and 1,200 in another. I myself with 400 relatives and friends fought a hopeless battle at the bridge until all but four were killed by the Turks' quick-firers. I then fled on horseback upon Russia to Julfa.

"All the members of the consulates and banks escaped from Tabris."

SERVICES APPRECIATED.

Count von Berchtold Is Eulogized by Austro-Germans.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—An autograph letter from Emperor Francis Joseph to Count Leopold von Berchtold, accepting his resignation as Foreign Minister, was published yesterday in The Official Vienna Gazette. The Emperor expresses deep appreciation of his services and confers upon him the grand cross of the Order of St. Stephen.

Berlin newspapers, commenting upon the resignation of Count Leopold von Berchtold as Austrian Foreign Minister, speak highly of his career as a statesman, and lay particular emphasis upon his loyalty to the Austrian alliance with Germany.

Upwards of 200 German officers and seamen rescued after the naval engagement between the German and British squadrons off the Falkland Islands in the southern Atlantic, on Dec. 8, arrived yesterday in England.

Trade Merger Discredited.

OTTAWA, Jan. 15. — Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, gave a straight denial yesterday to the statement in a circular letter sent to various Canadian manufacturers by Messrs. G. Noel and P. Ransom, 11 St. Sacrament street, Montreal, that they were "officially delegated by the Federal Government to go over to France and Belgium in the interest of Canadian manufacturers, with a view to bringing about closer commercial relations between Canada and these countries."

Larkhill Section Moved.

SALISBURY, Eng., Jan. 15.—Owing to the condition of Larkhill Camp members of the fourth brigade, consisting of westerners, among whom recruiting originated, will be moved in Tidworth Barracks, near Salisbury. OBITUARY

HERBERT J. REYNOLDS.

Master Herbert John Reynolds, the eleven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Reynolds, passed away at the family residence, 493 Patterson Street, at 11 o'clock to-day, after a short illness from blood poisoning.

Deceased had only been ailing for a couple of days. A couple of weeks ago he had his heel scraped by a new hockey boot which did not fit very well. As late as Friday evening last he took part in the Sunday school concert in Park Street Baptist church, where he was a regular attendant.

The sore was poulticed and was thought to be about well when blood poisoning set in.

The survivors are his parents, three brothers and one sister.

The funeral arrangements will be announced to-morrow.

Shock Felt in Alps.

GENEVA, Jan. 15.—(Via Paris.)—Earth shocks were felt in the Mont Blanc mountain range and also in the Swiss and Italian Alps along the frontier Wednesday morning, and they caused huge avalanches, which have isolated the Alpine villages and hamlets and which destroyed the forests.

From five to seven feet of snow fell on the Bernina, Spiugen and St. Gothard passes, while the snow is three feet deep in the Engadine.

TRAIN DERAILED.

Passenger on Italian Railway Describes His Experiences.

LONDON, Jan. 15. — The experiences of a passenger on a train which was thrown from the track by the earthquake are related in a despatch from Rome to the Central News.

"Our train was near Fucino when the earthquake occurred," he said. "There was one shock of great violence, followed by three others. The train was thrown off the rails and many of the passengers were injured.

"I climbed out of the train and gazed around on the lake and the surrounding mountains. Where there had been towns I could merely see enormous whirlwinds of dust and smoke. Apparently the towns existed no longer."

The despatch adds that almost all the way to Tivoli buildings along the railway were in ruins. Troops sent from Rome were able to rescue hundreds of persons at many places, but cries for help were heard from beneath the ruined buildings, in a large number of instances in which it was impossible to effect a speedy release of the victims. It is estimated that 4,000 persons were buried alive under the wreckage at Avezzano. Throughout the night shouts for help could be heard. In one instance a school building collapsed, burying 200 children, many of whom are still alive.

It is stated that 400 soldiers were in the barracks at Avezzano when it collapsed and that only four of them escaped.

Trains are running from Avezzano to Tivoli without interruption, taking the injured there for treatment. Survivors arriving in Tivoli say many persons are under the ruins in Avezzano. Thousands of cubic meters of debris are piled in the town, making rescue work very difficult.

New Zeppelin Tried Out.

GENEVA, Jan. 15.—(Via Paris.)—A new Zeppelin airship left Friedrichshafen Wednesday on a trial flight of an hour. After skirting Lake Constance the airship disappeared over the grand duchy of Baden, and later returned safely to its shed. Prior to making the trip a German aeroplane made a scouting tour in order to prevent a surprise by French aircraft.

It is reported that the new Zeppelin will depart shortly for service on the North Sea.

Another Complaint

North Monaghan Woman Tells of Her Case

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In reference to the notice in the "Evening Examiner" of January 14th, as to how the poor are treated in Monaghan, kindly let me state how I and my seven children were treated by the Council. It took nearly a week before Mr. Anderson troubled himself to come and see how we were fixed. When he did come he said he had a black mark against my husband's name (he neither drinks nor smokes) so he did not trouble to come until the people kept 'phoning him to see if he had been to see us. He said he would state our case at the next Council meeting, which was on Dec. 15th. We were in great need at the time. I heard nothing more until Christmas 'Eve, when Mr. Anderson brought in a box containing a loaf of stale bread, 6 pieces of cake, apples, rolled oats, piece of head-cheese. I expect that was meant for our Christmas dinner, but thanks to Dr. Cameron, he sent in a piece of beef.

Also thanks to Mr. G. A. Gillespie for sending a nice lot of provisions, and hard wood. Had it not been for him we would have had dry bread. Mr. Miller, also some ladies of the Salvation Army sent provisions, and others have been good to us, whom I sincerely thank.

I should be grateful if you would publish this.

Yours, etc.,
Fair Play.

Russians Win Another Sweeping Victory Over the Turkish Forces

Turkish Eleventh Army Corps Have Been Completely Defeated While Eighty Transports Have Been Sunk by Fleet.

GAINING IN NORTH

SPECIAL CABLE:

PETROGRAD, Jan. 16.—Another sweeping Russian victory over the Turkish forces in the Caucasus was announced to-day. Eighty transports, conveying the Turkish troops from Anatolia are reported to have been sunk by the Russian Black Sea fleet. Nothing is known of the fate of the troops, but it is believed many must have been drowned.

At the same time the Turkish Eleventh army corps and the remnants of the Tenth, who were endeavouring to reform in the vicinity of Kara Urgan, have been completely defeated.

The fighting in the vicinity of Kara Urgan is declared by official reports to have been desperate in character, and to have resulted in enormous Turkish casualties.

The Sixty-Seventh Turkish regiment was annihilated as the result of the Russian bayonet charge.

The official report says that only the commandant and several of his officers and men were left alive, and they were taken prisoners following the charge.

The total number of prisoners taken enormous quantity of supplies. 5,000. In addition there were captured 14 guns, 10,000 head of cattle, and an enormous quantityt of supplies.

The situation in the north is also reported to-day to be developing rapidly. The Russian raiding forces, reported to be within forty miles of the strong fortress of Thorn, are expected to effect a junction with the main army, which has been operating against the East Prussia positions.

This, it is believed here, will result in Von Hindenburg being compelled to withdraw his forces from before Warsaw.

OTONABEE COUNCIL SESSION

SPLENDID ADDRESSES AT FARMERS' MEETINGS

Farmers' Institute Holds Two Successful Meetings at Ennismore Yesterday.—The Short Course Described

The regular meetings of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute, at Ennismore, were held on Friday afternoon and evening, in St. Martin's Parish Hall. The addresses were decidedly practical and interesting. Mr. Clark Hamilton of Iroquois, Ont., spoke in the afternoon, on the subject "Corn, and How to Grow It."

The failure of the feed crops, this year has demonstrated the value of ensilage, and the number of silos on the Smith and Ennismore farms testify to the fact that the farmers of this district are keenly alive to the value of corn for winter feeding. Mr. F. E. Ellis, of "Farm and Dairy," and Mr. F. C. McRae, district representative at Norwood of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, were the other speakers.

In the evening, Mr. Ellis dealt with "Rural Problems," shewing the trend toward tenantry, its causes and results, and a proposed remedy. His treatment was convincing and made a deep impression upon the audience of two hundred which attended in the evening. Mr. McRae dealt at length upon the benefits of the six weeks' short course, which will be held at Ennismore from Jan. 25th to Feb. 27th.

Not the least enjoyable portion of the evening programme were several musical numbers, including orchestral selections, a vocal solo by Miss Lois Killen and Clayton TeMord's singing of "Tipperary," with everybody swelling the Chorus. Mrs. Telford ably accompanied at the piano.

Mr. Chas. E. Moore, President of the Institute, acted as Chairman at both meetings. He emphasized the farmers' opportunity of assisting the Empire in the present crisis by producing all the crops they can this year. In this way they can refute any statements which impugn the loyalty of the farmer. Peter McArthur recently investigated the rural sections of Middlesex County and found that on fifty farms there were just eighty-nine men, and of these only eighteen or twenty were suitable for military work. And the eighty-nine was a very inadequate number for the work on these farms. Mr. Moore made a kindly reference to the late Secretary, Mr. Wm. Collins, who he said had retired from the Institute after many years of service. It might be remarked that many inquiries were made about Mr. Collins, indicating that he is missed around the circuit. His successor, Allan B. Mann, is throwing a great deal of enthusiasm into the work, and is proving a valuable assistant to Mr. Moore. Young men in the two Townships are noticeable among those keenly interested in agricultural questions, a sign that may be regarded as most encouraging. Both meetings were well attended, many questions were asked during the afternoon session, and altogether it may be remarked that all seems well with the Institute's affairs, as at present administered by the younger element. Of course, they are receiving the encouragement of the elderly men, and the women manifest a lively interest, too, but it may not be out of place to remark that the young men are providing interesting meetings and deserve commendation upon the energy and interest they are displaying toward the general questions of better rural conditions.

The Menace of Weeds.

Weeds are peculiarly and necessarily protected by nature, Mr. Hamilton said in his address on "Weeds." They are very tenacious and nature has provided them with many protections to assure their longevity. Weeds have a hard struggle for existence, but are most persistent and are a big problem to the farmer because of their interference with his profits and success.

If we would leave cultivated crops to themselves for a while they would almost disappear in a short time.

Nature is particularly kind to weeds. You cannot make all the seeds of wild oats grow in the season. Many of them do not sprout until the second year, nature in this way, providing for their longevity. The same is true of mustard. But they can be eradicated by special attention from the farmers. The wild oats can be cleaned out by eight years at the most by persistent effort.

Mr. Hamilton told of the methods by which weed seeds are spread abroad. Many of them are brought into Canada in bran and feeds from the United States. The railroads spread a great many and the careless methods of the farmers are also reponsible for the nuisance.

The annual weed is the simplest of all weeds. Its seed grows in the summer, blossoms, bears seed, and dies in the Fall. Then there are the biennial seeds, having a life of two years, such as the burdock, false wood and others.

The perennial weed is the third class, spreading by roots and surface leaves. The farmer needs to know how to combat weeds before he will be able to fight them successfully.

Cultivation will kill the "annuals" but it is often quite a task, and you have to destroy the root system of the perennials. For example, the Canada thistle. A small percentage of thistle seeds grow, but the root stocks and ground leaves remain and these must be attacked. A dense crop will kill the root system, also a hoed crop.

Where the Pinch Comes.

Under the Seed Control Act five noxious weed seeds to the ounce are allowed in red clover, No. 1, or 4,800 weed seeds to the bushel; No. 2 clover, 20 weed seeds to the ounce, or a total of 19,200 to the bushel, and red clover, No. 3, 80 weed seeds to the ounce, or 76,800 to the bushel. Under this Act 153,600 weed seeds are allowed to one bushel of Alsike No. 2, and 9,600 weeds to a bushel of No. 1 Alsike. These figures do not include the total number of impurities found in the bushel of what the farmer regards as good seed. But the farmer can see from the figures permitted under the Seed Act that the cheaper seed is really the dearer, for it contains a much greater number of noxious weed seeds. Mr. Hamilton urged the farmers to remember this fact in the Spring when they are purchasing their seed.

The Short Course.

Mr. McRae made a strong plea to the Ennismore people to send their sons and also the older men to the six weeks' short course about to be opened.

Some people, he said, are inclined to laugh at the book farmer, but when they are ill they call in a doctor; if they fall into legal trouble they engage a lawyer, and these professional men obtained their learning from books. No matter how long his experience a man cannot learn all the facts about his work from his experience alone. The same applies to agriculture. Men who won names for themselves in other lines, are familiar to nearly everyone, but very few of those who have made a success in agriculture are widely known. More attention must be paid to farm work and a higher opinion must be obtained for it before agriculture reaches the high position it deserves.

Any farmer's son may attend the Short Course classes. It is required, however, that attention must be given to the work and there must be regular attendance at the classes. The hours will be practically the regular school hours, or as near them as possible. There is no expense whatever and the course is absolutely free. Special speakers, practical men, will attend, and everything will be done to make the lessons as profitable as possible. Mr. Guardhouse, who has been a breeder of heavy horses, will be one of the visiting speakers, and as Ennismore is particularly interested in horse breeding, his visit should be a special attraction.

Outline of Course.

Mr. McRae gave a brief outline of what would be taken up in the course.

Live Stock and Principles of Breeding.—A study of the types and breeds of farm animals. Principles of breeding. Practical work in judging horses, cattle, sheep and swine. Local stock farms will be visited.

Feeds and Feeding.—Food requirements of farm stock. How to prepare rations and how to feed for best results.

Field Crops.—A study of the principal field crops of the County with practice in judging seeds of all kinds; principles of crop improvement; Rotation of crops, etc.

Dairying.—Feeding, care and management of dairy cows. Improvement o fthe dairy herd; Production, care, and handling of milk; Testing milk and cream.

Poultry — Breed characteristics of different classes of poultry; Feeding, and general management; Marketing of poultry products. Common diseases and their treatment.

Veterinary Science. — Causes and treatment of common ailments of farm animals.

Soils.—Study of the important constituents of soils, care and application of barn-yard manures, fertilizers, their nature and use, etc.

Underdrainage.

A study of chemical and physical effects of underdrainage. Methods of taking levels, determining grades, size of tile to be used and general principles in laying the tile.

Horticulture—Planting and general care of orchards, pruning, spray materials and spraying, cultivation, etc.

Agricultural Botany. —Eradication of weeds, identification of weeds and weed-seeds. The Seed Control Act. Study of plant diseases, their prevention and cure, etc.

Acre Profit Competition.

To the young men in Peterborough County shewing the largest net returns from an acre of land the Department will provide transportation and living expenses to attend the two weeks' course in Live Stock and Seed Judging at Guelph in January, 1916.

PRINCESS PATS ROUT THE GERMANS

Canadians Distinguish Themselves in a Bayonet Charge in Which Trench After Trench Was Carried and the Charge Took Everything Before It.

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 16—6.0. a. m.—The Canadian regiment (the Princess Pats) at the Front has distinguished itself in a stirring bayonet charge at a place near Ypres, known as "Dead Man's Alley," according to The Daily Chronicle's correspondent in North-Eastern France.

"The Germans," the correspondent says, "had moved a great mass of men against this spot on the British front. Mud helped the thin British line to hold, but the honours were barely even until the Canadian regiment hurried up from the rear.

"Suddenly there was a roar of voices and a long line of slouch-hatted men with fixed bayonets rushed forward with the battle cry, 'For Canada and Old England.'

"The Germans broke before the charge, which carried everything before it. Trench after trench fell, and the Canadians did not cease until the Germans brought up their artillery. The ground gained extended over a mile in front."

TERRIFIC FIGHTING

Most Important Conflict at Soissons is Still Being Bitterly Contested

ALLIES REINFORCED

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Soissons continues to be the centre of the heaviest fighting on the western front. It is the most important and the fiercest conflict since that at Ypres in the first German dash for Calais. Although the allies have been obliged to withdraw at certain points and the Germans have advanced, the battle is by no means over, and General Joffre is sending further reinforcements in the expectation of retaking the lost ground.

The War Office has had no news of the operations to-day, the official communique issued at 10.35 o'clock to-night saying merely: "No noteworthy incident is reported."

It is known here that fighting has been going on all day and unofficial reports declare that the Germans have been checked and that the French troops have begun to push north again. The capture of St. Paul, a small village a mile and a quarter north east of Soissons, and slightly south of Crouy, told of in the communique issued this afternoon, shows that the allied counter-attack has had some effect. Apparently Crouy has been lost but its recapture is regarded as certain.

No Chance of Success

No fears are expressed in military circles that the German effort at Soissons has any chance of success. Even if the allies should lose possession of the town it is not supposed that the Germans will be able to get any nearer to Paris or to the coast cities. The French retirement it is stated, was necessary because of the floods along the Aisne, and no further withdrawal is looked for.

Two hundred refugees who arrived in Paris from Crouy this afternoon say that the battle for that village was exceptionally violent, and that very large forces of men were engaged on both sides. They also say the Germans fired on hospitals, churches and ambulances indiscriminately, the cathedral being hit 75 times during the past week. During the severest fighting Mme. Machereg, who acted as Mayor, and Mlle. Seiller, head of the Red Cross, remained at their posts and took care of scores of wounded.

Although the French are now on the south side of the Aisne as a result of the destruction of the bridges, they still hold bridge heads on the north bank, and are in an excellent position to cross again when the waters subside. Entrenchments have been constructed on the south side, so that the Germans have no chance of success if they attempt to follow up their present advantage. It is stated that the number of troops concentrated at Soissons now is the largest of any point on the entire front.

Getting Near Lille.

The afternoon communique told of allied advances at two points, notably near the road between Arras and Lille. The latter city is the objective of this offensive, and the allies are getting nearer and nearer every day. Unofficial reports say the Germans in Lille will fight for every inch of the city, and that extra defensive arrangements have been made in preparation for an assault, cement trenches having been built and equipped with field and machine guns.

The other allied success was at the crossing of the Meuse, near St. Mihiel where German foot bridges were destroyed. At a number of points the French and British artillery outfought the German guns, according to the afternoon statement.

SITUATION TERRIBLE

Thousands of Peasants Are Facing Death To-day Owing to the Impossibility of Relief

100,000 ARE SUFFERING

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, Jan. 16. — Huddled in groups in the open country without food, fuel or extra clothing, many thousands of Italian peasants are facing death to-day.

Only the outer rim of the great zone transferred from prosperity to desolation by Wednesday's earthquake has been touched by the relief workers. Nothing has been done in Campania and the Southern Abruzzi regions, where harrowing conditions are known to prevail.

This is not due to lack of effort, but because entire roadsides have disappeared and communication is impossible, although peasant and noble, soldier and private citizen, are working side by side desperately striving to restore the roads so that the relief automobiles may proceed.

Although the Government still was hopeful to-day that the death list would be reduced when the complete records are possible, it was admitted this hope was slight.

The official figures of the dead was still held at 80,000, but unofficial completions added thousands to the number. The total of sufferers will reach 100,000, many of whom are not only injured, but have lost everything they had in the world. Whole families have been separated by the disaster. In many instances parents have been killed and the children still live.

In others only father or mother survive. For tragic developments of this kind, even the records of the terrible Messina disaster are surpassed.

Material For The Red Cross

Royal Canadian Institute Acts Upon Message of Dr. Brown-Landone—Peterborough Branch Will Receive Donations

TORONTO, Jan. 16.—"That the public be notified through the press that materials such as linen and cotton of all kinds will be received at Red Cross centres throughout the city and at 550 Sherbourne Street, to be prepared and shipped to the hospitals of Northern France."

The foregoing motion, which was moved by Dr. Margaret Patterson and seconded by Mrs. R. A. Falconer, and approved enthusiastically by an audience of five hundred people, represents in short, the effect of Dr. Brown-Landone's address before the Royal Canadian Institute in the Physics Building of the University. Mr. Frank Arnoldi, K.C., President of the Institute, was chairman.

Archdeacon Cody and President Falconer, in moving a resolution of thanks to Dr. Brown-Landone, emphasized the need for still greater action on the part of the Canadian people in the matter of rendering assistance to the Allied forces in Europe. There was no doubt about the willingness of Canadian men and women to do their part in supplying much needed materials for the wounded soldiers now lying in France. The chief requirement was definite instructions as to how the best services might be rendered, and as the final motion of Dr. Margaret Patterson and Mrs. Falconer indicated, the machinery of the Red Cross organization was the best available medium through which aid could be given from Canada.

To Ship Bandages.

In response to the appeal which is being made by Dr. Brown-Landone for the great needs of the hospitals in Northern France, a consignment of bandages, surgical dressings, and other hospital requisites will be sent from the Toronto Women's Patriotic League by a ship sailing from Halifax to Havre on 11th February.

Donations are therefore asked for this purpose, and these should reach the League before 28th January.

THE PETERBOROUH BRANCH.

The Peterborough Branch of the Red Cross will gladly receive contributions of old linen, cotton, blankets, and hospital supplies to forward to Toronto in time for the above shipment. Supplies may be left at the Y.W.C.A.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

She shook her head and raised one hand, which trembled a little, to brush the hair out of her eyes.

Palpably she was trying to speak, and could not for the moment command her voice. But at last she got herself under command and her words came slowly and carefully.

"Mr. Havey, I have very little reason to expect consideration from you. Even now if it were a question of pleading for myself I would die first, but it isn't that." She paused and shook her head. "You told me that I must fail unless I came to you. . . . Well, I've come—I've come to humiliate myself. I guess I've come to surrender."

His face did not change and he did not answer. Evidently thought the girl bitterly, she had not sufficiently abased herself. After a moment she went on in a very tired, yet a very eager voice.

"You are a man of action, Mr. Havey. I make my appeal to your manhood. I suppose you've never had a dream that has come to mean anything to you . . . but that's the sort of dream I've had. That little girl, Dawn, wants a chance. Her little brother wants a chance. I've humbled myself to come and plead for them. If you take them away from me now you will smash my school. I don't underestimate your power now. Children are just beginning to come to me and if you order these to leave the others will leave, too, and they won't come back. It will kill my school. If that's your purpose I guess it's no use even to plead. I know you can do it—and yet you told me you weren't making war on me."

"I reckon," interrupted Brother Talbott slowly, "ye needn't have no fear of that, ma'am. Anse wouldn't do thet."

"But if you aren't doing that," went on Juanita, "I want to make my plea just for the sakes of these children of your own people. I'm ready to accept your terms. . . . I'm ready to abase and humble my own pride, only for God's sake give them a chance to grow clean and straight and break the shackles of illiteracy and savagery."

She waited for the man to speak, but he neither spoke nor changed expression, su with an effort she went on, unconsciously bending a little forward in her eagerness.

"If you could see the way Dawn has unfolded like a flower, the thirsty intelligence with which she has drunk up what I have taught her; the way it has opened new worlds to her, I don't think you could be willing to plunge her back into drudgery and ignorance. She is a woman, or soon will be, Mr. Havey. You don't need women in your feuds."

Again came the cautioning voice of the preacher in his effort to keep her away from antagonising lines.

"They hain't been called away fer no reason like thet, ma'am." But Juanita continued, following the warning.

"The other boy is too young for you to use yet. Let him at least choose for himself. Let him reach the age when he shall have enough knowledge of both sides to take his own course fairly. I'm not asking odds. You have Jeb and he wears your trade-mark in his face. The bitterness that lurks there shows that he is wholly your vassal; yours and the feud's. Doesn't that satisfy you? Won't you let the others stay with me?"

She broke off and her voice carried something like a gasp. Anse Havey's face stiffened.

Even now he did not speak to her, but turned toward the missionary.

"Brother Talbott," he said slowly, "would ye mind waitin' out there on the little porch a little spell? I'd like to talk with this lady by myself."

As the missionary turned with his heavy tread it seemed to the girl that her last ally was leaving her and that she was being abandoned to the quiet and cruel will of her stronger enemy. She wheeled and clutched at the frayed, drab cloth of the preacher's coat-sleeve.

"No! No!" she exclaimed nervously. "Don't leave me. Let me have one friend."

The brown man took both her hands in his and looked reassuringly into her eyes.

"Ef I thought thet thar was any danger of ye havin' ter listen at anything ye wouldn't want ter hear, little gal," he said quietly, "I reckon nuther Anse Havey nor all his people could make me leave this room. But hit's all right. I knows Anse Havey an' hit's better thet jest the two of ye talks this thing over." Then as she dropped her hands at her sides, bitterly ashamed of her moment of weakness, he went out and closed the door behind him When he was gone there was a short silence which Havey finally broke with a question.

"Why didn't ye say all these things to Jeb? I sent the letter on his say-so."

"But you sent it—and all the Havey power is in your hands. Jeb wouldn't understand such a plea. I come to the fountain head. My school is not a Havey school nor a McBriar school. It is meant to open its doors to both sides of the ridge, regardless of factions."

"Did young Milt come there ter git eddication? I thought he went to college down below." The question carried an undernote of irony.

Juanita shook her head.

"No," she answered. "He came there as any other passer-by might have come and he hasn't come often. Let me keep the children and he sha'n't come again."

Fir a time he stood there, regarding her with a steady and piercing gaze, while his brows drew together in a frown rather of deep thoughtfulness than of displeasure. She sank into a chair and her eyes turned from his disconcerting gaze and wandered about the room.

She had been in many mountain houses now and had become accustomed to the half light within their walls. She knew that these interiors were at first vague and grew in detail as the eyes fitted themselves, this thing and that stealing slowly and, as it seemed, covertly, out of the shadows. Now her eyes fell upon something that seemed strangely out of place here and her gaze rested on it with a strange fascination.

It was an ancient portrait in a broken frame. Through its darkened and cracked paint there stood out the figure and face of a man of magnificent bearing, dressed in the blue and buff uniform of a Continental officer. There was nobility of brow and heroic resoluteness of eye, but around the lips lurked the gentle spirit of the chivalrous gentleman. Whoever had posed for that picture might have been a worthy type of the men who built the republic, and the hand that rested on the sword hilt was the slender arm of an aristocrat.

Her eyes travelled back to the other man, the feud leader of the mountains, and it was as if she were cast in the same mould as those that looked out from the frame. There was the same brow and chin and carriage of the head; but the mouth was more set and stern. The gentle pride had turned to arrogance. Still, thought the girl, the same blood must flow in the veins of Bad Anse Havey as had flowered in those of the gentleman whose likeness the artist had set on canvas. He was after all only changed by the generations that had fought a bitter battle for life. Could she appeal to the latent chivalry that must sleep somewhere in his heart?

Good God! thought Juanita Holland, suppose this man's blood had been going up instead of down from that start. Suppose that instead of relapse his lot had been to march with the vanguard! What a splendid creature he might have been!

So fascinatedly did the canvas hold her attention that she heard his words as though coming from somewhere outside.

"I asked Brother Talbott to go out, . . ." he was saying, "because I didn't hardly want to hurt your feelin's by sayin' before him that your school can't last. You're goin' about it all the wrong way, an' it's worse to go about a good thing the wrong way than to go about a bad thing the right way. I told ye once that ye couldn't change the hills, an' that ye'd change first yourself. I say that again. Ye can't take fire out of blood with books. But if ye've done persuaded Brother Anse that you're doin' good, I didn't want him to hear me belittle ye."

The girl did not answer and the man followed her eyes to the portrait.

"Ye ain't hearkenin' to nothin' I says," he told her. "Shall I begin over an' say it again?"

"No," she stammered, "I heard you—only that picture is rather wonderful. I was looking at it."

He laughed shortly.

"That's the Revolutionary Havey," he enlightened. "I reckon we've run right smart to seed since his time. That old man died in his bed with his family round him. I reckon he didn't hardly have an enemy in the world. His name was Anse, too, but it wasn't Bad Anse. It was after that that the Haveys quit dyin' peaceful. There ain't ben many lately that's done it. His grandson started the feud an' he passed it down to the rest of us. We grows to manhood an' gets our legacy of war. That's the thing ye aims to change in a few weeks. It seems to me ye've bit off more than ye can chew."

Anse Havey went to the window, where he drank deeply of the spiced air. Then he began to speak, and this time it was in a voice the girl had never before heard, a voice that held the fire of the natural orator and that was colourful with emotion.

"The first time ye saw me, ye made up your mind what character of man I was. Ye made it up from hearsay evidence, and ye ain't never give me no chance to show ye whether ye was right or wrong. Ye say I've never dreamed a dream. Good God, ma'am, I've never had no true companionship except my dreams. When I was a little barefoot shaver I used ter sit there by that chimley an' dream dreams an' one of 'em's the biggest thing in my life to-day. There were men around Frankfort when I was in the Legislature that 'lowed I might go to Congress if I wanted to. I didn't try. My dream meant more to me than Congress — an' my dream was my own people; to stay here and help 'em."

For public places there has been invented a drinking fountain that dispenses ordinary water free and ice water when a coin is dropped in a slot.

A NEGLECTED COLD WILL VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be only a slight cold. Perhaps you start to cough, a little irritation in the throat ensues, then it gets lower down, settles on the lungs and bronchitis sets in, and you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color, and you cough persistently.

If you let the simple cold run it will surely develop into something very serious, and perhaps consumption.

On the first sign of a cold or cough go to your dealer and procure a bottle of

DR. WOOD'S
NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

A few doses will convince you that it is just the remedy you require.

Mrs. J. W. Pearsons, Amherst, N.S., writes: "Some time ago my daughter had a very bad cough which settled on her chest. She had no rest day or night. I gave her everything I could think of, but without doing her the least bit of good. At last I thought of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle for her. She had not taken half of it before she got relief, and with the remainder she was completely cured. Now when any of the family have a cough we always know what to get for it."

Dr. Wood's is 25c and 50.

ONTARIO WOMAN'S FORTUNE

Freed From That Weak, Languid, Always Tired Feeling, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Thessalon, Ont.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a blessing to women, and I cannot speak highly enough of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."—Mrs. ANNIE CAMERON, Thessalon, Ont.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

There are probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over 30 years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering. If you are sick and need such a medicine, why don't you try it?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Poisons, Antidotes: For all cases of poisons taken into the stomach, remedies should be used as quickly as possible to produce vomiting. The remedy usually at hand and quickly available is a tablespoonful of common salt in a pint of warm water. This remedy is not positive in all cases, however, and, therefore, the second, which is quite certain to produce the desired results, should be used. It is one tablespoonful of powdered mustard in a tumblerful of water. After vomiting the general rule is to give a little sweet milk, also generous doses of castor oil, or in case castor oil is not available, olive oil, lard or any other oil or melted butter.

Of course, the most important thing to do is to telephone or send at once for a physician, but while waiting for him keep active. The prompt use of spirits of ammonia or common household ammonia may be of great value in cases of opium poisoning. Hold the bottle of ammonia or smelling salts so that the patient must inhale the vapor. Rub the limbs vigorously and keep the body warm with hot water bottles, hot bricks or hot bags of salt or sand. When the doctor arrives he will probably give a heart stimulant or strychnine in the form of hypodermic injections. No other person is justified in giving such a stimulant, although a nurse may give it when so ordered by the doctors.

In all cases where old females are at hand, which advise the use of whisky as a stimulant, they should be disregarded. It is now positively known that whisky does not give the stimulating effect it was formerly supposed to give. A safe and simple stimulant which may be used in all cases where whisky was formerly used, may be found in your own kitchen, capsicum or common red pepper. It is one of the most pronounced and at the same time one of the purest and strongest stimulants in the whole Materia Medica. It is unequalled when a prolonged and powerful stimulant is needed as in congestion, chills, heart failure, etc. It is difficult to administer in the form of an infusion or tea, but the powdered capsicum may be given in capsules if they are at hand, otherwise prepare a mixture as follows: Three tablespoonfuls of common red pepper, two tablespoonfuls of salt, moistened and stirred into a paste, then pour on to this half a pint of boiling water. As soon as cold strain off, being careful to not agitate or stir up the portion that has settled to the bottom. Add to this liquor or tea one-half pint of good sharp vinegar and you will have the best stimulant that you could possibly get. A tablespoonful every hour is the proper dose for an adult.

In cases of emergency and a physician cannot be reached a layman is justified in giving about 5 drops of digitalis in cases of acetanilid or phenacetin poisoning, then proceed to stimulate as above described.

In ptomaine poisoning vomiting should be induced as quickly as possible and the entire alimentary canal emptied; castor oil or other quick-acting eliminants, but you should also at once give an edema of warm soap suds, making sure that the bowels are completely emptied.

THE BURDENS OF AGE.

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, aching back, rheumatic pains and aching straight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and comfort by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They restore the healthful action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

Cooking by Electricity

By MARIAN TAYLOR

THERE is nothing mysterious about the operation of an Electric Range. It is not only easier, but safer, cleaner and better in every way.

IT does away with flame, fuel and fuss, and provides an absolutely clean and odorless heat that is uniform and under perfect control by merely turning a switch.

THE electric oven is not only economical in operation, but a big saving is effected in the shrinkage of meats. It does away with drying up or shrinkage and all the rich juices of the Roast are retained, and the meat is tenderer, juicier, and tastier than you could have believed possible.

THE "ELECTRA" is a practical and efficient electric Range and sells at a very reasonable price. It is "made in Canada" by the MOFFATS at Weston, Ontario.

Write and ask them for their free illustrated booklet on ELECTRIC COOKING.

Under the Green Light.

Cube sugar and ivory piano keys are inspected under the ghastly greenish rays of mercury vapor lamps with greater speed and accuracy than can be attained in ordinary daylight. Any impurity in sugar manifests itself by changing the white to a shade of yellow. To detect impurities, plates of the crystallized sugar one inch thick are examined by a man looking through them toward a mercury vapor lamp of the kind which is a familiar adjunct of the galleries of postcard photographers. When thus viewed, according to the Electrical World, the yellow impurities stand out clearly in the bluish green light. The color of ivory varies from the outside to the center of the tusk to such an extent that manufacturers sort the pieces into sixteen different shades. Formerly this sorting could be done only in bright daylight, but with the light of the mercury vapor lamp grading can be done without fatigueing at any hour of the twenty-four.

A Military Secret.

The plebe, sitting on the monument beside the first class man, looked across the river from West Point to Constitution Island. The plebe was inquisitive. He wanted to know what the government intended to use Constitution Island for. The first class man coughed discreetly, blushed and looked around him carefully for eavesdroppers.

"It isn't generally known," he said, "but you're a cadet now. If the signal corps experiments go through successfully they'll use it as an aviary." His voice dropped mysteriously.

"For birds, eh?" said the plebe. "Carrier pigeons?"

"Not exactly," answered the knowing one. "They'll be pigeons, as they call 'em—cross between a carrier pigeon and a parrot—to carry verbal messages, you know. Don't tell."

And the plebe didn't.—New York Post.

Almost Insulted.

Amid the lace bargains in one of the larger department stores the other day a shopper engrossed in thought sat her nose Japanese spaniel on the counter. One of the salesgirls, not seeing the little dog, threw a bonnet of reduced size over him and entirely submerged him. When the woman went to look for her pet he was not to be found, but several shrill yelps, accompanied by the upheaval of the lace, betrayed his presence. He was quickly rescued from his predicament, and the woman, showering kisses upon his moist, upturned nose, said, "Did they cover mamma's precious with cheap fifty cent lace?"

The saleagirl, who evidently had cultivated diplomacy, assured the dog's mistress that the lace had been reduced from $1 to 69 cents, and the woman took her pet away, mollified.—Philadelphia Record.

Where It Pinched.

"No, that does not aggravate me; it is the giving of it to you."—Puck.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

DON'T.

Don't tell your child the happiest days he will ever know are his days of childhood. Don't say that with maturity comes cares, and work, and troubles, and fears that make life a burden. If your child comes to you with a trial that is great to him, but to you in the light of your years and experience, in the merest trifle don't say, "You are very foolish to be troubled by so small a thing," but remember he has but little reason to use, and no experience to guide him, and that for the time his grief "clothes him as a garment," and it is for you, with your love and sympathy, to read it, and bring him sunlight again. It is a great wrong to believe the wild fears, grotesque fancies, and nameless doubts which haunt the minds of children are passing whims. So vivid are these, they often come to us in middle life or old age, and cause us an involuntary shudder. If a child's troubles are usually small, the understanding is smaller. The pitiful gravity with which they attempt to settle weighty questions which their elders often give up as hopeless, demands our most delicate sympathy. Every stage of life has its peculiar trials, and just as surely its own joys. Let us not then so recklessly risk our reputation for wisdom as to point to children and say, "Now, my dear child, is your hay-day. Enjoy it to the full, for the years that are passing on you are full to the brim of care and trial." Say rather, "If the future has great work and responsibilities, so has it proportionate rewards" The surest, greatest, happiness of life should come with the full development of mind and heart.

"IF YOU'LL GO, I'LL GO."

Say that to some friend when you leave him Saturday night. Of course you will mean that you will go to church Sunday, if he will go too. That is a fine way to start off. If you are undecided which church to attend, select the one your mother used to go to. You can't go far wrong. Any fellow's mother's religion ought to be good enough for him. So next Sunday give up the lazy hour in bed. Have your best clothes ready. Put 'em on and start out with your head up and your shoulders back. You're doing one of the best things you ever did in your life and if you keep it up you will never be sorry. And you'll be surprised to see how good it feels to be in church. And above all things, if there is congregational singing, SING. Don't merely hold the book and bluff at singing. Fill up your lungs and let out the music. You'll know it all right. You may have forgotten the words but the tune, never. Why, your mother used to sing it! She will be a happy woman when she knows her boy is in church.

CHEERFULNESS.

In order to appear pleasant we must be cheerful. This is a duty we owe to others as well as ourselves. The world is on the lookout for all that is bright and gay, and, if we wish to be appreciated in social life, we must appear like a ray of sunlight, rather than a cloud, no matter how beautiful that cloud may be.

In life we meet with many unpleasant things that have a tendency to make us sad and depressed, but, by sweet smiles and loving words of kindness, we may expel many horrors and make ourselves and many others around us feel bright and happy, instead of gloomy and sad.

There is much sorrow lurking in the pathway of every one, and in order to avoid becoming despondent, we must ever look on the bright side of life, for the happiest people are those who find pleasure in all things. We should cultivate cheerfulness. If at first it seems unnatural it will after a short time, lose its artificial aspect, and seem entirely natural.

A cheerful countenance yields an influential power in winning affection, and retain it after it has been won. One may be ever so beautiful and attractive, and yet wholly incapable of calming the troubled heart, unless he possess a cheerful disposition.

We learn to love by loving. It grows by love. Like everything else, it gathers strength through exercise. The more we keep at it, the easier and more natural it becomes. We can form the habit of looking at people with love, think about them with love, speaking of them in love, and acting toward them lovingly. Our deeds will react upon our thoughts, and our thoughts and feelings will prompt to action. So we may become steeped in love. It will radiate from us as to the light from the lamp. We shall be charged with it as the battery is with electricity and, power will go out from us. So, instead of crying idly, "Oh, for more love!" let us lay more stress upon the practice. If we continually use what we have it will increase.

Whenever you see a shadow, it means there is a light close by.

True piety elevates the spirit, enables the heart and strengthens the courage.

A Pimply Face Loses Friends

Why Stand This Humiliation When Stuart's Calcium Wafers in a Week Make Your Face Clean and Radiant.

No need for anyone to go about any longer with a face covered with pimples, blotches, eruptions, blackheads, and liver spots. These are all due to impurities in the blood. Cleanse the blood thoroughly and the blemishes will disappear.

"Everyone Looks at a Face Bearing a Lovely Complexion—It is Nature's Greatest Gift to Woman."

That's what Stuart's Calcium Wafers are intended to accomplish and do accomplish. Their principal ingredient is Calcium Sulphide, the quickest and most thorough blood cleanser known.

These wonderful little wafers get right into the blood, and destroy eruptive substances present in it. In some cases a few days is sufficient to make a marked improvement. And when the blood is pure the whole system is a hundred per cent. better.

Don't fret any longer about those blackheads, pimples, boils, tetter, eczema, spots or skin eruptions; they all go and "go quick" if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Go to any druggist anywhere and buy a box. Price 50 cents. A small sample package mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

WHEN SHE GOES TO TOWN

Mrs. W. B. Howard, Lanark Co., Ont.

If there is one place above all others that many a farmer's wife is easily detected as a "farmer's wife," it is the day she goes to town and walks up and down the streets mingling with the townspeople. How do we know she comes from the country? Why, by the way she is dressed of course. Usually, when I go to town and see the way some of my neighbors dress on such occasions I am almost ashamed to be classed as a farmer's wife.

I don't think there is any reason why the country women should not be dressed as neatly and attractively as some of city women who haven't any more money, and perhaps not as much, to spend on clothes as we have. It is not necessary to be extravagant in order to be well dressed. Some one has said that to be well-dressed a woman should be dressed so that no one will notice her clothes. I would like to add to that that she should try to make her clothes express her personality and to wear what is becoming to her, even though something more extreme than "the style."

There are lots of styles and materials that are quite suitable for the city woman, but which are not serviceable for the country woman who has to drive almost every place she goes. We should, when buying, keep this thought in mind and select something that will not be too delicate to withstand the weather, dust and so forth.

I do not consider that it is economy to buy a very expensive piece of goods when selecting a dress, going on the argument that it always pays to buy the best. If a woman buys such goods she has to wear that dress until it is terribly out of fashion in order to get the value out of it. I believe in buying the cheaper materials (but not too cheap) and making them up with the intention of wearing them out in one or two seasons. In this way we are enabled to keep abreast of the styles and avoid making ourselves the subject of ridicule when we go to town.

We must avoid extremes in style and color, as they are so noticeable and then begin to look old fashioned. I think it is better to choose one or two colors for the season, then by having hats, dresses, coats and waists to match, we can have variety in our costumes without having many clothes.

A great deal of money is spent unwisely in little details. Shoes and gloves usually come in this class, but really it is so important to have neat shoes and gloves that I hardly feel justified in calling them details. It is not necessary, however, to wear patent leather shoes or white kid gloves all the time in order to be well dressed. Good cashmere or silk gloves are very neat and shoes of a more substantial nature for common wear are more desirable. Wearing silk stockings or fine lingerie underwear under cloth dresses is not economical. The well dressed woman is particular about these points, but they need not be expensive to be fresh and dainty.

We should not forget too that no matter how extreme or ugly the fashions may become there are always styles that are pretty without being out of date.

PARTY ETIQUETTE.

It is not always safe to Fletcherize at dinner parties because the party doing so is likely to lose out by being still occupied with his soup and fish while the rest are on the ice cream and Roquefort.

When at a swell dinner party never ask for a second helping of corned beef and cabbage, for it may reveal the embarrassing fact that there is no more in the kitchen.

When taking your best girl to a cafe always give the waiter his nickel beforehand and then you rest assured that you will be waited upon almost as soon as the couple at the next table, who came in a half hour after you did and gave him 10 cents.

Always dance with the wife twice at every party unless it happens to be some other man's wife. In that case dance with her as often as you please.

Never drink the remnants of your soup out of the bowl. To be perfectly correct soak it up with your bread and eat it.

Never wear your glad rags at a funeral, especially if it is the funeral of a man who owes you something.

DON'T MAKE YOUR HOME TROPICAL

Do you live in the tropics?

This isn't a joke. Most temperate zone homes are overheated. And, as overheated homes are extremely unhealthy, you had better look at your thermometer at once!

Fevers, malaria, etc., do not necessarily lurk in your overheated rooms, but such a condition exposes you to other things quite as dangerous or even more so.

High temperature is debilitating and reduces one's natural power of resistance and is a great breeder of tuberculosis.

Modern heating and ventilating systems make it possible for the average Canadian to bring the healthiest climates and temperatures so much sought after by the wealthy, to his own home. In other words, you may now have a choice of climate by the turn of a radiator screw, the lifting of the furnace draft or the opening or shutting of a transom.

A moderate degree of indoor heat must not be frowned upon. It is only from unusual, inordinate heat that serious harm comes.

First, establish some standard in your rooms and stick to it. Have you sleeping room aired every day—in fact, air the whole house. Your sitting-room may be kept slightly warmer than your dining-room or bed chamber.

And heat itself is by no means the only disadvantage which a high temperature brings to the dwelling.

High temperature means a stuffy atmosphere.

In establishing a temperature not to be exceeded indoors the comfortable point should not be taken as the standard.

The comfortable point varies with the individual and has relation to the accustomed temperature — moderate, too high, or too low. A person habitually living in a temperature of 80 degrees feels chilly at 70 degrees; habituated to 70, he scarcely finds 65 uncomfortable.

The young and those accustomed to being much in the open suffer greatly from hot rooms.

Robust men properly fed and accustomed to an active outdoor life are not uncomfortable at a house temperature of 60.

Wonderful Skin and Wrinkle Removers

The method of removing bad complexions by absorption seems to have come into general use in this country. Ordinary mercolised wax, applied nightly like cold cream and erased mornings with warm water, gradually absorbs the coarse, faded or discoloured outer film skin in almost invisible particles. Soon there's a brand new complexion, formed by the younger, healthier under-skin. No cosmetic or artificial treatment can possibly produce a complexion of such radiant, youthful loveliness. Druggists all have mercolised wax; it is seldom that more than one ounce is necessary.

Thousands have also reported great success with the famous saxolite wrinkle-removing formula. One ounce of pure powdered saxolite is dissolved in a half-pint witch hazel and the solution used as a face wash. The effect is almost magical. The deepest wrinkles and crow's feet as well as the finest lines whether due to sun, illness, weather or worry completely and quickly vanish. No one need hesitate to try this simple lotion, as it won't harm any skin.

The Automobile in War.

THE varied possibilities of the automobile is one of the reasons why the present European war is different from any war that has preceded it. Celerity and power have been gained through its use for the transportation of troops, the hauling of supplies, the bringing up of guns and the transfer of the wounded.

The total number of automobiles for all purposes used by the Allies, the Germans and the soldiers of the Duel Monarchy has been estimated as high as 300,000, the Germans having had 70,000 on the eastern frontier alone. The newest cars designed for transportation can be worked over rough country as well as on regular roads. They are so constructed that they may be easily altered to carry a fire engine, a motor lorry, an ambulance body or a camping kitchen. The armored automobiles have done some of the most effective work of the war, those fitted with mitrailleuses having been especially valuable in making rapid sorties and safe retreats.

Some of the armored automobiles are really travelling forts, capable of carrying fuel for a 500 mile run, 10,000 rounds of ammunition, searchlight, rope ladders and a crew of twenty trained men. The war automobile has been pressed into serice, too, in the transportation of aeroplane sections and general aviation materials. The Kaiser has a compact but thoroughly equipped motor kitchen, which follows him on his campaigns and supplies him with imperial meals served in a mess tent.

The most recently built motor ambulances are sprung to give the greatest possible amount of comfort to the occupants, and the silent running engine conduces to the same end. Most of them are equipped with four stretchers, the stretcher supports each holding two stretchers, folding, if required, to give seating accommodation for four along either side.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LUCILLE LOVE THE GIRL of MYSTERY

BY THE

CHAPTER XX.

When the Owl Hoots.

It came even before he expected. A loud clanging of bells through the house punctuated the silence, a clanging that pierced through the treble sound of the doorbell. Hugo Loubeque sprang to his feet swiftly. The mask of his face dropped, and showing that face keen, eager, a bit perturbed.

The clanging sound was augmented by the rushing of feet. She had never dreamed there could be so many in the house. More like a warren it was than anything else. Whispers sounded from the halls. But she gave them all no heed. She was swaying gently to and fro, her body fighting against the faintness that was causing her knees to refuse support, her eyes wide with delighted recognition and love and disbelief, and then she opened her lips, trying to cry out aloud the name of the man she loved, the man she had worked so hard for, the man who stood in the street below, staring up at the very window at which she stood. But all that came from her lips was the faintest sound, tremulous, pitiful; the whisper of his name.

Before she could regain control of herself, even realise that she really was seeing her sweetheart here in flesh and blood, the hand of Loubeque was about her waist, drawing her gently, but firmly, away from the window. But even as the casement shut out her view of him she caught the lightning flash of recognition as her appeal drew Gibson's own eyes to that window, and she knew he had seen her.

Loubeque restrained her firmly. The clanging of the bells throughout the house ceased instantly just as a loud hammering on the door below rose. Came a flying rush of men within the room, filling it completely. Loubeque swiftly glanced about at the anxious faces, then nodded.

"The tunnel!" he cried sharply.

Suddenly Lucille became aware that the room was shooting downward like a giant elevator. She glanced about her, sick with apprehension, upon the faces so close to her own in the narrow confines. A breath of rank cool air fanned her cheek from out the darkness. Loubeque's hand was upon her wrist, his voice softly advising her to follow him. Far in the distance a little speck of light reached out toward them.

For what seemed an endless distance she was led by the spy, with always that rush of feet behind. The light was growing broader, brighter. Loubeque released his hold upon her. She could see him reach and press harshly against something, a door evidently, for the light slowly lengthened and broadened. Daylight and a foreign street!

A bitter sob broke from her lips as she looked at Loubeque and realized how infinitely far away she was from the man she loved.

* * * * * * *

Days upon the desert—blistering days with merciless sunlight pouring from the molten kettle overhead, burning savagely at the impervious sand and cacti that alone had resisted the fire so many ages.

Nights of cold, unwinking stars—stars pitiless in their steady underviating scrutiny as the glower of sun; nights where the desert breeze searched out the marrow of the bones; nights surrounded by the minions of Loubeque, by Loubeque himself; nights of sleeplessness for herself, but nights filled with the sounds of the slumbers of her captors.

Save Hugo Loubeque. Loubeque never slept. Lucille saw he had steeled himself against her vow, that never again would she be able to penetrate his pitilessness in the pursuit of his previous revenge.

Close at hand was the hour for him to strike, ready at hand were the means. What was his object in seeking Mexico and the Constitutionalist leader she had no means of knowing? That there was a great object, one which she must defeat at any and all costs, she knew.

It was the eighth day he ran into a foraging party sent out by Villa in advance of his main army. Much as she knew of the mysterious spy, Lucille was still surprised to mark the respect and deference paid him by the dark skinned rebels. Consequently several days later, days of tireless travel, she was not surprised on reaching the main body of the army to find herself being treated with the greatest respect, while Loubeque was in constant consultation with the rebel leader.

Day after day she felt the growing helplessness of her position. Loubeque seemed omnipotent in the opinion of these men upon whom he appeared to have stumbled.

Still she would not permit hope to die. The justice of her cause, the growing humanity of the international spy, her very youth and the power of her love forbade this.

Through the very eagerness and desperation of this feeling she slowly became aware of the attitude toward his master of Thompson. She was aware of the subtle atmosphere of hatred which the slick scoundrel's mask of servitude concealed so well. In lieu of anything to do on her own account she took to watching the man, following his every move, his every change of expression.

Enmity toward the master he had served so well and who had mistreated him mingled with hatred for the girl he had so bitterly wronged and who had brought his punishment about. Consequently Lucille was surprised to come across a briefly scribbled note on a bit of rice paper such as she had often noticed the butler using in rolling cigarettes. It was pressed tightly against one of the partially cut slices of bread when Thompson served his master and Lucille with their dinner. She detached the fragment of bread, dropping it to the floor and securing the fragment of paper as she picked it up, concealing it in the palm of her hand.

For what seemed countless hours she bravely attempted to eat the food before her, tried to endure the heart-breaking period during which Loubeque smoked silently at his cigar. It was with a sigh of relief so obvious the spy was obliged to smile that she made half hearted protest at his retirement. No sooner had his figure ceased to darken the doorway than she started eagerly to examine the message.

"At the third hoot of the owl leave."

Merely that, but the delphic words seemed pregnant with wondrous meaning.

Hours trod upon one another's heels so fast they moved under the tension of her waiting. Vague forebodings which she could not analyse oppressed her despite the fires of hope that had been kindled within her drooping spirit. There had been something deadly about Thompson's manner, under the scrutiny of the man she knew he hated so venomously, which made her shudder and form a half resolution to acquaint Loubeque with his servant's treachery. She had half risen to her feet, still fighting against the ludicrous impulse when the shrill hoot of an owl reached from out the mighty distances of the farreaching desert waves.

And now the very seconds lagged. Every nerve, every muscle, fazed, for she knew not what. Lucille waited, her ear against the wall, her eyes pools of mirrored terror.

After what seemed an interminable age came again the sound. Unable this time to endure the long intermission she was charged to undergo, she softly opened the door, peering out over the sleeping city that the rebel chieftain had flung up at a mere command. Immediately before her own abode she made out the less pretentious shack of the international spy. A dim light from the partially opened door cut a segment from the darkness. Far more significant of slumber than complete darkness was that light.

A tiny droning sound reached her ears. By main force piercing the thick veil of night Lucille made out the shadowy outlines of a lean motorcar dimly silhouetted against a pile of lava dust. Something shapeless and dark and furtive of movement crept across the space that intervened between it and the light flooding of Loubeque's quarters. Lucille could not resist the impulse that forced her from the door into the open.

Something tugged at her feet, fairly drawing her away from the steps. Then a strange wave of pity for the unsuspecting one against whom this furtive attack was being made urged her forward. As the dark figure slipped through the door Lucille thrust her head cautiously within. Upon the cot lay the long figure of the international spy, his face turned toward the silent, motionless figure that stood in the center of the room staring at him. The eyes were tightly closed, but the girl knew that the man merely feigned slumber.

Thompson turned toward the table upon which the lamp dimly burned. Lucille allowed her eyes to wander for a second in that direction, her heart thudding so violently at sight of the diary and papers there that she was fearful she would be heard. Alongside the papers, its facets sending out a million flashes of reddest blood, lay the strand of rubies. She marked the involuntary flexing of the thief's hands as he tiptoed toward them.

Not a sound disturbed the silence, but something caused her to dart a swift glance at the sleeper. His eyes were narrowed, but open; lights of amused malice in them she had never suspected could show in mortal eyes. Lights so malignant she shuddered even as she would have opened her lips to cry a warning. The butler-thief drew closer to the prize he had worked so hard to gain. His thief's fingers were outstretched to grasp the necklace, when, with a crash, the lamp darted toward him, smashing upon the floor and leaving utter blackness in its wake.

Upon the heels of his startled alarm came a chuckling laugh from Loubeque, a laugh that matched the evil that had glowed from his eyes so scant before. Came a gurgled oath, the heavy breathing of strong men in combat.

Lucille turned as though to run. There came a swift vision before her, one that made her step swiftly within the wall of mantled darkness. Eyes met her own eyes, eyes that seemed to force their way through the dark interior and cause her to forget everything that had intervened, eyes that mirrored a message of love and faith and hope to her as she looked down from the window of the mysterious house in San Francisco into the eyes of her lover, the man whose happiness could not be insured without those papers so short a space before her.

With the thought she sprang into the room. She bounded high, clearing the bodies of the two men, and landing squarely against the table. Groping, groping, her hands encountered the cold rubies. She thrust them swiftly into her bodice, her left hand continuing the search. Papers rustled under her fingers. An iron hand was upon her shoulder, but she wrenched herself loose and leaped back.

Along the wall she moved until her body encountered the swaying door. Even as Loubeque sprang at her she slapped the door shut. There came a cry of pain and rage, the stumble of feet backward.

Lucille fled through the night, fled toward where she had seen the motorcar from which Thompson had come to this place. It was a chance, no odds what orders the man had been given.

What commands had he been given? She stopped a second. She had been warned to wait for three hoots of the owl, and but two had been given. Impulse directing her, she lifted her hands to her mouth. First no sound came. A second time she made the attempt. Feeble it was at best, but the startled silence took it up and buried back this offender against restfulness.

To her right arose the purr of the motor. From behind sounded another. She lunged toward the first sound and entered the tonneau. A dark figure leaned from the seat and drew her beside him. Lucille clung to the man, sobbing from nervous reaction even as the car shot through the night.

The whine of a bullet sounded overhead, another and yet again another. She dared not look back. The papers warmed through the flesh against which they pressed, warmed through her body and to her very heart itself. But Hugo Loubeque knew the method of her departure, knew what she carried with her. And already she knew Hugo Loubeque was working to overtake her.

Low in the seat beside the driver crouched Lucille with the precious papers and rubies in the waiting automobile the butler had arranged for himself.

Suddenly she leaned forward, beating her little fists together, urging the Mexican chauffeur to accelerate his speed. The man smiled down at her, shaking his head to signify he did not understand the words, even as he stepped on the clutch and shot the car forward like a huge arrow newly released from the bow, and behind somewhere upon the same road there was another machine with a determined man in it, a man who had never yet allowed machine or man or even the elements to thwart him.

Then came the dull crunching sound from before her. The car swerved viciously, swung in such an abrupt circle she clung to the side of her seat to avoid being hurled out. The driver righted his machine swiftly, dexterously, and she started to heave a huge sigh of relief.

But only started to, for the front wheels suddenly slipped, seemed smoothly to be gliding upon a surface of nothingness, clawing for a foothold. The chauffeur reversed heavily, fought with his wheel, but vainly.

Then the heavy car lost balance, tilted heavily and rolled down, down, down.

Lucille felt no fear. It was all too deadly for that. She was only conscious, even as her tiny hands clutched the edge of her seat, of a droning sound from behind that was growing into the rhythmic hum of a motorcar.

Came a long period of delicious languor, of sinking, much as though she floated upon ether; a harsh, crunching jolt and blackness—merciful unconsciousness that closed black shutters across the mental vision of her and brought a sweet smile to the lips that had been tightened so long. Sleep—

* * * * * * *

Lucille pieced together happenings vaguely after that: them disclosed them as of no account. Nothing appeared to matter. She was comfortable and partially content. She recollected for a fractional space of time being lifted and carried away by strong, friendly, pitying arms. The memory passed immediately with the coming of an impression of swift travel in a motorcar, which, in turn, gave way to the more sharply etched impression of being wheeled aboard a train in an invalid's chair. Then came a vision of the lean, powerful face of Loubeque close to her own, the gentle whisper of his voice close to her ear, calling her name over and over again, while, matching the suffering in his tones, were the deeply carved lines of agony upon his face. Over and over again the man called to her, and yet she knew it was not to her he called, but to the mother whom she resembled.

She felt all her sympathy going out to this man who had poured such a bitter enemy, who had brought such catastrophe upon her and hers and who would again prove so relentless should she attempt to take advantage of his temporary weakness to appeal to the better side of him.

Undoubtedly Loubeque was again in possession of the papers. Suddenly she felt that he had conquered his emotions and moved away. She slowly opened her eyes and looked about. She was in her own private compartment on the train. She was alone.

Tremulously, fearful yet almost positive her hands would not encounter that which she sought, she touched her bosom. The feel of the necklace and papers reassured her, drove away the last mists of unreality. Where she was going she did not know nor care. With the precious papers she could do anything. Simultaneously with the thought came one of terror. Vague at first, it spread over her spirit like a veil that obliterated all light, all hope.

As though forcing herself against her will, she closed her eyes and drew forth the bundle and necklace. Yes, there could be no doubting the genuineness of the rubies. Their scintillant luster was fairly blinding. But she paid them little heed. Her fingers groped at the papers even as her eyes snapped open. Then a little cry of rage and chagrin came from her lips.

The packet upon the table had evidently been nothing but a blind. Hugo Loubeque had taken no chances with the stolen papers even while awake. She had stolen a sheaf of worthless but was she safe from any danger? Had she not been in danger before? Yes, on the train. And the reason was because Thompson knew she held the ruby necklace. Thompson was one to be feared and respected.

Softly she slipped down the vestibuled aisle. She had reasoned out the answer. Thompson had escaped Loubeque and, foiled in his attempt to gain the necklace, was still in the pursuit.

Swiftly she stepped down the aisle, through car after car, until she halted abruptly and moved back again, for, dozing against a pillow in the tourist car, a long gash over his eye rendering him a bit villainous looking, was the butler-thief.

Lucille sought her compartment, her brain awhirl. It was a three cornered fight now—Loubeque to retain the papers and to protect her in her wealth; Thompson to gain the ruby necklace and revenge himself upon his master, but she—Lucille only sought the papers. Nothing else counted as against that. And Loubeque held the papers.

waste paper. The international spy still held the whip hand.

She clinched her pretty teeth tightly together even as she kept repeating to herself over and over again the question of why—why had he bothered to pursue her when he knew how she had been misled; why had he not allowed her to go her way and leave him safe to transact the last act in his plan of revenge? Why—why—why had he taken to himself so dangerous an enemy?

She knew he was fond of her, fond of her in the same way her own father was, but what of that? Alone, with the ruby necklace, she had sufficient means to do as she pleased and be perfectly safe from any danger.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old moss-covered logs will be all there is in the picture, but by careful searching some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X, cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these same words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over the matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will report by Return Mail whether your solution is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decision must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of any one else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

Was Troubled With Choking Spells and Shortness of Breath.

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, and dizziness and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

Many men and women drag along with weary step, and become worn out and haggard, when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first signs of heart or nerve trouble. On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be given a fair trial and you will find that they will soon correct both these organs.

Mr. James Leard, Tryon, P.E.I., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had choking spells, and was troubled with weakness of the heart and shortness of breath. I tried three doctors but they all failed. A neighbor recommended me to try your pills, so I got a box and they helped me so much I have taken six boxes. I highly recommend them to all who are troubled with their heart and nerves. I was not able to do any work for over two years; now I can do quite a bit."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Gained 30 Lbs. in Few Weeks Never Felt So Well

Was Pale, Weak and Thin, and Had Nervous Headaches Before Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is truly wonderful what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does for women who are weak, weary and run down in health. New, rich blood is what is needed in nearly all such cases, and because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new blood it brings cure — not mere relief, but actual cure—in the great majority of such ailments.

With an abundance of rich, red blood coursing through the veins the nerves are strengthened and vigor and vitality are carried to every organ of the human body.

With the nerves properly nourished headaches and neuralgic pains disappear, appetite improves, digestion is good, you sleep and rest well, and gain in strength and weight.

Mrs. H. Laleh, Cannington Manor, Sask., writes:—"You will remember me writing you last spring. Well, I gave up my doctor and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This treatment cured me rapidly and I was soon myself again. I was pale, thin and weak, suffered from stomach troubles and liver complaint, and frequently had sick, nervous headaches.

"I was surprised to find that in a few weeks' time I had gained 30 pounds in weight. I never felt so strong and well in all my life. Headaches never bother me any more, and I am grateful for the cure. If people would only give this medicine a fair trial they would certainly be cured."

Everywhere people are talking about this great food cure, which cures in Nature's way, by supplying the ingredients to form new blood, and so overcome weakness and disease by an abundance of vitality. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Mighty Capella.

The star Capella is a hundred times brighter and hotter than our sun. If the earth were as near to Capella as it is to the sun the thermometer if an instrument could be made capable of bearing such a temperature would rise in July not merely to a hundred, but to 10,000 degrees F.! The oceans would fly off in puffs of steam. The forests and fields would kindle and burn like matchwood. The mountains and hills would melt like beeswax in a redhot oven! The earth in the rays of Capella would be as a moth to a candle flame.—New York Journal.

Insulted.

Here is an amusing instance of histrionic conceit. An interviewer, having obtained access to the presence of a famous actor, asked the great man if he would be kind enough to describe some of his early failures.

"Sir," snapped the tragedian, "I never had any! James—the door!"

HEADACHY, COSTIVE, BILIOUS,—"CASCARETS"

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and End Headaches, Colds, Sour Stomach.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

Some of the designs are rather plain, which helps to show the pattern of the lace. Such a model is the one illustrated, pattern No. 6,960, with plain front, slightly gathered at the neck, long set-in sleeves drawn into a wristband and frills at neck and wrists. The satin stock and wristband are smart, new notes that many of this season's blouses affect. This pattern comes in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure.

Black lace waists over white are fashionable and have the double advantage of looking rather more handsome than the white lace waists and not soiling so readily. Black Chantilly, particularly, is selected, mounted over white chiffon or net. The white underblouse shows off the pattern of the lace with excellent effect. The vogue for black is considerable, and it is not surprising that numbers of black crêpe de Chine and black satin blouses should be in evidence. White, of course, continues to be what one might call staple for blouses, the favorite materials being crêpe de Chine, penny willow taffeta and satin.

Price, 20 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and size of a child.

Russian Winter Is Very Severe

WARSAW, Jan. 10.—The German attempts to force the Russian positions on the Bzura have been marked by a reckless waste of human life.

It is impossible to estimate the German losses in the recent fighting along this stream. The killed and wounded sink forever under the muddy, freezing waters and those who reach the other side are easily made prisoners. Already these rash assaults are losing their force. After each unsuccessful attempt the weakening of the attacking columns is apparent.

It is bitterly cold. The freezing Siberian wind sweeps over the plain, and the mud of last week now is as hard as iron. The rivers are not entirely covered with ice, as the force of the wind has prevented this, and no human being can plunge into the Bzura without becoming numb with the cold in a minute.

What the Germans are suffering from exposure can be imagined from the conditions on this side, where is the well-clothed Russian soldier. The German overcoat is a thin, shoddy affair, which offers no protection against the Russian winter. So poorly are some of the prisoners clad that the soft-hearted soldiers in the Czar's army give them their mufflers.

Russians in Winter Quarters.

The Siberian troops on the reserve line have built underground homes back of their positions. Each burrow is large enough for two men to sleep, and each has a fireplace, where glowing embers are always kept.

It is quite possible for the Russians to maintain themselves in their present quarters all winter, as they have the city of Warsaw behind them.

But for the the Germans the case is different. Most of the towns in their rear they themselves have destroyed, and the question of winter quarters is soon going to be vital with them.

Judging from the condition of the prisoners at present, the German army has lost 25 per cent. of its original unit power. This loss increases each day.

On the other hand, the Russian effectiveness is always increasing.

The Russian Commander-in-chief is well satisfied with the present position of his forces. In the original plan the present line was considered only a temporary position from which to check the enemy until reinforcements should arrive.

Warsaw Defences Strengthened.

The lines of defence in the rear of the Bzura are even stronger. The country does not afford such an effective obstacle as the river, but this is counterbalanced by the splendid field it offers. No resource of military engineering has been overlooked in seaming the country with artificial obstructions. The Russians can build trenches which would serve as models to picture in any text book on the subject. Many splendidold trees have been felled, but the sacrifice has been made in the best of causes.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

"War Weddings" Getting Popular

LONDON, Jan. 11.—One of the few social events that flourish in these troubled days is the "war wedding." Marriage, like all other institutions, has come under the influence of the war. And in this direction, at least, the effect may be said to be good. The ceremony has been freed from a good deal of the external pomp and circumstance which provided fair game for the cynic.

The war wedding is usually an affair of haste. The bridegroom is expecting to be sent away on foreign service, or he has received short furlough for the ceremony. Practically there is no time for anything but essentials. Thus the marriage ceremony comes back to a much simpler form, and under the overhanging shadow of war recovers most of its real solemnity.

Dress is one of the things that have to be subordinated to the pressing exigencies of the situation. Brides comfort themselves with the thought that, as there will be no subsequent festivities, the dainty wedding dress could not be worn again, and not a few are content to appear at a church attired in simple blouse and skirt.

HAS HUMOROUS SIDE.

The war wedding has its humorous side. Where the bridegroom has little time to spare there is much frantic hurrying to and fro among women relatives on both sides, and one supers flurry after another is abandoned, amid much feminine disturbances.

There is a story going the rounds of the clubs of the vicissitudes of a couple who only just got to the church in time. In expectation of a leave for the bridegroom to be, all arrangements had been made except the fixing of the day. The bridegroom got a forty-eight hour furlough, and travelled home through the night. It had been too late to get any messages through, and when he arrived the next morning at his prospective bride's house he found she was seventy miles away, in the country, at the home of an aunt. He immediately set off to get her, but in the meantime an officious relative telegraphed to the young woman to return by the first available train.

Thus that evening the couple who were hastening to each other found themselves the same distance apart. Not to be daunted, the bridegroom dashed off a telegram saying he was returning. But there was no train till after midnight, a "blow" with three changes. However, a second night journey was not in vain and before the afternoon of the second day the knot was tied.

TWO BOY MARVELS IN MATHEMATICS

There is at the present time studying at Cambridge one of the most wonderful mathematicians the world has ever seen—a young Hindoo, Mr. S. Ramanujan by name — whose work, although he is only twenty-six years of age, says London Tit-Bits, has excited the admiration of all mathematical experts. Perhaps the most extraordinary thing about Ramanujan is that, as a mathematician, he is quite untaught.

Until a year ago he was a clerk in the employment of the Port Trust, of Madras.

But in spite of this, he has, to quote Mr. Hardy, Fellow of Trinity, who has taken a great interest in Ramanujan, "discovered for himself a great number of things which the leading mathematicians of the last hundred years had added to the knowledge of school men,although he was quite ignorant of their work and accomplishments. Indeed, his mathematical education is rather a mystery, and the first I knew of him was about fifteen months ago when he wrote to me explaining who he was, and sent a large number of remarkable mathematical theorems which he had proved."

This is the second mathematical genius produced by India in the last three years. At the end of 1912 the members of the Royal Asiatic Society held a specially convened meeting at Colombo, when they were astounded by the arithmetical powers of a Tamil boy, Arumogan. A complicated series of sums had been prepared to test the boy's powers, each of which he answered within a few seconds. One sum was:

"A chetty gave as a treat to 373 persons a bushel of rice each. Each bushel contained 3,531,573 grains, and the chetty stipulated that seventeen per cent. should be given to the temples. How many grains did the temple get?" Within three minutes (and the whole Tamil Nad to be translated), 10,013,702, with all to the fraction was:

SHOULD EAT MORE CHEESE.

National Consumption Would Reduce Cost of Living.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 15.—Canadians are not cheese-eaters, according to figures quoted in Prof. Dean's address given yesterday. The dairymen, as a result, think that cheese should be advertised from coast to coast, in the manner that Ben Davis has been advertised recently. Instead of "eat an apple," it may be this year "eat cheese," and, as Prof. Dean concludes, "this reduce the high cost of living."

"Increase the Canadian consumption," appealed Prof. Dean, in his paper. "Let us advertise from coast to coast, and show what dainty dishes can be made from cheese. Selling according to grade would assist in getting the best cheese to the Canadian consumer. No other concentrated food is so cheap and nutritious as cheese. The Government might advertise it as it did apples."

Legislature Opens Feb. 16?

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—It was hinted yesterday at the Parliament Buildings that the Legislature will be convened Feb. 16, instead of on Feb. 10, as originally ordained. Although the members have been holding themselves in readiness to assemble on the latter date, several matters which have appeared within the last two weeks are understood to be arguing for a postponement.

It is likely that the order-in-council settling the date will be issued before the end of the week. None of the Ministers wished to commit themselves yesterday, although they intimated that the public would be given notice before long.

Lt.-Col. Baton Accused.

QUEBEC, Jan. 15.—Charged with arson in connection with the destruction by fire in October last, of his summer residence at Montmagny, Dr. Baton, lieutenant-colonel commandant of the 15th infantry brigade of the Canadian militia, was summoned before the magistrate at Montmagny and allowed out on bail. The charge is laid by Notary Rousseau of Montmagny.

Germans Administer Turkey.

ATHENS, Jan. 15.—The administration of Turkey has virtually been taken over by the Germans. There are now 20,000 Germans, most of them belonging to the German military establishment, occupying administrative offices in Constantinople. Greeks, who comprise an important part of the population of the city, have been prohibited from leaving.

RAISED BEST HOGS.

Eighteen Ontario Farmers Get Prizes In Feeding Contest.

TORONTO, Jan. 15. — Eighteen farmers of Ontario, who, during the year have applied their attention to the scientific raising of hogs were yesterday declared winners in a contest held by the Department of Agriculture, and will go to Guelph for two weeks' free tuition as a reward. Contestants were allowed to enter two competitors with four animals, finishing only with three. They were kept until 16 weeks of age, and a record of the food consumed was turned in to the judges. Prizes were granted on profit and type, 15 per cent. being deducted from the final weight and the market price allowed. Hogs were selected at six weeks of age and a value of $4 was placed on their then.

The three leading winners came from Grey, Oxford and Essex, respectively, with profits of, $11.66, $11.24 and $9.94. The breeds were Yorkshire, Chester White and Duroc in order.

Austrians Want More News.

LAUSANNE, Jan. 15.—The Chamber of Commerce of Vienna has memorialized the Austrian Government to ameliorate the censorship of the press, which paralyzes the existing remnant of commerce in the dual empire.

The president of the Industrial Society of Lower Austria, in addressing that organization, deplored the fact that truth is being kept from the people.

ECZEMA SPREAD OVER CHILD'S FACE

In Mass of Water Blisters. Could not Sleep Night or Day. Cross and Fretful. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Child Was Healed.

Isley Sd., Scarboro, Ont.—"When my child was but two months old there came a rash on her left cheek which kept getting worse and worse and spreading until it covered all one side of her face. They said it was eczema. It was just like a mass of blisters with the skin of a blister and they would so soon all break. Her face was just like a watery sore and it itched and got so hot the matter ran out of the sores and my child would simply cry and keep trying to scratch.

The rash spread over the cheek, it got the could not sleep night or day. They continued from this terrible old rash the size nearly one inch. Cross and fretful I could say she was. She just worked and fussed all the time.

One day I saw in a paper that Cuticura Soap and Ointment would do so I sent for some and before child dept the itching had gone and then it began to dry and clear day I saw it get better. Inside of one month people did not know which side of her face was the sore side. She was cured." (Signed) Mrs. John Sisk, D., Jan. 15, 1914.

Turks Advance on Egypt.

CAIRO, Jan. 15.—Turkish troops are advancing in force towards the Suez Canal, but the general opinion here is that they will be unable to fight their way through.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 15. — Thirty-eight British subjects who were arrested at Brussels have arrived at Aix-la-Chappelle under military guard.

The Egyptian Lotus.

The lotus figures to a very great extent in ancient Egyptian sculpture, though the flower is often crude and difficult to make out. The fruit of the Egyptian lotus was forbidden as food to disciples of Pythagoras. The lotus was dedicated to the goddess of fecundity, Isis, and buds are said to have been found in the tombs of ancient Egyptian kings. Egyptologists have decided that the lotus of Egypt was the common white water lily of the Nile and not the true sacred nelumbo of the far east.

Curious Laws in India.

Some of the old laws of Nepal, India, were curious. Killing cows ranked with murder as a capital offense, for instance. Every girl on birth was married with great ceremony to a little green which was then cast into a running stream. As the fate of the fruit was uncertain, the girl was supposed never to become a widow. To obtain divorce from a husband a wife had only to place a betel nut under his pillow and depart.

In Nepal the day is considered to begin when it is light enough to count the tiles on the roof or distinguish the lines on a man's hand against the sky.—Exchange.

Old English Slaves.

Before the conquest and for a long time after at least two-thirds of the people of England were denuded of all the substantial attributes of freedom. The lords had the absolute disposal of them. They might be attached to the soil or transferred by deed, sale or conveyance from one lord to another. They could not change their place or hold property—in short, they were slaves under their obligation of perpetual servitude, which the consent of the master alone could dissolve. The system was not fairly abolished until the reign of Charles II., and so late as 1775 men were bought and sold in Scotland with the estates to which they were bound.

Passed on Children.

Stephen Leacock, according to the author of "Eat, Drink and Be Merry," contains fourth cousins a great luxury. He illustrates how they cause within a large circle of friends among the French leggings on the retreat from Moscow and generally amused them out of existence. "Never were they established in such a style before. The unexpressed emotions [illegible] causes a fiddle—and left only the hard wrists for a proof of how thinly they covered, to accidentally for lights, and to twenty without the bride."

Literary Tragedy.

Smoking Coins.

Coin handling machines have reached such a degree of perfection that a machine will take a bookful of coins of all denominations, sort them out, pick out all the substituted pieces and reject them, do all the others up in neat rouleaux of standard sizes—such as twenty-five pennies in a bundle—count them, add them all up together, and then put a slip of paper on which is printed the total sum in dollars and cents. An electric motor turns the machine when done the work.

Edison and the Bee.

It is recorded that Thomas A. Edison, after watching the troublesome insect of a busy afternoon, [illegible] remarked:

"A real plane, a heavier than air machine of great weight, can be built so that, at the climbing speed that bees climb, the tip of the tube of 200 miles a second. That bee weighed 7,000 times more than its wings. If we can only get to that, get to that—the greatest thing for the smallest weight is the thing. The bee's wings beat the air 300 times a second."

Quickly Satisfied.

Little Hannah had been left in the library one morning and shortly after she came running to her mother.

"Mother," she asked, "that ink that father writes with isn't indelible ink is it?"

"No, dear," was the reply.

"Oh, I'm so glad of that," cried the child.

"Why, dear?" queried the mother.

"Why," said Hannah, "I've spilt it all over the library rug."—Boston Herald.

Soldering Aluminium.

When holes appear in aluminium utensils it is not necessary to discard the dishes as no longer useful, for by a simple method they can be made to take solder. Insert a brass or copper rivet in the hole, flatten both ends and then solder over both the inside and the outside surfaces in the usual manner. If you wish to solder a piece to a sound part of the utensil use a short awl to punch holes for holding spots of copper or brass. If the aluminium is very thick cut the holes with a small drill held in a carpenter's bit brace.

Fort Sumter.

For four years Fort Sumter in Charleston harbor, remained every attempt at its capture. For 580 days the fort was actually under fire. The bombardment of the three principal and eight minor bombardments was altogether 657 days and 116 nights. The total weight of metal thrown against the fort from land and sea aggregated 3,500 tons, and of this great mass the fort was actually struck by 3,469 tons. The number of projectiles fired against it was 46,679.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THIN FOLKS WHO WOULD BE FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to put on a few pounds and stay that way," declares every appreciably thin child or woman. Such result is not impossible, though the rule is failure. Thin people are victims of malnutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood so that are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing substances stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by taking a Stuart Tablet with every meal, charged as a scientific combination of six of the most powerful strength, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its tonic effect is remarkable. Its tonic action of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sold in gold by good druggists every where and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Nuxated Iron has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous impairment and general weakness disorders. It should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

ARTILLERY IS KEEPING GERMANS BACK

THE ALLIES GAIN AT SEVERAL POINTS

THE ALLIES' NEW ARTILLERY IS HOLDING THE GERMANS IN CHECK

Effective Work Being Done in the Territory From Soissons to Rheims---French Last Trenches to the Germany at a Point Near Carency

ALLIES ARE PROGRESSING AT BLAGNY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, France, January 16.—Fighting in the vicinity of Soissons continues unchecked. The French are maintaining their positions along the Aisne while reinforcements are being rushed to a new line in anticipation of another German attack to hack and hew a way through the allied lines. Artillery has been placed in position, so that the entire river angle is covered, and it will be impossible for the Germans to run pontoons to carry their men over.

There is no doubt now that the German general staff is planning to renew its drive against Paris. Ten army corps are reported to have bene sent to the battle front, stretching all along the Aisne and north to Arras.

They are all first line veterans who have been withdrawn from the Meuse lines and from Flanders, where their places have been taken by the second line, considered sufficient to hold the positions under present conditions.

Reports to-day said that the Germans had made no new gains. Already part of the Paris garrison has been sent north to strengthen the frontier line, and it is understood that a part of the new British army just landed will also be diverted to the present threatened front. Paris is in no way uneasy over the developments. Everyone is confident that General Joffre will be able to hold his present lines.

PARIS, January 16.—The allies' new artillery which was rushed to the Aisne, is holding the Germans in check. In the teritory from Soissons to Rheims, it is doing very effective work, according to the official word received from the front to-day. The French, however, have been unable to maintain their advantage at Notre Dame de Lorette, near Carency. It is admitted the Germans have retaken trenches there which were captured by the French early this week. The allies, however, are making steady though slow progress at Blagny. From the sea to Ypres there has been violent cannonading but without any particular advantage to either side. The floods in the vicinity make operations by the infantry on either side an impossibility at present. From the Somme to the Meuse the infantry on both sides remains inactive, and there has been a perceptible falling off in the artillery exchanges. The Germens have been shelled from their positions along the hills to the north of Clemary, east of Pont a Mousson. Elsewhere on the battle line there has been little action.

LONDON, January 16.—In a declaration addressed from Rotterdam to the workers of the world, by the committee of the German Humanity League, it is asserted that outraged proletariat of the dual monarchy at last realizes that the government in Vienna, has been the "abject creature and cats-paw of the inhuman militarist clique at Berlin, and that millions of innocent women and children, suffering in want and anguish in Galicia and Poland, are in a plight not less distracting or shameful than that of their Belgian brethren."

The declaration then proceeds: "Austria is now seeking to stop the tragedy, and beseeching the aid of the Vatican to obtain for herself terms from the allied powers."

FELL UNDER MOVING CAR

Miss Walker of the Normal School Had a Narrow Escape From Serious Injury

BOOT WAS MUTILATED

Last evening a serious accident was narrowly averted at the Jackson Park Street Railway rink, when Miss Walker, of the Normal School, slipped and fell under a moving car. The wheels passed over a portion of her foot, severing a portion of the sole. It appears that Miss Walker, whose home is in Port Hope, had spent the evening at the Park with a number of friends, and was about to return to the city, when the accident happened. The party were lined up near the car track and by some means or other. Miss Walker fell with the above result. The incident occurred shortly after ten o'clock, and for a few minutes consternation reigned among the bystanders as it was thought that Miss Walker would be dragged underneath the moving car.

Dies In Winnipeg

Peterborough Member of the 2nd Canadian Contingent Passes Away

The many friends in Peterborough of Mr. John Lightfoot, formerly of Peterborough, will be shocked to learn of his death in Winnipeg, following an attack of peritonitis. The young man had enlisted in the second Canadian contingent and was in training at Winnipeg. He had been living in the west for some years and was formerly employed at Merrell and Meredith's store. He is survived by his mother in Peterborough, and two sisters, Mrs. W. H. Collier and Mrs. Jones. The body will be sent to Peterborough for interment. Mr. R. F. McWilliams taking charge of the arrangements.

THE GERMAN VICTORY ONLY IMAGINARY ONE

French Government Officially Deny the German Claim of a Great Success in the Vicinity of Soissons

THREE BRIGADES ENGAGED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The Government this afternoon issued a sharp note taking direct issue with the German claims of a great victory in the vicinity of Soissons.

There is absolutely no basis for any such claim, the War Office says.

"As a matter of fact," the Governments says, "the German attempt to make a great victory out of the Soissons engagement is entirely a feat of imagination. We had less than three brigades engaged. It was impossible to reinforce them owing to the washing away of bridges along the Aisne. So our troops were withdrawn.

"The retirement, as a matter of fact, affected only three miles along our front, and we retired only about a mile. We are still in uninterrupted possession of Soissons."

The Adanac Quartette

The Adanac Quartette, composed of Redferne Hollinshead, George Dixon, Arthur Blight, and Ruthven Macdonald, are to sing in St Paul's Church on Tuesday evening. These four singers will be heard in a programme of the highest standard, comprising solos, duets, and quartettes. Individually, each member is most popular and hosts of admirers and music lovers will hail with delight the opportunity of hearing the greatest male quartette ever formed in Canada. The blending qualities are marvellous and their pianissimos and climaxes are something to remember.

Monsieur Edouard Hesselberg, the famous Russian pianist, will be heard to the greatest advantage, as Heintzman & Co. are sending a Grand Piano from Toronto for his use, and also a tuner, to be sure it is in the best of condition.

M. Hesselberg will render four numbers from the works of Wagner, Liszt, Rubinstein and Chopin.

The recital wil commence punctually at 8.15 and Mr. Allan will be obliged, if the public will kindly note this, as late-comers will not be admitted during the rendering of any number.

COMMANDING OFFICER OF THE RIFLES HERE

Lieut.-Col. Munro, O. C. of the 8th Mounted Rifles, Visited Local Armouries on Business This Morning

PLEASED WITH MEN

Lt.-Col. Munro, officer commanding the 8th Mounted Ribes of the third Canadian contingent, in which will be incorporated the squadron being organized here, is in Peterborough today on official business and spent this morning in consultation with Major T. J. Johnston of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. Lt.-Col. Munro seemed to be most favourably impressed with the calibre and bearing of the local recruits.

The Mounted Rifles were excused from drill this afternoon, but will report at 9 o'clock Monday morning. Before parade was dismissed this morning, Major Johnston impressed upon the men the desirability of their bearing themselves in a soldierly manner when off duty.

The 57th detachment to the 3rd contingent held their usual drill to-day. There is still room for recruits in the infantry battalion.

Brother of North Monaghan Man Loses His Life in France

Mr. Wm. Sutherland, Orpington Road, North Monaghan, just received word from his mother in Glasgow that his brother, Pte. J. M. Sutherland, was killed in action in France on Dec. 18, 1914. The late Pte. J. M. Sutherland volunteered for active service in September and joined his former regiment, the second Scots Guards. He also served in the South African war.

FUNERAL MONDAY.

The funeral of the late Herbert John Reynolds will be held from the family residence, 593 Patterson Street, on Monday afternoon. Service will be conducted at the house at 2.30 p.m., and the funeral cortege will proceed to Little Lake cemetery for interment.

Tea growing is a fine art. The quality of tea depends on the elevation of the land and the nature of the soil. Cheap teas are produced in vast quantities in the low-lying valleys where the humidity encourages the growth of large coarse leaves. On the breezy hill-tops are found the most delicate and tender growths. Salada tea is grown entirely in hill-top gardens, hence its distinctive charm of flavour.

GERMAN PEOPLE ARE DESPERATE

Admiral Tirpitz's Suggestion of a Submarine Raid on Great Britain's Merchant Marine Meets With Ready Favour ---Proposed to Use Aerial Craft for the Same Purpose

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via the Hague, January 16.—Sentiment throughout Germany for an effective blockade of the English coast by mines, submarines and other devices, including raids on British merchantmen carrying foodstuffs, is increasing. The suggestions made by Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, in his recent interview, that submarine warfare against England's merchant fleet would prove very effective, has been taken up in every quarter. This is especially so, so far as officialdom is concerned. It is agreed that as England is placing every possible emphasis on her plan to starve Germany out, that Germany will be well within her rights if she takes aggressive action along similar lines. The use of the great aerial fleet, hitherto practically useless, is also suggested.

In this connection, Count Reventlow, discussing the situation in the Deutsche Zeitung says:

"We have means in our possession which promise results. It would be a sin against the German nation and its people if these are not soon applied and carried out to fullest energy."

CONSTANTINOPLE, January 16. — Learning for the first time to-day of the Turkish reverse in the Caucasus, the residents of the capital expressed intense irritation against the Young Turk policy, and especially against Enver Pasha. The situation is believed to be serious. An anti-Government plot has been discovered and a number of arrests have been made.

AMSTERDAM, January 16. — The Ostend correspondent of the Tyd says that the Germans have evacuated all of the coast towns as far north as Mariakerke, but the allies have not yet occupied them. Mariakerke still remains in German hands. The German withdrawal has been due to the continued shelling of their positions from the sea by British and French light draught monitors and torpedo boats.

AT HOME A SUCCESS

The Military Euchre and At Home last evening in St. Alphonsus Lyceum under the auspices of the St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Society, was one of the most successful social functions of the season.

The winners at euchre were Miss K. Masterson and Mr. J. Crough.

Miss Marion German presided at the piano for the dancing, after the euchre.

A Collection For Belgians

Funds Will Be Raised in Murray St. Baptist Church To-morrow

THE STARVIN GBELGIANS.

On Sunday last the pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church announced that to-morrow's collections will be sent immediately to the fund being raised by th Baptist Convention for the relief of the Belgian people.

The announcement met with the hearty approval of the congregation, while the facts recited by the minister came as a revelation to many who had no idea how serious the conditions are.

The situation in Belgium in brief is this, that a population of nearly 7,000,000 people is shut off from the rest of the world, ringed in with German steel. The industries of the kingdom—and Belgium was a hive of industry—are paralysed and dead, and the people who were dependent on them are unable to earn a livelihood. The food supply of the country, including the grain and cattle, disappeared months ago, commandeered to support the eGrman army. There is no food in the country and the people are faced with the gaunt wolf of starvation. The guns and bayonets of the soldiers have killed their thousands in the last few weeks, but famine's ravages will, unless mitigated, destroy hundreds of thousands before the winter is over. The worst suffering will be among the most helpless, the women and children of the population. Mothers are not receiving proper and sufficient food to nourish their infants, and infant mortality is therefore alarmingly great. 40,000 infants have been born in Belgium since the war began, and of them thousands have died because of lack of necessary food. "How many of the coming 40,000 will die this winter," says a writer in the Springfield Republican, "depends upon us in America—upon how much food we send to the nursing mothers, how much milk to the babes."

No doubt the people of Murray Street will as usual do themselves credit as they come up to-morrow with their gifts.

ARE EAGER TO MAKE SHELLS

Canadian Plants Are Being Supplied With the Machinery—Shell Parts Are Being Made in Peterborough

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 16—Representatives of manufacturing companies are in the Capital conferring with the Government in connection with the construction of shells. These companies, the demand for whose normal output has been seriously interfered with by the war, are anxious to take advantage of a demand which promises to be fairly brisk for some time to come. Several firms have put in the plant necessary and it is estimated that the total output of Canadian shells will soon approximate 100,000 per day and later, 200,000.

It is understood that two or three Peterborough firms are contemplating the manufacture of shells in this City. As it is the Canadian General Electric Company have been manufacturing caps for shells, turning out as many as 2000 a day. It is expected that the output will be increased.

Fisher Co. to Make Shells:

The Fisher Motor Company, Limited of Orillia, has received an order from the British War Office for 60,000 shrapnel shells. The rough casting will be supplied and the remainder of the work, except filling with explosives, will be done in Orillia. The contract will give employment to some fifty men for three months.

GIVE THE NAMES.

Some newspapers are demanding the names of those who furnished bad boots to the soldiers. That's not so important as furnishing also the names of those honest contractors who furnished good boots. We could only use the names of dishonest bootmakers to pillory them in the public gaze; but in justice to the honest men we should save their reputations. In an omnibus condemnation of dishonest contract work in the supply of boots, we condemn the honest men as well as the rogues, by not knowing the names of either. It is not fair to condemn a whole class for the sake of a few rascals it may contain. It might be also to the credit of our country if we find out that the dishonest contractors were very few compared with the whole number—the exceptions not the rule. Canada's reputation for honest work and honest dealings is worth more than gold.

WHO SAYS, "HARD TIMES"?

May not the hard times we sometimes hear of, be more in fancy than in fact? A great many of our troubles are imaginary when we get at the bottom of them. Of course "business as usual" is not the rule these days; but is its comparative quietness due to lack of money, which is what we consider hard times? Peterborough when she put her mind to it, could put its hand in its pocket and pile up a $50,000 patriotic fund. Last Saturday afternoon at a matinee at the opera house every seat was occupied; on Monday night in the same place there was what the press agents call a "capacity house," the two occasions perhaps representing an amount of $1,000. Last night seventeen hundred patrons paid about $700 ot see Peterborough polish Picton. There is no disparagement of the public prudence in recalling these things; they are legitimate amusements. But with such things in evidence can we be said to be hard up? There may be a good deal of distress in spots, but it seems that the people generally have a little money to spend. If we have pleasure as usual, may we not also have "business as usual"? We can all the more help business as usual if we remember the duty of discharging our little obligations. If everybody who owes somebody else would at the beginning of the year pay his little bill, the mutual impulse thus given to business would keep hard times from the door.

TAKING RISKS.

A lady writes The Examiner to the effect that "her heart was in her mouth"—yesterday afternoon. Passing down George street she saw some girls—children—skipping backwards and forwards across the street car tracks, trying to see how close they could be to the moving car and cross safely. She says they disregarded the frantic gong-ringing of the motorman, and laughed at him as he passed. She thinks parents "should teach their children the folly of such conduct." More than children should be given a lesson. We expect such foolishness from children; but we see older persons taking similar foolish risks. We see people rushing to cross a railway track in front of a rapidly approaching train, risking life to gain a few seconds of not very precious time. We see young men taking their grog to make them manly, and trying how far they can go before they become drunkards and debauchees; we see giddy and thoughtless girls tempting their power of resistance to temptation, with the risk, and, often, result, of a fatal fall. We see men going through life regardless of the obligations of religion and its requirements, who evidently are trying to see how far they can go in the indulgence of a sinful course, before they betake themselves to hasty repentance on the approach of death. We see in all our human experience and observation, the universal human mania for taking risks—in business, in moralitiy, in religion; and it does not lie in the mouths of many of us to curtain-lecture children for their folly. We, ourselves, need a lecture badly in all the relations of life. We most of us are risking our souls every day in the year.

LOOK FOR IT IN HEATON.

The 1915 edition of Heaton's Annual—the commercial hand-book of Canada—makes its eleventh yearly appearance in a better and fuller form than ever before. It is an indispensable means of reference, especially to the busy business man. It has become the standard authority on the Customs Tariff and Regulations, with all the supplementary information demanded, an unique feature of it be found together in no other single volume.

The second half of the book contains a concise, "up-to-date" description of all the towns in Canada of any commercial importance, the leading hotels in order of merit, the existing industries and special opportunities for new industries. The railway connections, banking facilities and population of smaller places are given under the head of "Banking Towns." To this is added a section covering such subjects as agriculture, commerce, education, finance, fisheries, forests, fox-farming, immigration, mining, population, railways, game laws, water powers, etc., an admirable, up-to-date pocket encyclopaedia of the resources of the Dominion. From a scientific point of view, perhaps the most valuable feature is a chapter headed "Where to Find It." This is a complete economic bibliography of the Dominion and Provincial Government Reports and standard publications relating to Canada, to which foot note references are given throughout the text.—Toronto, Heaton's Agency, $1.00, postage 12c.

SAFETY FIRST.

The City Council proposes to apply for legislation to amplify their borrowing powers in respect to the Utilities Commission—in other words to make it easy to get into debt. This is to be done by the easy expedient of issuing debentures, without submitting to the people a by-law authorizing such an issue. It is true that money is needed, but it is not so true that it is needed so badly as to justify the removal of safeguards against the possibility of indiscriminatingly piling up indebtedness.

It is not probable that such legislation will be granted, especially in regard to the Hydro-Electric part of the Utilities Commission—not if Hon. Adam Beck retains his old influence in the Legislature. When the principle of the Hydro-Electric enterprise was before our people in the municipal elections of 1911-12, The Examiner foreseeing the possibility of the incurring of very large indebtedness, without the people's consent, demanded a pledge from Sir Adam Beck, to the effect that the people could vote for the by-law, on the assurance he gave that no by-law to raise money under the Hydro-Electric system, would be valid without it were submitted to a vote of the people. This was the safeguard that The Examiner and the people demanded; and the by-law to adopt the Hydro-Electric principle was passed by a very large majority, the people feeling that they could trust Mr. Beck's pledge, and that the matter of incurring financial responsibility in respect of by-laws, was in their own hands. Voting in good faith at the next municipal elections, the people by a large majority approved by their votes a by-law for $100,000. There was an impression, that was hardly justified, that that would be the extent of the demand. The purchase of the plant was not all, and it has become necessary and proper to make more expenditure to secure the efficiency of the distributing plant.

The money for such a purpose would, no doubt, be well spent; but the people will not care to be deprived of the right assured by the pledge of Sir Adam Beck to be given a chance to vote on any proposal to raise any considerable additional amount. The money is needed, as is also money for other purposes in connection with the waterworks. The people are reasonable in these matters; and no doubt they would approve of any expenditure necessary to give effective, and, therefore, economical, service in making their water, or light and power, supply, of the best. The people have liberally invested money in both enterprises, and they can be trusted to vote for sufficient additional expenditure to make good their investment. The people who pay, should, on principle, be the judges of what they wish to pay. The law has granted them this privilege; Sir Adam Beck has given the assurance that they shall be the judges in the matter of money to be devoted to Hydro-Electric purposes. ..The legislation to cut out the people, might not be abused; the present Utilities Commission, by their past record in administering the waterworks, have earned and gained public confidence. But the City Council does not share this confidence without limit. The Council is properly cautious in permitting the Utilities Commission power to use the city's credit without limit. Why should the Legislature give the commission power of large expenditure without the consent of the people? The present commission might not abuse such a power, but a commission with a new personnel, might make mighty free with such a power, and in that event the people would have their hands tied and they could only look on and—pay. If the people approve of being deprived of their grip on their own money bags, then no more is to be said. We are in a great war for the preservation of popular rights, and the question as to the people surrendering the rights of control of expenditure of their money they now possess, is one that might well be given careful consideration. "Safety first" is a presently popular slogan, and its significance is not confined to guarding level railway crossings.

WHERE THE PUBLIC SCHOOL COMES SHORT OF HIGHEST GOOD

In an interview, Samuel W. McCall, a celebrated United States' educationalist, says some things that might fit our own schools.

The important point is the bearing of our educational system upon the life history of our citizens, it is the view of the statesman, and not of the schoolmaster, which carries weight — the view, that is to say, of the observer who is concerned rather with the after effects of education than with the tabulated results of school examinations.

Samuel W. McCall is pre-eminently qualified to weigh the merits and defects of our educational system. For twenty years he represented the Eighth Congressional District of Massachusetts in the House of Representatives.

"What is your opinion?" I asked Mr. McCall the other day, "of the American type of education?"

"To answer that question," replied Mr. McCall, "it is necessary to take up two aspects of the matter —one, what are the aims which American education sets out to achieve; the other, to what extent does it accomplish its chosen task.

"It is generally agreed that our school system should give our boys and girls that kind of training and instruction which wil lequd them out into the world with a good start toward their development into moral and efficient citizens. The reason that supports the principle of education at the public expense is that it contributes to the well being of the State by making better citizens. No system of education, it seems to me, can properly prepare a child to meet the problems of its maturity unless it takes account of the fact that in adult life it is much easier to remedy faulty knowledge than to make over a weak or vicious character.

"History is full of instances in which men have achieved greatness in the arts and sciences without having had the advantage of early instruction in book learning.

Set side by side with this the fact that very many of those who appear in our courts to answer to charges of crime or misdemeanor have passed through our schools, and it becomes clear that if the absence of schooling does not prevent a man from becoming a great engineer or a great physician, the enjoyment of it does not prevent him from becoming a criminal or a misdemeanant.

"Our school system cannot, of course, be held wholly responsible for results which in some cases may be entirely and in other cases partly due to the defective work of nature, but the fact to which I have referred serves to bring out a vital function of education which cannot be ignored without the gravest peril to society.

"The most serious criticism which I would make of our school system is that it does not pay sufficient attention to character training, and that it neglects to instil into the youth of the nation, as effectively as it might fairly be expected to do, the broad moral principles upon which alone reliance can be placed for a sane and healthy conduct of life.

"If I had to compress this criticism into a single concrete phrase, I would say that our children are taught a great deal about their rights and relatively little about their duties, that the general tendency of our school instructions is to make American youth very much alive to the opportunities of wresting something from its environment and not so sensible to the claims of gentle and generous living.

"Native and foreign observers have told us again and again that in respect for authority and in regard for the rights of others our people fall behind the standard set by countries whose general level of civilization is, in our opinion, much lower than our own.

"There is a type of mind which translates contempt for authority into a noble independence of spirit and which interprets indifference to the rights of others as a wholesome symptom of sturdy self-reliance, but it is not by means of such pleasant paraphrases that we can blink the fact that we too often hold laws, rules and regulations in contempt, and that we too commonly regard the power to do something as an all-sufficient justification for doing it.

"These faults of character, to whatever extent they exist, are, in some degree at least, traceable to failure of our schools to meet the responsibility which rests upon them to give a humane guidance to our children during their most impressionable years.

"I have found matter for adverse comment in the educational ideal which places too much emphasis upon the acquirement of knowledge and too little upon the teaching of sound principles of ethics and conduct. It remains to consider the other side of the question, that is to say, whether, the object of American education being to develop the sense of individual rights and to equip our boys and girls with the means of securing a successful start in life, the results indicate success or failure to attain these objects.

"Taking first the matter of our individual rights, it seems that the results of American school training have been far from fortunate. It might have been hoped that with so much stress being laid upon our rights there might have developed a deep-seated sense of the rights of others. But the mistaken notion has got abroad that our individual right includes the right to disregard the rights of others, or even involves it necessarily.

"It is a curious irony of fate that with our overconsciousness of our individual rights, we should stand today as the nation which, probably to a greater extent than any other great nation, will suffer its personal rights to be trampled on without making any real protest. In this direction our school system has contributed to give us all the disadvantages of the individualist point of view and very few of its advantages.

"Nor can it be said that with reference to giving our children a good start in life, the schools have been more successful. On all sides we hear loud complainings about the lack of that practical knowledge on the part of many of our school graduates which is necessary to success in life. A more serious criticism is that too many are unwilling to face work or to be trained in it.

"It cannot be claimed that the schools should fit these scholars to enter immediately upon graduation into any alling in which special training is necessary, but it can fairly be expected that, apart from a training more thorough than is now given in the rudiments, they should give more instruction of practical use in the direction of making a living.

"It is sought to remedy some of these defects by continuation schools, by night schools, and by vocational and manual training schools, but it would surely cast a grave reflection on any school system to say of it that the only practically useful part of its curriculum was that small portion of it designed to remedy the defects of the whole.

"The practical value of the schools, however, in the direction of making a living is secondary to their work in building character. Just how this work is to be done it is not easy to determine. We have a school teacher as President of the United States, and however eminent his service in his office may be he could render no greater service than by pointing the way to perfecting in this particular the work of our public schools. His long experience as an educator should fit him as well as anybody to solve the problem.

"There is no other governmental purpose for which the American people each year expend so much money as for the maintenance of public schools, unless, indeed, we except the vast outlay they make for warlike purposes. The latter is expended nominally for the defence of he country, but the former is made for the defence of its institutions, for without general intelligence and an average of sound character in our citizenship democratic institutions cannot flourish, if, indeed, they can really exist. Undoubtedly, our teachers and those having direct charge of our schools do the best they can, but the problem is so important that it should receive most careful study on the part of everybody who is able to contribute anything to public discussion."—New York World.

AN EVENT IN TELEPHONE HISTORY.

Much favourable comment has been heard lately among business men on the marked improvement they have observed in long distance telephone service. This has been especially noticeable in conversations carried on over great distances, the transmission being so perfect as to carry the tones of the voice with marvellous distinctness.

Enquiry at the Bell Telephone Office reveals one of the most interesting developments in the history of speech transmission. It appears that during the past few weeks the company has been equipping its long distance lines with a recently invented device called the Pupin Coil. This coil which resembles in appearance the transformers we see on electric light lines, is attached to the long distance telephone wires approximately every eight miles. Just as the electric lighting transformer changes the pressure of the lighting current that flows in the electric light circuit, so the Pupin Coil changes the pressure of the weak electric current that carries the voice over the telephone wires. The result is a marvellous strengthening of the sound waves, so that a 600-mile talk is much the same in the quality of the sounds produced as a chat with one's next door neighbour. The device is the invention of Professor Pupin, of Columbia University. The process of attaching the coils to the telephone lines is called "loading."

The invention of the Pupin Coil has brought a fortune to Professor Pupin, who not so many years ago landed in America a poor Hungarian immigrant. He has worked wonders in long distance speech transmission and his invention, now being used with such marked results on the Bell Telephone Company's lines, marks an epoch in the history of the telephone.

POOR ITALY.

The earth has had its seventeenth tremendous earthquake of the last two hundred years. Italy again has been chosen for the carnage of outraged seismic or geological principles, and a wide section of country has been laid waste and thousands of lives lost. A few hundred miles away mankind is in revolt against tyranny. Was Mother Earth endeavouring to shake herself free of this terrible serpent of war, and striking blindly, did she smash the innocent?

The world will mourn none the less for Italy because of the great war. Her tribulations have been heartbreaking. Sixty in 1908, with an estimated loss of 60,000 lives, Messina in 1908, with from 50,000 to 75,000 of her best sons and daughters slain by this cruel southern subterranean giant.

A gasp of horror went around the world when Messina was stricken. Now the everyday thought of carnage is in the public mind. The blow of thousands of human beings killed drives one closer to despair for the welfare of God's creatures. In the cycle of a single year come flood, famine, cyclone, holocaust, murder, blood-letting till the rivers of France and Belgium are all "la rouge." Then a nation nobly at peace, maintaining a stand for world honour is smitten with a sudden, crumpling buffet. Peace? Only in this new world of ours is there a vestige of her proud raiment left.—London Advertiser.

NOT EVEN KAISER KNEW OF RUSSIA'S PREPAREDNESS

ROME, Dec. 19.—"I hear that in America people are surprised at Russian successes," remarked the Duke of Leuchtenberg, who was hurrying through Rome from Switzerland to join his cousin, the Czar, at the front in Poland.

"America does not understand Russia. There you think that because we are slow to move we are indifferent. Ever since the Japanese war Russia has been slowly but surely reforming her army—and nobody knew it. Even the Germans, who know, or think they know everything, were ignorant of what the Czar was doing with the help of his generals. For instance, the Germans always laughed at our artillery. They used to say that the Russians are too stupid to work guns. And yet our artillery pushed the Germans back into Eastern Prussia. And I have heard Americans talk about us as if we were all barbarians and lived on rapine and cruelty. The Russians are not equal."

The Duke paused and went on in a low voice: "And one thing neither America nor Eastern Europe can understand—the Russian's indifference to money—and death. And these indifferences are the Little Czar's most faithful subjects."

"The Russian sword has been drawn for the oppressed Slav nationalities, just as it was drawn to save Europe a hundred years back from the Napoleonic tyranny. Not that Russians compare the Germans of today with the French of Napoleon." Here His Serene Highness smiled.

"We do not think the Kaiser is a second Bonaparte, either. With the nine million Slavs whom the Czar's soldiers have freed in Austria, and with the French and English allies and that marvellously plucky little country, Belgium, for which I must express my most profound admiration and respect, we shall surround Austria and Germany with a band of iron. My august cousins the Kaiser and Francis Joseph have played a bold game, with all their cards on the table. But they were too sure of victory.

"When do I think the war will be over? I know not. But it seems reasonable to suppose that the decisive battle between us and the Germans will take place next Spring. But we cannot let the enemy lie idle, to recoup all through the winter. We must keep them at work all the time. And the Russian people have vowed to get to Berlin as soon as they can."

The Duke, who is forty-six years old, is a Colonel in the famous Preobrajensky regiment, which is always near the Czar, and which, among other things, distinguished itself in the Moscow campaign of 1812. It placed Catharine the Great upon the throne, and has always played a large part in Russian's dynasty history. The Duke is an aide-de-camp to the Czar, and, through his grandmother, a member of the Romanoff family. Twenty years ago he was married to Countess Marie Grabbe, one of the now Dowager Czarina's ladies-in-waiting. He is soldierly and handsome, and took an active part in the reorganising of the Czar's army.

CREUSOT WORKS MANY YEARS OLD

The guns used by the French army are turned out by the hundred ot the famous Creusot works. The history of these works, as well-known as those of Krupp in Germany, or Armstrongs in England, says Pearson's Weekly, reads like a romance.

The first mention of Creusot under the name of the "Villa de Crosot," occurs as early as 1053. It was then a simple farm. It is now a town of 30,000 inhabitants.

In the sixteenth century coal was discovered at Creusot, though it was not until 200 years later that a company was formed to mine it. Gradually ironworks were erected there and the manufacture of guns started.

In 1838 the works were bought by the Brothers Schneider, and it is a significant fact that the German name of Schneider was to become the great rival of Krupp, the great German gunmakers. From that date down to the present time the Creusot guns began to become famous.

The great superiority of the French gun lies in its stability and in the fact that it will stand extreme hard wear. To show its wonderful stability, it may be mentioned that a glass of water placed on the rim of a wheel of the gun remains unspilled after the shot has been fired.

This extraordinary feat, impossible in the case of most guns, has been made possible by the clever application of a special recoil brake which Krupp always declared could not be fitted to field artillery. It was adopted at the Creusot works, however, and that is one point where the French guns are superior to the German.

Another feature of the Creusot guns is what is known as the recuperator, which causes the gun to return to its firing position. The force used is compressed air, possessing the advantage over many of the Krupp guns, in which springs are used, that it never wears out or loses its "spring."

Creusot guns were used in the Balkans, and army officers declared afterward that the guns were as good at the end of the campaign as before it. Only a short time before the German experts had criticised the famous gun as being too complicated and delicate for use in actual war.

The accuracy of fire of these guns is simply marvellous. Once the angle is set the gun continues to belch forth death with unvarying aim. French officers, too, are so expert in their use that they can split a tree three miles away after a couple of shots to get the range.

Taken all round, the Creusot guns are not only fire more quickly than the Krupp weapons, but they are lighter and easier to move about. They are far more accurate and they last longer. There are four Creusot guns in a battery, each gun firing an average of twenty rounds a minute.

Some people's curiosity is as crooked as the interrogation point that goes with it.

The great decisive victory will be won when General Starvation takes command.

However, war has its compensations. Several poets have been sent to the front.

Anyway, Holland should have no trouble in placing her enemies on the water wagon.

America is at present enjoying a supremacy based on plowshares rather than on swords.

It takes a good deal of care at the spigot to save a waste of $50,000,000 a day at the bung.

A great many actors are said to be stranded abroad. Just as many are that way over here.

No doubt it is worrying the czar a great deal these days to know whether his Poles are negative.

They were so successful in localizing the war in Europe that pretty much every locality gets some of it.

When this war is over there probably will be no complaint for some time that Europe is overpopulated.

To say that the unexpected always happens is merely to confess our ignorance of what ought to be expected.

The Committee is very gratified that its appeal to make the fund $500 has been so well answered, and I would be obliged if you would express their gratification in the article acknowledging the contributions.

Yours truly,
BASIL D. HALL.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

It was made known in Madrid yesterday afternoon that Queen Victoria of Spain is confined to her apartments with an attack of scarlet fever.

The Entwistle and Alberta Southern Railway Co. is applying to Parliament for incorporation to build from Entwistle on the G. T. P., 55 miles south to the Saskatchewan river.

Three Germans at Casablanca, Morocco, have been sentenced by a French court-martial to life imprisonment. The men were charged with having been instrumental in organizing a revolt among the natives.

Release on bond of ships detained in British prize courts will be permitted by the British Government if the judge of the court is willing, according to a statement issued yesterday by the British Embassy at Washington.

In his reply yesterday afternoon to the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress delegation, Sir Robert Borden enumerated the different requests made and stated that they would be referred to the Ministers of the respective departments.

The bye-election in South Waterloo, necessitated by the death of G. C. Clare, M.P., will, in all probability, be held on the same date as the other five bye-elections, the nominations being on Feb. 1. It is understood that it will also be uncontested.

"I have met with but one or two persons in the course of my life who understood the art of walking—that is, of taking walks—who had a genius, so to speak, for pedestrianism, which word is beautifully derived from 'the people who saved about the country in the middle ages and raised charity under pretence of going a la Sainte Terre,' to the Holy Land, till the children proclaimed, 'There goes a Sainte Terre!' a mendicant—a Holy Landgrave—Thoreau.

Houses Built of Meerschaum.

The town of Valleças, in Spain, is almost entirely built of meerschaum. Valleças has on its outskirts great quarries of a meerschaum too coarse for pipemaking, and a meerschaum built town is the result, an ivory white town that shines in the Spanish sun. In Morocco meerschaum is so plentiful that they use it when soft and trade by soap. It gives a plentiful and cleansing lather. Eskischehr, in Asia Minor, supplies the world's meerschaum. There are 2,000 mines, large and small, there, and 8,000 Kurd and Persian meerschaum miners work day and night in them. The meerschaum comes from the earth yellow and turns white after ten days' bleaching in the sun.

Heroic Treatment.

In Guinea if a child is slow in its movements the parents apply an ant to the child instead of a whip to make it move faster. This little ant bites more cruelly than a mosquito, and its bite is apt to be troublesome afterward. As you can imagine, this treatment does not make the child kind to others, and the children of Guinea are said to be particularly cruel to animals. The little boys in Guinea do not reckon their age by years, but by their ability to endure pain. Until he gets to the point where he can let the Ebru ant bite him without wincing he is considered merely a baby.—London Saturday Review.

The Mill Grinds the Coffee

And then—

Coffee begins its Grind with the human system, and usually turns out nervousness, sleeplessness, headache, heart flutter or some of many other aches and pains.

It's caffeine in the coffee (also in tea) that does it—a poisonous drug, cumulative in its effects, and too powerful for most systems to thoroughly eliminate.

Perhaps coffee hasn't finished with you, but wouldn't it be wise to quit it before results are serious, and instead use made from prime wheat and a wee bit of wholesome molasses. It tastes much like high grade Java, yet is absolutely drug free—no caffeine—not a harmful thing in it.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be boiled—15c and 25c packages; Instant Postum—soluble, made in the cup with hot water—instantly—30c and 50c tins. The cost per cup is about the same for both kinds—sold by Grocers everywhere.

BOTHA TAKES STATION.

Swakopmund, In German Southwest Africa, Is Occupied.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The forces of the Union of South Africa have occupied Swakopmund, German Southwest Africa, according to the correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co.

Swakopmund is located at the mouth of the Swakop river. It is a trading and mission station, and is connected by rail with Windhoek.

To Consider Pension Problem.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16. — The pension system for the Canadian Expeditionary Force has been prepared by the Militia Department and will be dealt with by the Cabinet at an early date. It can be adopted by order-in-council and without new legislation. If the war continues for any length of time this will be one of its serious, though necessary financial results. It has been estimated that the annual pension list may run up to eight millions a year.

Jailed For Bad Checks.

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 16—Chas. McPherson, who admitted in the police court to keeping a small balance to his credit in the bank and to issuing checks for larger amounts in payment for goods, and also for cash, was yesterday sentenced to thirty days in jail by Magistrate Campbell.

Ready to Do His Duty.

London Chronicle.

Here is a note from a friend in the training camp: It was parade for pay—the most popular parade in the army. In succession each man advanced to the table, saluted, and stood at attention while the captain counted out and handed over a shilling a day for the week. "Let me see, Jones," said the officer, pausing and looking up at the soldier before him. "As a married man, Jones, don't you think you can allot some of your pay to your wife?"

"Well, sir," said Private Jones, who is one of the men who enlisted instead of waiting for a commission—"well, sir, I allow her £460 ($2,000) a year; but if you think another two bob a week would be of any use to her, I've no objection, sir."

CLEARS THE HEAD, OPENS THE NOSTRILS
STOPS SNEEZING, CURES CATARRH

Catarrh is bound to come with this weather. Slight colds become more offensive and sickening every day. The inflammation extends further into the head. Soon the ears begin to buzz and ring. The head aches, the eyes pain dreadfully, the nose gets plugged up and this forces the patient to breathe through the mouth. Vile, filthy secretions are forced back into the throat, requiring a great deal of coughing to keep the air passages free. Finally this foul matter finds its way into the stomach, causing Dyspepsia and general ill-health. By this time the patient has SYSTEMATIC CATARRH, which saps strength, depletes the vital energies, till consumption is the unhappy result.

There isn't the slightest use in trying to cure this condition with tablets, snuffs or sprays. Such treatments are wholly inadequate. You must employ Catarrhozone, the only remedy that possesses power to kill the germs of Catarrh. The healing vapour of Catarrhozone is carried by the air you breathe to the most minute cells of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. Its antiseptic medication goes everywhere that air can go. No case is too chronic and no person too old—everybody that has catarrh of any kind can be cured by this grand treatment which is endorsed by thousands of physicians throughout America, who say: "The only way to permanently get rid of catarrh is to use Catarrhozone."

DO YOUR PART TO STEM THE GERMAN HORDES

By Providing Comforts and Necessities for the Troops Who Have Been Called Upon to Defend the Empire

THE BATTLEFRONT

The Canadian Red Cross Society appeals to the people of Canada to give of their means at this time of grave national crisis. In the course of a few weeks 22,000 soldiers from this Dominion have crossed the English channel to take their places beside our gallant allies in the trenches on the once fertile fields of Flanders. These soldiers will be called upon to undergo many hardships; they will have to face the elements and many no doubt will fall on the field of honour. It is only right that those who are living in comfort far away from where these terrible scenes are being enacted should give out of the largeness of their hearts that as much of the suffering and discomfort as possible may be alleviated.

The people of Canada have given generously to the funds of the Red Cross Society, but the society is still in need, not only of money, but of comforts and surgical appliances, and these will be sorely needed while the present terrible arbitrament of nations continues. Not only is the society called upon to provide for the Canadian soldiers now on Salisbury Plain, but the troops on duty in this country have to be looked after as well as our allies and soldiers at the front.

Wars and battles are not fought as they were in the days of Napoleon when great conflicts were decided in a few hours, and the battle line only extend a few miles. To-day armies are counted by the millions, and battles wage for weeks, and sometimes months, while 100 miles is not considered a long battle front. Soldiers are called upon to-day to undergo the dreadful hardships, and it would almost appear that humanity had been eliminated from modern warfare by the enemy.

While the governments of the different allied nations have done their utmost to provide for the comfort of the troops in the field, it has been impossible to supply the extra demand made upon them and it has therefore fallen to the citizens of those countries to provide for the soldiers in the matter of comforts, surgical appliances, hospitals, nurses, doctors, etc. It has therefore devolved largely upon the Red Cross Society to do much in the way of providing the soldiers with everything that will mitigate suffering, alleviate distress and save human life. The society cannot hope to do this unless the people as a whole realize their responsibility and duty as citizens of this great Empire.

For the past four weeks the French, British and Servian soldiers, to say nothing of the remnant of the gallant Belgian army, have been fighting under the most appalling conditions such as have never before been experienced in the wars of history. For days and nights they have been compelled to remain in trenches half full of water with the winds of heaven beating continually upon them. Yet they have not complained. Are they down-hearted? No. They are bearing all this misery and suffering that the arms of Britain, France and Belgium may be crowned with victory and that the homes of England and France may remain inviolate. How can we show our gratitude to these brave men?

What One Dollar Will Do.

If every man, woman and child in Canada were to give one dollar to the Red Cross Society over seven million dollars could be spent in saving hundreds of lives and bringing comfort to millions of brave soldiers who are ready to lay down their lives for the freedom of their native land. One dollar would not be missed and to what more worthier object could such a sum be given? The lives of our own men are valuable to us, the victory of our arms is vital to our very status as a nation, therefore upon our shoulders devolves the responsibility of doing our share in making the existence of our brave soldiers as pleasant as circumstances will permit and in saving every life that it is humanly possible to save.

Mr. J. K. Osborne, whose name is familiar to Canadians, writing recently to the Canadian Red Cross Commissioner in London, says: "As Canadians, we are exceedingly anxious to do what we can for the benefit and comfort of our soldiers. Like many others, we are short of money, but we have a beautiful motor car which we are sure can be made most useful. We want to give it for hospital work. We desire to present to the Red Cross Society our Limousine car. This is not a loan, it is a free gift. We have the start of you in the way of comforts for the boys on Salisbury Plain. My wife and two other ladies have already sent for distribution about 800 body belts, about 175 pairs of mittens, besides mufflers, helmets, etc. They will all be wanted and many more."

Such a spirit is worthy of one of our leading citizens. There are many who cannot give motor cars, but all can give of their substance for the greatest of all causes, the cause of humanity.

Note.—All consignments should bear the name and address of the senders and a list of the goods.

From the United States.

While the people of Canada are subscribing generously to the Red Cross Society our sympathetic neighbours in the United States are not forgetting our gallant soldiers nor our allies who are fighting side by side on the European battlefields. Among the contributions received recently at the headquarters of the society was a large consignment of socks, comforters, wristlets, helmets, etc., all of which were contributed by the nurses of John Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, Md. Another large consignment was also received from Riverside, California.

From the far distant Yukon the generous people of that territory have not forgotten the needs of the society for a cash contribution of $122.50 was recently received at the headquarters of the society from the town of White Horse. This sum was half the proceeds of an entertainment given in that place, the other half of the amount being given to the Belgian Relief Fund.

The well known lines of Rudyard Kipling may well be altered to-day to read, "For east is east and west is west and ever the twain shall meet." From the far flung western prairies, from the distant hamlets of the Yukon, from the quaint villages that nestle in the valleys by the St. Lawrence river from east and west the hearts of the people are going out to our brave Canadian soldiers and our gallant allies who are ready to give their lives for the undying glory of the Empire. By the money they send and the comforts they make the burden of many a man will be lightened and his lot made happier.

The Canadian Red Cross appeals for money, for comforters, socks, mufflers, caps, helmets, ambulance appliances, etc., etc., all of which may be sent to the Canadian Red Cross Society, 78 King Street, East, Toronto, Canada.

PRICE OF BUTTER HAS REACHED A HIGHER LEVEL

Was Selling at High as Thirty-three Cents a Pound This Morning —Large Supply of Meat

TO-DAY'S PRICES

Trading on the farmers' market was unusually brisk this morning. That is to say for this season of the year, when the Christmas activity has become an unknown quantity and the market is dependent upon trade conditions, that are conceded to be a little below normal. There was a good demand for the usual line of market commodities, including Mark Spenceley's double-lunged peanuts. Acting Sergeant Kidd and Sanitary Inspector Spence were on hand to see that the local and provincial laws were enforced. The former was active in breaking up the war conferences that were held around the box stove, also in keeping open the lines of communication with the market and the outside world.

The farmers as a whole are pretty well satisfied with the prevailing weather conditions. The recent thaw had the effect of levelling down the roads and making it easier to get out the winter's supply of wood. Also it left sufficient snow to cover the fall wheat and protect it from the ravages of the frost.

Meat Was Plentiful.

The price of beef was somewhat lower than it was a week ago. A large supply was offered this morning at ten and twelve cents a pound. Towards the close of the market, the price eased off to nine cents. The quality appeared to be somewhat better than it has been for some time past. Pork sold at twelve and fifteen cents a pound and lamb at sixteen and eighteen cents.

Potatoes were fairly plentiful at sixty-five and seventy cents a bag. A few lots of apples were sold at two dollars a bag, and fifty cents higher for the better varieties.

About ten loads of cordwood were sold at prices ranging from four to six dollars a cord. One load of hay brought twenty-two dollars. A few loads of inferior quality realized twenty dollars a load. The fact that many of the farmers are hauling hay a distance of eight and ten miles is an indication that the sleighing is fairly good.

Eggs Forty-five Cents.

Eggs are still in the luxury class. Fresh eggs guaranteed to stand up against the spotlight of the one of Sanitary Inspector Spence's candle testers, were selling at forty-five cents a dozen this morning. A few dozen sold at forty cents.

Butter continues high in price. It was selling at thirty-three cents a pound, with a fairly good demand. It may go to thirty-five cents a pound before another week. Fowl was plentiful and the prices unchanged. Chickens changed hands at one dollar a pair and turkeys at from two to three dollars each. A few geese were disposed of at one dollar and twenty-five cents.

BRITAIN REMAINS FIRM.

She Has Made No Concessions in the Matter of Contraband.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — "Great Britain up to last night has made no concession to the United States as to ships or shipping which has not been made on terms dictated by the British Admiralty."

This statement was made last evening by a State Department official who is thoroughly familiar with the Dacia case now pending and every case of seizure or detention made up to this time by British cruisers.

Release on bond of ships detained in British prize courts will be permitted by the British Government if the judge of the court is willing, according to a statement issued yesterday by the British Embassy.

Up to a late hour yesterday afternoon Solicitor W. Cone Johnson had received no answer from Great Britain as to the concession which was expected in the case of the Dacia.

Pressure Diverted To Relieve Other Points

Delayed Reports Reach Paris of a Victory at La Bassee, Where on Jan. 10th an Important Strategic Advantage Was Gained for the Allies by a Vigorous Drive---One Mile Was Gained

LONDON, Jan. 16—That the check suffered by the French troops in the battle of Soissons is important is admitted here by British military critics, though all agree they cannot determine the object of the German drive except as it furnishes a diversion, relieving the pressure in Flandrs and in Alsace.

The violent German attack conducted under the direction of the Kaiser and the German General Staff by Gen. von Kluk is easily the most striking news from the western theatre.

Strong reinforcements drawn from the right and left flanks of the German centre army combined with the intervention of the flood stage of the River Aisne, which imperilled the lines of communication of the French, preventing them from bringing up added forces to meet the increased superior strength of the invaders, made possible the German success, say British students of the progress of the revival of the Aisne battle.

A victory of great strategic value has been won by the British army in a furious drive against the German battlefront near La Bassee. The British troops stormed the strongly-entrenched positions held by the Kaiser's forces, captured the first line of trenches and pressed on with magnificent spirit until they had driven the invaders back a mile. The Germans suffered heavy losses, but the British had few casualties.

The battle opened with a vigorous artillery fire from the British heavy siege guns; a rain of shells demolished several of the defence field works of the Germans and threw their ranks into disorder. When this preliminary success had been achieved the British infantry swept forward in great numbers and overwhelmed the Kaiser's troops before they could organize an effective field resistance.

The importance of this victory of the British forces can hardly be overestimated. La Bassee has been for many weeks the scene of violent battles, owing to its commanding position at the intersection of both canals and highways, which give access to the French sea coast. The German battle line at this point was one of the more thoroughly organized along the German front, the Kaiser's commanders having massed large forces in that region.

The battle took place Jan. 10, but owing to a delay in the telegraph service and the strict censorship the despatch bearing the news only reached Paris yesterday.

The following official communication was issued last night:

"There is nothing of importance to report."

Yesterday afternoon's bulletin issued by the French War Office said:

"From the sea to the Lys there were yesterday artillery engagements, some of them quite spirited. We made progress near Lombaertzyde and near Beclaere. To the north of Arras a brilliant attack by Zouaver resulted in the capture at the point of the bayonet of the positions of the enemy near the road between Arras and Lille.

"In this same region, at Targette and at St. Laurent, as well as at a point to the north of Andechy, in the region of Roye, our artillery secured the advantage over that of the enemy. German batteries were reduced to silence, two pieces of artillery were demolished; a depot of ammunition was exploded, and field works in course of construction were destroyed.

"At a point two kilometres (a mile and a quarter) northeast of Soissons, the Germans yesterday attacked the village of St. Paul. They entered the village, but we lost no time in recapturing it.

"In the region of Craonne and near Rheims there were yesterday violent artillery engagements, during the course of which the batteries of the enemy were frequently reduced to silence.

"In the region of Perthes, in the Argonne, and on the heights of the Meuse, there has been nothing important to report. We have destroyed the foot bridges set up by the Germans over the River Meuse at St. Mihiel and in the forest of Ailly we repulsed an attack upon the trenches taken by us Jan. 8.

"In the Vosges, to the south of Senonnes, we repulsed the Germans after a spirited infantry engagement. We broke through their barbed wire entanglements and occupied their trenches.

"Along the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

In Regard To That Complaint

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I notice in your last night's edition a complaint from a man living on Chamberlain street—that he was refused relief from Mr. Miller. The fact of the case is this: He applied to me for relief at the office of the Patriotic Fund, and as the man was under the influence of liquor, and Mr Dobbin would not be able to give him relief till next morning, I told him to call at 9 o'clock, next morning, and that his children would not be starving if he would stop drinking.

However, he called back, later, to see Mr Miller, who told him "nothing for you to-day," and he admitted that he had been drinking. Since I have been trying to assist with the Patriotic Relief I have seen Mr. Miller attend to a large number of applicants and they have not received anything but the kindest attention.

Yours truly,

J. A. Knapman.

NEW MOVEMENT BEGUN.

Russians Driving a Powerful Wedge Into German Lines.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The latest official reports from the Russian General Staff disclose a new operation on the part of the Russian army which may have far reaching results.

Starting on their new year the Russian cavalry commenced a forward move in Northern Poland on the right bank of the lower Vistula river and have reached Skirwe River, some 40 miles east of the German fortress of Thorn, West Prussia, driving a small force of German cavalry and infantry before them. It is believed that Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces, intends to use an entirely new army consisting, according to Petrograd despatches, of from 500,000 to 1,000,000 men in this region, operating in conjunction with an army which is advancing in East Prussia. This army would place the German troops at Mlawa in a vise and at the same time threaten the rear of the Germans in front of Warsaw. The latter still are making occasional attacks on the Russian line and, according to a Berlin report, have taken a Russian vantage point northeast of the Rawka river.

A Daily News despatch from Petrograd on Friday says:

"An advance of the Russian army in Northern Poland above Plots which is of great strategic importance, threatens the German communication at a point where the main source of men and supplies have reached Gen. von Hindenburg to fill his positions along the river courses of Central Poland. Stragglers from the civilian population who entered the Russian lines during the last few days speak of many kinds of activities pointing to preparations for a German withdrawal westward.

"Likely Gen. von Hindenburg prefers to suffer another ruinous waste of men rather than order a full retreat at a time when the German troops are still gathering in Hungary. This German-Hungarian combination, probably is to be nursed even at the expense of the entire campaign in Poland."

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.

Better Shoes For Soldiers.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—The sub-committee of the Cabinet on army contracts yesterday afternoon discussed the matter of better shoes for the Canadian troops and a new committee was appointed to recommend specifications for the best shoe that can be designed including the chief features of the British and French army shoes. The French shoes are longer than the British shoes and fit well. Besides being very heavy they are protected by hob nails. George Slater will advise the committee and the report will be submitted to the sub-committee the next Wednesday. The new shoes will cost more than the $3.85 paid for those for the first contingent, but they will be much superior for the kind of usage they must stand.

FARMER WANTS BOY FOR CHORE WORK AT HOME

The following letter has been received from an Examiner subscriber in South Dummer:

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—While looking over your paper, to-night, I see a piece entitled "The Niggardly Treatment of Hired Help by Farmers." I see where a boy of thirteen summers has been ill used by a farmer; and where he has been placed in Adjutant McElhiney's refuge. Now, I don't know the address of that place, so I am going to ask a favour of you on my part. If that boy is a pretty good stamp of a man and not delicate, I cannot understand why he would have to be put in a place of refuge. I was just thinking of sending away for a "Home" boy when I came across this piece of news in your paper, so I thought I would like to give him a trial provided he is for hiring out and some other fellow has not picked him up already.

Well, I am a farmer and always get three meals a day, and to be honest, I have nothing to do until Spring, but I would like to get a good boy now and get him used to the place when times are slack.

Now, if you would be good enough to see about that boy and answer my letter as soon as possible, and let me know about him, and tell me if there are other boys in that place, you would do me a great favour, and if you could find me a good boy wanting a year's work I would be much obliged. I would like to have the address of some of those Children's Aids or Shelters so as I could find out where a fellow could get a boy or girl, when convenient.

I don't care who would be put as guardian over the boy to see that he is well used or ill used. I don't think I would like to turn even a dog outside when it is 28 degrees below zero. Hoping to hear from you or the officials of that Refuge, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

An Examiner Reader.

TO GROW HAIR ON A BALD HEAD

BY A SPECIALIST.

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair-tonic and hair-grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomforts. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original colour, stopping hair from falling out and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy, and can be put up by any druggist: Bay Rum, 6 ounces; Lavoris de Quassoss, 2 ounces; Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists, and is absolutely harmless as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics.

Armed With Enemy's Guns

Russians in Carpathians Equipped With Austrian Weapons

LONDON, Jan. 16. — The Times this morning has the following from its Petrograd correspondent:

The Russians hold all the important passes in the Carpathians, owing to a brilliant feat of one of the regiments of Grand Duke Michael's Caucasian native divisions. Holding to the trails with their hardy mountain ponies the pass sealed during the night an apparently impassable summit, and getting to the rear of the Hessed battalion the latter was surprised and surrendered.

Grand Duke Michael himself was present at the achievement of this feat. He has been in the thick of every fight since the division took the field.

In order to obviate the labor of transferring huge quantities of captured Austrian guns, rifles and ammunition, the whole Russian corps operating in Galicia is fighting the enemy with his own weapons. The Austrians were entirely surprised at noticing the peculiar color of the smoke of their own shrapnel emitted by shells which flew into their midst from the Russian side.

Valuable Black Fox Poisoned.

GUELPH, Jan. 16.—Provincial Inspector Reburn of Toronto came to the city yesterday to investigate the poisoning of a black fox, valued at $5,000 at a black fox farm on the 9th line of Erin. The animal was poisoned one day last week while in its runway on the farm, the intention of the thief being to secure the skin. The owner says that this particular fox was out in the middle of the afternoon, but that shortly before dark when he visited its kennel it was stretched out dead. He at once had it skinned and the hide taken care of, and proceeded to Guelph, where he laid a complaint with the authorities.

To Call Out All Bachelors.

HAVRE, Jan. 16. — The Belgian Government has decided to make a call upon all unmarried men between the ages of eighteen and thirty. Those who do not wish to perform military service will be occupied with some useful public work. Everyone will have to make a declaration before a consul in his district within three days, under penalty of being declared a defaulter and being treated as such by the gendarmerie.

Fires Complete Havoc In The Stricken District

Some Alive in the Ruins---Those Rescued so Far Have Been Rushed to Rome for Treatment or Are Being Housed in Temporary Structures---Extent of Loss of Life Cannot Yet Be Estimated---Communication Broken

ROME, Jan. 16.—From 20,000 to 50,000 still remains the unofficial estimate of the casualties resulting from the earthquake which rocked Southern and Central Italy early on Wednesday morning.

As yet it has been impossible to determine from the brief descriptions of the catastrophe that have reached Rome over hampered lines of communication the amount of the damage done by the disturbance, but such details as have come through leave no doubt that nearly 100 towns and villages have been utterly demolished or badly wrecked and that a great loss of life resulted.

Thousands of persons now have lain for nearly three days beneath crumbled buildings throughout the earthquake zone—some of them dead and others alive—while others have been removed from the twisted wreckage and brought to Rome hospitals for treatment of injuries or are being cared for in temporary structures.

It is believed that many of those who were caught in the wreckage and were injured, perished later from cold or lack of nourishment, or else were burned to death in fires which broke out in various places amid the ruins. This is especially true of Avezzano and Magliano-di-Marsi, where fires started, and their seemed little chance of quenching them owing to lack of water.

Avezzano, from all accounts, still holds the position of chief sufferer through the disaster. Ten thousand persons in that district are said to have perished.

Sora and Pescini each has 4,000 dead, while the fatalities at Gioia-marsi reached 3,568, and at San Benedetto 3,000. Numerous other towns report fatalities running upwards from 10 to over 2,000.

In the stricken districts the people are camping in the open.

William Marconi, who returned here yesterday from Avezzano on board the train with King Victor Emmanuel, declared that words were insufficient to describe the horrors he had witnessed. The town had been absolutely leveled, he said, and those of its populace who had escaped death in the disaster were now destitute.

"King Victor Emmanuel told me," said Mr. Marconi, "that he had visited the scenes of all the earthquake disasters in Italy since he was a child, but that this one surpassed all others, even including Messina. The King said the survivors of Avezzano were only between two and three per cent. of its population, while in Messina one-third of the people escaped."

Describing the damage done in Avezzano, Mr. Marconi said:

"Avezzano has absolutely ceased to exist. In Messina some buildings, especially the palaces along the sea front, give one the impression that they are still intact, their facades having survived the shock while only their interiors fell in. Not so with Avezzano. No wall there remains erect. It seemed as though the town had been ground to powder by some gigantic machine."

Infantry Training

The Matter in This Column is from the Official Manual 1911 and is Published According to Orders of the Home Guard

GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF TRAINING

I. The Various Branches of Training and their Objects.

1. The object to be aimed at in the training of the infantry soldier is to fit him, mentally and physically, to do his duty in war.

2. To attain this object the preliminary steps necessary are:

i. The development of a soldierly spirit.

ii. The training of the body.

iii. The training in the use of rifle, bayonet, and spade.

After satisfactory progress in these essentials has been made, the soldier must be taught how he can apply what he has learnt to the varied conditions which will confron him in war.

3. The objects in view in developing a soldierly spirit are to help the soldier to bear fatigue, privation and danger cheerfully; to give him confidence in his superiors and comrades; to increase his powers of initiative, of self-confidence and of self-restraint; to train him to obey orders, or to act in the absence of orders for the advantage of his regiment under all conditions; to produce such a high degree of courage and disregard of self, that he will use his weapons in the stress of battle coolly and to the best advantage; and finally to teach him how to act in combination with his comrades in order to attain the desired end. As soon as the recruit joins he should be brought under influences which will tend to produce and increase such a spirit, and it is the duty of all officers and non-commissioned officers to assist in the attainment of this object by their conversation and example.

The soldier should be instructed in the deeds which have made the British army and his regiment famous, and as his intelligence develops, this instruction should be extended to simple lessons, drawn from military history in general, illustrating how success depends on the above qualities.

The privileges which he inherits as a citizen of the great Empire should be explained to him, and he should be taught to appreciate the honour which is his, as a soldier, of serving his King and country.

4. Manly games are of value, especially if such games and competitions are so arranged that all, and not only selected teams, take their part. Games and competitions should be used to impress the value of combination as well as of individual prowess.

Drill in close order is also an important factor in producing discipline, cohesion and the habits of absolute and instant obedience to the orders of a superior.

5. The objects of the training of the body is to develop in the soldier a capacity for resisting fatique and privation.

The courses of physical training are laid down in the "Manual of Physical Training""; these courses ing which the soldier receives as a recruit and in the subsequent period of his training when he has become a trained soldier.

6. The musketry instruction of the soldier is laid down in "Musketry Regulations, Part I"; instruction in Bayonet Fighting is found in Appendix I of this manual. Instruction in the use of the spade, and in such elementary field engineering as the infantryman is required to know, is contained in the "Manual of Field Engineering."

7. The principles on which the training of the soldier is based are contained in the "Field Service Regulations, Part I." The instructions in Part IV of this manual are in amplification of those regulations.

8. The soldier should be made to understand at all periods of his training how the various parts of his course of instruction fit him for his duties in war, and, in particular, the close connection which should exist between musketry and manœuvre must be emphasized.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

One building permit in sixteen days is a record that has not been equalled in several years. It is evident that building operations will not be so brisk as in other years.

The Relief Committee.

The executive officers of the Relief Committee were working overtime this morning in an endeavour to stem the tide of applicants that poured in. Some were in the Council Chamber and others in the hallway adjacent to the office of those who have charge of the work.

The Board of Health.

It is altogether likely that the inaugural meeting of the Board of Health will be held some time next week. It should have been held last Tuesday, but the new members for the ensuing year were not appointed until the previous evening, so it was postponed. According to the Provincial Act it must be held before the first of February.

Public Utilities.

A meeting of the Public Utilities Commission will be held this evening at seven-thirty o'clock.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS.

The $200,000 voted by the Hamilton Board of Control for the new General Hospital is inadequate, and more money will have to be voted.

Will Use the Stone.

The Kingston Board of Works has asked Major Leonard to give it the walls of the old stone brewery recently purchased for the Queen's University Officers' Training Corps. The stone will be used in building a breakwater.

May Canvass City for Work.

Mayor Church of Toronto has suggested to the Board of Control that a canvass of the city should be made by the police to find out what relief employment could be given by the citizens. The controllers decided to get a report from the Chief of Police.

Cut in Salaries.

A report that Mayor Stevenson of London was going to advocate a reduction of 10 per cent. in the salaries of all municipal employees who were getting over $1,000 a year, caused quite a stir in the City Hall.

Nix on the Oratory.

Mayor Church of Toronto will advise the new members to talk little, but vote right. His watchword for 1915 is "Retrenchment and Economy."

Sues re. Slander Charge.

Messrs. Meredith & Meredith, of London, acting on behalf of H. J. Glaubitz, issued a writ for unstated damages for slander against Ald. J. A. Tancock of that city. The charge is based on the statements alleged to have been made by the alderman at a public meeting in East London during the recent municipal campaign that Mr. Glaubitz occupied the time of the employees of the hydro department in burnishing up his Prussian helmet and sword and a brass bed. It is said that when Mr. Glaubitz gets satisfaction he will go to New York to enter private practice as a consulting engineer.

Disastrous Fire In Sherbrooke

Wood Alcohol Exploded, Resulting in a Fire Which Did Damage of $300,000

SHERBROOKE, Que., Jan. 16.—The business section of Sherbrooke was yesterday afternoon visited by one of the most serious fires in the history of the city. About 4.30 an employe of Codere, Sons & Co., one of the largest wholesale hardware firms in the township, tipped over a bottle of wood alcohol on a gas stove, causing an explosion. In an instant the whole building was in flames.

Jos. Codere, managing director of the firm, was overcome by smoke while trying to throw the books into the fireproof safe. He was taken to the hospital, but is not seriously injured.

When the fire was at its height a tremendous explosion took place, which shook all the buildings in the vicinity. It was only with the greatest difficulty that the buildings owned by C[illegible] and L. A. Codere, as well [illegible]wards' Furniture Co. Ltd. TO-MORROW AT ALL SAINTS'

Dr. Griffith Thomas Will Occupy the Pulpit

The re-opening services of All Saints' Church will be continued on Sunday. The special preacher at both services will be the Rev. Dr. Griffith-Thomas of Wycliffe College, Toronto, formerly principal of Wycliffe Hall, Oxford. Dr. Thomas has an international reputation as a writer of religious books and also for his department in the "Sunday School Times". He is also a powerful preacher. His coming to Peterborough will be of interest to very many, and he will doubtless be heard to-morrow by large congregations.

Woman Soldier In Austrian Army.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—A young woman well-known in Vienna society has been discovered serving in the ranks of the Austrian army. For her remarkable bravery she was recommended for a commission. Fraulein Marie Weissman, the woman, obtained the documents of a young male friend, a one-year volunteer, who wished to get over the frontier. He gave her his sword and uniform. She fought with the Austrian army on the Russian frontier for two months, and her extraordinary zeal and uncommon bravery resulted in her being recommended for promotion to officer's rank. The slim young hero was sent to headquarters when the secret was discovered. Fraulein Weissman is now doing splendid work with the Red Cross.

GERMANY GUARANTEES INTEGRITY OF TURKEY IN CASE OF DEFEAT

PARIS, Jan. 13—A news despatch received her from Dedeagatch, Bulgaria, says there has been made public there a synopsis of a treaty recently concluded between Germany and Turkey.

The treaty provides that Germany shall furnish Turkey during the war with munitions, material and the money necessary for the Turkish army, and supply also a sufficient number of German officers and specialists to meet Turkey's requirements.

In case of victory Germany agrees to pay Turkey one-fifth of her war indemnity; in case of defeat Germany will introduce into the peace treaty a clause guaranteeing the integrity of Ottoman territory. Each country agrees not to conclude peace without the other.

Turkey, under the terms of this agreement, is bound to make war against Great Britain and Russia. France is not mentioned in the document.

The Elementary Graded Union of Sunday School Teachers Will Meet on Tuesday—Jan. 26th

The Elementary Graded Union of Sunay School Teachers of the city will meet the fourth Tuesday of this month in one of the classrooms of the George Street Methodist Church at 8 p.m. The executive is making special efforts to have a large attendance of the members, as matters of importance will be discussed.

The year 1915 being the jubilee year of the Ontario Sabbath School Association, the Union is aiming to bring the elementary grades of the city schools up as high a standard of excellence as possible.

Special Consideration.

The Cradle Roll Department will be the first to receive special consideration. The Provincial Superintendent of elementary grades has for the goal 3,000 cradle rolls for Ontario. There are now 1,264.

Our aim for the city is a well-equuipped cradle roll in each Sabbath School. Any school that has not organized that department is urged to send a representative to the meeting on Tuesday, 26th inst., as there will be a full explanation of th work, how to organize, &c. Samples of cards, certificates and cradles will be on exhibit.

There will be a paper on "Story-Telling," followed by discussion.

Rural Problems Discussed By Mr. F. E. Ellis At Ennismore

Farm Tenantry and High Land Values Evils Which Affect the Rural Life — Interesting Address by the Editor of Farm and Dairy

A thoughtful address on "Rural Problems of the Present Day" was delivered by F. E. Ellis, B.S.A., Editor of Farm and Dairy, in Ennismore, on Friday night. At the outset he indicated the farmers' lack of influence resulting from their disunion, their failure to organize for the purpose of cooperative action He dealt with the growing realization among farmers of the necessity to unite, and passed on to the evils of high land values and rural tenantry, rounding out a presentation of facts that struck home to his audience.

A few years ago a large deputation of farmers went to Ottawa and asked the legislation be introduced giving farmers a chance to cooperate. Manufacturers cooperative organizations are permitted to borrow money, but the farmers, with assured credit, are denied this privilege. The retail merchants followed the western deputation and presented strong objections to the desires of the farmers. As a result the legislation introduced by the late Mr. Monk is gathering dust in one of the Departments at Ottawa. The legislators felt that the merchants would stand to a man behind their petition, and that the farmers, more numerous though they were, would place a political or some other interest first.

The National Exhibition at Toronto had room for tepis for manufacturers, secret societies and others, but when the farmers of Ontario were asking for permission to erect a tent, where they could meet, they were informed there was not enough room.

Mr. Ellis gave a number of illustrations of this attitude, and mentioned the recently organized United Farmers of Ontario, which would embrace all individual rural organizations and would link up with the farmers of the other provinces in a national body bound together to see that the farmers' demands are secured.

Education Not a Panacea.

Scientific agriculture was once considered the cure-all of the rural problem. Better farming methods are greatly to be desired. They would make the farmer a better producing unit. Recent statistics show that the income of the average farmer in the United States, from both labour and investment, is only $660. In spite of all the propaganda work that is being carried on, the United States farmer receives little more for his labour than does the hired man; and the Canadian farmer is little better.

The belief that cooperation is another great asset to the farmer, was then dealt with by Mr. Ellis. Granting the desirability of cooperation, still in Denmark, where it had been promoted to such an extent that the Danish farmers had entirely eliminated the middleman, the peasant farmers, as a class, are nowhere able to live in anything approaching comfort and, in many cases, their life is one long period of semi-starvation.

High Land Values.

Agricultural education and cooperative enterprise failed to improve the condition of the Danish farmer because of the high price of land. Thin, sandy stretches that would be regarded of small value here, sells in that country at $200 an acre. Sixty per cent. of Denmark's farmers bought their lands with German money, and despite their splendid crop results and cooperation they are almost impoverished by the interest on their mortgages.

Conditions much similar to Denmark's were found, Mr. Ellis said, in British Columbia, the Niagara District, the corn States in the United States, and in other places. When the fruit growers of British Columbia secured a slight raise in tariff and began to make a little money another land boom followed, values increased, and the growers were soon reduced to the previous condition.

Many farmers are looking forward with hope to the increasing value of their land, but if they desire their sons to live around them the higher prices make land purchases prohibitive to him. Young men find they cannot buy farms with land values increasing. They have a choice of becoming tenant farmers or of working for someone else. Many prospective farmers fairly well supplied with money, find that the speculative value of land is such that they can get greater returns by putting all their capital in machinery and stock, and none in land. They, too, become tenants. In the United States the proportion of tenants is in direct ratio to the value of the land. In Maine, where land values are lowest, the proporton of tenants is only fourteen per cent. In the corn belts, highest valued land, over fifty per cent. of the farmers are tenants. Similar conditions exist in Ontario.

The Evils of Tenantry.

The tenant is not anchored in the community. Hence he has not deep interest in its welfare. Cooperative enterprise, the rural school, the rural Church and municipal improvements all languish where there is a large proportion of tenant farmers.

One of the remedies suggested is to clear up the vacant land and prepare it for use. Another is taxation on land values.

By placing all the taxes—municipal, provincial and federal—on unimproved land values, we make it impossible for the speculators to hold land out of use. This would throw more land on the market and young men could secure farms at a reasonable price. The benefits resulting from agriculture, by the taxation of land values, would be that the results of better farming and co-operative enterprise would not be capitalized in the land, but would result to the direct profit of the man who works the soil. This is the fundamental factor in the solution of the rural problem.

Reverting to the Danish farmers, Mr. Ellis stated that they were aware of the shortcomings of their educational and cooperative advancement as a means of providing for the entire welfare of the rural population. They have again and again passed resolutions calling for the abolition of all duties and taxes levied upon articles of consumption, or assessed in proportion of income of labour and that these be substituted by a tax imposed on the value of land.

PRUSSIAN JUSTICE

Town of Courtral Fined After Obeying Orders of Officers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Belgian Legation here issued the following statement last night:

"According to a cable received by the Belgian Legation yesterday, the City of Courtral, Belgium, has been fined 10,000,000 marks (about $2,500,000) by Germany, not for disobedience; but for obeying the orders of German commanders.

"The circumstances are as follows:

"Two German officers, Commander Maxeman and Commander Fechben, arrived at Courtral and ordered the municipal authorities to have all arms deposited in the tower of Broel, under threat of a heavy penalty. In compliance with these instructions all arms were deposited in the place named. Then there arrives a new German commander, Commandant von Kleeckbeuff, who goes to the tower of Broel, sees the arms in the place where the other German commanders had ordered them put, and fines the city of Courtral 10,000,000 marks, under pretext that it is a clandestine deposit of arms, in spite of the fact that the orders of his predecessors to place the arms in the tower of Broel was well known to everybody and were even placarded on the walls of Courtral."

LIEUT. SHARP RETURNS

Flew Over German Trenches Accompanied by French Aviator.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 16.—Lieut. William Sharp, of Ottawa, returned to Salisbury camp last night after scoring several successes in aeroplane flights over the enemies' lines, which extended over eight days. He was accompanied by Poulet, the famous French aviator, and their trip was one of thrills, hairbreadth escapes and other startling experiences. Sharpe and Poulet flew over the German trenches in the eastern theatre of war and aerial operations there. That they returned safely was due chiefly to their skill in manipulating their machine. Many times they were attacked by batteries, and one time two German Taubes forced them to descend to earth with holes in their wings. It was found that eight bullets had pierced them. They dropped bombs and arrows into the trenches with good results and it is believed that considerable damage was done. On several occasions they were forced to loop the loop and do other fancy flying stunts to evade the fire of the enemy. The trips were made daily, returning to the French lines at nightfall, and their eight-day trip is one of the most successful that has been attempted so far. Sharpe has been made senior Canadian aviator, and he has the special distinction of being the first Canadian airman to enter into action in the present war.

I was once sitting on the verandah of a hotel at Soppard on the Rhine when the commanding officer of the garrison of Ehrgebreitstein drove up in his motorcar. He pointed to a sign bearing the word "Garage" and said that if ideas were not changed he would place that hotel out of bounds for all his officers and for all the men of his garrison. Next day there appeared on the sign the word "Kraftwagenunterstellraum" (power waggon standing room).—Ford Madox Hueffer in London Outlook.

Thumb Rings.

Thumb rings are very common in China. They are often made of valuable metal, ivory, jet and precious stones, but generally they are of fine jade. The cavity is not cylindrical, but swells out at the base and middle. This also prevents it slipping. The jade is usually polished, but may be engraved or carved in intaglio or in relief. The refined classes use jade exclusively—as pretty a variety as their purse will admit—but some of the lower classes wear imitations made of colored glass or porcelain.

HANDS OFF, SAYS BRYAN

Town Refused Foreign Owned Oil Wells.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — The United States Government has sent a warning to Gen. Venustiano Carranza, pointing out that "serious consequences may follow" his threatened confiscation of foreign-owned oil plants in Tampico. This announcement was made by Secretary Bryan after the latter had conferred with Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, and representative of American oil concerns. Already the Carranza officials have practically enforced an embargo on the exportation of oil by a big English company. The British ambassador, at the suggestion of Mr. Bryan, sent an urgent telegram to the British consul at Vera Cruz, which he was instructed to show to Gen. Carranza. As the British fleet obtains much of its fuel from the Tampico oil fields, the possibility of serious complications over the Carranza Government's attitude is fully realized by the American Government.

Gas mains of the usual type in Honolulu have to be renewed frequently because of the salt in the soil, which rapidly corrodes them.

Automobile wheels have been invented that are covered with celluloid disks to make their cleaning easy and add to their appearance.

THE PETES STOP WINNING STREAK OF THE PICTON SEVEN AFTER HARD FIGHT

Enormous Crowd Sees the Canners Canned by 5 to 2—Homesters Were Never Behind and Game Was Fast in Spite of the Soft Ice

A GRAND BATTLE

The stock of the Peterborough Intermediates went up last night when they handed the Walter Knox's Picton representatives their first trouncing of the season, the final score being 6 to 2, with the Petes on the long end, thus putting the two teams on an even footing in the group race, with one loss each. The locals were ahead at the end of the first period 2 to 0, and 4 to 2 at the end of the second. They went at it hammer and tongs from the start, but the heavy ice, which was a mass of slush before they were going long was hard for the players to get used to. The Petes started the scoring and there was only once that the visitors evened up. They did not keep the score that way very long, however, anad from then on Captain Hunter's septette increased their lead.

About 1,700 fans turned out to see the game and went away satisfied with the exhibition which they witnessed. The local followers were augmented by about 200 rooters from Picton, who arrived by special train at 6 p.m. Several Belleville and Trenton people took advantage of the excursion and were among the visitors.

It was a good exhibition of hockey and both teams demonstrated that they were in conditon by keeping up the pace throughout.

The best of harmony prevailed, and the game was practically free from roughness. Only one Picton man drew a penalty, and that in the last few minutes of play, when he mixed a little with Park. While the Petes were not all able to remain on the ice, all penalties were for minor offences.

The Petes had their line-up changed quite a lot to that with which they opened the season, and were working fine. Captain "Ack" Hunter moved up to the right wing position and worked into the forward line very smoothly. He had the better of the argument over his check at most stages. Kelly and Halpin about divided the honours among the forwards. They were there in almost every play, and checked back like fiends. Park at centre worked hard, but the sticky ice impeded his shooting and the visitors watched him very closely, probably havin, heard of his recent performance against Belleville. He was never allowed much chance to break away.

On the defence Peter Spratt and Pethick relieved nicely with timely rushes. Spratt brought the crowd up with some of his spectacular stick-handling, and the goal he annexed was one of the niftiest plays of the evening. He has not overcome his habit of holding the puck too long when he has help in the vicinity of the enemy's citadel, but was a tower of strength to the team.

"Skid" Janes in goal, also gave a good account of himself. A lot of the Picton shots were from outside the defence, and he picked them off nicely, and was also right on the job with anything from closer in.

For the visitors the defence was probably the strongest feature. Scott in goal is not as good a man as Janes, but had a very busy night and made some good stops. His weakness was long shots, and Kelly fattened his average with four from the wing. Hubbs starred at night defence, scoring the only two goals for his team. Hudgin on right wing was about the pick of the forwards.

Lou Marsh handled the game in fine style.

The line-up:

Picton.		Peterborough
	Goal
Scott		Janes
	Right defence
Hubbs		Pethick
	Left defence
Heffernan		Spratt
	Rover
R. Burns		Halpin
	Centre
Taft		Park
	Right wing
Hudgin		Hunter
	Left wing
B. Burns		Kelly

Referee—Lou E. Marsh.

Everybody checked close at the start, and very little of the play was located around either goal. Both teams went hard but there did not seem to be any openings. When the play was drawing near the Picton citadel, Halpin was benched for two minutes for crosschecking. Up to this time Spratt had not had much hand in the game, and he now relieved the forwards by a neat rush. Park landed a shot somewhat close in around the nets and goal-empire Hurtubise raised his hand, but Mr. Marsh would not allow it. Hudgin broke away but shot before getting inside the defence, and Janes had no trouble in clearing. Spratt got away again but could not score. Kelly sent a neat, long, low shot from the wing, into the net behind Scott for the first counter. It took 18 minutes of play to do the trick. In one minute more he tried again, and the diminutive Halpin slammed the rubber past Scott for the second counter, on the rebound befort the visitors' net guardian could clear. Kelly and R. Burns had a head-on collision in front of the penalty box, and the latter was slightly stunned, but after repairs continued. Spratt drew two minutes for bodying Hudgin into the boards, and when he got back Hunter took a rest for being too aggressive with Hubbs. There was no further scoring in the period.

The second period started with Hunter serving in the penalty box. Pethick broke his skate and Taft went off to even up. This made the play a little more open and for a while the visitors had a shade the better of the argument. It took Hubbs 6 minutes to score. He came up on a rush and beat Janes from quite a piece out. In 2 minutes more he tied the score on a shot from near centre ice. He collided with Hunter a short time after and sustained a nasty gash on his cheek. Halpin was dropped with him and the teams continued five men to a side. Hunter was off 1 minute for tripping, and when he came back Spratt again rushed, fooling the defence in a neat style and put his team one goal to the good. Hubbs came back without Halpin and Secretary Morgan, who replaced Gene Hurtubise as goal-empire, ran down the centre of the ice to have the referee stop the play. Halpin made a pass to Kelly out of a scrimmage in the corner and Fred put his team two goals to the good once more.

Both teams came back strong for the third period with everybody on again. They held the pace to the final gong in spite of the condition of the ice. Pethick was handicapped with a pair of skates to which he was not accustomed, but got going after a spill or two. After 7 minutes' play Kelly lifted a hard one from up the boards and beat Scott for the fifth counter.

When Spratt was trying to break away from behind the nets, Hunter was banished for holding an opponent. The visitors tried hard to catch up in Hunter's absence, and Hubbs got clean through the defence, only to be cleverly blocked by Janes, who came out to meet him. At this stage Hunter came back, but it was found that he had not served the necessary time. With 9 minutes to play Scott was hurt in the face by one of his team-mates' sticks. In two minutes Kelly notched the sixth and last Peterborough goal, again on a long shot from the wing. Park and R. Burns were chased together for a little trouble in the corner. This was the only time during the evening a Picton man drew a penalty. The game finished with Park and Burns serving in the penalty box.

The summary:

First Period.

1—Peterborough, Kelly, 18 min.
2—Peterborough, Halpin, 1 min.

Second Period.

3—Picton, Hubbs, 6 mins.
4—Picton, Hubbs, 2 min.
5—Peterborough, Spratt, 4 min.
6—Peterborough, Kelly, 3 min.

Third Period.

7—Peterborough, Kelly, 7 min.
8—Peterborough, Kelly, 2 min.

OSHAWA BEAT WHITBY

OSHAWA 4, WHITBY 3.

OSHAWA, Ont., Jan. 15—Whitby went down to defeat in the Intermediate O. H. A. before Oshawa here to-night, by the score of 4-3. Whitby made the first score, Oshawa followed a minute later with a tie score, then the game settled down to a steady grind, the period ending 1—1.

The second ended two all, Jacobi kicking one in for Whitby. It was no close considerable money changed hands at even wagers. Whitby made the first score in the third and Oshawa came back at once and tied the score again. A minute or two later they bulged the nets again; though both teams fought fiercely to score again, the bell found the score still 4-3 in favour of Oshawa. Though the ice was very soft, the game was fast, every man on both teams seeming to play to their limit. Smith in goal for Oshawa stopped many dangerous looking shots.

The line-up was as follows:

Whitby—Brown, goal; Smith, defence; McIntyre, cover point; Lavery rover; Blanchard centre; Blanchard, right wing; Watson, left wing.

Referee—Gorrie, of Toronto.

Junior Church League

Last night, after the O.H.A. game, Knox won from Mark St. in the Junior Church League—4 to 0. The score at half-time was 2 to 0.

The condition of the ice rendered team play impossible. For Mark St. Nellist, the goalkeeper, McIntyre, and A. Lipsett were the best, while the stars for Knox were Wright, Bartley, and Doughty.

H. Austin refereed the game. The line-up.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

Peterborough's win over Picton last night and Whitby's loss at the hands of Oshawa, practically assures a tie at the end of the group race, unless one of the Lakeshore teams spills the beans.

In the junior group the situation is still most interesting. The local's defeat at Lindsay does not put them out of the running, but to stay in they must beat Port Hope in Port Hope on Tuesday night. Up in Lindsay they are counting on a three-cornered tie between Lindsay, Port Hope and Peterborough. The group standing is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	To Play.
Port Hope	3	1	2
Lindsay	2	1	3
Peterborough	2	2	2
Cobourg	0	3	3

SPEEDY ICE BOATS ON CHEMONG LAKE

BRIDGENORTH, Jan. 15 — Ice-boating is a popular winter pastime for two of the Village young men—Samuel Bell and Wallace Nicholls. They have built medium-sized boats with a fair spread of sail and, with practically no snow on Chemong Lake, they are enjoying this winter pastime immensely. The lake affords a fast sweep of the wind and on a breezy day the boats attain great speed. The skating is good but it is a slow sport compared with ice-boating.

CURLING

The ice was soft at the Curling Rink last night, and the only two games played produced little real curling. The results were as follows:

C. S. Brown	E. P. Murphy
H. R. Martin	C. J. Seymour
A. Archibald	A. C. Kay
H. F. Foote, skips	W. M. Laing, 13
A. Laing	W. Fitzgerald

JUNIORS DROP HARD GAME AT LINDSAY

Tied Up Score After a Long Battle and Were Beaten Out in the Last Ten Minutes—Was Anybody's Game Until the Middle of the Second Period

While the Peterborough Intermediates were beating Picton at the Brock street rink last night, their junior club mates were making a game but vain effort to hand the husky Lindsay Juniors a lacing at Lindsay. The Young Petes were beaten 8 to 4 in a game that was anybody's until the last ten minutes—a ding dong, hammer and tongs battle on soft rough ice, with holes clear through to the boards. There was no 8-4 margin between the capabilities of the two teams—in fact in the middle of the third period, there wasn't a man in the rink who would have risked a dime on the result.

Lindsay outplayed the Petes in the first period. The visitors were at sea on the small rink and at the end of the period the Carew-Flavelle combination were in front 3 to 1. Exactly seven seconds after play was resumed in the second stage, "Chuck" Carew scored goal No. 4 for the Lindsay team, and with the figures 4 to 1 the Scugog gang figured to win all over. Right there they made their mistake. The Young Petes stuck to their knitting and cut loose at a pace that had Lindsay stopped for the rest of the twenty minutes. Two goals by Knapman left the record 4 to 3 at the end of the second, and the Petes went into the last twenty minutes session at top speed, battling to tie up the score. Six minutes after the period opened, Richardson evened up the count. With fourteen minutes to go, and both teams out to the limit, it was just a question as to who should get the break, and get the next goal. For five minutes neither team could find the nets, then a long shot from the side by Art Carew broke the tie. Morrow was benched a moment later for a body check, and it was good-night for the Petes. To find themselves behind again after a twenty-five minute battle, to pull down a three-goal lead, and with a man shy at a critical moment, took all the ginger out of them, and the tussle was over. Lindsay ready to quit a moment before, came to life as the Petes faded, and scored three more before the final bell.

The ice conditions were terrible, and the light nearly as bad. Combination was out of the question, and individual efforts were hampered by the bad going, the players repeatedly over-skating the puck. It was a case of bat the rubber and chase it, and shoot when you get a chance, and under the circumstances it was hard to compare the teams. Lindsay looks like a much better team than Port Hope. They have the speed and shooting ability and the weight to carry them through. They have the weight better distributed than the Petes, whose chief bulk is on the defence. On the forward line Lindsay had all the advantage in weight and the Petes' forwards were bumped around in great style. The Lindsay checking in the first period was strenuous to say the least, and Referee W. A. McCord was apparently blind to it all. Manager Cap. Simpson of the Lindsay team, however, read the riot act to his players at the end of the first period, and they played clean hockey in the last two sessions.

For Lindsay, the Carew brothers were easily the pick. Charles at rover, usually the star, had to yield the palm to his brother Art last night. The left wing player was always in the lime-light and his dashes up the side were a continuous source of danger. Both boys have fine speed and stick-handling ability. O'Loughlin is a fine goal keeper, and Flavelle a promising defence player. Sandercock, while he checked well, marred his playing by his tactics, and although he had three trips to the penalty bench he easily earned double that number. He has a wide repertoire of tricks, including an artistic jab with the butt end of his stick. Referees would do well to look this boy over. He has been getting away with it for several years, and a report to the O.H.A. from a referee might not do any harm.

Legros played a grand game in the nets for the Petes. The Lindsay crowd shot from all angles and in the uncertain light it was a tough job but the youngster performed superbly, blocking a host of shots. Morrows and Long checked well on the defence and all the forwards worked hard, with no particular star.

The Petes scored first, Rose doing the trick on a pass from the corner by Knapman. McElroy scored twice for Lindsay from scrimmages and two seconds before the end of the period Griffis caught the nets with a side shot.

From the face-off in the second period, C. Carew rushed and beat Legros with a bounding shot. Then the Petes rallied and Knapman scored twice in succession from scrimmages. The figures remained at 4-3 until the end of the period.

In the third the Petes forced from the start. They rushed scores twice when inside, O'Laughlin making several grand stops. Then Richardson and Jackson combined for the tying goal. A. Carew put Lindsay ahead five minutes after and before the game ended Legros bagged three more, two on long shots.

Following were the line-up and summary:

Peterborough		Lindsay
Legros	Goal	O'Laughlin

LONG STRETCH OF CHEMONG ROAD WILL GET BROKEN STONE

The farmers in the vicinity of the intersection of the Chemong Road and about the fifth line of Smith are gathering two big piles of stones for road metal. The Township crusher is going hungry for food and the Smith people are preparing a gorge for it. The broken stone will be spread in the Spring along the Chemong road, and it is hoped the City automobiles will take the place of a roller and work the loose stones into compact shape.

Of French invention is a hammock that can be converted into a comfortable seat that holds a person erect.

Strengthening the Sound Waves

AFTER travelling a certain distance the electric wave which carries the human voice along the telephone wire becomes attenuated and speech becomes too faint to be heard.

Just as in the old stage-coach days fresh relays of horses at regular intervals along the way, enabled the traveller to continue his journey with undiminished speed, so by means of the newly invented "loading coils" inserted at proper intervals, the electric waves are strengthened and long distance telephoning is made easy.

We have lately finished the "loading" of our long distance lines and speech transmission has been very greatly improved. This is especially noticeable on extra long talks. Our "long-haul" transmission is better than ever.

Begin the New Year by making systematic use of the Long Distance Telephone in your business. It will save you time and labor, as well as much money in the shape of travelling expense.

Every Bell Telephone is a Long Distance Station.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Florence Hunter has been the guest of friends in Toronto for the past two weeks.

Mr. Tommy Moffatt was here from Marmora to see the Intermediate game last night.

Miss Mabel Taylor has returned to her home in Warsaw after a pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Payne, Smith.

Mr. George Jones, of Eldorado, and son, Donald, are the guests of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Jas. McGhee, 308 Sherbrooke street.

Miss Irene Dregman, niece of Mr. and Mrs. Angus MacPherson, Patterson street, commenced duties to-day as nurse-in-training at the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston.

Mrs. J. Donald Shook, formerly Miss Jean Brethour, Regina, will receive for the first time since coming to Peterborough, on Tuesday, January nineteenth, from three-thirty to six o'clock, at 176 McDonnel Street. Mrs. J. C. Shook will receive with her. 2d

The many friends of Mr. W. H. Lytle, 464 Gilmour street, will be glad to know that he is satisfactorily convalescing from a serious illness, that has confined him to his house and the hospital for the past fortnight.

Assistant Superintendent W. B. Kelly, of the C.N.R., better known as "Bert," and an old Peterborough boy, was with the Picton hockey excursionists last night. He saw to it that the Easterners had a fine train and every accommodation.

FIVE-CENT LOAF ISSUE TO VANISH

Pleasing Prospect for Housewives Held Out by One U.S. Authority—Prospects in Peterborough

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.— A 30-cent advance in the price of a bag of flour for which housewives now pay 70 cents, and disappearance of the 5-cent loaf of bread, was the prophecy made today following the record top price of 1.62 3-8 per bushels for wheat in the local pit yesterday. The jump of flour to $7.20 per barrel also will be a factor in advancing bread prices, according to Chicago bakers.

As a result of this latest jump in wheat United States District Attorney Cline will "invite" members of Chicago's Board of Trade to go to his office to give their opinions as to the cause of the rise. It is estimated that in the past six months 325,000 bushels of wheat have been sold to foreign countries. This leaves 20,000,000 bushels of America's reserve stock.

Many Board of Trade members today declared the farmers are chiefly responsible for the present situation. The farmers are said to be holding their wheat for the possible advance to $2 per bushel.

So far as Peterborough is concerned those in little prospect of an immediate rise in the price of bread. At present it is worth twelve cents for a three pound loaf, commonly known as a double load.

Officers And Teachers Want New Building

For the George Street Methodist Sunday School—Annual Meeting Last Night—Business Was Followed by Social Time

At the annual meeting of the Board of Management of the George Street and Grace Church Sunday schools, (which includes the teachers, and officers of the Sunday School, and representatives of the Trustee Board), held in the George Street Church last night, a resolution was passed recommending to the serious consideration of the Trustee Board the erection of a new Sunday School building. This action was taken as a result of a growing feeling that the present cramped accomodation hampers the work of the Sunday School.

The secretary's report showed that there was an enrolment of over 1,000 members of the Sunday School, and the average attendance for the past year exceeded by 63 that of the previous twelve months. The treasurer's report was also encouraging, showing a balance in the treasury.

The following officers of the two Sunday Schools were elected:

George Street.

Superintendent—S. R. Armstrong.
Associate Superintendents — Geo. Robertson, Dr. J. E. Middleton and T. E. Pratt.
Superintendent Home Department—T. W. Robinson.

Pianist—Miss P. McKee.
Lantern Operator—Palmer Wiley.
Superintendent Primary Department—Mrs. E. D. Lewis.
Assistant Superintendent — Mrs. Meserve.
Superintendent Beginners—Mr. J. E. Middleton.
Assistants—Mrs. G. E. Stewart and Miss H. Dobbin.
Superintendent Cradle Roll—Mrs. B. Shortly.

Grace Sunday School.

Superintendent—Mr. Hagerman.
Secretary - Treasurer — William Hartley.
Librarians—Wallace Simpson and Fred Brown.
Pianist—Miss Grace McClennan.
Primary Department—Miss Bennet and Miss Hartley.

After the business had been finished the fifty teachers and officers present were enjoyably entertained in contests, etc., by Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Armstrong. Dainty refreshments were served.

FIRED ON CONSULATE

Particulars of the International Incident at Hodeia

ROME, Jan. 16.—The Idea Nazionale, published a despatch from Alexandria giving particulars of the international incident at Hodeia.

It says the Turkish gendarmes attacked the British consulate at midnight on December 11. The British vice-consul, C. A. Richardson, escaped to the Italian consulate. The commander of the gendarmes followed him and called upon Signor Cecchi, the Italian consul to surrender Mr. Richardson, making the demand in the name of the Governor.

When the demand was refused by Consul Cecchi the Governor sent 400 soldiers with cannon. The soldiers surrounded the Italian consulate and the doors were broken down with axes. The soldiers fired on the consulate, wounding a servant.

The Idea Nazionale says that when Gendarmes finally entered the consulate they fired at Consul Cecchi, but did not wound him. Consul Richardson was then surrendered to the soldiers.

The Governor notified the Italian Consul that he would be no longer recognized as the representative of the Italian Government and would be treated as a prisoner on account of having housed the British Vice-Consul and firing on Turkish soldiers. The latter charge is characterized by the Idea Nazionale as false.

Signor Cecchi was not permitted to leave the consulate for several days, according to the version of the incident, and on the day that he was to have been placed on trial he was rescued by the arrival of the Italian coast guard ship Giuliana.

DISFIGURING RASH SPREAD OVER CHILD

Itching and Burning. Restless and Fretful at Night. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Two Months No Trace of Trouble.

Kingarden, Ont.—"My child's trouble began with a rash around the ears. This spread over the surface of the body turning to small sores which were itching and burning. The rash also appeared on my child's face and for the time disfigured him. The itching was so intense that it constantly keeped him to irritate the eruption by continually scratching. He was restless and fretful at night.

"Without success I tried remedies. The first two applications of Cuticura Soap and Ointment stopped the burning and eased the itching. We first bathed him using the Soap and then applied the Ointment. In two months' time no trace of the trouble was seen." (Signed) G. Campbell, May 22, 1914.

"Why should I use Cuticura Soap? There is nothing the matter with my skin and I thought Cuticura Soap was only for skin troubles." True, it is for skin troubles, but its great mission is to prevent skin troubles. For more than a generation its delicate, emollient and prophylactic properties have rendered it the standard for this purpose, while its extreme purity and refreshing fragrance give to it all the advantages of the best of toilet soaps. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. D, Boston, U. The Erin To Help The Brave Serbs

Has Been Turned Over to Servian Red Cross Society

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Sir Thomas Lipton's steam yacht Erin, tender for all of his Shamrocks in the American Cup races, sailed from Southampton to-day to become a tender in the war. Her destination is Salonika. She has been turned over by her millionaire owner for use by the Servian Red Cross Society. She carried an enormous quantity of needed medical supplies and an entire Red Cross unit. Sir Thomas Lipton will be picked up by the Erin at Marseilles, and he will accompany his vessel on her errand of mercy.

ANOTHER TURKISH DEFEAT

Reserve Corps of 30,000 Men Also Routed

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 17—Another sweeping victory over the Turks in the Caucasus is recorded in official advices to-night from Petrograd. Russian general headquarters have received a message from Tiflis, which says:

"The army of the Caucasus has covered its flags with glory by a fresh heroic exploit, having exterminated the 11th Turkish corps, with the exception of several insignificant elements, which are fleeing in disorder. We have captured all the artillery of this corps.

"The battle of Kara Urgan, which was fought during the last three days in the ceaseless snowstorm, has ended in a complete victory for us, thanks to the efforts of our valiant regiments of the Caucasian, Turkestan and the Siberian Cossacks. The resistance of the enemy is shattered, and his rearguard in covering the retreat of the annihilated army, which is harried on the flanks and rear by our troops. The front of the Turkish force is fleeing towards Erzerum.

"Our troops, which are pursuing the enemy, are finding buried in the snow-covered ravines Turkish guns which the enemy, unable to take with him, had thrown from the heights above. The pursuit is being pressed. More than a thousand prisoners and a large quantity of arms were captured on Jan. 15."

Turks in Serious Plight.

This new disaster makes the Turkish position on Russian soil extremely serious, since four of their effective corps now have been severely defeated while Russian naval operation in the Black Sea have frustrated an effort to send reinforcements by water from Armenia.

The destruction of the eleventh corps concludes a conflict which has been in progress for several days in the region of Kara Urgan. Some ten days ago the Russians successively defeated the first Turkish corps at Ardahan, and the ninth and tenth corps at Seri Kamyah. The ninth corps was captured almost in a body, but the remnants of the tenth made a desperate stand against the Russians, while the eleventh corps, previously held in reserve over the border in Turkish Armenia, was rushed north from its base at Erzerum to assist in the defence.

It is this eleventh corps, a force of probably 30,000 fresh troops, whose rout is announced from Petrograd to-night. Its defeat follows up the annihilation on previous days of the various detachments of the tenth corps that had redermed at Kara Urgan, an official statement on Saturday having announced the capture of survivors of the 32nd Turkish regiment, in addition to 5,000 prisoners in other parts of the front, with fourteen cannon and enormous supplies, including ten thousand head of cattle.

GERMANS ARE MAKING NO PROGRESS IN THE NEIGHBOURHOOD OF SOISSONS

Continue to Shell the French Positions But Are Unable to Advance--Fierce Fighting at Blangy While Foundry Has Changed Hands Several Times.

ARTILLERY DUELS HEAVY IN THE NORTH

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 18.—From the Argonne to Upper Alsace the combatants in the great war to-day are floundering through enormous wastes of snow. Military operations are checked but not ended. Both sides are trying to benfit by the changed weather conditions and are endeavouring to force the artillery, with infantry supports through the blocked forests and mountains, but, according to the best advice reaching here, with small success.

To the north of Flanders the Germans continue to reform their lines. So far, threatened assaults in force have been withheld. Instead, the artillery continues its monotonous exchanges, levelling once prosperous hamlets and farm houses to powder. This is e specially so in the region of Nieuport, Labassee, Ypres and Arras, where each side has vainly attempted a forward movement, only to have it checked by the most deadly artillery fire. Rain has fallen almost without interruption along the valley of the Aisne and north into Flanders since Saturday morning. The Germans continue to shell Soissons and the French positions in the valley of the Aisne, but it is officially declared that they are making no progress here.

Fighting for trenches and foundry buildings in the vicinity of Blangy, east of Arras, continues with varying result. The Germans first took the foundry, lost it to a general assault, in turn recaptured it and were for a second time dislodged. There have been heavy losses at this point.

Only 83 of The Pats Out of 200 Returned From Their Charge

LONDON, Jan. 17.—I am informed from a private source that about two hundred of the Princess Patricias were in the heroic charge described in Friday's despatches, and that the enemy made a violent onslaught upon them, with the result that only 83 returned from the charge, while Major Hamilton Gault had a very narrow escape.

NAMES OF SOME OF THE WOUNDED

SALISBURY, Jan. 17—Definite information has reached here that the casualties of the Princess Patricias in the action of last week were very heavy.

Corporal Fry, of Toronto, was shot through the stomach while bravely attempting to bring rations to the men in the trenches under a heavy fire. Other Canadian casualties include Private Gray, a reservist in the Royal Scots, of Smith's Falls, Ont., a wounded hand, and H. J. Cosh, of Beverley Street, Toronto, a hydro-electric employee, mild fever. All these are in the hospital at Boulogne.

Private Walker, of the Princess Patricias, has been returned to England, in a hospital ship. He got rheumatism in the trenches.

Harold J. Cosh, aged 24, electrician with the Hydro-Electric, of 46 Beverley Street, single, people living at 29 Cosnick Street, Rotherhithe, London, S. E., served years with the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry.

Corporal Henry J. Fry, 18 Tomlin Avenue, a native of Wiltshire, England, served in the South African war in the 1st Battalion Gloucester Regiment, under the late Col. E. P. Wilford, who was shot in the war. Corporal Fry's wife and two children live in Bristol, Eng.

Charles Walter, aged 32, 14 Salisbury Avenue, Toronto, formerly Manchester, Eng., served in the King's Royal Rifles in the South African war for two years and 34 days, and saw four years' service in India. His mother lives in England and his wife in Toronto. He was employed as a floor finisher with the International Floor Company here.

WILL SOON BE SENT TO THE FRONT

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Earl Grey, the former Governor-General of Canada, in reviewing a brigade of the Canadian contingent to-day, told them they would soon be sent to the front.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person is troubled with catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh indicates a weakened condition of the body; that the secretion of the mucous membranes are quickly affected, and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from harmful drugs or opiates. Try it.

Excuses That Men Make For Impiety

MEN IN BUSINESS

On Sunday evening the Rev. Dr. Griffith Thomas of Toronto, conducted the first of a series of three special services to be held in All Saints' church, in observance of the re-opening of the edifice and the dedication of the new chancel. The well known divine took for the basis of his remarks, the words which are found in St. Luke, 9:61, "And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house."

The speaker enumerated a number of the most common excuses for ignoring the Divine injunction, "Follow me" that are given expression to. These two words imply trust and obedience upon which personal salvation is dependent. Everyone is asked to follow the Master. Many say they are willing but they cannot understand the Bible. That is very true, Revelation means drawing back the veil of mystery. If the Bible was understood it could be dispensed with. A man may refuse to eat until he knows the chemical properties of the food that is placed before him, and for similar reasons may refuse to wear an overcoat when he is cold. That is no reason why men should take leave of their common sense in respect to religion. In every walk of life there is an alphabet that must be grasped before progress can be made. Jesus Christ is first our Saviour, then our teacher. He asks us to follow Him. He does not supply us with a chart of our voyage through life, but expects us first to obey, then learn.

The Hypocrite Blamed.

There are other men who decline to follow Christ because there are hypocrites in the church. There have been hypocrites in the church since the time of Judas Iscariot. That is no reason why a man should hesitate to follow Jesus Christ. For every hypocrite in the church there are fifty outside. One hundred church-goers professing to be Christians will compare favourably with one hundred people professing Christianity who never go to church. We are not called upon to follow men or believe in men. Thank the Lord there are no hypocrites in heaven. When you see a man imitating a Christian you can depend that there is a good Christian in the near vicinity.

Some men will hesitate to follow Christ because they claim to be unfit. That is one reason why they should follow Him. Another will say "I would follow Him but I wouldn't be able to hold on." In reply to that "I would say that is perfectly true. You and I may not be able to hold on, but Jesus Christ will," said Rev. Dr. Thomas.

The Pleasure of Sin.

Go to another man and he will say, "Yes, I would be quite willing to follow Christ, but I would have to give up my pleasures." There is only one kind of pleasure that would have to be sacrificed and that is the pleasure of sin. Another man will say, "My business prevents it. I have a high regard for religion, but have to do certain things in my business that would be incompatible with true Christianity." Said the speaker, "I have the greatest sympathy for the men who are in business. This war is proving a real test to them. The words of the Lord are as true to-night as ever they were. "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" I don't think that we should make any excuse or adduce anything that would hinder our determination to follow Christ. We ought to be straight with ourselves. Five cents earned earnestly is better than five thousand dollars earned dishonestly.

A Mathematical Problem.

A most frequent excuse for ignoring the injunction of the Master is lack of time. Some people will divide the sacred and the secular, but there is no distinction. Jesus Christ came down upon earth to show how religion will fit into every part of life as the atmosphere. Even if the man who professes to be too busy would take one half hour each Sunday it would be sufficient. One day in seven set aside for religious purposes means one week in seven. This worked out in years means that a boy of seven will have devoted one year to the consideration of things spiritual; a boy of fourteen two years, and a young man of twenty-one, three years, and so on until the end of life, so that a man who lives out the allotted span of life will have consecrated ten years to things spiritual. Will any man say that he has not time to prepare? These are not reasons for hesitating to follow Christ; they are excuses. There is a world of difference between an excuse and a reason. To-night I ask you to turn from the path of sin and tread the path of obedience and trust.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time "Pape's Diapepsin" In five Minutes all Stomach Misery is Gone.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvellous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who cannot get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

Lost Income Of Estate

Court Action to Recover Securities — Allege Misrepresentation

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—Pleading that he was induced to sign an alleged agreement by misrepresentation, J. D. Hamilton, a beneficiary under the will of James Hamilton, Belleville, sued Edw. Gallow for the return of securities involved in the agreement. In the statement of claim, plaintiff avers that following the alleged agreement, defendant wrongfully notified the Northern Life Assurance Company of Canada, the New York Life Assurance Company, and others, that he was the assignee of the rights of plaintiff in the estate, which temporarily embarrassed plaintiff and deprived him of a share of his income.

The income of the estate, which is mainly composed of Bell Telephone and Mackay shares, amounts to between $1,500 and $1,700 a year.

Mr. Justice McClute of Toronto, is hearing the evidence.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

"THE BATTLE CRY"

He stepped over to the table and, with a swift and passionate gesture, caught up two books. "These are my best friends," he said, and she read on the covers, "Plutarch's Lives," and "Tragedies of William Shakespeare." The girl looked up with amazement in her eyes, but she met in his own pupils a fire and eagerness which silenced her. She could not tell whether she was being wrought upon by the strange fire that dwelt in his eyes or the colourfulness of his voice, or the influence of something beyond himself, as though the ripe old portrait were talking. But as she listened and looked at the magnificent physique of his wedge-like torso, tapering from broad shoulders to slender waist, she was conscious only of the compelling masculine that seemed to vibrate about him.

Here was a man with all the primal vigour of manhood. Were he living in days when women sought strong mates, Anse Havey would have had his choice of wives. She thought of the gentleman whom she had almost married and who lacked all this. Anse Havey was an outlaw and at home would seem a crude barbarian, but he was the sort of barbarian whose brain and body could lay a spell on those about him. A wild thrill of admiration tingled through her being, not such as any other man had ever caused, but such as she had felt when she watched the elemental play of lightning and thunder and wind along the mountain tops.

CHAPTER XIX.

"It's only lonesome people," Anse Havey went on, "that knows how to love an' dream. I've stood up there on the ridge with Julius Caesar and Alexander the Great, an' it seemed to me like I could see 'em as plain as I see you now. I could see the sun shinin' on the eagles of the legions an' the solid shields of the phalanx. I'm rich enough, I reckon, to live amongst other men that read books, too, but a dream keeps me spendin' my days here. The dream is that some day these here mountains shall come into their own. These people have got it in 'em ter be a great people, an' I've stayed on here because I aimed to try an' help 'em."

"But," she faintly expostulated, "you seem to stand for the very things that hold them back. You speak almost reverently of their killing instinct and you oppose schools."

The man shook his head gravely, and continued, "I'm a feudist because my people are feudists an' because I can lead 'em only so long as I'm a fightin' Havey. God knows if I could wipe out this blood-spillin' I'd gladly go out an' offer myself as a sacrifice to bring it about. You call me an outlaw—well, I've done made laws an' I've done broke them an' I've seen just about as much crookedness and lawlessness at one end of the game as at the other."

"But schools?" inquired Juanita. "Why wouldn't they help your dream toward fulfilment?"

"I ain't against no school that can begin at the right end. I'm against every school that can only onsettle an' teach dissatisfaction with humble livin' where folks has got to live humble."

He paused and paced the room. This man was no longer the man who had seemed the immovable stoic. His eyes were far away, looking beyond the horizons, into the future.

"It's took your people two centuries to get where they're standin' today," he broke out abruptly, "an' fer them two hundred years we've been standin' still or goin' back. Now ye come downw here an' seeks to jerk my people up to where ye stands in the blinkin' of an eye. Ye comes lookin' down on 'em an' pityin' 'em because they won't eat outen your hand. They'd rather be eagles, than songbirds in a cage, even if eagles are wild and lawless. Ye comes here an' straightway tells 'em that their leaders are infamous. Do ye offer 'em better leaders? Ye refuses the aid of men what know 'em men of their blood—an' go your own ignorant way. Do ye see any reason why I should countenance ye? Don't ye see ye're just a-scatterin' my sheep before they knows how to herd themselves?"

"I'm afraid," said the girl, very slowly and humbly, "that I've been a fool."

"Ye says the boy, Jeb, wears my trade-mark in the hate that's on his face," continued Anse Havey passionately. "He's been here with me, consortin' with them fellers in Plutarch an' Shakespeare. If I can curb him an' keep him out of mischief he's goin' down to Frankfort some day an' learn his lessons in the Legislature. He ain't goin' to no college because I aims to fit him for his work right here. I seek to have fellers like him guide these folks forward. I don't aim to have them civilized by bein' wiped out an' trod to death."

He paused while Juanita Holland repeated helplessly and half aloud, "I've been a fool!"

"I reckon ye don't know that young Jeb McNash thinks little Milt kilt Fletch, an' that one day he laid out in the la'rel to kill little Milt. Ye don't know that the only reason he stayed his hand was that I'd got his promise ter bide his time. But I reckon ye do know that if Milt was killed by a Havey all that's transpired in ten years wouldn't make a patch on the hell-raisin' that'd go on hereabouts in a week. Do ye think it's strange that Jeb don't want his sister consortin' with the boy that he thinks murdered his father?"

Juanita rose from her chair, feeling like a pert and cocksure interloper who had been disdainfully looking down on one with a vision immeasurably wider and surer than her own. At last she found herself asking, "But surely young Milt didn't kill Fletch. Surely you don't believe that?"

"No, I know he didn't, but there's just one way I can persuade your Jeb to believe it—an' that's to tell him who did."

His eyes met hers and for a moment lighted with irony. "If I did that I reckon Jeb would be willin' to let ye keep Dawn an' Jesse—an' of course he'd kill the other man. Do ye want me to do it? Just say the word, ma'am, an' I'll call him in. It may not cost but one life ter let ye have your way. Life's right cheap hereabouts. One or two more oughtn't hardly to stand between a lady an' her sacred mission." He moved to the closed door and paused with his hand on the knob.

"No, stop!" she almost screamed. "It would mean murder. Merciful God, it's so hard to decide some things!" Anse Havey turned back to the room. "I just thought I'd let ye see that for youself," he said quietly; "ye ain't hardly been able ter see why it's hard for us people to decide 'em."

Suddenly a new thought struck her and it brought from her a sudden question. "But you know who the murderer is and you have spared him?"

The man laughed. "Don't fret your self, ma'am. The man that killed Fletch has left the mountains, an' right now he's out of reach. But he'll be back some day an' when he comes I reckon the first news you'll hear of him will be that he's dead." Once more it was the implacable avenger who spoke by his gospel of a life for a life. The girl could only murmur in perplexity, "Yet you have kept Jeb in ignorance. I don't understand. It all seems so complicated."

"I've got other plans for Jeb," said Bad Anse Havey. "I don't 'low to let him be a feud killer. There's others that can attend to that." He flung the door open and called Jeb; and a moment later the boy, black of countenance, came in, and stood glaring about with a sullen defiance of a young bull just turned into the ring where he is to face the matador. "Jeb," suggested the Chief, gravely, "I reckon if Dawn don't see young Milt again ye ain't goin' to object to her havin' an education, are ye?"

The boy stiffened and his reply was surly.

"I don't 'low ter hev my folks a-consortin' with no McBriars."

Anse Havey spoke again very quietly, "Milt didn't knw no more about that killin' than I did, Jeb."

"How does ye know that?" The question burst out fiercely and swiftly. The boy bent forward with his eyes eagerly burning above his high cheek-bones and his mouth stiff in a snarl of suspense. "How does ye know?"

"Because I know who did."

"Tell me his name!" The shrill demand was almost a shriek. Again Jeb's face had become ashen and his muscles were twitching. Anse laid a hand on his shoulder, but the boy jerked away and again confronted his elder while his voice broke from his lips in an excess of passion. "Tell me his name. By God, he b'longs ter me."

"No, I ain't goin' to tell ye his name just yet, Jebb," Anse calmly announced. "He ain't in these parts now. He's left the mountains an' it wouldn't do ye much good to know his name—yet. Two days after he comes back I'll tell ye all ye wants to know an' I won't try ter hinder ye, but ye must let the children stay over there at the school. Dawn's heart's set on it, an' it wouldn't be fair to break her heart."

The boy stood trembling in wrath and indecision. Finally his voice came dubiously. "Ye done give me yore hand once before that as soon as ye knowed ye'd tell me—an' ye lied ter me."

Anse Havey shook his head with unruffled patience.

"No, I didn't lie to you, son. I wasn't sure till after he left. I ain't never lied to no man."

A long silence fell on the room. Through the open window came the silvery call of a quail in some distant thicket. Jeb was remembering the tried friendship and unquestioned loyalty of his chief of clan and the comradeship of the books, and the debts he owed to Anse Havey. After a while he raised his head and nodded in his compact. "I'll give ye my hand," he said, "an' I aska yore pardon fer callin' ye a liar. I wouldn't suffer no other man ter do it in my hearin'."

When he left the room the girl rose from her chair.

"There is no way to thank you, Mr. Havey," she said with a touch of diffidence. "I don't believe that two can win out to law by lawlessness. But I do believe you are sincere and I know that you're a man."

"And as for me," he said slowly, "I think ye're just tryin' to grow an oak tree in a flower pot, an' it can't be done. I think that all ye can do is to breed discontent—an' in these hills discontent is dangerous. But I ain't hinderin' your school an' I don't 'low to. Ye'll find out for yourself that it's a failure an' quit at your own behest."

"I shan't quit," she assured him, but this time she smiled as she said it. "I am going ahead and in the end I am going to undermine the regime of feud and illiteracy; that is, I and others like me. But can't we fight the thing out as if it were a clean game? Can't we be friendly adversaries? You've been very generous and I've been a bigoted little fool, but can't you forgive me and be friends?"

He straightened while his face hardened again. Slowly he shook his head. His voice was very grave and uncompromising though without discourtesy. "I'm afraid it's a little too late for that."

Juanita slowly drew back the hand she had extended and her cheeks flushed crimson. It was the first time in her life that she had made an unsolicited proffer of friendship—and she had been rebuffed.

"Oh!" she murmured in a dazed, hurt voice, in which was no anger. Then she smiled and said: "Then there's nothing else to say, except to thank you a thousand times."

"Ye needn't have no uneasiness about my tryin' to hinder ye," he repeated, slowly. "I ain't your enemy an' I ain't your friend. I'm just lookin' on an' I don't have no faith in your success".

"Don't you feel that changes must come?" she questioned a little timidly. "They have come everywhere else."

"They will come," his voice again rose vehemently. "But they'll be made my way—our way, not yours. These hills sha'n't always be a reproach to the State of Kentucky. They're goin' to be her pride some day."

"That's all," exclaimed the girl, flinging at him a glance of absolute admiration. "I don't care who does it, so long as it's done right. You've got to see sooner or later that we're working to the same end. You may not be my friend, but I'm going to be yours."

"I'm obleeged to ye," he said gravely, and, turning on his heel, left the room through the back door. For a while she waited for him to return, and then, realizing that the interview was ended, she, too, turned and went out to the porch. It seemed to Juanita Holland, as she climbed the ridge again, that a decade had passed since the shadow of Jeb McNash had fallen across the flower bed. With that note from Anse Havey had come a crushing sense of her helplessness, and a full realization that no wheel could turn when one of the dictators raised a forbidding hand. So she had gone expecting to face vindictiveness, and had for the first time caught a glimpse of the soul that lay shuttered behind the mask of Anse Havey's veiled eyes. It had only been a glimpse and it made her want to see more. So she came back, thinking of a half-barbaric man of strong limbs and fearless heart, who walked under the constant menace of death, and who combined in his audacious make-up a dash of the magnificent. His was a thankless mission at best; a lonely vigil through a long night. Not only did he face the constant threat of McBriar hate, but to the outside world he was Bad Anse Havey, whose name was held in disrepute. Then the girl smiled, for the October air was still full of champagne sparkle and she was young enough to be stirred by the sterling mark of romance. At all events she had met a man. Here was no sword-like sheath.

HAD DYSPEPSIA
So Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much. Use too much tobacco. You make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we have received from time to time.

Miss Sarah McRae, Newfield, Ont., writes: "I write to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters, and have found it the best remedy I have ever used for dyspepsia. Two years ago, I had stomach trouble so bad that I could not even take a drink of water without suffering. I took six bottles of B.B.B., and have been entirely cured, and can now eat anything without any bad after effects."

Burdock Blood Bitters is an old and well tried remedy but on account of the many substitutes we would ask you to make sure that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as this preparation is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

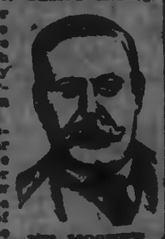
Was Troubled for Years With Kidney Disease

And This Treatment Cured Me—This Statement Endorsed By a Baptist Minister.

The great majority of people are familiar with the extraordinary curative powers of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. But for the benefit of those who are not we continue to publish from day to day reports from persons who have been actually cured.



MR. MOSHER.

The case described in this letter was an extreme one, and the writer was in a very low condition when he began the use of these pills. The cure was so marked that Mr. Mosher's pastor did not hesitate to vouch for his statement.

By their unique combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure in confirmed cases which defy the action of ordinary kidney medicines.

Mr. W. H. Mosher, Brooksville, Ont., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and firmly believe there is no substitute to equal them. I was troubled for years with kidney disease, and this treatment has cured me. When I began the use of these pills I could only walk from my bed to a chair. Now I can go to the field and work like any other man. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are an excellent medicine."

This statement is certified to by the Rev. E. H. Emett, Baptist minister of Brooksville, Ont.

By awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure Constipation, Headaches, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney Disease, Liver Complaint and Backache. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Secret of Health is Elimination of Waste

Every business man knows how difficult it is to keep the pigeon holes and drawers of his desk free from the accumulation of useless papers. Every housewife knows how difficult it is to keep her home free from the accumulation of all manner of useless things. So it is with the body. It is difficult to keep it free from the accumulation of waste matter. Unless the waste is promptly eliminated the machinery of the body soon becomes clogged. This is the beginning of most human ills.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Acquittal and a Conviction

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

When my uncle Charles Bingley was found dead one morning in his bed I as his nearest male relative was at once summoned. I went to his room which had been left untouched in every particular, and by the bed on which the body lay I found a bottle about two inches high and one inch square, around the four sides of which was pasted a label with the usual "Poison" warning printed on it.

There was nothing in my uncle's affairs to indicate that he had had any intention of committing suicide. He had not been very well for a few days, but there was nothing serious the matter with him. He might have been murdered and the bottle placed at his side to give the impression that he had taken poison. There were no marks on the body to indicate that he had been murdered.

The establishment of the facts in the case did not appeal to me. My uncle was dead, and whether he had been murdered or murdered himself made little difference to me. To put detectives on the case would cost money, but who would be the gainer? The authorities came to the house, made a perfunctory examination of the body and its surroundings and reported that the deceased had come to his death by means of poison administered by himself.

I went through the house myself looking for a clew. I had found a tumbler on the table with the poison and in the kitchen pantry found a dozen others of the same shape and make.

That fact indicated that the tumbler had come from the pantry. Dishes containing different kinds of food—mostly left over—were in the cabinet, one of them being a saucer of preserved peaches. It had apparently been knocked over, and a little of the juice had been spilled on the floor. It occurred to me that whoever had taken down the tumbler from the shelf had done so in the dark and had put his hand against the dish of peach preserves.

If he had done this some of the juice, if it had got on his fingers, might have adhered to them. I found faint, cloudy smears on the tumbler and, putting the tip of my tongue on them, thought I could detect saccharine matter. Examining the label on the poison bottle carefully, I found stains that I inferred might be the same as the cloud on the glass.

I locked up the tumbler and the bottle of poison, but had no desire to go any further with my examinations. I saw nothing to be gained by unearthing the mystery.

Fate decided, however, that it should be unraveled, or, rather, it should come out that there was no mystery at all. I was engaged to a girl who had discarded a former lover, Herman Goodsell hated me and brought about a suspicion that I had murdered my uncle. But this did not occur until my uncle had been buried. The will when opened disclosed the fact that my uncle had left a lot of money and every cent of it to me. Then our enemy began to get in his fine work, whispering here and there, till the police felt obliged to take cognizance of the reports and arrested me for murder.

The first thing I did was to engage an attorney and through him obtain the exhumation of the body for the purpose of having the finger prints taken. This was done. Then I had the tumbler that had stood by my uncle's bed examined with a microscope. A faint yellow substance was found on it, which contained a finger print. By treating the label of the poison bottle chemically a very clear finger print was obtained.

I had no idea how the accusation against me had started until my fiancee told me that she had probed the matter and traced it beginning in her former lover. This put me on my mettle to thwart him, and I named him as one of my witnesses to be subpoenaed for my trial. I gave my lawyer a list of questions to ask him, most of which had been furnished me by my sweetheart. When the case was called he was one of the first witnesses to take the stand, and my attorney soon showed malevolence on his part in this: That he had gone about spreading the reports that I had murdered my uncle. This had nothing to do with the case, but was intended for revenge.

When my real defense came up my attorney made short work of the matter. He had the tumbler and the label of the poison bottle in court, copies of the finger prints on them and a finger print of my uncle's thumb and two forefinger tips. They tallied exactly.

Goodsell was in court when I received my vindication. Under my instruction he received a tongue lashing that he was not likely to forget. My advocate showed how little evidence there had been against me, how it had been worked up by Goodsell and his reasons for having started the suspicions against me which had led to a needless and expensive trial. Goodsell cringed under it. Indeed, my acquittal was his conviction. When my counsel had ceased speaking my accuser left the courtroom and has never shown his face in the place since.

My uncle's bequest was a surprise to me, for I supposed he had little or nothing of value to leave and what he had would go to another branch of the family.

ARE YOU DROOPY, TIRED, WORN OUT?

Here is Good Advice to All Who Feel as if Their Vigour and Life Had All Oozed Away.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to the described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon: "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that foul, soft feeling that tells you, 'No breakfast needed here this morning.' A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal. But I guess I didn't digest very well, for I dreamt to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar an getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they have rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

To keep free from headaches, to feel young and bright to enjoy your best, nothing can help like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Troops From Japan.

TOKIO, Japan, Jan. 16.—The promoters in Japan of what will be called the "volunteer movement" have issued a manifesto in which they announce their intention of despatching an army corps to Europe. To this end they are appealing to both Japanese and foreigners for funds.

The manifesto says that as Lafayette helped the United States and Garibaldi helped France, so the Japanese wish to assist the allies, Great Britain, Russia and France, to terminate the misery of war and restore peace to the world.

DECEIVED BY LEADERS.

Indian Government Reports on Hindu Affair at Vancouver.

LONDON, Jan. 16. (Through Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A special despatch from Delhi, India, give the result of the enquiry ordered by the Indian Government into the riot at Calcutta by Indians returned from Vancouver, B.C., after deportation by the Canadian immigration authorities. The despatch says:

"The report of the committee of enquiry into the voyage of the steamer Komagata Maru and the riot at Calcutta finds that most of the emigrants believed they would be allowed to land at Vancouver. The leaders, however, were aware of the law, and deliberately misled the more ignorant passengers. The judgment of Chief Justice Hunter of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, the committee finds, was also an important factor in the emigrants' belief that they would be allowed to land in Canada.

"Owing," the report says, "to successful efforts, made during the voyage, by emissaries of revolutionary organizations outside of India to promote disaffection among the emigrants, they were in a dangerous frame of mind when they left Vancouver, and intended to cause trouble on their arrival in India. In accordance with the law the emigrants were refused admission at Calcutta, after which they fired upon the police with firearms which they had concealed when their luggage was being examined, the troops firing in reply. The committee considers that the emigrants should have been effectually searched for arms before being permitted to land.

"It is not intended to institute any prosecutions in respect to the riot, and the majority of the men who were confined pending the enquiry are being returned to their homes. The minority, comprising the dangerous ringleaders, will be kept under restraint for the present."

CAT OUT OF BAG.

Eight Submarines Are Being Built by Montreal Firm.

MONTREAL, Jan. 16.—"The Herald-Telegraph yesterday says: "The fact that the Canadian Vickers Co. of this city is engaged in constructing submarines for the British Government has been known here for some time, but at the request of the Government the newspapers refrained from announcing the fact.

"Evening papers of Wednesday throughout the United States carried the story that the submarines were being built here, showing that the censorship established by the Government was unable to prevent the story from being published.

"The Militia Department now says that the boats are as follows:

"The keels for eight first-class craft of the submarine class have already been laid down by the plant, and it is expected that several will be ready by August next. The plant is now running at full capacity. Rumors that the Schwab interests are in control are unequivocally denied here'."

THE PALL OF WINTER—The Deck of a Patrolling Battleship After a Snowstorm in the North Sea

AN ITALIAN VIEW

Professor Declares Britain Will Gain Regardless of Outcome of War

That Britain stands to win most should the allies succeed is the opinion of Prof. M. Pantoleoni, a well known Italian, who writes in the Giornale d'Italia on some of the probable results of the war. He believes that no matter what disasters might overwhelm the allies' armies, Britain would emerge triumphant so long as her fleet was not destroyed. The supreme issues of the war will depend upon the fleet. If it cannot be destroyed by Germany it is impossible for Germany to win, no matter what her armies might accomplish in France and Belgium and Russia. In the long run the British fleet will prove to be the ruin of Germany. Already it has done much to destroy Germany's industries and commerce and even without a general engagement the British fleet could slowly strangle Germany to death, so that she would be obliged to choose between starvation and capitulation.

While the war lasts Britain is capturing German colonies and trade. As well she is capturing French and Belgian trade, for the war is being fought on Belgian and French soil, with the result that many of their great industries are at a standstill. Belgium has no trade left. Former customers of Belgium must either supply their own wants or buy elsewhere. Germany and Austria cannot supply them. Russia is not a manufacturing nation. There remains, then Britain, and she is getting most of the business that formerly went to France and Belgium as well as to Germany. If Britain was the greatest colonial and commercial power before the war, says the professor, she will continue to be so in an increased degree after the war is over.

France's position, he says, is exactly the reverse of Britain's. Whether the war is lost or won, or ends in a draw, in the case of France the difference will be between greater or smaller ruin more or less lasting. Germany has flooded the iron mines in Lorraine, which enabled France to stand second in Europe to Germany alone in the production of iron. After the war these mines will be pumped out, "but the time will be long, the capital will be dear, and the markets will have been lost."

In the north of France the ruin has been as great. Here were the coal and the textile industries. France may have her revenge when the allies destroy German mines in Westphalia, and demolish German factories; but this will not help France. It will only mean that she will consolidate British supremacy by destroying a British industrial rival.

When Delaware Produced Iron.

In colonial times and during the early years of national life Delaware was of considerable relative importance as a producer of iron ore for bloomaries and furnaces, and with the disappearance of the bloomeries Delaware's iron mining industry ceased to exist, and no iron ore has been produced in the state for many years. The principal mineral products of Delaware now are obtained from quarries, sand and gravel pits and springs of potable water.

The Living Telephone.

Some time after the close of the Franco-German war the Prussian plan drill was introduced into the British cavalry. The first men to be exercised in it were a corps of household cavalry (Blues) at Windsor. They were extended each some 800 yards from his fellow, many miles of country being covered. This verbal message was given to the soldier on the extreme right to pass along: "Enemy's vedettes at Englefield Green." It got hopelessly muddled halfway. The amazed officer waiting to receive it got this communication from the trooper on the extreme left: "England's bets paid by the queen."—London Answers.

Attracted the Mice.

One curious result of a foreign invasion is recorded in the letters of Prince Metternich to Mme. de Lieven. From Judenburg, a small town in Styria, the prince wrote: "The burgomaster here has been expatiating to me on the large amount of damage done by mice to farms in the surrounding district. On inquiring how long they had been afflicted in this way I was told, 'Since the French were here.' 'Do you mean to tell me the French brought mice with them?' I asked. 'No,' replied the burgomaster, 'but they ate so much bread that they covered our fields with crumbs, and since then all the mice in Styria appear to have settled here.'"—London Express.

Dochart Spelled Macgregor.

Many of the Macgregors, when their own name was forbidden, took that of Dochart. This was in gratitude for the escape of a number of them, who being hard pressed, got away by swimming the stream that issues from Loch Dochart. Dean Ramsay has an anecdote of a young "Dochart," from Dumblane, who in being sent to Glasgow college presented a letter from his minister to the Rev. Dr. Hough of Glasgow. He gave his name as Dochart, but, in the letter it was Macgregor. "Oh," said the doctor, "I fear there is some mistake about your identity; the names don't agree." "Wee, sir, that's the way they spell the name in our country."—London Chronicle.

The Followup Method.

"Why do you get the pretty girls jobs first? Is that fair?"

"Best for all concerned," declared the head of the school of stenography. "The pretty girl soon marries her employer, and then there's a permanent job for one of the plainer young ladies."—Pittsburgh Post.

Eyeglass Lenses.

All lenses used in making eyeglasses by manufacturers in this country are formed from imported glass, which is secured principally from Germany. This glass is of texture and transparency so far above the products of American glass plants that the optical companies used it exclusively for their high grade work. Each blank is about two inches square and nearly one-eighth inch in thickness. In appearance it is not unlike an ordinary piece of plate glass—the edges are rough from the molds, and it has no magnifying properties. This is the work of the optical manufacturer, and it is for him to grind the glass and form it until it magnifies or refracts the object before it.—Columbus Dispatch.

Cut and Run.

"Cut and run" originated in a peculiar custom of the Egyptian embalmers. A low caste was employed to make the first incision in the corpse, a process viewed with much dislike by the people, who held him accursed who should mutilate the dead. As soon as the fellow had made his "cut" he had to run through a storm of curses, stones and sticks. He "cut" for a living and had to "run" for his life.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

Binding edges with silk braid is one of the latest features, and in this instance the braid should exactly match the serge. Of course it should always match when used, but in buying the temptation is often to take a chance, as the shades are very elusive. A lighter shade, particularly, would be hopeless. The smaller front view shows how the tunic can be extended to meet at the front and thus keep the waist looks without the bolero. The plain style of the skirt, however, is illustrated in the main view. The pattern, No. 8276, can be obtained in sizes from fourteen to twenty years, corresponding to from 31 to 39 inches bust measure.

The plaid of the blouse is very simple. The waist body has front, back and sleeves cut in one piece, with a seam at centre back, and with the collar sewed on the waist is practically finished. The bolero is in two pieces only, front and back, the front turning over in the form of revers. There is a seam each side of the tunic and seams at side and back of the underskirt.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Farmers Are Crying Out

Unemployed Refuse to Take All-year Farm Jobs—Conditions As They Exist in Peterborough

TORONTO, Jan. 18—In the opinion of the Colonization Department of the Provincial Department, the unemployed do not really want employment, or at least employment of the year-round kind such as may be had from farmers. It was reported today that farmers from many parts of the Province have complained that they cannot get year-labourers at any price.

"Why don't you send the unemployed to us?" writes a farmer from the Strathroy district. "Recruiting officers are getting all the eligible young men around here. We cannot get labourers."

The reply of the Department to that is that they are unable to fill the farmers' demands owing to the disposition on the part of the unemployed to refuse to tie themselves down to a year's contract, or even to an all summer's job.

Conditions similar to those enumerated above exist in Peterborough. Instances have been reported of men who were sent out to farmers, and when they were asked to commit themselves to eight months' or a year's engagement, refused employment. They eventually found their way back to the City and endeavoured to obtain charity.

Too Much For the Cabs.

One afternoon Signor Labiatte, the celebrated hemo, a man of enormous proportions, on leaving Covent Garden theatre after rehearsal found that his carriage had not arrived, so he sent for a four wheeler. Into this, after a strenuous effort, he managed to squeeze his massive body, to find himself seated on the edge of the smaller seat, a truly uncomfortable position, which it was imperative at once to change. As he struggled to his feet in his attempt to do so the bottom of the vehicle gave way, and the artist found himself standing in the road. Help, however, was at hand, and he was released with no small difficulty from his ridiculous dilemma.

A similar adventure befell the brother Pope—one a doctor, the other the well known Q. C.—who between them watched over their sister when crossing Waterloo Bridge in a hansom cab. How it happened is uncertain, but about the centre of the bridge the door of the cab collapsed, and for the next thirty yards two heads of elderly men, straining to keep pace with the horse's mild amble, with a spectacle for bystanders of mirth. Quite soon added, the cab door hands quickly abandoned their chase and exhausted pedestrian.—London Tit-Bits.

No Fruit Without Bees.

If there were no bees, fruit trees and other plants could not produce any fruit. Apple, plum, cucumber, cherry, melon, nuts are pollined by bees. Honey is the bait with which the bee is induced to perform this task. The coloured, fragrant petals of the blossoms are the advertising agreement when the best honey in the locality may be found. If the flowers is to set fruit the bee with its furry body must brush some of the yellow dust called pollen from the male organs of anther at the bottom of the flowers, deposit this pollen on the female organ called the stigma. The blossoms are so arranged that to get at the honey the bee must first brush with its pollen covered body against the stigma, thus distributing the pollination. As soon as it has performed this duty it has done a good day's work for the wort is the form of the blossom. While drawing this sip the bee is involuntarily covered with pollen again and made ready to proceed to the next blossom and repeat the process.—French Paper.

Mrs. Boggs—Mr. Stubbins is a splendid example of what a man ought to be. Mr. Boggs—Why, you've only seen Stubbins' outside of a while, two sisters, a grown up daughter and a mother-in-law three times a week at most.

Magistrate—Are you interested in this case? Witness For the Prosecution—Yes, sir; the prisoner cut my pocket.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR BLACK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay grey! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

Where the French Recently Gave a Little Ground. — A German attack against the French near Vregny compelled them to give a little ground and retire to Ener, La Montel, Missy and St. Marguerite. Since then they have withdrawn to the South side of the River. They may be able to undertake another advance.

Cured His Obesity.

Peter the Great was once travelling incognito in a part of Finland when he met a very fat man, who told him that he was going to St. Petersburg.

"What for?" asked the czar.

"To consult a doctor about being so fat, which has become very oppressive."

"Do you know any doctor there?"

"No."

"Then I will give you a line to my friend, Prince Menschikoff, and he will introduce you to one of the emperor's physicians."

The traveler went to the prince's house with a note. The answer was not delayed. The next day, tied hands and feet, the poor man was dragged off on a cart to the mines.

Two years after Peter the Great was visiting the mines. He had forgotten the incident of the fat man, when suddenly a miner threw down his pick, rushed up to him and fell at his feet, crying:

"Sire, sire, what is it I have done?"

Peter looked at him, astonished, until he remembered the story.

"Oh, so that is you!" he said. "I hope you are pleased with me. Stand up. Now this night you have become thin and remember that work is the best cure for over corpulence!"

How Do You Laugh?

Enjoyment can be estimated accurately by the manner in which a person laughs as by the tone of the speaking voice.

If some people could hear the tone they say while laughing they would doubtless be startled to perceive it.

A real hearty laugh is like a tonic to the system. It not only does the person good who enjoys it, but it does every one good who hears it.

Of such a laugh there is no criticism. But there are people who do not enjoy laughing, but who laugh in a forced and artificial manner, and generally at the most inopportune moment.

An affected laugh by either a man or a woman is a contemptible thing. There is no necessity to laugh loudly, the cheerful laugh is the safest to use.

Remember, when laughter is natural it is irresistible and beautiful, and when it is forced it falls like sleeting rain.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Brazil's Name.

Long before the Portugese colonized the coast of Brazil adventurous British merchants had equipped expeditions in a vain search for the supposed island of Brazylle. Who gave Brazil her present name is unknown to fame—the early Portuguese called it Terra da Vera Cruz—but whoever baptized the country took the name from the East Indies. For many years before the discovery of Brazil merchants had brought from the east for the use of dyers a wood which yielded a beautiful red colour—brazil or brazilly. The West Indies have trees of the same sort, but Indian examples of them in more abundance than any other country. So that Brazil would be not called so after the country. The country is named as in virtue of its red dye trees.—London Chronicle.

Travels of Roots.

Roots travel amazing distances in search of their requirements. A timber merchant, operating for a sewer in England, found an elm root one and a [illegible] in diameter and sixty-three feet long, running through a bed of sandpit from the tree to the nearest water.

The aggregate length of root thrown out by some plants is almost incredible. A cucumber will, within its short life of about half a year, throw out from 250 to fifteen miles of roots.

Clover roots will go straight down to a depth of six to nine feet in search of moisture, and coltsfoot, one of the most powerful and persistent of weeds, sends its suckers down to an even greater depth.—London Daily Mirror.

Last the Point.

The Teacher—Now, children, listen to this. Thomas Campbell, the famous poet, once walked six miles to a printing office to have a comma in one of his poems changed to a semicolon. Why did he take all that trouble? Bright Boy—Cause he didn't have no telephone.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Publicity.

"It's a bad thing to talk about your neighbors."

"That's right," replied the man who is ill. Business. "Publicity is worth something these days. I shouldn't think of talking about anybody except at advertising rates."—Washington Star.

Another Recipe.

Aspiring Novelist—Ah, sir, I am highly flattered, I'm sure, to hear that you take my book to bed with you and read it there! Acquaintance—Yes, I have been troubled with insomnia for a long time, and I find one of your pages much better than any medicine.

Shareholders Must Feed and Attend Dinner Soldiers.

Many London shareholders have already been warned that they must be prepared to have soldiers billeted upon them. West Londoners seem to have had the first experience in the metropolis, but reports that come in indicate that it is becoming general. Officers are going along with streets of the suburbs commandeering accommodation for the overwork army of the Territorials. Two to half a dozen are being billeted upon each house, according to the space available. Householders who have been or may be requisitioned for this form of war duty will be interested to know what is required of them.

A soldier may be billeted on a house with "full subsistence," with "partial subsistence," or "without subsistence." In the first event, the family must feed and clothe upon the soldier, but need not give bedding or furniture, receiving in return about two shillings a day for an officer and one shilling and nine pence for a private. Billets "without subsistence" — that is to say, a plain lodging with attendance and the use of cooking utensils, but without board—is not generally popular.

In subsistence billets, of course, the officers have to see that the ordinary fare of the family is up to the proper standard. The military authorities have full power in such cases as the present to enforce whatever billeting they may direct; but it is not likely that householders will be unpatriotic enough to make unreasonable objections to what, at the worst, is only an inconvenience. In this country no finally need many fears as to the behavior of the British soldier.

Shot German Prince.

In a despatch from Amsterdam the local correspondent of the Central News says that the shot which ultimately resulted in the death of Prince Von Bulow, one of the German generals, who fled for a Belgian private [illegible] after the fall of Liege, has since been [illegible] for his conduct in the battle of Haelen.

Rousseau was lying badly wounded among the group of dead combatants when he saw a German officer standing beside his horse and studying a map. Picking up a rifle from the side of a dead German, Rousseau fired at this officer, and wounded him. He subsequently proved to be Prince Von Bulow, exchanging his hat for the German general's helmet, and taking the general's horse, Rousseau made his way to the Belgian lines and was placed in a hospital at Ghent.

Postmen Motoring.

One of the curious features of the Italian situation is the unobtrusive opening of a modest bureau in a small street with the motto "For the Defence of Italian Liberties" over the entrance. This bureau enlists volunteers, who will go to the French frontier to help the French with a guerilla warfare. They have had several hundred recruits since opening, and people declare they will march within ten days.

The 60,000 men called out by the latest royal command are the pick of the Italian reserve, men between 20 and 30, who have seen African service. They include some of the famous Bersaglieri, said to be the fastest walkers in the world — little wiry men, who can stand anything and shoot splendidly. Two more classes will be called out in a few days.

A Case in Point.

"Johnnie," said a teacher in a physiology class, "can you give a familiar example of the human body as it adapts itself to changed conditions?"

"Yes-sum," said Johnnie; "my aunt paints fifty pounds in a year and her skin never cracked."

"What difference does it make?" responded the listless. "I'll marry you whether he likes you or not."

LITTLE TO FEAR.

U. S. Germans Not Likely to Make Raid on Canada.

The danger of raids into Canadian territory by German sympathisers in the United States is one of the contingencies of the present war which the Canadian Militia Department guarded against on the first news of hostilities in Europe. Sections of regiments are now on guard at practically all points where vandalism could cause serious damage. Canal locks, bridges, docks, elevators, etc., are under the rules of Canadian militiamen.

In the pretends that the menace from the other side of the international boundary has, as yet, taken alarming form. "Many of the stories of attempted destruction resolved into hallucinations, but there remains sufficient evidence to prepare the militia Department for future trouble. The present circumstances are not slightly different from the days of the Fenian Raid when Irish-Americans tried to "capture" Canada by force of arms. There is, however, the interesting distinction that Irish-Americans to-day are lined up behind the British Government, the personal guilt having its source in American alliance of German birth and sympathies.

"Even two points recently reports have come regarding precautions to wreak vengeance on Canadian peasants and at both points, Buffalo and Cleveland, anarchists have been shelved from the local police authorities that their violence may be relied upon to abet the plans of any marauding expeditions. Following up a letter received from Michael Regan, superintendent of police at Buffalo:

"In reference to the possibility of German-Americans raiding Canada now that England and Germany are in a state of war, I see nothing to substantiate here that would warrant such action. The great majority of German-Americans are among the best of our law-abiding citizens, and while they are nearly attached to the 'Fatherland,' have too much sense to attempt the capture of Canada. This Government would soon quash such a movement if attempted. Of course, there are cranks in all communities and as individuals they may be tempted to go over and commit some rash act, but as for a general raid, nothing to it."

Toilet Note.

Procure a dozen little toy balls used for children's play-pens, a spool of wire and any trap to catch rats alive. Bait the trap and catch as many as you can and let them get really hungry. Then empty the rats into a space or box from which they cannot escape. Put on a heavy leather glove, quick fly, grab a rat by the back and with wire fasten the tail to the rat's neck and tie the tail. Do the same with all you have caught. In two days get a rat to feed.—Farm and Fireside.

Her Version of It.

She was a true camp of a thing just three years old, but with a mat of a brilliant shining sun of her great brown eyes. It was her first visit to the zoo, and the babel of queer noises and sight of strange big beasts might well have dismayed this puny heart. But she seemed to seem afraid. Only when they approached the towering form of the elephant did she draw back.

"I'm not goin' too close, papa," she whispered; "I might cause him!"—Woman's Home Companion.

The Physician's Life.

The life of medicine is an entrancing pursuit. Its practice requires an array of virtues while more contemplation engages the mind. One must meet patience with gentleness, ingratitude with equanimity, insult with fortitude, slander with silence. The physician's life is a daily exemplification of the Golden Rule. The very sensitiveness that inspires sympathy with pain and misery is a weapon in the hands of ignorance and makes wherewith they first demolish modesty, wounds which time is powerless to heal. Resentment can have no place in the physician's mind.—From "Resurrection of a Physician," by A. Stuart M. Chisholm, M. D.

Tale of a Fish.

A story is told of an angler in Scotland who, during a certain season, spent some time each morning in fishing from the pier head and one day landed a large "bleater," as the Manx fisher folk call them. Not having any use for such, he was about to throw it back into the bay when the tackle was noticed that the fish was suffering from a cataract. Instinctively he felt for his knife and there and then removed the film before restoring the creature to the water. The next day he was amazed to find the same fish again on his hook. But people failed him when he found his enabling patient returning day after day "to have its eye dressed."

The Python's Gorge.

A specimen of python reticulate about twenty-five feet in length swallowed a swan weighing eighteen pounds and two days later a reticulate of sixty-seven pounds. Another swallowed within two days five rabbits of twenty-eight and fifty-nine pounds and then thereafter a chamois of seventy-one pounds. In two and a half hours only the hind quarters of the lambs or the pony were visible. When a flashlight photograph was suddenly taken the python disgorged its booty in the space of half a minute.—Journal of the Royal Microscopical Society.

The Howling Hotel.

The night crawled by. The poems thought the dreams continued, and then the air the souls of the killed came shrieking. They thronged of one great company, no longer one-sided, but the same dumb spirit, bearing something strange, that they were trying terribly to push away. All had their eyes narrowed, yet their gaze, in their grey white, smoky ground forms, [illegible] to [illegible] on they passed. Whence were they coming, where going, trailing the shapes of pain, filling their quarts of blood, into that river of oblivion, far from home, and the savagery of man?—John Galsworthy in Scribner's Magazine.

Greatest Babies and Parks.

The old custom of counting the heads and feet when dining had its origin, it is [illegible] Mr. F. W. Harcourt [illegible] in his book, "Clubs and Clubland Curios," in a spirit of diversion. He quotes Brydone:

[illegible]
[illegible]

"In Russia," says Mr. Harcourt, "this problem of the peasantry was long mooted, and there they were careful to take up the knife and fork and lay them down on the plate-crossed before commencing their supper meal. Strange to say, although knives and forks have been crossed in consequence, no grave knives has been deemed unlucky."

Feast of the Garlands.

In several of the more remote Swiss cantons there is held what is known as the "feast of the garlands." The marriageable maidens assemble at sunset, dance and make merry. Each wears a simplet of flowers on her forehead and carries a nosegay and with bright colored ribbon in her hands. If she is attracted by a maid to praise a flower from her bunch. She pretends not to notice, but when the merry-making breaks up at dawn she will, if she reciprocates his feelings, tie the entire bouquet by the ribbon to the handle of the door of the cabin wherein he resides or alternatively fling it through the open casement of his bedchamber.

Men and Housekeeping.

"After you've been two weeks to the house with one of those terrible beauty sleeps that suit their wives so no more to wipe between the times of the forks and that know just how much raising bread ought to have and how to taste eat a week so much plate will get the best gas it's a real joy to get back to the ordinary kind of men. Yes, the soft Miss Gregg finished with much emphasis. "I wish more who should have some about the things they meant to have some about, but when it comes to budging names I like him real-helpless way the Lord planned to have him and to keep him."—Beauty's Companion.

They Were Not Indians.

It is said that when the first Chinese entered California the Indians were very curious about them. A dispute arose among some of them as to what exactly the strangers might be and whether or not they were Indians. The Indians decided to apply the water test. One day a party of Indians met a party of Chinamen approaching a little stream. The strangers approached the bridge and started across. The Indians, too, had died across and, meeting the Chinamen in midstream, pushed two of them into the water, drowning several below. The rest was conclusive. They could not swim. They were not Indians.

YOUR OWN LIFE.

One thing there is which is yours unquestionably. You have your life, and, however insignificant in place, however meager in conditions, however circumscribed in power, it is of quite incomparable worth to you and to mankind. The whole wide world does not equal it in value, and if all external aims every applaud and all your environs satisfied you are an impressions failure if you have not nourished and developed that which is most palpably your own.—E. G. Spence.

CHATHAM, Ont., April 3rd, 1913.

"Some two years ago, I was a great sufferer from Indigestion. One day my wife caught a bill-board of "Fruit-a-tives" and I said to myself "if Fruit-a-tives will build me up like that, it is good enough for me". I bought some. After taking them wonderful tablets for only three weeks, I found myself wonderfully improved. In a short time longer, I found myself entirely. Legend of the Peacock's Feathers.

The ill feeling said to fall upon the owners of peacocks and the wearers of peacock feathers is accounted for by an oriental legend.

The story runs after this fashion: When God created the peacock the seven deadly sins were stirred with bitter jealousy and complained loudly that the bird should be more beautiful than they.

"You are quite right," the Creator answered. "I have been unjust, for I have already given you too much. You should be as black as the night that conceals you." Whereupon he plucked out the green eye of jealousy, the yellow eye of envy and the red eye of murder and added them to the bird's feathers. So the blind sins are ever pursuing the bird to regain their eyes, and that is the reason that when men or women adorn themselves with the feathers misfortune dogs their footsteps.

FIRED ON CONSULATE

Particulars of the International Incident at Hodeia

ROME Jan. 16.—The Idea Nazionale published a despatch from Alexandria giving particulars of the international incident at Hodeia.

It says the Turkish gendarmes attacked the British consulate at midnight on December 11. The British vice-consul, C. A. Richardson, escaped to the Italian consulate. The commander of the gendarmes followed him and called upon Signor Cecchi, the Italian consul to surrender Mr. Richardson, making the demand in the name of the Governor.

When the demand was refused by Consul Cecchi the Governor sent 400 soldiers with cannon. The soldiers surrounded the Italian consulate and the doors were broken down with [illegible]. The soldiers fired on the consulate, wounding a servant.

The Idea Nazionale says that when Gendarmes finally entered the consulate they fired at Consul Cecchi, but did not wound him. Consul Richardson was then surrendered to the soldiers.

The Governor notified the Italian Consul that he would be no longer recognized as the representative of the Italian Government and would be treated as a prisoner on charges of having housed the British Vice-Consul and firing on Turkish soldiers. The latter charge is characterized by the Idea Nazionale as false.

Signor Cecchi was not permitted to leave the consulate for several days, according to the version of the incident, and on the day that he was to have been placed on trial he was rescued by the arrival of the Italian coast guard ship Giuliana.

DISFIGURING RASH SPREAD OVER CHILD

Itching and Burning. Restless and Fretful at Night. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In Two Months No Trace of Trouble.

Kincardine, Ont.—"My child's trouble began with a rash around the ears. This spread over the surface of the body turning to small sores which were itching and burning. The rash also appeared on my child's face and for the time disfigured him. The itching was so intense that it constantly caused him to irritate the eruption by continually scratching. He was restless and fretful at night.

"Without success I tried remedies. The first two applications of Cuticura Soap and Ointment stopped the burning and caused the itching. We first bathed him using the soap and then applied the Ointment. In two months' time no trace of the trouble was seen." (Signed) G. Campbell, May 23, 1914.

The Erin To Help The Brave Serbs

Has Been Turned Over to Servian Red Cross Society

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Sir Thomas Lipton's steam yacht Erin, tender for all of his Shamrocks in the American Cup races, sailed from Southampton to-day to become a factor in the war. Her destination is Salonika. She has been turned over by her millionaire owner for use by the Servian Red Cross Society. She carried an enormous quantity of needed medical supplies and an entire Red Cross unit. Sir Thomas Lipton will be picked up by the Erin at Marseilles, and he will accompany his vessel on her errand of mercy.

Reserve Corps of 30,000 Men Has Been Routed

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Jan. 17—Another sweeping victory over the Turks in the Caucasus is recorded in official advices to-night from Petrograd. Russian general headquarters have received a message from Tiflis, which says:

"The army of the Caucasus has covered its flags with glory by a fresh heroic exploit, having exterminated the 11th Turkish corps, with the exception of several insignificant elements, which are fleeing in disorder. We have captured all the artillery of this corps.

"The battle of Kara Urgan, which was fought during the last three days in the ceaseless snowstorm, has ended in a complete victory for us, thanks to the efforts of our valiant regiments of the Caucasian, Turkestan and the Siberian Cossacks. The resistance of the enemy is shattered, and his rearguard is covering the retreat of the annihilated army, which is harried on the flanks and rear by our troops. The front of the Turkish force is fleeing towards Erzerum.

"Our troops, which are pursuing the enemy, are finding buried in the snow-covered ravines Turkish guns which the enemy, unable to take with him, had thrown from the heights above. The pursuit is being pressed. More than a thousand prisoners and a large quantity of arms were captured on Jan. 15."

Turks in Serious Plight.

This new disaster makes the Turkish position on Russian soil extremely serious, since four of their effective corps now have been severely defeated while Russian naval operation in the Black Sea have frustrated an effort to send reinforcements by water from Armenia.

The destruction of the eleventh corps concludes a conflict which has been in progress for several days in the region of Kara Urgan. Some ten days ago the Russians successively defeated the first Turkish corps at Ardehan, and the ninth and tenth corps at Geri Kamyah. The ninth corps was captured almost in a body, but the remnants of the tenth made a desperate stand against the Russians, while the eleventh corps, previously held in reserve over the border in Turkish Armenia, was rushed north from its base at Erzerum to assist in the defense.

It is this eleventh corps, a force of probably 30,000 fresh troops, whose rout is announced from Petrograd to-night. Its defeat follows up the annihilation on previous days of the various detachments of the tenth corps that had reformed at Kara Urgan, an official statement on Saturday having announced the capture of survivors of the 32nd Turkish regiment, in addition to 5,000 prisoners in other parts of the front, with fourteen cannon and enormous supplies, including ten thousand head of cattle.

GERMANS ARE MAKING NO PROGRESS IN THE NEIGHBOURHOOD OF SOISSONS

Continue to Shell the French Positions But Are Unable to Advance--Fierce Fighting at Blangy While Foundry Has Changed Hands Several Times.

ARTILLERY DUELS HEAVY IN THE NORTH

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 18.—From the Argonne to Upper Alsace the combatants in the great war to-day are floundering through enormous wastes of snow. Military operations are checked but not ended. Both sides are trying to reckon by the changed weather conditions and are endeavouring to force the artillery, with infantry supports through the blocked forests and mountains, but, according to the best advice reaching here, with small success.

To the north of Flanders the Germans continue to reform their lines. So far, threatened assaults in force have been withheld. Instead, the artillery continues its monotonous exchanges, levelling once prosperous hamlets and farm houses to powder. This is e specially so in the region of Nieuport, Labassee, Ypres and Arras, where ea ch side has vainly attempted a forward movement, only to have it chec ked by the most deadly artillery fire. Rain has fallen almost without inter ruption along the valley of the Aisne and north into Flanders since Satur day morning. The Germans continue to shell Soissons and the French posi tions in the valley of the Aisne, but it is officially declared that they are m aking no progress here.

Fighting for trenches and foundry buildings in the vicinity of Blangy, east of Arras, continues with varying result. The Germans first took the foundry, lost it to a general assault, in turn recaptured it and were for a second time dislodged. There have been heavy losses at this point.

Only 83 of The Pats Out of 200 Returned From Their Charge

LONDON, Jan. 17.—I am informed from a private source that about two hundred of the Princess Patricias were in the heroic charge described in Friday's despatches, and that the enemy made a violent onslaught upon them, with the result that only 83 returned from the charge, while Major Hamilton Gault had a very narrow escape.

NAMES OF SOME OF THE WOUNDED

SALISBURY, Jan. 17—Definite information has reached here that the casualties of the Princess Patricias in the action of last week were very heavy.

Corporal Fry, of Toronto, was shot through the stomach while bravely attempting to bring rations to the men in the trenches under a heavy fire. Other Canadian casualties include Private Gray, a reservist in the Royal Scots, of Smith's Falls, Ont., a wounded hand, and H. J. Cosh, of Beverley Street, Toronto, a hydro-electric employee, mild fever. All these are in the hospital at Boulogne.

Private Walter, of the Princess Patricias, has been returned to England, in a hospital ship. He got rheumatism in the trenches.

Harold J. Cosh, aged 24, electrician with the Hydro-Electric, of 46 Beverley Street, single, people living at 29 Cornick Street, Rotherhithe, London, S. E., served years with the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry.

Corporal Henry J. Fry, 16 Tomlin Avenue, a native of Wiltshire, England, served in the South African war in the 1st Battalion Gloucester Regiment, under the late Col. E. P. Wilford, who was shot in the war. Corporal Fry's wife and two children live in Bristol, Eng.

Charles Walter, aged 33, 14 Salisbury Avenue, Toronto, formerly Manchester, Eng., served in the King's Royal Rifles in the South African war for two years and 34 days, and saw four years' service in India. His mother lives in England and his wife in Toronto. He was employed as a floor finisher with the International Floor Company here.

WILL SOON BE SENT TO THE FRONT

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Earl Grey, the former Governor-General of Canada, in reviewing a brigade of the Canadian contingent to-day, told them they would soon be sent to the front.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person is troubled with catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that usual catarrh indicates a weakened condition of the body; that the secretion of the mucous membranes are quickly affected, and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from harmful drugs or opiates. Try it. 25-73

Excuses That Men Make For Impiety

MEN IN BUSINESS

On Sunday evening the Rev. Dr. Griffith Thomas of Toronto, conducted the first of a series of three special services to be held in All Saints' church, in observance of the re-opening of the edifice and the dedication of the new chancel. The well known divine took for the basis of his remarks, the words which are found in St. Luke, 9:61, "And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house."

The speaker enumerated a number of the most common excuses for ignoring the Divine injunction, "Follow me" that are given expression to. These two words imply trust and obedience upon which personal salvation is dependent. Everyone is asked to follow the Master. Many say they are willing but they cannot understand the Bible. That is very true. Revelation means drawing back the veil of mystery. If the Bible was understood it could be dispensed with. A man may refuse to eat until he knows the chemical properties of the food that is placed before him, and for similar reasons may refuse to wear an overcoat when he is cold. That is no reason why men should take leave of their common sense in respect to religion. In every walk of life there is an alphabet that must be grasped before progress can be made. Jesus Christ is first our Saviour, then our teacher. He asks us to follow Him. He does not supply us with a chart of our voyage through life, but expects us first to obey, then learn.

The Hypocrite Blamed.

There are other men who decline to follow Christ because there are hypocrites in the church. There have been hypocrites in the church since the time of Judas Iscariot. That is no reason why a man should hesitate to follow Jesus Christ. For every hypocrite in the church there are fifty outside. One hundred church goers professing to be Christians will compare favourably with one hundred people professing Christianity who never go to church. We are not called upon to follow men or believe in men. Thank the Lord there are no hypocrites in heaven. When you see a man imitating a Christian you can depend that there is a good Christian in the near vicinity.

Some men will hesitate to follow Christ because they claim to be unfit. That is one reason why they should follow Him. Another will say "I would follow Him but I wouldn't be able to hold on." In reply to that "I would say that is perfectly true. You and I may not be able to hold on, but Jesus Christ will," said Rev. Dr. Thomas.

The Pleasure of Sin.

Go to another man and he will say, "Yes, I would be quite willing to follow Christ, but I would have to give up my pleasures." There is only one kind of pleasure that would have to be sacrificed and that is the pleasure of sin. Another man will say, "My business prevents it. I have a high regard for religion, but have to do certain things in my business that would be incompatible with true Christianity." Said the speaker, "I have the greatest sympathy for the men who are in business. This war is proving a real test to them. The words of the Lord are as true to-night as ever they were, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" I don't think that we should make any excuse or adduce anything that would hinder our determination to follow Christ. We ought to be straight with ourselves. Five cents earned earnestly is better than five thousand dollars earned dishonestly.

A Mathematical Problem.

A most frequent excuse for ignoring the injunction of the Master is lack of time. Some people will divide the sacred and the secular, but there is no distinction. Jesus Christ came down upon earth so show how religion will fit into every part of life as the atmosphere. Even if the man who professes to be too busy would take one half hour each Sunday it would be sufficient. One day in seven set aside for religious purposes means one week in seven. This worked out in years means that a boy of seven will devoted one year to the consideration of things spiritual; a boy of fourteen two years, and a young man of twenty-one, three years, and so on until the end of life, so that a man who lives out the allotted span of life will have consecrated ten years to things spiritual. Will any man say that he has not time to prepare? These are not reasons for hesitating to follow Christ; they are excuses. There is a world of difference between an excuse and a reason. To-night I ask you to turn from the path of sin and tread the path of obedience and trust.

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time "Pape's Diapepsin!" In five Minutes all Stomach Misery is Gone.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvellous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who cannot get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

Lost Income Of Estate

Court Action to Recover Securities —Allege Misrepresentation

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—Pleading that he was induced to sign an alleged agreement by misrepresentation, J. D. Hamilton, a beneficiary under the will of James Hamilton, Bellaville, sued Edw. Gallow for the return of securities involved in the agreement. In the statement of claim, plaintiff avers that following the alleged agreement, defendant wrongfully notified the Northern Life Assurance Company of Canada, the New York Life Assurance Company, and others, that he was the assignee of the rights of plaintiff in the estate, which temporarily embarrassed plaintiff and deprived him of a share of his income.

The income of the estate, which is mainly composed of Bell Telephone and Mackay shares, amounts to between $1,500 and $1,700 a year.

Mr. Justice McClute of Toronto, is hearing the evidence.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

He stepped over to the table and, with a swift and passionate gesture, caught up two books. "These are my best friends," he said, and she read on the covers, "Plutarch's Lives," and "Tragedies of William Shakespeare." The girl looked up with amazement in her eyes, but she met in his own pupils a fire and eagerness which silenced her. She could not tell whether she was being wrought upon by the strange fire that dwelt in his eyes or the colourfulness of his voice, or the influence of something beyond himself, as though the ripe old portrait were talking. But as she listened and looked at the magnificent physique of his wedge-like torso, tapering from broad shoulders to slender waist, she was conscious only of the compelling masculine that seemed to vibrate about him.

Here was a man with all the primal vigour of manhood. Were he living in days when women sought strong mates, Anse Havey would have had his choice of wives. She thought of the gentleman whom she had almost married and who lacked all this. Anse Havey was an outlaw and at home would seem a crude barbarian, but he was the sort of barbarian whose brain and body could lay a spell on those about him. A wild thrill of admiration tingled through her being, not such as any other man had ever caused, but such as she had felt when she watched the elemental play of lightning and thunder and wind along the mountain tops.

CHAPTER XIX.

"It's only lonesome people," Anse Havey went on, "that knows how to love an' dream. I've stood up there on the ridge with Julius Caesar and Alexander the Great, an' it seemed to me like I could see 'em as plain as I see you now. I could see the sun shinin' on the eagles of the legions an' the solid shields of the phalanx. I'm rich enough, I reckon, to live amongst other men that read books, too, but a dream keeps me spendin' my days here. The dream is that some day these here mountains shall come into their own. These people have got it in 'em ter be a great people, an' I've stayed on here because I aimed to try an' help 'em."

"But," she faintly expostulated, "you seem to stand for the very things that hold them back. You speak almost reverently of their killing instinct and you oppose schools."

The man shook his head gravely, and continued, "I'm a feudist because my people are feudists an' because I can lead 'em only so long as I'm a fightin' Havey. God knows if I could wipe out this blood-spillin' I'd gladly go out an' offer myself as a sacrifice to bring it about. You call me an outlaw—well, I've done made laws an' I've done broke them an' I've seen just about as much crookedness and lawlessness at one end of the game as at the other."

"But, schools?" inquired Juanita. "Why wouldn't they help your dream toward fulfilment?"

"I ain't against no school that can begin at the right end. I'm against every school that can only onsettle an' teach dissatisfaction with humble livin' where folks has got to live humble."

He paused and paced the room. This man was no longer the man who had seemed the immovable stoic. His eyes were far away, looking beyond the horizons, into the future.

"It's took your people two centuries to get where they're standin' today," he broke out abruptly, "an' fer them two hundred years we've been standin' still or goin' back. Now ye come downy here an' seeks to jerk my people up to where ye stands in the blinkin' of an eye. Ye comes lookin' down on 'em an' pityin' 'em because they won't eat outen your hand. They'd rather be eagles, than songbirds in a cage, even if eagles are wild and lawless. Ye comes here an' straightway tells 'em that their leaders are infamous. Do ye offer 'em better leaders? Ye refuses the aid of men that know 'em—men of their blood—an' go your own ignorant way. Do ye see any reason why I should countenance ye? Don't ye see ye're just a-scatterin' my sheep before they knows how to herd themselves?"

"I'm afraid," said the girl, very slowly and humbly, "that I've been a fool."

"Ye says the boy, Jeb, wears my trade-mark in the hate that's on his face," continued Anse Havey passionately. "He's been here, with me, consortin' with them fellers in Plutarch an' Shakespeare. If I can curb him an' keep him out of mischief he's goin' down to Frankfort some day an' learn his lessons in the Legislature. He ain't goin' to no college because I aims to fit him for his work right here. I seek to have fellers like him guide these folks forward. I don't aim to have them civilized by bein' wiped out an' trod to death."

He paused while Juanita Holland repeated helplessly and half aloud, "I've been a fool!"

"I reckon ye don't know that young Jeb McNash thinks little Milt kilt Fletch, an' that one day he laid out in the la'rel to kill little Milt. Ye don't know that the only reason he stayed his hand was that I'd got his promise ter bide his time. But I reckon ye do know that if Milt was killed by a Havey all that's transpired in ten years wouldn't make a patch on the hell-raisin' that'd go on hereabouts in a week. Do ye think it's strange that Jeb don't want his sister consortin' with the boy that he thinks murdered his father?"

Juanita rose from her chair, feeling like a pert and cocksure interloper who had been disdainfully looking down on one with a vision immeasurably wider and surer than her own. At last she found herself asking, "But surely young Milt didn't kill Fletch. Surely you don't believe that?"

"No, I know he didn't, but there's just one way I can persuade your Jeb to believe it—an' that's to tell him who did."

His eyes met hers and for a moment lighted with irony. "If I did that I reckon Jeb would be willin' to let ye keep Dawn an' Jesse—an' of course he'd kill the other man. Do ye want me to do it? Just say the word, ma'am, an' I'll call him in. It may not cost but one life ter let ye have your way. Life's right cheap hereabouts. One or two more oughtn't hardly to stand between a lady an' her sacred mission." He moved to the closed door and paused with his hand on the knob.

"No, stop!" she almost screamed. "It would mean murder. Merciful God, it's so hard to decide some things!" Anse Havey turned back to the room. "I just thought I'd let ye see that for youself," he said quietly; "ye ain't hardly been able ter see why it's hard for us people to decide 'em."

Suddenly a new thought struck her and it brought from her a sudden question. "But you know who the murderer is and you have spared him?"

The man laughed. "Don't fret your self, ma'am. The man that killed Fletch has left the mountains, an' right now he's out of reach. But he'll be back some day an' when he comes I reckon the first news you'll hear of him will be that he's dead." Once more it was the implacable avenger who spoke by his gospel of a life for a life. The girl could only murmur in perplexity, "Yet you have kept Jeb in ignorance. I don't understand. It all seems so complicated."

"I've got other plans for Jeb," said Bad Anse Havey. "I don't low to let him be a feud killer. There's others that can attend to that." He flung the door open and called Jeb; and a moment later the boy, black of countenance, came in, and stood glaring about with a sullen defiance of a young bull just turned into the ring where he is to face the matador. "Jeb," suggested the Chief, gravely, "I reckon if Dawn don't see young Milt again ye ain't goin' to object to her havin' an education, are ye?"

The boy stiffened and his reply was curly.

"I don't 'low ter hev my folks a-consortin' with no McBriars."

Anse Havey spoke again very quietly, "Milt didn't knw no more about that killin' than I did, Jeb."

"How does ye know that?" The question burst out fiercely and swiftly. The boy bent forward with his eyes eagerly burning above his high cheek-bones and his mouth stiff in a snarl of suspense. "How does ye know?"

"Because I know who did."

"Tell me his name!" The shrill demand was almost a shriek. Again Jeb's face had become ashen and his muscles were twitching. Anse laid a hand on his shoulder, but the boy jerked away and again confronted his elder while his voice broke from his lips in an excess of passion. "Tell me his name. By God, he b'longs ter me."

"No, I ain't goin' to tell ye his name just yet, Jebb," Anse calmly announced. "He ain't in these parts now. He's left the mountains an' it wouldn't do ye much good to know his name—yet. Two days after he comes back I'll tell ye all ye wants to know an' I won't try ter hinder ye, but ye must let the children stay over there at the school. Dawn's heart's set on it, an' it wouldn't be fair to break her heart."

The boy stood trembling in wrath and indecision. Finally his voice came dubiously. "Ye done give me yore hand once before that es soon as ye knowed ye'd tell me—an' ye lied ter me."

Anse Havey shook his head with unruffled patience.

"No, I didn't lie to you, son. I wasn't sure till after he left, I ain't never lied to no man."

A long silence fell on the room. Through the open window came the silvery call of a quail in some distant thicket. Jeb was remembering the tried friendship and unquestioned loyalty of his chief of clan and the comradeship of the books, and the debts he owed to Anse Havey. After a while he raised his head and nodded in his compact. "I'll give ye my hand," he said, "an' I asks yore pardon for callin' ye a liar. I wouldn't suffer no other man ter do it in my hearin'."

When he left the room the girl rose from her chair.

"There is no way to thank you, Mr. Havey," she said with a touch of diffidence. "I don't believe that we can win out to law by lawlessness. But I do believe you are sincere and I know that you're a man."

"And as for me," he said slowly, "I think ye're just tryin' to grow an oak tree in a flower pot, an' it can't be done. I think that all ye can do is to breed discontent—an' in these hills discontent is dangerous. But I ain't hinderin' your school an' I don't 'low to. Ye'll find out for yourself that it's a failure an' quit at your own behest."

"I sha'n't quit," she assured him, but this time she smiled as she said it. "I am going ahead and in the end I am going to undermine the regime of feud and illiteracy; that is, I and others like me. But can't we fight the thing out as if it were a clean game? Can't we be friendly adversaries? You've been very generous and I've been a bigoted little fool, but can't you forgive me and be friends?"

He straightened while his face hardened again. Slowly he shook his head. His voice was very grave and uncompromising though without discourtesy. "I'm afraid it's a little too late for that."

Juanita slowly drew back the hand she had extended and her cheeks flushed crimson. It was the first time in her life that she had made an unsolicited proffer of friendship—and she had been rebuffed.

"Oh!" she murmured in a dazed, hurst voice, in which was no anger. Then she smiled and said: "Then there's nothing else to say, except to thank you a thousand times."

"Ye needn't have no uneasiness about my tryin' to hinder ye," he repeated, slowly. "I ain't your enemy an' I ain't your friend. I'm just lookin' on an' I don't have no faith in your success."

"Don't you feel that changes must come?" she questioned a little timidly. "They have come everywhere else."

"They will come," his voice again rose vehemently. "But they'll be made my way—our way, not yours. These hills sha'n't always be a reproach to the State of Kentucky. They're goin' to be her pride some day."

"That's all," exclamied the girl, flinging at him a glance of absolute admiration. "I don't care who does it, so long as it's done right. You've got to see sooner or later that we're working to the same end. You may not be my friend, but I'm going to be yours."

"I'm obleeged to ye," he said gravely, and, turning on his heel, left the room through the back door. For a while she waited for him to return, and then, realizing that the interview was ended, she, too, turned and went out to the porch. It seemed to Juanita Holland, as she climbed the ridge again, that a decade had passed since the shadow of Jeb McNash had fallen across the flower bed. With that note from Anse Havey had come a crushing sense of her helplessness, and a full realization that no wheel could turn when one of the dictators raised a forbidding hand. So she had gone expecting to face vindictiveness, and had for the first time caught a glimpse of the soul that lay shuttered behind the mask of Anse Havey's veiled eyes. It had only been a glimpse and it made her want to see more. So she came back, thinking of a half-barbaric man of strong limbs and fearless heart, who walked under the constant menace of death, and who combined in his audacious make-up a dash of the magnificent. His was a thankless mission at best; a lonely vigil through a long night. Not only did he face the constant threat of McBriar hate, but to the outside world he was Bad Anse Havey, whose name was held in disrepute. Then the girl smiled, for the October air was still full of champagne sparkle and she was young enough to be stirred by the sterling mark of romance. At all events she had met a man. Here was no swordless shadow.

HAD DYSPEPSIA

So Bad Could Not Take a Drink of Water Without Suffering.

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure. You eat too much. Drink too much. Use too much tobacco. You make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of a short time before dyspepsia follows.

That old, forty year old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we have received from time to time.

Miss Sarah McRae, Newfield, Ont., writes: "I write to say that I have used your Burdock Blood Bitters, and have found it the best remedy I have ever used for dyspepsia. Two years ago, I had stomach trouble so bad that I could not even take a drink of water without suffering. I took six bottles of B.B.B., and have been entirely cured, and can now eat anything without any bad after effects."

Burdock Blood Bitters is an old and well tried remedy but on account of the many substitutes we would ask you to make sure that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as this preparation is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Was Troubled for Years With Kidney Disease

And This Treatment Cured Me—This Treatment Endorsed By a Baptist Minister.

The great majority of people are familiar with the extraordinary curative powers of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. But for the benefit of those who are not we continue to publish from day to day reports from persons who have been actually cured.

MR. MOSHER.

The case described in this letter was an extreme one, and the writer was in a very low condition when he began the use of these pills. The cure was so marked that Mr. Mosher's pastor did not hesitate to vouch for his statement.

By their unique combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure in complicated cases which defy the action of ordinary kidney medicines.

Mr. W. H. Mosher, Streetsville, Ont., writes:—"I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and frankly believe there is no medicine to equal them. I was troubled for years with kidney disease, and this treatment has cured me. When I began the use of these pills I could only walk from my bed to a chair. Now I can go to the field and work like any other man. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are an excellent medicine."

This statement is certified to by the Rev. W.H. Sinnett, Baptist minister of Brockville, Ont.

By awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure Constipation, Headaches, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney Disease, Liver Complaint and Backache. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The Secret of Health is Elimination of Waste

Every business man knows how difficult it is to keep the pigeon holes and drawers of his desk free from the accumulation of useless papers. Every housewife knows how difficult it is to keep her home free from the accumulation of all manner of useless things. So it is with the body. It is difficult to keep it free from the accumulation of waste matter. Unless the waste is promptly eliminated the machinery of the body soon becomes clogged. This is the beginning of most human ills.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Acquittal and a Conviction

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

When my uncle Charles Dingley was found dead one morning in his bed I as his nearest male relative who at once summoned. I went to his room which had been left untouched in every particular, and by the bed on which the body lay I found a bottle about two inches high and one inch square, around the four sides of which was pasted a label with the usual "Poison" warning printed on it.

There was nothing in my uncle's affairs to indicate that he had had any intention of committing suicide. He had not been very well for a few days, but there was nothing serious the matter with him. He might have been murdered and the bottle placed at his side to give the impression that he had taken poison. There were no marks on the body to indicate that he had been murdered.

The establishment of the facts in the case did not appeal to me. My uncle was dead, and whether he had been murdered or murdered himself made little difference to me. To put detectives on the case would cost money, but who would be the gainer? The authorities came to the house, made a perfunctory examination of the body and its surroundings and reported that the deceased had come to his death by means of poison administered by himself.

I went through the house myself looking for a clew. I had found a tumbler on the table with the poison and in the kitchen pantry found a dozen others of the same shape and make.

That fact indicated that the tumbler had come from the pantry. Dishes containing different kinds of food—mostly left over—were in the closet, one of them being a saucer of preserved peaches. It had apparently been knocked over, and a little of the juice had been spilled on the floor. It occurred to me that whoever had taken down the tumbler from the shelf had done so in the dark and had put his hand against the dish of peach preserves.

If he had done this some of the juice, if it had got on his fingers, might have adhered to them. I found faint, cloudy smears on the tumbler and, putting the tip of my tongue on them, thought I could detect saccharine matter. Examining the label on the poison bottle carefully, I found stains that I inferred might be the same as the cloud on the glass.

I locked up the tumbler and the bottle of poison, but had no desire to go any further with my examinations. I saw nothing to be gained by unearthing the mystery.

Fate decided, however, that it should be unraveled, or, rather, it should come out that there was no mystery at all. I was engaged to a girl who had discarded a former lover. Herman Goodsell hated me and brought about a suspicion that I had murdered my uncle. But this did not occur until my uncle had been buried. The will when opened disclosed the fact that my uncle had left a lot of money and every cent of it to me. Then our enemy began to get in his fine work, whispering here and there, till the police felt obliged to take cognisance of the reports and arrested me for murder.

The first thing I did was to engage an attorney and through him obtain the exhumation of the body for the purpose of having the finger prints taken. This was done. Then I had the tumbler that had stood by my uncle's bed examined with a microscope. A faint yellow substance was found on it, which contained a finger print. By treating the label of the poison bottle chemically a very clear finger print was obtained.

I had no idea how the accusation against me had started until my fiancee told me that she had probed the matter and traced a beginning to her former lover. This put me on my mettle to thwart him, and I named him as one of my witnesses to be subpoenaed for my trial. I gave my lawyer a list of questions to ask him, most of which had been furnished me by my sweetheart. When the case was called he was one of the first witnesses to take the stand, and my attorney soon showed malevolence on his part in that he had gone about spreading the reports that I had murdered my uncle. This had nothing to do with the case, but was intended for revenge.

When my real defense came up my attorney made short work of the matter. He had the tumbler and the label of the poison bottle in court, copies of the finger prints on them and a finger print of my uncle's thumb and two forefinger tips. They tallied exactly.

Goodsell was in court when I received my vindication. Under my instruction he received a tongue lashing that he was not likely to forget. My advocate showed how little evidence there had been against me, how it had been worked up by Goodsell and his reasons for having started the suspicions against me which had led to a needless and expensive trial. Goodsell cringed under it. Indeed, my acquittal was his conviction. When my counsel had ceased speaking my accuser left the courtroom and has never shown his face in the place since.

My uncle's bequest was a surprise to me, for I supposed he had little or nothing of value to leave and what he had would go to another branch of the family.

ARE YOU DROOPY, TIRED, WORN OUT?

Here is Good Advice to All Who Feel as if Their Vigour and Life Had All Oozed Away.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to that described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon: "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that foul, soft feeling that tells you, 'No breakfast needed here this morning.' A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal, but I guess I didn't digest very well, for I dreamt to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar an getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they have rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

To keep free from headaches, to feel young and bright, to enjoy your best, nothing can help like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Troops From Japan.

TOKIO, Japan, Jan. 16.—The promoters in Japan of what will be called the "volunteer movement" have issued a manifesto in which they announce their intention of despatching an army corps to Europe. To this end they are appealing to both Japanese and foreigners for funds.

The manifesto says that as Lafayette helped the United States and Garibaldi helped France, so the Japanese wish to assist the allies, Great Britain, Russia and France, to terminate the misery of war and restore peace to the world.

DECEIVED BY LEADERS.

Indian Government Reports on Hindu Affair at Vancouver.

LONDON, Jan. 16. (Through Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A special despatch from Delhi, India, gives the result of the enquiry ordered by the Indian Government into the riot at Calcutta by Indians returned from Vancouver, B.C., after deportation by the Canadian immigration authorities. The despatch says:

"The report of the committee of enquiry into the voyage of the steamer Komagata Maru and the riot at Calcutta finds that most of the emigrants believed they would be allowed to land at Vancouver. The leaders, however, were aware of the law, and deliberately misled the more ignorant passengers. The judgment of Chief Justice Hunter of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, the committee finds, was also an important factor in the emigrants' belief that they would be allowed to land in Canada.

"Owing," the report says, "to successful efforts, made during the voyage, by emissaries of revolutionary organizations outside of India to promote disaffection among the emigrants, they were in a dangerous frame of mind when they left Vancouver, and intended to cause trouble on their arrival in India. In accordance with the law the emigrants were refused admission at Calcutta, after which they fired upon the police with firearms which they had concealed when their luggage was being examined, the troops firing in reply. The committee considers that the emigrants should have been effectually searched for arms before being permitted to land.

"It is not intended to institute any prosecutions in respect to the riot, and the majority of the men who were confined pending the enquiry are being returned to their homes. The minority, comprising the dangerous ringleaders, will be kept under restraint for the present."

CAT OUT OF BAG.

Eight Submarines Are Being Built by Montreal Firm.

MONTREAL, Jan. 16.—The Herald-Telegraph yesterday says: "The fact that the Canadian Vickers Co. of this city is engaged in constructing submarines for the British Government has been known here for some time, but at the request of the Government the newspapers refrained from announcing the fact.

"Evening papers of Wednesday throughout the United States carried the story that the submarines were being built here, showing that the censorship established by the Government was unable to prevent the story from being published.

"The Militia Department now says that the boats are as follows:

"The keels for eight first-class craft of the submarine class have already been laid down by the plant, and it is expected that several will be ready by August next. The plant is now running at full capacity. Rumors that the Schwab interests are in control are unequivocally denied here."

An act of congress allows Yosemite valley to have a big hotel. If congress acts many more times we won't have any natural scenery left.

The United States has in actual gold metal almost as much as any other two nations together. That illustrates the wisdom of not going to war.

It is true, as the federal bureau of education declares, that there is a difference between a vocation and a job. For instance, if a man's vocation is politics, a job is what he hopes to get for it.

AN ITALIAN VIEW

Professor Declares Britain Will Gain Regardless of Outcome of War

That Britain stands to win most should the allies succeed is the opinion of Prof. M. Pantaleoni, a well known Italian, who writes in the Giornale d'Italia on some of the probable results of the war. He believes that no matter what disasters might overwhelm the allies' armies, Britain would emerge triumphant so long as her fleet was not destroyed. The supreme issues of the war will depend upon the fleet. If it cannot be destroyed by Germany it is impossible for Germany to win, no matter what her armies might accomplish in France and Belgium and Russia. In the long run the British fleet will prove to be the ruin of Germany. Already it has done much to destroy Germany's industries and commerce, and even without a general engagement the British fleet could slowly strangle Germany to death, so that she would be obliged to choose between starvation and capitulation.

While the war lasts Britain is capturing German colonies and trade. As well she is capturing French and Belgian trade, for the war is being fought on Belgian and French soil, with the result that many of their great industries are at a standstill. Belgium has no trade left. Former customers of Belgium must either supply their own wants or buy elsewhere. Germany and Austria cannot supply them. Russia is not a manufacturing nation. There remains, then Britain, and she is getting most of the business that formerly went to France and Belgium as well as to Germany. If Britain was the greatest colonial and commercial power before the war, says the professor, she will continue to be so in an increased degree after the war is over.

France's position, he says, is exactly the reverse of Britain's. Whether the war is lost or won, or ends in a draw, in the case of France the difference will be between greater or smaller ruin more or less lasting. Germany has flooded the iron mines in Lorraine, which enabled France to stand second in Europe to Germany alone in the production of iron. After the war these mines will be pumped out, "but the time will be long, the capital will be dear, and the markets will have been lost."

In the north of France the ruin has been as great. Here were the coal and the textile industries. France may have her revenge when the allies destroy German mines in Westphalia, and demolish German factories; but this will not help France. It will only mean that she will consolidate British supremacy by destroying a British industrial rival.

When Delaware Produced Iron.

In colonial times and during the early years of considerable relative importance as a producer of iron ore for blooming and furnaces, and with the disappearance of the blooming Delaware's iron mining industry ceased to exist, and no iron ore has been produced in the state for many years. The principal mineral products of Delaware now are obtained from quarries, sand and gravel pits and springs of potable water.

The Living Telephone.

Some time after the close of the Franco-German war the Prussian plan drill was introduced into the British cavalry. The first men to be exercised in it were a corps of household cavalry (Blues) at Windsor. They were extended each some 800 yards from his fellow, many miles of country being covered. This verbal message was given to the soldier on the extreme right to pass along: "Enemy's vedettes at Eagle's Field Green." It got hopelessly muddled halfway. The amazed officer waiting to receive it got this communication from the trooper on the extreme left: "England's bets paid by the queen."—London Answers.

Attracted the Miss.

One curious result of a foreign invasion is recorded in the letters of Prince Metternich to Mme. de Lieven. From Judenburg, a small town in Styria, the prince wrote: "The burgomaster here has been expatiating to me on the large amount of damage done by mice to farms in the surrounding district. On inquiring how long they had been afflicted in this way I was told, 'Since the French were here.' 'Do you mean to tell me the French brought mice with them?' I asked. 'No,' replied the burgomaster, 'but they ate so much bread that they covered our fields with crumbs, and since then all the mice in Styria appear to have settled here.'"—London Express.

Dochart Spelled Macgregor.

Many of the Macgregors, when their own name was forbidden, took that of Dochart. This was in gratitude for the escape of a number of them, who, being hard pressed, got away by swimming the stream that issues from Loch Dochart. Dean Ramsay has an anecdote of a young "Dochart" from Dumbiane, who in being sent to Glasgow college presented a letter from his minister to the Rev. Dr. Heugh of Glasgow. He gave his name as Dochart, but in the letter it was Macgregor. "Oh," said the doctor, "I fear there is some mistake about your identity; the names don't agree." "Weel, sir, that's the way they spell the name in our country."—London Chronicle.

The Followup Method.

"Why do you get the pretty girls jobs first? Is that fair?"

"Best for all concerned," declared the head of the school of stenography. "The pretty girl soon marries her employer, and then there's a permanent job for one of the plainer young ladies."—Pittsburgh Post.

Even when the Leader Times was sold at a high price its agony columns was entertaining. Now that a copy of the journal costs only a penny the column is still more appalling. Witness this advertisement:

If this cry had been uttered in the old days Satan would have appeared in a pleasing form and with courteous address waited on the gentleman in despair. Eyeglass Lenses.

All lenses used in making eyeglasses by manufacturers in this country are formed from imported glass, which is secured principally from Germany. This glass is of texture and transparency so far above the products of American glass plants that the optical companies use it exclusively for their high grade work. Each blank is about two inches square and nearly one-eighth inch in thickness. In appearance it is not unlike an ordinary piece of plate glass—the edges are rough from the molds, and it has no magnifying properties. This is the work of the optical manufacturer, and it is for him to grind the glass and form it until it magnifies or refracts the object before it.—Columbian Dispatch.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

Binding edges with silk braid is one of the latest features, and in this instance the braid should exactly match the serge. Of course it should always match when used, but in browsing the temptation is often to take a chance, as the edging are very elusive. A Russian shade, particularly, would be hopeless. The smaller front view shows how the tunic can be extended to meet at the front and also how the visitt looks without the tuban. The real style of the dress, however, is illustrated in the main view. The pattern, No. 6,976, can be obtained in sizes from fourteen to twenty years, corresponding to from 31 to 39 inches bust measure.

The plan of the dress is very simple. The waist body has front, back and sleeve cut in one piece, with a seam at centre back, and with the collar sewed on this part is practically finished. The blouse is in two pieces only, front and back, the front turning over in the form of revers. There is a seam each side of the tunic and seams at side and back of the underskirt.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Farmers Are Crying Out

Unemployed Refuse to Take All-year Farm Jobs—Conditions As They Exist in Peterborough

TORONTO, Jan 10—In the opinion of the Colonization Department of the Provincial Department, that unemployed do not really want employment, or at least employment of the year-round kind such as may be had from farmers It was reported to-day that farmers from many parts of the Province have complained that they cannot get year-labourers at any price.

"Why don't you send the unemployed to us?" writes a farmer from the Strathroy district, "Recruiting officers are getting all the eligible young men around here. We cannot get labourers."

The reply of the Department to that is that they are unable to fill the farmers' demands owing to the disposition on the part of the unemployed to refuse to tie themselves down to a year's contract, or even to an all summer's job.

Conditions similar to these enumerated above exist in Peterborough. Instances have been reported of men who were sent out to farmers, and when they were asked to commit themselves to eight months' or a year's engagement, refused employment. They eventually found their way back to the City and endeavoured to obtain charity.

Too Much For 100 Cabs.

One afternoon Signor Labbarba, the celebrated basso, a man of enormous proportions, on leaving Covent Garden theatre after rehearsal found that his carriage had not arrived, so he sent for a four wheeler. Into this, after a strenuous effort, he managed to squeeze his massive body, to find himself seated on the edge of the smaller seat, a truly uncomfortable position, which it was imperative at once to change. As he struggled to his feet in his attempt to do so the bottom of the vehicle gave way, and the singer found himself standing in the road. Help, however, was at hand, and he was relieved with no small difficulty from his ridiculous dilemma.

A similar adventure befell the brothers Pope—one a doctor, the other the well known Q. C.—who between them weighed over forty stone, while crossing Waterloo bridge in a four wheeled cab. How it happened is uncertain, but about the centre of the bridge the door of the cab collapsed, and for the next thirty yards two pairs of stocky legs, straining to keep pace with the horse's rapid canter, bore a spectacle for unaccustomed mirth. Giddy soon pulled up, and again beside quickly entertained the cheer-and-encouraged bystanders.—London "Tit-Bits."

No Fruit Without Bees.

If there were no bees, fruit trees and other flowers could not flourish. Apples, pears, cucumbers, cabbages, melons are fertilized by bees. Honey is the bait with which the bee is induced to perform this task. The colorful, fragrant petals of the blossoms are the advertising signboard telling the bee where the honey may be found. If the blossom is to set fruit the bee with its fuzzy body must bring some of the yellow dust called pollen from the male organs or anthers of the bottom of the blossom, deposit this pollen on the female organ called the stigma. The blossoms are so arranged that to get at the honey the bee almost first brush, with its pollen covered body against the stigma, thus accomplishing the pollination. As soon as it has performed this duty it may draw a check for the work in the form of the blossom. While drawing this pay the bee is invariably covered with pollen again and made ready to proceed to the next blossom and repeat the process.—Francis Jaggy.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR BLACK

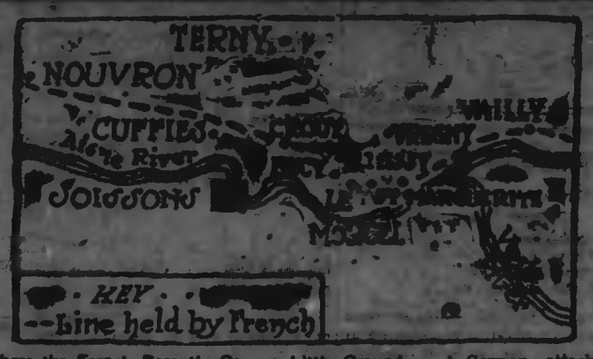
Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay grey! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.



Where the French Recently Gave a Little Ground. — A German attack against the French, near Vregny compelled them to give a little ground and retire to Racy, Le Moncel, Missy and St. Marguerite. Since then they have withdrawn to the South side of the River. They may be able to undertake another advance.

Cured His Obesity.

Peter the Great was once travelling incognito in a part of Finland when he met a very fat man, who told him that he was going to St. Petersburg.

"What for?" asked the czar.

"To consult a doctor about being so fat, which has become very oppressive."

"Do you know any doctor there?"

"No."

"Then I will give you a line to my friend, Prince Menschikoff, and he will introduce you to one of the emperor's physicians."

The traveler went to the prince's house with capons. The answer was not delayed. The next day, tied hands and feet, the poor man was dragged off on a cart to the palace.

Two years after Peter the Great was visiting the palace. He had forgotten the incident of the fat man, when suddenly a miller threw down his pick, rushed up to him and fell at his feet, crying:

"Great Caesar, what is it I have done?"

Peter looked at him, astonished, until he remembered the story.

"Oh, so that's he gone?" he said. "I hope you are pleased with me. Stand up. Now tell me what right you have I accosted Go, and remember that work is the best cure for your complaint!"

How Do You Laugh?

Refinement can be indicated as strongly by the manner in which a person laughs as by the tone of the speaking voice.

Some people could hear the tone they use while laughing they would detect themselves in perpetual coarseness.

A real hearty laugh is like a tonic to the system. It not only does the person good who enjoys it; but it does every one good who hears it.

Of such a laugh there is no criticism. But there are people who do not enjoy laughing; but who laugh in a forced and unnatural manner, and generally at the most inopportune moment.

An affected laugh by either a man or a woman is a contempt of the true laughter. There is no necessity to laugh loudly, the heartiest laugh is the quietest in tone.

Remember, when laughter is natural it is irresistible and beautiful, full when it is forced it falls like rasping sound upon refined ears.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Brazil's Name.

Long before the Portuguese colonized the coast of Brazil adventurous Bristol merchants had equipped expeditions in a vain search for the supposed island of Brazylle. Who gave Brazil her present name is unknown to fame—the early Portuguese called it Terra da Vera Cruz—but whoever baptized the country took the name from the Bhat Indians. For many years before the discovery of Brazil merchants had brought from the east for the use of dyers a wood which yielded a beautiful red color—brazil or brazilly. The West Indies have trees of the same sort, but Brazil contains them in more abundance than any other country. So that Brazil wood is not called so after the country. The country is named so because of its red dye trees.—London Chronicle.

Travels of Roots.

Roots travel amazing distances in search of their requirements. A timber merchant, excavating for a cellar in England, found an elm root one and a quarter inches in diameter and about three feet deep, running through a bed of sawdust from the tree to the nearest water.

The aggregate length of root thrown out by some plants is almost incredible. A cucumber will, within its short life of about half a year, throw out from ten to fifteen miles of roots.

Clever roots will go straight down to a depth of six or nine feet in search of moisture, and coltsfoot, one of the most powerful and persistent of weeds, sends its suckers down to an even greater depth.—London Stray Stories.

Lost the Point.

Publicity.

"It's a bad thing to talk about your neighbors."

"That's right," replied the man who is all business. "Publicity is worth something these days. I shouldn't think of talking about anybody except at advertising rates."—Washington Star.

Another Recipe.

Aspiring Novelist—Ah, sir, I am highly flattered, I'm sure, to hear that you rate my book to tell with you and read it there! Acquaintance—Yes, I have been troubled with insomnia for a long time, and I find one of your pages much better than any medicine.

BELGIANS ENTERTAIN TROOPS.

Householders Must Feed and Attend Upon Soldiers.

Many Belgian householders here already been warned that they must be prepared to have soldiers billeted upon them. West Londoners seem to have had the first experience in the metropolis, but reports that crops in indicate that it is becoming general. Officers are going along white streets of the suburbs commandeering accommodation for the growing army of the Territorials. Two to half a dozen are being billeted upon each house, according to the space available. Householders who have room or may be requisitioned for this form of war duty will be interested to know what is required of them.

A soldier may be billeted on a house with "full subsistence," with "partial subsistence," or "without subsistence." In the first event, the family must feed and attend upon the soldier, but need not find bedding or furniture, receiving in return about two shillings a day for an officer and one shilling and nine pence for a private. Billets "without subsistence" — that is to say, a mere lodging, with attendance and the use of cooking utensils, but without board—is not generally paid for.

In subsistence billets, of course, the officers have to see that the ordinary fare of the family is up to the proper standard. The military authorities have full power in such cases as the present to enforce whatever billeting duty may direct; but it is not likely that householders will be unpatriotic enough to raise unreasonable objections to what, at the worst, is only an inconvenience. In this country no family need have any fears as to the behavior of the British soldier.

Shot German Prince.

In a despatch from Amsterdam the local correspondent of the Central News says that the shot which ultimately resulted in the death of Prince Von Buelow, one of the German generals, was fired by a Belgian private named Mignolet, who has since been decorated by King Albert for his conduct in the battle of Haelen.

Mignolet was lying badly wounded among the group of dead comrades when he saw a German officer approaching beside his horse and studying a map. Picking up a rifle from the still of a dead German, Mignolet fired at this officer, and wounded him. He subsequently proved to be Prince Von Buelow. Snatching his hat for the German general's helmet, and taking the general's horse, Mignolet made his way to the Belgian lines and was placed in a hospital at Ghent.

Realizing Reflecting.

One of the curious features of the Italian situation is the unobtrusive opening of a modest bureau in a small street with the motto "For the Defence of Italian Liberties" over the entrance. This bureau enlists volunteers, who will go to the French frontier to help the French with a guerilla warfare. They have had several hundred recruits since opening, and people declare they will march within ten days.

The 60,000 men called out by the latest royal command are the pick of the Italian reserve, men between 26 and 30, who have seen Alrican service. They included some of the famous Bersaglieri, said to be the fastest walkers in the world — little wiry men, who can stand anything and shoot splendidly. Two more classes will be called out in a few days.

A Case in Point.

"Johnnie," said a teacher in a physiology class, "can you give a familiar example of the human body as it adapts itself to changed conditions?"

"Yes-sum," said Johnnie; "my aunt gained fifty pounds in a year and her skin never stretched."

Something Really Important.

HOPES TO FEAR.

U. S. Gunboat May Kidnap to Make Raid on Canada.

The danger of raids into Canadian territory by British sympathizers in the United States is one of the contingencies of the present war which the Canadian Militia Department guarded against on the first news of hostilities in Europe. Sections of regiments are now on guard at practically all points where vandalism could cause serious damage. Canal cuts, bridges, docks; elevators, etc., are under the rifles of Canadian militiamen.

No one pretends that the menace from the other side of the international boundary has, as yet, taken alarming form. Many of the stories of attempted destructive havoc into Canada, but there remained sufficient evidence to prepare the Militia Department for active service. The present circumstances are not slightly different from the days of the Fenian Raid when Irish-Americans tried to "capture" Canada by force of arms. There is, however, the interesting distinction that Irish-Americans to-day are lined up behind the British Government, the greatest peril facing the people in American centres of German birth and sympathies.

Three points recently rumours have come regarding conspiracies to wreak vengeance on Canadian property and at both points, Buffalo and Ogdensburg, assurances have been received from the local police authorities that their vigilance may be relied upon to abort the plans of any marauding expeditions. Following is a letter received from Michael Regan superintendent of police at Buffalo:

"In reference to the possibility of 'German-Americans' raiding Canada now that England and Germany are in a state of war, I see nothing in conditions here that would warrant such a move. The great majority of German-Americans are among the best of our law-abiding citizens, and while they are dearly attached to the 'Fatherland,' have too much sense to attempt the capture of Canada. This Government would soon quash such a movement if attempted. Of course, there are cranks in all communities and as individuals they may be tempted to go over and commit some rash act, but as for a general raid, nothing to it."

Selling Rats.

Pressure a dozen little toy bells until the children's play time, a spool of wire and any trap to catch rats alive. Bait the trap and catch as many as you can and let them get really hungry. Then empty the rats into a barrel or box from which they cannot escape. Put on a heavy leather glove, reach in, grab a rat by the back and with wire fasten the bell on the rat's neck and turn him loose. Do the same with all you have caught. In two days but a rat can be found.—Farm and Fireside.

Her Version of It.

Who says a love story of this time does not thrill? Here is one told by a little girl of a visit to the zoo. GERMAN ASSAULTS ARE REPULSED

FOE LOSES HEAVILY NEAR SOISSONS

GERMAN ASSAULTS IN FORCE DRIVEN BACK

Charge French Position But Are Met By Heavy Artillery Fire Which Inflicts Severe Losses---French Are Pushing Offensive Near Pont-A-Mousson and Capture Several German Positions

SPECIAL CABLE:

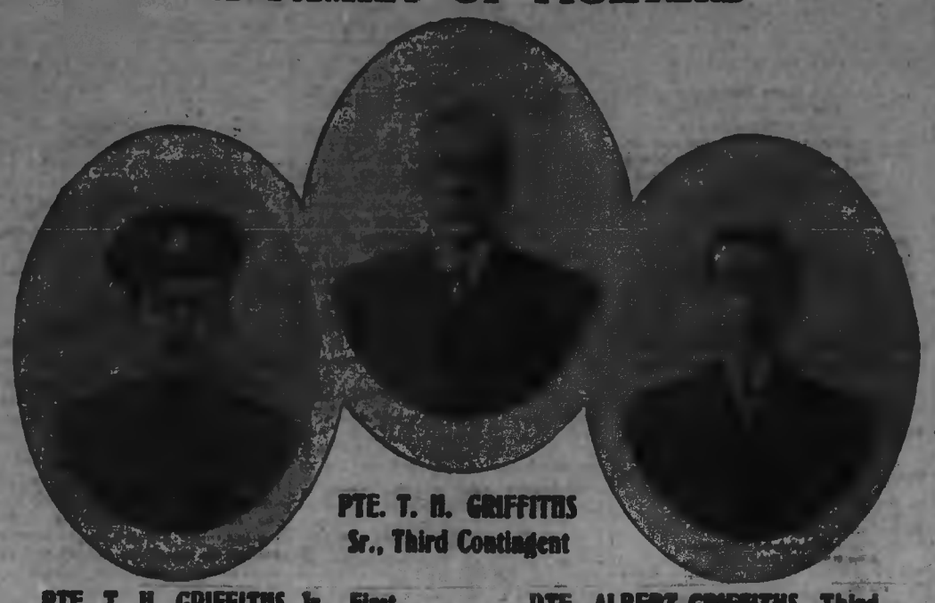
PARIS, January 18.---The official statefent at non Monday says: Two German assaults in force near Autreches, 10 miles north west of Soissons, have been repulsed by the French with heavy losses, according to the reports that were received to-day. The fighting there continues with the Germans still trying to obtain a foothold on the Fresch positions. The Germans have also attacked Crest 263 in the Argonne region, but have been defeated with very heavy losses. They charged a French position only to be met with a heavy artillery fire which killed and wounded many, while the French losses are declared to have been inconsiderable.

The French are pushing their offensive in the Le Pretre woods, north west of Pont a Mousson, and have captured several of the German outlying positions there. There is said to be heavy snow in the Vosges and in Alsace but despite this handicap the Germans have bombarded Thann; little damage is reported here and the French are maintaining their positions.

From the North Sea to the Oise heavy cannonading continues with the artillery of each side wiping out houses and towns at several points. A violent gale of wind and rain has swept over the entire northern battle front, adding to the discomfort of the armies. Entire lines of trenches have been filled with water, the troops having to withdraw from them to avoid being drowned. The storm has made impossible any attempted offensive by the Germans for several days in this section.

According to a broker's despatch received here this afternoon the British cruiser "Berwick" has sunk the Hamburg American steamer "Pendent" off the coast of Cuba to-day, after removing the crew and passengers. There's no official confirmation.

A FAMILY OF FIGHTERS



PTE. T. H. GRIFFITHS Sr., Third Contingent

PTE. T. H. GRIFFITHS Jr., First Contingent

PTE. ALBERT GRIFFITHS, Third Contingent

The above pictures should be a stimulant to local recruiting. Here is a family of three patriotic Peterborough people. Mr. T. H. Griffiths, Sr., and his two sons. One son, Pte. T. H. Griffiths, Jr., enlisted with the 57th detachment to the first Canadian contingent, and is now at Salisbury Plain with "A" Company of the 2nd Battalion. Before the war broke out he was a member of "C" Company of the 57th Regiment. The father, Mr. T. H. Griffith, Sr., who is a member of the Home Guard, and the second son, Albert, of the 57th Regiment, have enlisted in the Mounted Rifles, and are now drilling with the Third Contingent. All three were employed at the Brinton Carpet Works.

NEW RUSSIAN MOVES IN NORTH PROGRESSING

Despite Fearful Weather Conditions the Russians Have Advanced North of the Vistula While in the Centre They Are Holding Their Own Against the Main German Column

SPECIAL CABLE:

PETROGRAD, January 18.--Despite the fearful weather conditions severe fighting was to-day reported in progress north of the Vistula, where the Russian new movement is progressing rapidly, and south of the river, where the Germans are endeavouring to continue their progress towards Warsaw. The northern force has advanced nearly a mile from the village of Budy Sulkawak which was taken Saturday in a bayonet charge. Against the main German column it is declared the Russians are holding their own although they were compelled to cede one of their chief lines of frontal trenches which had been almost completely destroyed by German bombs.

LONDON, January 18.--As the stories from the front of Princess Patricia's brilliant action are received here, it develops that Canada's crack regiment well held up the honour of the country in its baptism of fire. Despit the other reports it is ascertained this morning that the total casualties of the first action were 4 dead and 14 wounded. The dead include Capt. Newton as already stated. A full list of the casualties was sent to the Ottawa militia department, and cannot be ascertained here. Relatives will be notified direct.

For five full days the Canadian regiment faced the fire of the Germans in trenches only 50 yards away. They were so close that the Pats could distinctly hear the Germans bating water out of their trenches, when the firing slackened. Finally there came to the Canadians an order to advance and on they went through ankle deep mud and over barbed wire entanglements till the trenches were reached, and the Germans cleared out. All the time the German artillery poured in a destructive fire.

DRAUGHTSMAN WAS LOCKED UP IN THE VAULT

Member of the Trent Canal Staff Had An Unusal Experience On Saturday Night When Door Was Slammed

WAS SOON LIBERATED

Mr. Everett Glover, of the Trent Canal Office, had the experience of being locked in the office vault on Saturday evening last, with all the staff departed.

Mr. Glover, who is a draughtsman for the Trent Canal staff from the branch in the Post Office building, was doing a little work in the downtown office, which is located in the Old Opera House building. He was in the main office with Mr. Murphy from 5.30 p.m. to about 7.30 p.m., when he stated he was going out. He accordingly left the office, but instead of going to the street, entered the vault, which is located across the hall on the same floor, to remove a plate from his camera which was causing trouble. He was working in the dark and with his back to the doors, which were pulled shut to keep the light off the plate. Mr. Murphy left the office for the Curling Rink about 8.35 o'clock, and noticing the vault door slightly open, slammed it shut and locked it. He had remarked a couple of times on Saturday about the practice of leaving the door open so much, and when closing it did not attempt to keep from making a noise. How Mr. Glover could have helped hearing the steel door slammed shut is a mystery. He must certainly have been very interested in his work to miss noticing it.

Mr. E. J. Donoghue, manager of the City Wardrobe, located on the same floor, heard some hollering about 8.55 o'clock, and going to the vault door learned the cause. He notified a policeman, who went to the Rink and found Mr. Murphy, who returned and let Mr. Glover out.

Our morning contemporary came out with a story to-day to the effect that Mr. Glover was locked in the vault a matter of some hours, and that he was in bad shape when he was rescued. As a matter of fact, he was not locked in more than forty-five minutes, and there was plenty of air space above the door to keep a man alive indefinitely if he had food. And the air space in the vault was sufficient to keep him alive forty-eight hours had there been no outside air supply. Hence he was not in a very serious predicament. In fact, he consumed a box of chocolates while awaiting liberty.

An Examiner reporter was curious to know if the vault door would really be shut in the manner stated without attracting the attention of anyone inside. He was accordingly locked in as an experiment, and found the sound greatly intensified on the inside, also there was no trouble in finding lots of air.

Trio of Local Youths Walk To Chemong and Then Skate All the Way Round To Peterboro'

LONG TRIP ON ICE

Three local youths, H. Dixon, V. Eastwood and R. Stevenson made a long jaunt on Saturday last. They left the City on foot in the morning, carrying their skates, and walked to Chemong. From there they skated around the lakes, touching at Buckhorn and Burleigh, and arrived home about 10 p.m. The trip covered about sixty-two miles and was a remarkable feat for one day They left Burleigh about 4 o'clock and found many airholes in the ice, and were compelled to walk several miles through the woods

WILL BE LAID TO REST WITH MILITARY HONOURS

Funeral of Private John O. Lightfoot of the 2nd Contingent Will Take Place On Wednesday

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

The local armouries is one of the busiest spot in Peterborough at the present time with both mounted Rifles and Infantry attachments hard at work training to fit themselves for service overseas.

This morning there were some 115 of the Mounted Rifles on parade, while the 57th detachment showed on parade a slate of 40 men. There is still room for recruits in both bodies, although the mounted squadron is rapidly approaching its complement, and with the arrival of a number from Bowmanville district to-day will soon be completed.

Major S. T. Medd and Lieut. T. D. Johnston of the 3rd Dragoons, and Lieuts. C. R. Cameron and W. Eastwood of the 57th were on duty at the armouries this morning. Lieut. Smyth of the Mounted Rifles, is in Ottawa on business, while Lieut. Harry R. Rogers is in Toronto.

Both detachments for overseas service will take part in the military funeral on Wednesday afternoon, when the last honours will be paid to Private John O. Lightfoot, formerly of Peterborough, and who died last week at Winnipeg, where he was training with the 2nd Canadian Contingent. The firing party will be supplied by the 57th Regiment, while the band of the Regiment will also take part.

The Canadian Gazette contains the following military items of local interest:

57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers.—Captain A. G. Carruthers is permitted to resign his commission. 16th November, 1914.

To be Quartermaster with the honorary rank of Captain: Aaron Geskin Carruthers, gentleman. 16th November, 1914.

To be Captain: Lieutenant M. H. Park. 16th November, 1914.

27 MEN ARE DROWNED

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Jan 18—Twenty-one of the crew of twenty-seven of the British steamer "Penarth" were drowned to-day, off the Norfolk Coast, in the heavy storms prevailing.

Another steamer, "The George Boyle," also believed to have been wrecked.

Death of Centenarian

The Late Mrs. Blaker Was 114 Years of Age

The late Mrs. Blaker, who was buried in Alderville on Saturday, January, January 9th, was one hundred and fourteen years old. Up to the time of her death she possessed all her faculties and had never worn glasses. Her maiden name was McCue and she was born in Ennismore. Her husband predeceased her six years ago at the advanced age of ninety-eight years.

The late Mrs. Blaker's mother was of Indian origin and her father an Irishman. A number of children are living, also several grand-children. The late Mr. Courie of Peterborough, was a relative.

The husband of the late Mrs. Blaker was a local preacher and was well known in and around the community in which he moved. It is doubtful if there is a man or woman living in Ontario whose age will exceed that of Mrs. Blaker.

Musicians Hold Annual Meeting

The Examiner has pleasure in printing the subjoined report kindly supplied for publication:

The annual meeting of Local 191, American Federation of Musicians, was held on Sunday afternoon. A very large attendance of members resulted in a splendid meeting. The various reports showed the local union to be in a very healthy condition, both numerically, and financially, and twelve names were submitted to the meeting for approval as prospective members. Much business of importance was transacted, one item in particular causing much interest, and the unanimous approval of the members present. This was a resolution to the effect that "Local 191, A. F. of M., Peterborough go on record as being unanimously in sympathy with the musicians employed at the Grand Opera House in the position taken by them during the stage hands' dispute."

This resolution was deemed necessary in view of the vilifying tactics adopted by the members of the Stage Hands' Union. Local 191 further pledged themselves to support the theatre musicians by every means in their power.

Local Italians Will Contribute

To the Relief of the Earthquake Sufferers—Meeting Was Held

A movement is on foot among the Italians of this city, to inaugurate a fund for the relief of the earthquake sufferers in Italy. A meeting has been held with the result that steps will be taken to provide some practical form of relief. There are about fifty Italian families in the city, representing a population of about two hundred, men, women and children. Many of them are concerned over the recent earthquake in that they can number friends among the dead, and in one or two instances, relatives.

Many of the local Italians are out of employment and consequently will not be able to contribute much to the fund. However, such as are able, will gladly assist in the alleviation of the sufferings of those who were left destitute by the earthquake.

In New York over two thousand dollars was subscribed in one day, for this purpose. Mr. Thomas Minicofo, the well-known George street merchant, is one of the prime movers in the relief movement.

Claim That Allies Have Lost 150,000

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Jan. 18—(Via Wireless)—A claim that the Allies have lost in killed wounded, and captured, 150,000 men since it was officially announced in Paris, early in December, that the Allies were ready to assume the offensive, was made by the War Office to-day. In that time the German losses have been less than one-fourth of that number, it is asserted. The French announcement was followed, it is asserted, by extreme precautions on the part of the Germans.

THIEVES AT WORK IN NORTH MONAGHAN

Information has been received from residents in the first concession of Monaghan, a few miles west of Jackson Park, that several farmers have recently been robbed of grain and feed during the night. Six bags of oats were stolen from one farmer, and a number of bags of chop from another. The two farmers live within a half a mile of each other, and say that the thieves must have known something about the lay of the premises to accomplish what they did.

A few evenings ago a choir practice was held in the Sunday school in that neighbourhood. The next morning it was discovered that the storm door of the school had been wrenched off and the windows broken. Inside, the room and stove were littered with chicken feathers, as if a chicken roast had been indulged in. A trail of blood was also seen on the snow all along the road leading to the school. The residents are quite disturbed over these events, and hope something may be done to capture the miscreants.

Local Italians Have No Relatives in the Devastated Province

Mr. Nicholas Minnicola stated to the Examiner to-day that as far as he had been able to learn none of the Italians resident in Peterborough were personally affected by Wednesday's earthquake in the Province of Abruzzi. The mother of a man who resides on Gilchrist street is said to have been living in one of the damaged towns, but Mr. Minnicola is not sure of this.

Manufacturers Will Protest

Against the Reduction of the Passenger Service on the C. P. R.

A meeting of manufacturers and merchants will be held in the City Council Chamber on Tuesday evening, the 19th inst., at 8 p.m., to consider and, if approved, sign a memorial to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, dealing with the inadequate passenger service over their lines, from which the citizens are said to be suffering.

It is expected that a strong deputation will present the memorial personally at Montreal.

The committee is composed of T. F. Matthews, Thos. Barrie, W. G. Morrow and J. W. Bennet.

Says War Has United

All Parties in Austria-Hungary Are Reunited

A letter in New York Herald quotes a description of conditions in Austria-Hungary, as described by a resident of Agram, Croatia, as follows:

"You laugh when you hear people talk of the dissolution of the monarchy. Never in fifty years has it been so united, so strong and so quiet, so absolutely reconciled, one race with another. Germans and and Czechs have fraternized on the streets in Prague; Hungarians and Austrians cheer and embrace one another. And the Hungarian colours are openly worn here by soldiers of that nationality. Formerly, as you know, there was an antagonism between Croatians and Hungarians. That has disappeared in the one great desire to serve the country to defend it from the common foe. The war is a blessing in disguise for Austria. It has done what no one thought possible — united the warring factions. All party hatred is lost in the great devotion to King and country.

TWO SIDES TO THE STORY.

We see reports in the press of complaints made by rural mail carriers, as to the very inadequate scale of pay. Certainly $500 a year, the amount quoted by one complaining carrier, does not seem extravagant or even adequate. But why should there be complaint? The mail carriers fix their own remuneration, which is based on the lowest tender for the work to be done. Competition sets the price, and it does not seem quite consistent, at first sight, for a successful tenderer to complain of the price he has set; but, of course, he can oly get a proper idea of the true relation of the money paid to the amount of work to be done, till he had had experience. The amount quoted seems very small, and the people, the public, should not get advantages at the expense of individuals. The post office should not be regarded as a money-making department. Salaries should be adequate if we only make the post office service pay its way. As a rule good service is not got from poor wages. The only way it seems to do the fair thing in this matter is to put rural couriers in the same class as city postmen — at a fixed and sufficient salary. We are still new to the rural mail delivery business; and it may take some time to get the kinks out of it, so far, somewhat experimental enterprise.

BAPTIST LIBERALITY.

It is a credit to the patriotism and practical sympathy of the congregation of the Murray Street Baptist Church, that yesterday morning an appeal for contributions to the Belgian Relief Rund resulted in the giving of the handsome sum of $255.45. It is worth remarking that the general character of the splendidly humane sentiment behind this gift, was shown by the whole congregation contributing. In the offering made there were no large sums, but a generally distributed liberality of largess. The new city directory gives Peterborough twenty churches. If each congregation should give as generously in numerical proportion, the sum of more than $5,000 would be realized for the relief of our brethren in Belgium. These have especial claims upon us. Great Britain and the Empire are in this awful war to vindicate the outraged neutrality of a plucky little state, which in defence of its national life and under the scourge of a satanic despotism, has suffered in person and property outrages and indignities, that have reduced its people—from the toddling babe to the tottering grandsire—to nakedness and starvation, and have laid waste its fertile fields and crushed to ruin its venerable centres of religion and its seats of learning.

BUSY BRITAIN.

Great Britain, though the soul of honour is a two-faced nation; she is facing two ways. She is waging, with the resistless impulse and characteristic steadiness of her gallant past, the greatest war in human history; at the same time she is doing "business as usual." The one condition is complementary of the other. Her tremendous preponderance as a sea power, contributes to her strength on the battlefield. Her sea power makes the sea paths safe; and after five months' gigantic war struggle her trade, we are told, shows "exuberant vitality"; trade is in a healthy condition, and in the British Isles there is less unemployment than there is proportionately in the United States, a country of immense resources, three thousand miles from the scene of fighting; and left free to protect her own interests and maintain a state of extremely prudent neutrality. There are two main reasons for Britain's industrial and commercial prospects at the present time. One is the sound basis of her trade—markets of the world open to her, both by her trade policy and the help of her navy; and the demands of new markets created by the enforced and comparative commercial and industrial idleness of Germany and Austria—the embargo on Germany's normal annual export of 2,500 million dollars, and of Austria's 500 million. This leaves a great opening for British trade, and not only for British, but for Canadian trade. It should be the aim and endeavour of Canada to make commercial hay while the sun shines; and to seize a share of the new markets left open by the great withdrawal of German and Austrian exports. We should get together and put together in order to do business as usual, and more than usual, as the opportunity so favourably presents.

OUR BAPTISM OF FIRE.

Canadians naturally do a little exultation over the brilliant first appearance of Canadian troops on the stage of war. The Princess Patricias first flashed their blades in a highly distinguished and useful manner. They showed the fighting spirit that we would expect from their name, a good Irish name; it has been worthily upheld in the best traditions of the dash and courage, and conquest that we associate, and the history of many a stricken field, justifies us in associating with the Irish soldiery in action. And more than that, the Princess Pats, a Canadian regiment, showed what we may expect from Canadians when they get into the fighting line. We have reason to believe that our first Canadian contingent when it gets a chance, will do its duty as gallantly as their advance-guard, on the battlefield. We know that Britain expects much of our Canadian troops. We are sure that her expectations will be justified, and that we shall be able to repay the debt of gratitude we owe the Mother Country by helping her out of a tight place as the Princess Pats did at Ypres. Our troops seem to be slow in getting into the fighting zone; but they will be all the more fit when they get there, and will give all the better account of themselves. We are proud of our soldiers now; but we shall be prouder still. We felt a little sore over the fact of our sister Dominion geting in ahead of us by the triumph of her "tin pot" navy; but we can afford to wait to even the account. We shan't be envious for we are all and each of us a part of the great Empire, whose solidarity is being, and has been, demonstrated with telling emphasis, in this great hour of crisis.

ARE DOING OUR SHARE.

A press' correspondent complains that young men do not offer themselves for enlistment readily enough and suggests that a tax be placed on those who fail to enlist. There seems to be little ground for such a complaint. So far in Canada there has been little difficulty in getting the contingents together. The number of men called for at one time is limited and specified. So far there has been no difficulty in securing the necessary number. In fact in all cases the numberber offered has been greatly in excess to the number required. It has been found necessary to reject a great many who could not measure up to the physical fitness demanded. Recruiting in Canada doesn't so far require a virtual resort to conscription, involved in the idea of penalising men who do not enlist. When failure to secure a specified quota comes it will be soon enough to consider other measures. Recruiting for the third contingent may be slower than in the case of the two previous contingents. It stands to reason that the longer the enlisting continues, the slower will the enlistment be. We are sending out of the country—and doing it with right loyal good will—the flower of our young men. But while we are willing to do our duty to the fullest, as this considerable drain continues, the idea of self-protection assumes more form. It is desirable to help end the war and win the victory; but we must keep things going at home; and unless there is absolute necessity, such has not developed to the present, we cannot in justice to ourselves drain our national veins of too much of their best life blood. Of course, we are in the fight to the finish, but we need not lose our heads and become the victims of panic. Canada has done so far, and is doing, and will do, her share of the fighting. We shall furnish to the limit of our resources in men whatever contingents may be necessary.

"STAND BY THE UNION JACK"

The Examiner acknowledges, with thanks, the receipt of a stirring contribution to the patriotic minstrelsy of the day. It is entitled "Stand by the Union Jack," with words and music composed by Mr. W. E. Delaney. It is dedicated to the "Daughters of the Empire." The words have the ring of imperial patriotism, set to music in harmony with their sentiments. The music has a stirring, marial ring, the chorus being especially fetching and inspiring. The music is simple and within the range of the average voice; and, with this incentive to popularity, conjoined with the spirited music and the patriotic quality of the words, should meet with great popular demand. "Stand by the Flag" is published by the composer, Mr W. E. Delaney, at 50 cents. The title page, in colours, is a patriotic tone poem, in colours—a typically stalwart Canadian artilleryman standing alongside a cannon, from whose reeking muzzle the smoke expands to form a background for a striking picture, holding a staff, from which the Union Jack gracefully waves.

The Nation of Shop-keepers Is Doing Business As Usual

All the news from the Old Country in regard to trade, whether by private communication or in the press, goes to show that a period of remarkable business activity is being experienced. Indeed, the London Chronicle, in a column and half review of the situation, declares that "the condition of British trade to-day, after five months of fighting, is one of exuberant vitality." At the outset of the war over 300 committees were formed all over the United Kingdom for dealing with distress, and the reports of these committees now show that, except in a few industries and certain professions, unemployment is almost non-existent. Elaborate schemes had been prepared for the building of cottages in rural districts, making great new roads, and carrying out big drainage projects to absorb displaced labour. To the general surprise and delight, it has not been found necessary to resort to any of these schemes. To quote the Chronicle:

Instead of there being a surplus of labour in the market there is in many of our manufacturing industries a shortage. The war has injuriously affected only a very few of our trades, and has given a great stimulus to others. Except in Lancashire, some women's trades and a few industries like cabinet-making, piano-making, and the jewellery trades, the condition of industry in Great Britain to-day after four months of war, is remarkably healthy. Last year was a year of good trade; yet unemployment in the insured trades in 1914 is less than it was in 1913. Rural and urban areas alike, save for a few exceptions, are, apart, of course, from domestic anxieties due to the war, experiencing "good times." Statistics for both pauperism and unemployment point to widely-diffused prosperity. In many places there is a dearth of unskilled labour. One relief committee in the North of England, having no other function to fulfill, has actually converted itself into a committee for making good the local shortage of workmen

Of course the people of the Old Country are under no delusion as to the effect of the withdrawal from the labour market of over a million men now serving with the colours, nor of the abnormal activity caused in certain trades by War Office and Admiralty orders. But the fact remains that business activity and prosperity are everywhere in evidence; that practically every trade outside that of making pure luxuries is flourishing; that even the trades in semi-luxuries as, for instance, the manufacture of gloves, are experiencing unusually good times; and that Great Britain is already beginning to feel the benefit of trade captured from Germany. As to the latter consideration, the stopping of Germany's annual export of two and a half billion dollars' worth of goods, to say nothing of the stopping of Austria-Hungary's $500,000,000 worth, leaves an immense gap in the market which others must fill, and there is no doubt that Great Britain is out to do all she can to fill it. —Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Five cents a bushel was knocked off the price of wheat today in less than 15 minutes, putting the market here under severe strain and causing a flood of stoploss selling. The flurry was started by reports that a bill would be introduced in congress to place an embargo on exports of wheat.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 16.—The bottom fell out of the wheat market this morning, and after the opening transactions were only ⅝c to 1⅛c lower in the first seven minutes for cash, prices had dropped on May 2¼c under yesterday's close. Continual strong efforts were made to rally, which were partly successful, and prices kept going up and down. The loss on May and July was 1⅞c to 2c.

The demand for expert wheat by foreigners had disappeared this morning.

Oats and flax prices were not affected by the wheat conditions in the early trading. Oats opened ¼c higher and flax 2c higher. Later, however, broke considerably at the close. Cash demand for oats, flour and barley continues excellent, [illegible] were unusually light.

Total inspections on Friday were 126 cars as against 134 cars last year, and 12 cars today 165 cars.

Wheat futures closed ⅝c to 2c lower, cash ⅝c to 1c down, oats unchanged to 1c lower and flax 2⅝c to 3½c lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 15.—The demand from British buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today was very limited, and as the bids received were fully 1s per quarter below what exporters offered, no new business was reported. Canadian oats were in demand. The local demand for coarse grains is fair and the tone of the market is firm. western oats for seeding purposes were made at 64c, for shipment to outside points. The tone of the flour market is strong but business is rather quiet. Demand for millfeed continues good. Butter is quiet but firm. Receipts for week 1633 packages, as compared with 767 for the same week a year ago. Cheese is strong but is quiet, as supplies on spot have now been well cleaned up. Receipts for the week were 1517 boxes, as against 771 a year ago.

Eggs fairly active. Receipts for week 1162 cases, as compared with 1782 last year.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 16.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.44½; No. 1 northern, $1.34½ to $1.40; No. 2 do., $1.31½ to $1.36; May, $1.36½.

Corn—No. 2 yellow, 67½c to 68c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 51c to 51½c.

Flour and bran—Unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Jan. 16.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.38½; No. 1 northern, $1.37½; No. 2 do., $1.32½; May, $1.36¾.

ABLE DISCOURSE ON LIVE TOPIC

Hungry Souls Ask For Bread of Life —Indigestible Stones and Sweet Errors Repel—Only the Bread From Heaven Truly Satisfies—God's True Message Delicious, Satisfying—Error Led to Error In Dark Ages—Discarding Errors, We Return to Simplicity, Truth.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Louisville, Ky. Jan. 17.—Pastor Russell preached here to-day at Macauley's Theatre twice to splendid audiences. We report one of his able discourses from the text, "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, and your reasonable service."—Romans 12:1.

Speaking with great earnestness, the Pastor declared that he repeatedly meets with people inquiring for the Bread of Life. These seem to know that there is something radically wrong with the preaching of the nominal churches. They tell that they are importuned for money; but that when they ask for soul-food they meet with evasion and subterfuge from many of the great and learned, who appear to have lost sight of the Bible and heart-conversion.

Or, on the other hand, they are met by the Salvation Army, with traditions as indigestible as a stone, to anybody of ordinary intelligence. They are told with all seriousness that God created our race, with knowledge and intention that nearly all of them would spend eternity in torture. They are told that to be saved from that awful fate they should become Salvationists, and storm the slums for Jesus. Their experiences remind one of Jesus' words respecting a father who, asked for bread, would give his son a stone; who, asked for fish, would give him a serpent.

The Pastor hoped that some of these hungry souls were present in his audience. He proposed to give them no human theories or speculations—nor would he compromise the Truth nor dodge the question. He would endeavor to make the way to God so plain that a wayfaring man need not err therein; and he would do this by presenting God's arrangement and quoting God's own Word.

No doubt those who invented the theory of eternal torture thought that they were taking the proper steps to drive the whole human family to God. But, on the contrary, it seems to drive away from God and the Bible the most intelligent people of every land, who have naturally a more reasonable and just conception of the Creator than the one presented in the church creeds. Instinctively they are repelled with the thought that the Creator would pursue a course which would be beneath the most degraded.

Undoubtedly the Bible is true in declaring such fallacies "doctrines of demons." (1 Timothy 4:1.) From this Bible viewpoint we can see that it was a master stroke on the part of Satan and his subordinates to misrepresent the teachings of the Bible, so as to repel those who might be "feeling after God" and desiring to draw near to Him.—Acts 17:27.

To tell the truth to the people, even on so simple a subject, means the angering of the clergy. Why, do you ask? Because it proves that they have not been feeding the people with the Bread of Heaven. Instead of building up the House of God, the Church, they have been building meeting-houses — seeking for numbers and popularity rather than to instruct the people in God's Word. Remarkably few church members of any denomination know what they believe. They give evidence that, if Christians at all, they are the merest babes in Christ. None is able to judge another's heart, but all should be able to judge of each other's lives—fruits. "By their fruits ye shall know them," said the Master.—Matthew 7:20.

If the majority of Christians have the fruits of the Holy Spirit, they keep them hidden; and surely many of them manifest the fruits of the Evil Spirit—"anger, malice, hatred, envy, strife, bitterness, slander," etc.—which the Apostles style works of the flesh and of the Devil.—Ephesians 4:31; Galatians 5:19-21; 1 John 3:8.

We would not be misunderstood; we are not complaining that there are not nice people connected with all the churches. On the contrary, we compliment them on their education, their refinement, their wealth, their influence. Moreover, we compliment them on their humanitarian sympathies, as represented in hospitals, asylums and other benevolences. But all these things are shared evenly by people who are not members of churches. A participation in good works is by no means a proof that one is a Christian. A Christian is a person who has come into a very special relationship to God through Christ; and this relationship exists not in respect to education, wealth, color or sex.

With the popularizing of, Christianity came such a modification of teachings as invited all decent worldly people into the Church, and made them think that they were consecrated saints of God and heirs of the blessings promised in the Scripture. By inference, rather than by direct statement, the theory has gone forth that the penalty for sin will be visited only upon those who neglect to say, "God forgive me," a few moments before they die. Notwithstanding the plain statements of the creeds, every funeral discourse lands the dead in Heaven, so far as the auditors can understand. A misinterpretation of the Saviour's words to the dying thief is made the basis for this absurdity.

Let me say, then, with all kindness toward those who are deceiving themselves and others, that the vast majority of church members and of preachers are not Christians at all according to the Bible standards. This does not mean that the Bible condemns them to eternal torment. Thank God, no! It does mean, however, that these self-deceived ones will have neither part nor lot in the wonderful blessing provided for God's elect Church. It means, further, that God's Church is separate from all human institutions; and that only saintly persons, regardless of denominational lines, are members of the true Church, "whose names are written in Heaven."

According to the Bible, no human being is fit for Divine fellowship or eternal life. The reason is given that all are sinners. The explanation of the sin is that it was committed by Father Adam when he was perfect, in God's image; and that, cut off from God, the race deteriorated, passing imperfections of mind, morals and body from parent to child. (Psalm 51:5.) Imperfect beings would be quite out of place amongst the perfect; and so long as imperfection continues, sin will continue, and with it, necessarily, sorrow, pain and death, sin's consequences.

God declares His sympathy for the sinner, and that He has made provision for man's recovery from his present deplorable state. Not only so, but a time has been set for the recovery; and the Bible tells us how it will be accomplished—by Messiah and His Millennial Kingdom. We pray, "Thy Kingdom come," not with the thought that God will neglect His promise to establish that Kingdom, but by way of giving acknowledgment to the fact that that Kingdom is the hope of the world and of the Church.

The Church's hope in the Kingdom is that of becoming sharers with Christ in the glory, honor and work of that Kingdom—for the blessing and uplifting of humanity out of sin and death. There is no attempt being made at the present time on God's part to convert the world. Few now hear the Gospel Message, and still fewer believe it. They are deluded by the Adversary into thinking that God has been trying to convert the world for six thousand years and has been making a miserable failure of it all along; and that whatever is done, we must do for ourselves. Thus has unbelief been cultivated, and trust in God and in the teachings of the Bible thrust aside.

Nevertheless, the Lord declares, "My Word that has gone forth out of My mouth shall not return unto Me void; but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." (Isaiah 55:11.) God's Word was sent forth to invite a very special class of humanity—a class loving righteousness and hating iniquity, weary and heavy-laden with sin, ignorance and superstition, and desirous of coming back into harmony with God and being blessed of Him.

For nearly nineteen centuries the Message has been going hither and thither, quietly, unostentatiously. The world and the nominal churches would say that it had accomplished nothing—that everything great had been accomplished by them. But we prefer to stand by the Bible and to recognize that God's consecrated ones have indeed lifted up a light which the world has hated—a light on account of which they have frequently been put to death, or have had "their names cast out as evil," or have been boycotted, socially or otherwise.

If their hopes were merely in the present life, these would be making a miserable failure of their opportunities. But not so; they are waiting for their reward in the future—at the Second Coming of Jesus—by a share in the First Resurrection. And even now their joy, peace and fellowship with God more than offset all their trials, difficulties and ostracism. Besides, "To them it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of God," which to all others are parables and dark sayings, hard to be understood.

The trials and difficulties of life are proving many to-day are giving them a hearing ear for the Great Shepherd's words, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest." He does not say, "Go to the Lutheran Church; go to the Presbyterian Church; go to the Methodist Church; go to the Roman Catholic Church"; or "Go to any other Church"; He says, "Come unto Me."

It is the privilege of whoever hears this Message to go immediately to the Lord, direct. True, he cannot go to the Heavenly Father direct; for as we read, "God heareth not sinners." But he can go to Jesus, because Him hath God set forth to be our Saviour, our Redeemer. Thus Jesus said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me" (John 14:6). He did not say, "No man can come unto Me except through a preacher, or a priest, or a bishop, or a pope"—He made the way simple for whosoever desires to come.

But when we desire to come to the Father, and learn that we must come through Jesus, what shall we say to Him? We have only one alternative; namely, to ask Him upon what terms He will introduce us to the Heavenly Father, and thus bring us back from the condition of condemnation into the family of God. When we suggest that Jesus would raise conditions, the proposition seems astounding to some. They have somehow gotten the impression that the Heavenly Father and Jesus are in great distress because so few people desire to become members of the Church; and that they would be ready to receive anything and anybody on any terms, simply to have another name added. How absurd this is, when we come to think of it!

We call to mind the teaching of the Master. He did not say, "So many of you as wish to hit the sawdust trail can go to Heaven!" He did not say, "Seek to excite the people and get them to do something that they would not afterward fully understand and appreciate." He did the reverse; He said, "Sit down first and count the cost," before complying with the terms of discipleship. And so He still says to all who come to Him, "Sit down and count the cost." Do nothing rashly.

Some of us can count more rapidly than others. Many of the poor ones who are weary and heavy-laden through sin are ready to say, "I know the cost of sin in my personal experiences. The cost of being disciples of Jesus cannot be greater than the cost of being rebels against the Divine Law." Such are frequently ready to decide quickly and take their stand firmly on the Lord's side. Others are like the rich young man who came to Jesus, saying, "What good thing can I do that I may inherit eternal life? I have kept the Law from my youth up. What lack I yet?"—Matthew 19:16-20.

There are few to-day like that young man, of whom we read, "Jesus, beholding him, loved him." And we may be sure that Jesus still loves those who are striving hard to live right, righteous lives. But this class has the harder struggle. They think they have done everything that they ought to do, or at least everything that the Lord would have them do. But Jesus says, No. To that young man He said, "Go sell what you have, and give to the poor; and come, take up your cross and follow Me." Again, He said, "If any man will be My disciple, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow Me, and where I am, there shall My disciple be."

To be a disciple of Christ is to be a follower, a pupil—one who walks as He walked. The proposition is self-denial, self-effacement. It means giving one's self wholly to God, as in our text, "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, your reasonable service." No one need go far to make this consecration. Each, at his own bedside, can give his little all to God, through Christ.

It should not require long to count how much more we shall receive than we give. We give a condemned and dying existence; we give mental, moral and physical imperfections—we have no more except as our Saviour, by imputing His merit, makes our sacrifice of value in God's sight. But in exchange we receive riches of grace in the present life—peace, joy, blessing of heart, which the world can neither give nor take away—and in the life to come, "glory, honor and immortality," joint-heirship with our Saviour in the Heavenly Kingdom which shall dominate the world for the thousand years, for its blessing and uplift.

Really, after counting the cost, there is a danger that we would feel so ashamed of the littleness of our offering that we would fear to come to the Lord with it. We gain courage to present our bodies only by a knowledge of the Lord's Word, and a realization of the mercy and favor which has prompted His kind invitation for an exchange of something of little value for great things of inestimable value. But unless we take this very step, and definitely and positively enter into a contract with the Lord, we have neither part nor lot with Him. We are still of the world, however much we may try to pattern our lives after decent models and to avoid the grosser and the finer sins. The covenant with the Lord is the beginning, and to each covenanter comes "grace to help in every time of need"; as Jesus said, "Without Me ye can do nothing."

But, says one, Surely this is not the only way of coming into God's family! Yes, we answer, it is the only way. "There is none other Name given under Heaven or amongst men whereby we must be saved" from our condition of condemnation, and be brought back into the family of God. Jesus Himself makes the distinctive terms that we must become His full disciples in order to have this blessed privilege of discipleship.

Have you ever heard the limitations and obligations of the Christian so Scripturally defined before? Have not the facts been hidden from you by the clergy? Have they not rather sought to set aside the words of Jesus because they conflict with their theories? Is not this really why so many have been unable to find the satisfying "meat in due season" in the nominal churches? We believe it is; and we urge all ministers, everybody—to return to the Bible simplicity of a fully consecrated Church of Christ, His elect Bride class, and then a restitutionary blessing for mankind through Christ's Millennial Kingdom.

The blessing upon the world will be earthly restitution to human nature, instead of a change to the Divine nature, as promised to the Church. All who refuse both the Call of the present time and the opportunity of the future Restitution will die the Second Death, which St. Peter describes as like that of the natural brute beast.—Acts 3:19-23; 2 Peter 2:12.

COULD NOT GO TEN STEPS

FOR THE PAIN IN HIS KIDNEYS.

When you get a pain in the back you may rest assured that it comes from derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back should be strong and well.

Doan's Kidney Pills regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist. What more needs to be said? While Doan's Kidney Pills are not a "balm for every ill that flesh is heir to," they are a positive, never-failing remedy for every disease that has its inception in the improper action in those delicate little filters of the blood, the kidneys.

Mr. Adelard Clereux, Eganville, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys for four years. They were so bad, at times, I could not go ten steps for the pain they caused me. My doctor could not do me any good. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought five boxes, and now I have been cured for over three years. I will recommend them to whoever may be suffering from kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box; 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Good-bye corns, callouses, bunions and raw spots. No more shoe tightness, no more limping with pain or drawing up your face in agony. "TIZ" is magical, acts right off. "TIZ" draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet—the only remedy that does. Use "TIZ" and wear smaller shoes. Ah! how comfortable your feet will feel. "TIZ" is a delight. "TIZ" is harmless.

Get a 25 cent box of "Tiz" now at any druggist or department store. Don't suffer. Have good feet, glad feet, feet that never swell, never hurt, never get tired. A year's foot comfort guaranteed or money refunded.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic" is a favourite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

LEAVING THE FARM

O. N. Pouseé, Durham Co., Ont.

So many of the writers who try to explain why the boys leave the farm have been born on a farm, left it, gone to the city to work, and after a short period returned to the farm again as a prodigal son? Unless we have done so, we cannot fully understand the young man's reasons for leaving.

The first and most important reason why so many leave is because of a lack of interest in the farm and its work. And why this lack of interest? Because the father does not consult the son about the work. He is simply told what to do, without the advice or the opinion of the boy being first considered. This soon brings about a distant feeling of the son for the father, and soon the son dreads a chat with dad.

Another point which is often influential to the boy leaving the farm is lack of proper reading matter. There should be a small library of good books, dealing with history, biographies, inventions, and a few well-selected books on fiction, as well as a good daily paper. An agricultural paper dealing with the main farm topics is also essential.

Let us consider the returns the young man receives for his labor. He should be given a certain percentage, or else a sum of money for each year's work. Then the last item, but by no means the least, is the young man's room and den. His room should be properly furnished and heated. Also he should have a den, where he could keep his books and entertain his chums.

These are a few of the main reasons, in my opinion, why our young leave the farm.

To intensify the light for his work a New York engraver has invented a lamp in which the rays from ordinary candles are concentrated by lenses.

PILES

Do not suffer another day with Piles. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and rapidly cure you of Piles. It soothes, heals and gives instant relief. 60 cents a box at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Sample box free if you mention this paper and enclose 2c stamp to pay postage.

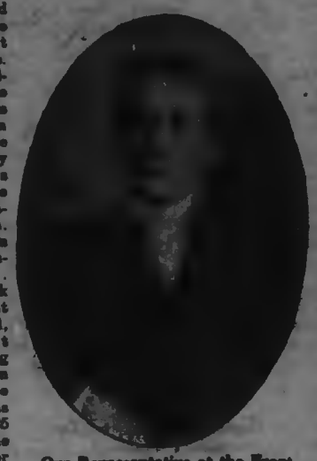
A Letter From Salisbury Plain

Something of British Agriculture in the Military Camp Zone

DEAR FRANK: Rain this afternoon, so we are allowed a half-holiday. We shifted camp last Saturday and are now eight miles south from Pond Farm Camp, where we had been. The night before we left Pond Farm I walked into Lavington, hired a bike and rode into Devizes, about six miles. The roads are simply splendid for wheeling. The road was asphalt the whole distance. It was just like riding on George Street. The roads are narrower than at home, but the walls and neatly trimmed hedges bordering them are certainly a revelation to a Canadian. Devizes is a town of about 9,000 inhabitants.

When riding back my lantern went out for want of oil, which made it rather exciting feeling my way in the dark. At one place the road was cut from 10 to 25 feet deep in the limestone rock for a distance of several hundred yards.

Devizes and Lavington are in Wiltshire, a splendid farming section, from which comes the name "Wiltshire sides," we have heard so much about. I have not had an opportunity to study farming conditions as much as I would like to. While on a route march one day we noticed a threshing outfit by the roadside, threshing from a stack. Instead of having a blower the straw was carried away by an endless chain elevator. It had one good feature in that it threshed clean without tearing the straw to pieces.



Our Representative at the Front

This is an excellent likeness of B. H. C. Blanchard, B.S.A., a graduate of the O. A. C., Guelph, late associate-editor of Farm and Dairy, and now at Salisbury Plains with the Nova Scotia regiment. Adjoining are extracts from a letter recently received from Mr. Blanchard by the editor. An ardent anti-militarist, Mr. Blanchard has gone to do what he considers his part to end militarism.

Observations by the Way

Boots are piled in the open, a few tile are run up to the top of the pile for ventilation, and the whole covered with straw and clay. I expected to see hogs everywhere, but have seen very few so far. The farmers here store very little hay and straw, but build stacks. It would do your heart good to see them build a straw stack. When they wish to use the hay from a stack they remove the hay in sections by cutting straight down with a hay knife.

The country is rolling, and if it were not for the hedges and tile-roofed buildings, reminds one very much of Ontario. The drill grounds on the Plains (which lie to the south of Devizes and south of a line between London and Bristol) are cleared of all trees. The Westerners say the Plains are quite like the prairies. As near as I can judge, the Plains drill grounds are 25 by 15 miles in extent. It gives one an idea of the awful wastefulness of this war game.

The subsoil is almost pure chalk. I couldn't fail to notice the thickness and richness of the sod. I believe the chief reason for such verdure is the continuous rainfall. Since we have arrived it has rained at least three or four days out of each week. It is the only drawback we have to grumble over. Yesterday we were issued with overshoes to keep our feet dry. The mud is frightful at times.

Just across from our lines (the Nova Scotias), the Newfoundlanders are stationed. They are a splendid lot of men. The 500 were selected from 900 volunteers. About half a mile away is the 2nd Battalion, in which the Peterborough boys are serving. I visited their lines for a short time last night, but was able to visit only a few tents.

There is a great variety to the types of fellows that one meets with. In our ranks we have college graduates, theological students, railway employes, sailors, farmers, lumbermen — in fact almost every walk of life is represented in our company. At night the variety of yarns we spin makes the time pass quickly. We get the English newspapers every day and keep right up with events. But you should hear the boys yell when the call goes "Canadian mail."

Our Boys in Favor

The English girls are greatly taken with our boys. Two chaps in our tent keep up a regular correspondence with two girls they have never seen. Cakes, cookies and tobacco arrive from them every other day. Our smokers (and most soldiers smoke) are pining for Canadian tobacco. To-day a chap in our tent received 10 plugs of Canadian from home. The news soon spread, and in no time it was gone. He was offered 1s (24c) a fig for it.

I am no lover of war as a business. The waste of human life is appalling. But the manoeuvres are interesting, and one can't help getting wrapped up in the work. Our boys are remarkably healthy, and the English people frequently remark on their splendid physique. I wish you would give me the names of any of the Peterborough boys who are with the contingent and whom I might know and I will look them up. Facilities for writing are not of the best (I am writing this on my knee), and to write a lot of letters is tiring. Please remember me to all the staff.

Yours as ever,
Ben Blanchard.

An Attractive Guest Room

In the very nature of things a guest room ought to be different from any other room in the house. You often hear a man say to a friend who is coming to visit at his home, "We will treat you just like a member of the family," but you rarely ever hear a woman say that. A woman knows that to treat a guest like a member of the family would not be a square deal, because a guest cannot go and look for the things that are not at hand and a member of the family can. So first of all, a guest-room must have in it all the small conveniences which it is a joy to find when visiting and which it is embarrassing to ask for.

Just the kind of furniture you use matters very little. You can even use the things that no one in the family wants, and with the proper use of color you can make your guest-room a delight. What furniture dealers call golden oak, with a shiny finish, is about the only furniture that will make any room impossible from a decorative standpoint, no matter how cleverly or with what care you use your colors. So the best thing to do if you have golden oak furniture is to get rid of it. If you can't afford to do that, then sandpaper it down to the wood itself, and either stain it or paint it white. If you paint it white, put on as many coats as seem necessary, using as a last coat paint with an egg-shell finish. With white furniture, no matter what the design may be, you can have a charming room.

Keep the walls in some pale shade of plain paper or tint them if you have a good eye for color. The tints come in rather crude shades, and sometimes have to be mixed with white or some other shade to get the desired result. If you use a tint called alabasco, there is a shade of straw color that comes ready for use. This makes a beautiful room and has this great advantage, that you can put it on yourself. No room that is fixed entirely by a decorator ever gives you so much pleasure as when you do some of the actual work yourself. If you have your walls in this straw colored alabasco, charming results are got by using a cretonne that has a white background dashed with yellow and here and there an isolated rose shading from pink to deepest red.

Have a well-equipped work basket on the table with a pink bow on top of it; a good reading lamp with a shade of the pink rose cretonne slanted on a wire frame; and just a few good books, thin muslin or dotted Swiss bureau covers over pink; one or two pieces of old china, and a softly ticking clock on the mantle; a water pitcher, glass, candle and matches on a small table near the bed; and pins, plenty of pins of every sort and description, and your guest room will be a success.

Rag rugs are always pretty in a bedroom. They can be used on painted or polished floors or on a solid colored denim filling.

The fewer pictures in a guest-room the better. Pictures should always represent the individual taste of the person who occupies a room, therefore they seem inappropriate in a room occupied from time to time by different people with varying tastes.

GERMANS DISLODGED

on the Coast—Attack Believed Centre—Enemy Blinded With Sand From Shells

GREAT DUNE CLEAR

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Having effectively checked the German drive upon Soissons, the allies have plunged forward along the Belgian littoral in a violent offensive movement calculated to relieve the pressure along the Aisne by attracting to the sea-coast once again the important bodies of first-line troops which were thrown to the southeasterly elbow of the German line to aid Von Kluk in his temporary triumph.

The Great Dune, a mountain of sand to the east of Nieuport and northeast of Lombaertzyde, was violently attacked by the Franco-Belgian forces on Saturday afternoon, and to-day has been entirely cleared of the invaders, who were routed from their trenches by a spirited infantry attack, preceded by heavy artillery fire. Shells burst in the front and rear of the German trenches, hurling great drifts of sand into the air and blinding the German defenders until they were unable to reply to the allies' fire, while showers of sand poured into the ditches, burying not a few of the occupants.

Continuing their attack to the north of the Great Dune, the allies completely destroyed the hamlet of Rodan, and right on the Crucelot guns bombarded the German earthworks and trenches to the south of St. Georges along the canal.

The official announcement given out in Berlin relating to the capture of 5,200 French troops at Soissons, and saying further that from 4,000 to 5,000 French dead were found after the battle, concludes with the unusual assertion: "This is the truth."

A wireless despatch from Paris, copied in London, categorically denies these German figures. It says the French troops engaged in the Soissons battle were less than three brigades, and that consequently the Berlin figures cannot be correct.

Last night's bulletin issued by the French War Office said:

"There is nothing to report. From the Argonne to the Vosges there have been snowfalls."

The afternoon communique was as follows:

"We have continued to progress in the region of Nieuport and Lombaertzyde along a depression about 200 yards in length. Our artillery forced the Germans to evacuate their trenches in the Great Dune, destroyed Rodan, which lies to the north of the latter, and bombarded the enemy's works in this part of the battlefront and to the south of St. Georges.

"In the region of Tyrol, to the east of La Bassee and Lens, there have been artillery engagements.

"At Blangy the action has been vigorous. The Germans seized the foundry of Blangy, which we soon retook by an energetic counter-attack. We have maintained our position there.

"Our artillery continues to demolish the enemy's trenches near La Boisselle.

"In the Sector of Soissons there is nothing to report.

"Between Vailly and Craonne the enemy delivered without success an attack near the sugar refinery of Tryon, and another against our trenches at Beaulme, both of which were repulsed. In the region of Perthes and Beausejour our progress continues, in spite of a violent storm. In the Argonne, on the heights of the Meuse, there is nothing new. In the woods of Le Pretre, near Pont-a-Mousson, a German attack was repulsed.

"In the Vosges we have gained ground to the west of Orbey. Snow fell in abundance all day."

THE RUSSIANS WIN AN OVERWHELMING VICTORY

Petrograd Issues Statement Announcing Success of Army of the Caucasus In a Battle With the Eleventh Turkish Army Corps, Which Has Been Destroyed With the Exception of a Few

PETROGRAD, Jan. 18.—The following report has been received from Tiflis:

"The army of the Caucasus has covered its flags with glory by a fresh heroic exploit, having completely annihilated the 11th Turkish corps, with the exception of several insignicant elements, which are fleeing in disorder. We have captured all the artillery of this corps."

The following official communication from the army of the Caucasus was issued last night:

"On the region of Mana-Urgan the fighting is developing with the advantage resting with our troops. By a bayonet attack we annihilated the 52nd Turkish regiment, the survivors of which, including the commander and several officers, were made prisoners.

"In one direction, where we were pursuing the defeated Turkish troops we took more than 5,000 prisoners, 14 cannon, an enormous quantity of supplies, and nearly 10,000 head of cattle."

Dissatisfaction In Constantinople.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—According to Constantinople information, dissatisfaction with young Turks, especially with Enver Pasha, has rapidly increased since the recent disasters in the Caucasus. A widespread conspiracy has been discovered, led by a relative of Prince Sabaheddin, who has succeeded in escaping. Numerous arrests have been made.

ANNUAL MEETING OF PLOUGHMEN'S ASSOCIATION

First Year Was an Unusually Prosperous One, the Financial Statement Showing a Substantial Balance.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The first annual meeting of the County of Peterborough's Ploughmen's Association was held in the office of Farm and Dairy on Saturday afternoon. The financial statement presented by the secretary-treasurer, Mr. Fred L. Campbell, showed that the Association for its first year had had an unusually prosperous year. The total receipts amounted to $200 and the total expenditures to $158, leaving a balance on hand of $42.42 after all accounts had been paid. The large balance on hand was due to the fact that the government grant amounting to $23, was received a few days before the annual meeting. It was not known how much the government grant would amount to, and therefore pleasure was expressed that the balance was as large as it was.

Hearty appreciation was expressed of the generosity of the citizens of Peterborough who contributed to the prize list, both in cash and in the form of special prizes.

Mr. Joshua Smithson of Otonabee, was appointed to attend the meeting of the Provincial Association in Toronto. The feeling was freely expressed that the match held last fall had been a most gratifying success and that the match which it is proposed to hold next fall, will be even more successful because it is anticipated that the entry list will be much larger. The last match was a starter and this year it is proposed to branch out and introduce new features. These matters will be dealt with by the new board of directors.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected: President, J. H. Garbutt, Peterborough; 1st Vice-President, Joshua Smithson, Otonabee; 2nd Vice-President, John Gillespie, Otonabee; secretary-treasurer, Fred L. Campbell, Peterborough; Directors: North Monaghan, Reeve John McIntosh, Peterborough; H. G. Webber, Peterborough; Ennismore, P. Crough, Smith; Smith, C. Moore, S. Harrison, G. Colborne, Peterborough. Otonabee, S. Matchett, R. H. Harrison, G. L. Hatherley, Peterborough; W. Anderson, Keene. Douro, Reeve M. Welsh, Indian River and Chas. Brown, Peterborough. Peterborough City, H. B. Cowan, Farm and Dairy. Asphodel, Wm. Knox, Indian River; Reeve Max Brown, Norwood. Harvey, Reeve R. Shaw. Auditors, W. Collins and Alex. McGregor.

THE VALUE OF GOOD BREEDING

While we are busy with the thought of good animals we adhere closely to the idea of breeding from the best strains of blood we can get. And we are wise in so doing. But when young men and women mate with each other, with the likely possibilities of children in the future, they are apt to throw all this wisdom of good blood to the winds. Fancy, sexuality, impulse—all good in their way, cast the deciding vote. "I would not marry a person I did not love," say they. Certainly not. But must you love without sense, good judgment, some consideration of the consequences of love? Now this does not include the purpose of marrying for property or position. That is a shallow-hearted view of marriage from which every sound, wholesome young person recoils with deep aversion.

There is a book called "Home" in which the author, George Agnew Chamberlain, gives us his idea of the best conditions in which to be born. He says:

"Let him be born of good stock, preferably the old stock that laid the foundations of our nation; let him be reared in an old home in the country, one of those homes that have grown with the growth of generations and fitted themselves to the habits of a family. Then, though he wanders in many a fair country, and lies with the swine, and feeds on husks, in the end the blood of his fathers will speak; the house of his fathers will speak; he house of his fathers will call; and he will arise and go home, saved by the decencies that were bred in the bone."

We like that paragraph largely because it utters a great truth about the gripping effect of a good home on the mind and fortune of children, and further because it speaks a great psychological truth concerning the value to every man of being born in the country, of sober, well meaning parents. We do not care so much what the blood is, whether it be Canadian, German, Norwegian, Irish, English, or any of the foreign lines, or of a good mixture, but the two salient, basal points are to be born in the country and of honest, upright parents.

Canadian society has a great interest in such a birth and lineage. It means the production of good citizens who govern themselves, and who do not require the expense of jails, courts, prisons, almhouses, etc. Think of what great value to society and the state and nation a good citizen is. Bishop Simpson of the Methodist Church once said: "It takes a naturally good man to make the best Christian." To be such a Christian or citizen one needs to have a sound, good start in life, and for that purpose there is nothing like having an honest, upright, good father and mother and a wholesome place for childhood and youth. All honour to these country bred people who build up and maintain such homes and families.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Salisbury Conditions Poor.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Jan. 18.—Addressing the Canadian Club here, Major-Gen. Hughes said the Canadian troops, on account of the weather and other conditions at Salisbury, were not as fit to go to the front now as when they sailed from Valcartier.

Another Cruiser Off Havana.

HAVANA, Jan. 18. — The British cruiser which has been lying off this port since Jan. 11 departed Saturday bound northward. She was relieved by another cruiser of similar type, which is off shore eight miles with a collier.

Why a Young Man Should Be a Christian

Second in a Series of Sermons To The Young People, By Rev. Jas. Rollins

In further discussing "Why a Young Man Should be a Christian," Rev. Mr. Rollins chose as his text, part of the thirteenth verse of the 4th Chapter of Ephesians:

"Unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature the fulness of Christ," the theme of the discourse throughout being: "Christ, the maker of the perfect man."

In leading up to this thought, Mr. Rollins recalled the story of the portrait of Dante at Florence.

For many years it was supposed that the masterpiece had perished. One day an artist came determined to find it. He went to the place where tradition said it used to be, and found the room full of straw and lumber. This he had cleared away. The walls were covered with cobwebs and whitewash, but he started to work on these and after much labour began to see long hidden lines appear and touches of colour When finished the face of the poet-artist looked out on the light of day.

The application of this beautiful story is that Christ, the Masterpiece, looks out from the hearts of men. Man was made in the likeness and image of God, who breathed into him the breath of His own life; so, deep in the heart of man is a picture surpassing in beauty and strength the conception of any mind. True, at times, it can be seen, but dimly, but yet there are lines of marvellous strength, and incomparable touches of beauty; and there is one who recognises the orginal picture, one who prizes it for what it really is, and says: "Give me thine heart," that He may enter and begin work on the picture, and with patience such as no other artist ever had, He will restore it, and say to his Father, as he points to you, what Pilate said as he pointed to Jesus: "Behold the Man".

This led up to the thought that the supreme purpose, the supreme ambition of Christ was to be a maker of men, and we, as His followers, should share this same ambition and purpose, and desire to be makers of men.

Necessarily our methods vary with different persons. A lofty motive lies behind all our endeavours at education, and of late, we are placing emphasis on the development of the individual. Parents are studying more the characteristics, the individuality of their children. To-day we are seeking to provide among our young people an atmosphere of freedom, trying to guide rather than drive.

An individuality, if unguided, may become a bent, influenced by generations behind, producing a crank, lacking patience; but if it is presided over by a great and wise Master, who understands its needs, then it will be guided, encouraged and developed into a perfect man.

The great necessity, then, is to find the Master, in whom all these needs are met, and the preacher recommended Jesus Christ.

The prophets of God were great men who led us to nobler thinking, nobler doing, but they all fell short of the ideal. They could see only one side, they emphasized certain traits of character, they were imperfect, and if we were to pattern ourselves after them, we would be deformed.

Jesus has none of these defects. In Him we find perfect balance, no extremes, no restrictions; His life was one of unity, of character properly proportioned, completely rounded out, "unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

Under his influence a type of character may be developed, combining all the virtues outlined in the sermon on the Mount, and the redeeming forces of the Cross of Calvary, producing heroic soldiers of the cross, saints, martyrs, profound thinkers, as well as simple-hearted folk.

In conclusion, Mr. Rollins appealed to his hearers to remove everything that hinders development, to seek Christ, that the sunshine of His life may cause old things to pass away, and that step by step, like the plant, we may develop into the perfect man, the perfect woman.

Asphodel Farmer Is Defendant

In An Action to Recover Price of Horse

A writ has been issued on behalf of James Akey of this City against Wilbert Beavis of Asphodel to recover the sum of $201 being the price paid for a mare purchased from Beavis by Akey. The plaintiff claims that the defendant committed a breach of warranty in claiming the horse to be sound when it was unsound. The date of trial has not yet been announced.

DIED ON SAME DAY

Noted Presbyterians—Dr. Armstrong and Dr. Moore, Both Well Known in Peterborough

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—The Presbyterian Church in Canada lost two of its most distinguished members in the deaths yesterday afternoon, within one hour of each other, of Rev. Dr. W. D. Armstrong, pastor emeritus of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, and of Rev. Dr. William Moore, pastor emeritus of Chalmers Presbyterian Church. Both were ex-Moderators of the General Assembly and both for more than a quarter of a century had held high positions of trust and honor in the church organizations.

Dr. Armstrong, who was in his seventieth year, died at his family residence on Daly avenue, after an illness of about three weeks, from a stroke of paralysis. Rev. Dr. Moore, who was in his seventy-seventh year, had been ill for several months, and his death at his residence on O'Connor street yesterday afternoon was not unexpected. Both the deceased ministers had been pastors of their respective churches in Ottawa for nearly forty years, both having been the first pastors of those churches.

TREMORS CONTINUE.

Officials Say Houses at Sora Are Not Safe For Habitation.

SORA, Italy, Jan. 18—(Via Rome) —Slight earth tremors have not ceased, and the local authorities declare not a single house in town is safe for occupancy. Capt. Fusi, who is directing the work of rescue, is convinced that more than 1,000 victims are buried in the debris.

Rescue work is progressing slowly, and there now is very little hope of finding persons alive, because in most cases bodies are buried beneath immense piles of masonry. The authorities are devoting most of their attention to caring for the few persons who escaped death. The Red Cross has opened an emergency hospital, where the less dangerously injured are being cared for. Those most dangerously hurt are being taken to Caserta.

The sufferings of the homeless population have been intensified by a cold drizzling rain, which began Saturday afternoon and has continued steadily. The people have been warned not to occupy the houses which remain standing until the buildings have been carefully inspected.

Infantry Training

The Matter in This Column is from the Official Manual 1911 and is Published According to Orders of the Home Guard

2. Responsibility for Training.*

1. The battalion commander is responsible that the instruction of his officers is conducted in such a manner as to fit them for their duties in war and peace. He shall see that numbers and efficiency of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men required for special duties are maintained in accordance with the regulations. He will also arrange and supervise such training of the recruit as cannot be carried out in the company.

2. Company commanders are responsible for the training and efficiency of their subalterns, non-commissioned officers and men. When the training of the recruit cannot be carried out in the company, commanders will be given every facility for familiarizing themselves with the progress of their recruits.

3. The machine gun officer is responsible for the instruction and efficiency of the machine gun section.

4. Subaltern officers and section commanders are similarly responsible for the training and efficiency of their commands.

5. The general principles of this manual will be followed, so far as they are applicable, in the training of infantry at depots.

6. The responsibilities of the higher commanders are detailed in "Training and Manoeuvre Regulations."

3. General Instructions for Training.

1. The instructions for training in this manual are based on the general system explained in the "Training and Manoeuvre Regulations" and are therefore divided into: —

i. Individual Training.
ii. Collective Training.

2. Although the varying conditions under which infantry soldiers are trained in the different parts of the Empire make strict adherence to any one method impossible, the system described in the following sections is considered the best, normally, for the progressive instruction of the soldier, and should be followed as closely as the circumstances of each case permit.

3. It is usually undesirable to define exactly how the time available for the various courses of training is to be employed. Commanders should design for themselves programmes of training, which will ensure that the required standard of efficiency is reached within the time allotted.

When the time available for training is very limited or special circumstances call for intervention, detailed instructions may be issued by higher authority for the training of subordinate commands. Detailed instructions, however, tend to cramp initiative, and to increase the work of subordinates rather than to assist them, consequently their issue should be limited to cases in which the need for them is undoubted.

INDIVIDUAL TRAINING.

4. The Training of Recruits.

1. The training of recruits will begin as soon as they join their depot or unit.

Recruits will be trained under carefully chosen officers and non-commissioned officers.

The course will consist of:—

i. The development of a soldiery spirit.
ii. Instruction in barrack and camp duties, cleanliness, smartness, orders and necessary regulations.
iii. Physical training, under qualified instructors, as laid down in the "Manual of Physical Training."
iv. "Infantry Training," Part II, and Secs. 86-91.
v. Marching, march discipline, and running training.
vi. Musketry Instruction under the following headings:—
(a) General description of the rifle and ammunition used.
(b) Instruction in care of arms.
(c) Elementary instruction in the theory of Rifle Fire.
(d) Aiming and firing. (see "Musketry Regulations, Part I").
vii. Visual trianing and judging distance ("Musketry Regulations, Part I").
viii. Movements at night and practice in using the ears and eyes at night. (Sec. 177.)
ix. Bayonet fighting (see Appendix I).

2. The daily programmes of work should be arranged with as great variety as is possible, and must be suited to the aptitude of the individual recruit; every endeavour must be made to guard against monotony, with its consequent loss of interest.

3. The course of instruction of recruits at depots should be so arranged as to begin with about 20 hours' work per week, gradually increasing to about 26 hours' work per week. The normal length of the course of instruction at depots is 12 weeks.*

4. Recruits will usually be sent from depots to join their battalions in parties. On arrival the course of instruction will be continued until the recruit is considered by the battalion commander to be fit to join the section. The time for the conclusion of the course is not to be gauged by the number of drills performed but by the standard of proficiency attained.

* A specimen syllabus for a course of 12 weeks' training is given in Appendix II to assist officers charged with the training of recruits in framing theis programme of training.

5. The Training of Recruits in the Section.

1. The section commander should be made responsible for the training and education of the men he is to lead in war from the earliest possible period of their career as soldiers.

The subaltern commanding the half company will supervise this part of the soldier's training.

2. The conditions of enlistment of the regular army may cause recruits to join their sections at various periods of the training season. Battalion commanders are authorized to make such modifications as may be necessary in consequence of these conditions.

3. The training of the recruit in the section under the supervision of the subaltern commanding the half company will consist in the progressive continuation of the course given in Sec. 4, 1, and should include instruction in Part III, I of this manual and the further instruction in musketry laid down in "Musketry Regulations Part I."

4. Recruits while undergoing training with their section should not be detailed for any fatigue or other duties which would interfere with their training.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS MAY HOLD DEBATES WITH OTHER COUNCILS

It is understood that there has been some mention made of a proposal to hold an Inter-Council debate by the Knights of Columbus of this province. The suggestion has come from the provincial officers who would arrange to present a suitable trophy for the winners. It is likely that the extensiveness of the idea will prove an obstruction to its fruition during the present season, but there is strong likelihood that a beginning will be made and [illegible] district will most in favor. One proposal, for instance, is that Peterborough, Lindsay, Orillia, Belleville, Kingston and any other Councils that might be grouped with these could hold a series of debates. Tentative plans are said to be under way, and the idea has many supporters in the local Council of the K. O. C. They have formed a debating club and are preparing for a first encounter, to be held in the near future. If the other Councils indicate a desire to co-operate, the larger scheme will doubtless be undertaken.

GERMANS IN DANGER OF BEING OUTFLANKED

Advance of Russian Armies Has Reached a Point That the German Movement Against Warsaw Will Be in a Perilous Fix When the Vistula Freezes Over.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg has not succeeded in making any headway in his attacks on the Russians holding the road to Warsaw despite his vigorous attacks. To the north the Russians have reached points where they are seriously menacing the Germans attacking on the Bzura front. With the freezing of the lower Vistula, the ice will afford an easy passage across the river in Von Hindenburg's rear.

The Germans are using heavy artillery to a great extent to hammer the Russian lines, especially on the front before Warsaw. Further to the south the Austrians are also depending on their artillery to hold the Russians in check. The fighting has been heavy on the Dunajec river, where, if the Austrians fail to hold their present lines, an advance by the Russians will again threaten Cracow. The new Austro-German forces are reported to have been organized to repel the Russian invasion of Hungary, but Russians hold the Carpathian passes and have placed artillery there on crests commanding the passages. Any Austro-German force advancing in Hungary will be caught between the Russians operating south from Galicia and those which have swept through Bukowina.

The East Prussian front and north or right of the lower Vistula are daily assuming more importance in bulletins of the grand duke. The Polish front to which the Germans have attached sole importance, is relegated to the third place, being considered sufficient merely to note that the Germans have been making their customary attacks and meeting with customary failures. It appears that the Germans made arrangements to take full advantage also of New Year's Eve, as they had done of the Russian Christmas, but on the whole both passed off in comparative quiet as the first attempt at an attack revealed the perfect readiness of the Russians for anything that might turn up, notwithstanding the festivals of the Russians.

The Russians before the fortress of Boyen, near Letzen, which protects the passage through the Mazurian Lakes, were attacked by the Germans on New Year's Day, but the only result was serious losses to the Germans. On the right bank on the north of the lower Vistula, the Germans, after being turned out of Sciepes, attempted to hold the line of the River Skawa. The Russians continued their steady advance and the Germans failed to hold their positions and continued their retirement in a northerly direction.

While the main Russian army has been busy repelling what Grand Duke Nicholas in his official report describes as a series of violent attacks by Field Marshal von Hindenburg, to break his way through to Warsaw, other Russian forces have stormed and taken Kirlibaba Pass, on the borders of Transylvania, and have made further progress in their advance along the right bank of the Vistula toward the German frontier.

The Germans in force have delivered seven successive attacks, which developed into desperate bayonet fighting, on the Russian lines on the left bank of the Vistula, and have succeeded in taking one of the Russian advance trenches.

Further south there have been similar attacks, in each case preceded by heavy artillery engagements. The Russians have succeeded in silencing the heavy Austrian guns, which, from the banks of the Dunajec, have been bombarding the town of Tarnow.

TONSILITIS, SORE THROAT, CHEST COLDS, CAN BE CURED OVER NIGHT

They Vanish Quickly if Nerviline is Well Rubbed In.

When the throat tickles, when it hurts to draw a long breath, when you feel as if a knife were stuck in your side, it's time to draw out the congestion that will soon become pneumonia.

An ordinary cough syrup has no chance at all—you require a powerful penetrating liniment.

Nothing is known that possesses more merit in such cases than Nerviline.

Rub it liberally over the sides and chest—rub it in hard.

The warm, soothing effect of Nerviline will be apparent in five minutes. Nothing like it for quick relief — takes soreness out of the throat in one rubbing—breaks up the chest cold, draws out the inflammation, stops the cough quickly.

Rub it on for rheumatism — it destroys the pain—drives it right away. Try it for stiff muscles—it works miracles in just such cases.

Give Nerviline a chance on your neuralgia, prove it out for lumbago, see what it can for sciatics.

No pain-relieving remedy compares in power to cure with Nerviline. Largest sale in Canada of any liniment for nearly forty years. The reason is plain. It satisfies every time.

The large 50 cent. family size bottle is more economical than the 25 cent trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

BATTLESHIP IS JUSTIFIED

Chairman Padgett of the U. S. Naval Affairs Committee Says They Have Swept Germans From Sea

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — Chairman Padgett, of the House Naval Affairs Committee this afternoon reported the annual naval appropriation bill to the House authorizing the expenditure of $148,589,786, an increase of $3,713,070 over last year. Debate on the bill is expected to begin within two weeks.

The building programme recommended which includes two battleships, seventeen submarines, and other war vessels, will cost $53,168,-826 according to the report.

"The effectiveness of the submarines in the European war demonstrates it to be a naval weapon of great value," the report declared, "and the committee believes that Congress is warranted in authorizing the additional appropriation for this type of naval war craft. The airship for scouting purposes has also demonstrated its effectiveness, and the committee has recommended an appropriation of $1,-000,000.

"While the committee believes in the effectiveness of submarines and airships, it does not believe that sufficient has been learned of the European war to warrant any change in the battleship programme. While the submarine has been effective in the defence of the harbour and coast, it has not been able to control the sea as the super-battleship fleet has one, causing an enemy with an inferior battleship fleet to suffer great loss of merchant ships, blockade its ports and drive its commerce off the seas."

The million dollar appropriation for naval aeronautics is placed entirely in the hands of the Secretary of the Navy. The committee report declares that the old way of appropriating sums to naval bureaus "did not tend to the development of air craft as rapidly as thought to be necessary."

Rev. W. C. Riddiford At Park St. Baptist

Large Congregations Heard Former Pastor at Services Yesterday

Large congregations heard Rev. W. C. Riddifor of London at both services in Park Street Baptist church yesterday. This is Mr. Riddiford's first time to preach in the Park Street church, where he was formerly pastor since taking over his new charge in London, and he was heartily welcomed by his many friends in the city.

The subject for the evening sermon was "Faith's Victories." Rev. Mr. Riddiford took his text from 30th verse, 11th chapter o fthe Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Hebrews, "By faith the walls of Jericho fell down."

The speaker in his message said that anyone could knock down his Jericho if the faith was the right kind and put it into action. He touched upon the matter of electing our different civic representatives and believed the people did not have enough confidence in the men they elected. There was too much suspicion. One of the most damnable principles a man could harbour in his heart was the principle of suspicion. The time had come in this Canada of ours when the public mind must be rid of the principle of suspicion. "I am going to live long enough to show people that if they do not quit this suspicion there is going to be a universal asylum, and we all will be fools."

Every martyr that perished for the Protestant cause, overcame by faith. That was the secret to success in all things in spiritual life. Spiritual power was born on the death bed of self-reliance. God had power to conquer any Jericho and that was by faith in Jesus Christ.

The Christian Church

"The Church's One Foundation is Jesus Christ, Her Lord"

"Christ alone is the head of the church—by His truth to instruct it; by His authority to govern it; by His grace to quicken it; by His providence to protect and guide it; by His Holy Spirit to sanctify and bless it;—the source of its life, wisdom, unity, peace, power and prosperity, dwelling with it here on earth, and preparing its faithful members to dwell forever with Him in Heaven."

—R. F. Sample.

The theme of the discourse of the St. James' Methodist Church Sunday morning service was "The Church."

Rev. Mr. Clarry, the pastor, took as his text part of 1 Cor., 12:27, "Now ye are the body of Christ," as well as Eph., 5: 25, 26, 27, "Even as Christ is head of the church, and hath also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word; that He might present it to Himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish," and in a brief but heart-searching address sought to impress upon his hearers the power of the Church of Christ and the place it should occupy in their lives.

He first drew attention to some weaknesses; one, that of irreverence, lack of proper respect for the House of God. A church which is noted for levity or chattering on the part of its worshippers must of necessity be a weak church.

In amplifying this thought he said that worship should begin at home, at the family altar, where prayer should ascend for God's blessing on the Minister, and on the services of the day. This would not be neglected if we realized more deeply the fact that Christ is head of the church.

The church and the relationship of its members one with the other and with Christ, he continued, is very nicely set forth in the chapter from which the text was selected. "For the body is not member but many. There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. There are differences of administration, but the same Lord, and there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. But now hath God set the members everyone of them in a body, as it has pleased Him. That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another, and whether one member suffer all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it. Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular.

Every member of the church has his or her place in church work. To be efficient workers, members should be sanctified, their lives wholly given to the Lord, even as Christ gave Himself for the church.

They should also give a service that is perfect, and of value. At this point the pastor diverted a little to say that some people keep their old coins for Sunday. In the ancient times the sacrificial lamb was perfect, without blemish, but nowadays it was something like the essay which a child composed on the dollar and cent, wherein the dollar tried to prove its superiority over the cent by saying: "Oh, I am of more importance than you, I am one hundred times greater than you," to which the cent replied, "Well, that may be, but I get to church, but you never do."

Of late, the Rev. Mr. Clarry said he had been reading concerning the church in the early centuries, and he was impressed with the truth that the Spirit of Christ permeated the church. In this day the Spirit of God should appeal to the membership of the church. "If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will do and it shall be done unto you."

The early church was characterized by fellowship, by the breaking of bread, and by prayer. "And Jesus went into the emple and cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves. My house shall be called a house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves."

The call of the Christian church today is the call to prayer. Its members should be found in the prayer service. It is a lamentable fact that only ten per cent. of church members are to be found at the service of prayer. The church might be likened to a machine giving only one-tenth of its power.

Looking back to the days of our forefathers, the Methodist church exerted a mighty influence for good in the land. Those were the days when family worship was the rule not the exception. While not deprecating the church to-day he questioned his hearers thus: "Is our influence in proportion to our membership?" Now is the time for a searching of hearts; "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

—Get Right With God—

"Like a mighty army, moves the Church of God;
Brothers, we are treading where the saints have trod;
We are not divided, all one body we,
One in hope and doctrine, one in charity."

—Paul Penman.

MADE IN CANADA MEANS BETTER GOODS

Without a doubt the crusade in favour of made-in-Canada goods will have a profound effect on the manufacturing interests of Canada. This is not so self-evident as it looks. What it really means is that for the first time in their history the manufacturers of Canada are banded together in a common cause to root out every kind of inefficiency. When the country is prosperous, when orders are piling in, when night shift follows the day, it's only natural that here and there some weakness should creep into a business. Guard against it how he may, the manufacturer finds it impossible so to oversee his plant and his operatives that every machine and ever man turns out goods of an ultimate quality produced by a maximum of efficiency.

When it became necessary for the man at the top to stand behind the business, we get once more the personal factor that counts so largely in all industry. There isn't a factory owner or director in Canada to-day that doesn't know all there is to be known about his business. There isn't a plant that isn't keyed up to the highest pitch of efficiency. There isn't a workman that isn't heart and soul with his firm in the matter of good value for wages received. There isn't a salesman on the road that doesn't feel absolutely sure that the manufacturer whose name appears on the firm's letterheads, stands behind his business with his own personal guarantee that the goods he makes are as good as similar goods made anywhere. And there isn't a man or woman in Canada who can't safely buy such goods and know that in so doing he or she saves money.

Grateful to Ladies For Kindnesses At Christmas Time

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—As a wife of one of the soldiers, I desire to express my appreciation and gratitude to members of the Daughters of the Empire, of the Women's War Fund, and to other ladies of the city, for little kindnesses performed by them during the Christmas and New Year's season. Their efforts to make the festal season a bright and happy one were most kindly and generous and were carried out in a manner that left nothing to be desired. If you will please give this letter a space in your columns, Mr. Editor, you will greatly oblige.

DEATH OF FORMER PETERBORO' MAN

Mr. Wm. Mallock Passed Away in Belleville Yesterday

Mr. William Mallock, Chief Engineer of the City Waterworks Department at Belleville, and brother of Mr. John Mallock, Brock Street, switchman of the Grand Trunk, passed away at 9 a.m. Sunday at the Belleville hospital after a lengthy illness.

The late Mr. Mallock was well known in several circles in Peterborough. He was born 60 years ago in Scotland and moved with his family to Canada when he was eighteen months old, the family taking up their residence near Port Hope.

For about twenty years the late Mr. Mallock followed railroading, being in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway Company when he resided in Peterborough. For a number of years before leaving the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway he was engineer and had the Belleville-Peterborough run at the same time.

During the past fifteen years he has been employed as Chief Engineer of the City Waterworks Department at Belleville, where he had a host of friends.

In 1886, the late Mr. Mallock was united to Lillian Craig, daughter of the late John Craig, who resided in East City. His wife predeceased him twenty-one years.

Mrs. P. Johnson, a twin sister, and Mr. Robert Mallock of Wabash, Ind., brother, were in Belleville when Thursday last, and up to the death of their brother.

Deceased was a member of the Masonic Order, Sons of Scotland and Association of Stationary Engineers. In religion he was a Presbyterian.

There are left to mourn his loss, four daughters, Misses Margaret Jane Lillian B., Agnes E., residing in Belleville, Jane T. in Hamilton; three brothers, Alexander of Berlin, Robert of Wabash, Ind., and John of Peterborough, and two sisters, Mrs. R. Thornton of Ops, and Mrs. J. Johnson, of Peterborough.

The funeral will be held under the auspices of the Masonic Order. Service will be held in Belleville at 4 p.m. tomorrow, and the remains will be brought to Peterborough on the evening train. The funeral will take place from the residence of Mr. John Mallock, 238 Brock Street, on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

LOOKS LIKE NEW.

Tomkins—New suit you've got Brown?

Brown—Oh no, just been cleaned and pressed by Read Bros, corner Wolfe and Rubidge. I am getting a new one from them in the spring.

Tomkins—I must send them my blue suit, what do they charge?

Brown — Just 75 cents. 'Phone, and they will call. Remember 'phone 1416. 26d-140

Dr. J. B. Mann, re Mrs. Geo. H. Collins, examination	5 00

Moved by Messrs. Robson and Bell, that the above accounts be passed and paid.

Moved by Messrs. Rye and Bell that the Isolation Hospital bill be paid only in cases of charity, the municipality not being liable for further payment.

Reeve McIntosh presented an injunction against the township from Mr. Wearing, Mr. Geo. Lockie's solicitor, and [illegible] Mr. E. A. Peck, township solicitor. Moved by Messrs. Forster and Rye, that Reeve McIntosh and Wm. Robson be a committee to interview Mr. Lockie regarding his injunction against the township and try and come to a settlement in the matter.

A communication was received from the Peterborough Public Library. Moved by Messrs. Forster and Rye that the communication be received.

A communication received from W. H. Bradburn, township treasurer, stating that the Bank of Ottawa overdraft against the township on Jan. 16 was $3,088.67.

Re tax protests from Mr. C. J. Carroll and others [illegible] moved by Messrs. Forster and Robson that Mr. Anderson, tax collector, be given full power to settle all these bills and report to the council.

Reeve McIntosh reported that he had made arrangements with the committee in Peterborough whereby they would provide for all soldiers' wives in North Monaghan with the exception of those rejected or invalided home.

Moved by Messrs. and Bell that the next Council meeting be held in the Town Hall on the second Monday in February.

Moved by Messrs. Bell and Robson that Thos. Arnott be appointed to look after the ditches which fill with snow, in case of a flood, at $1.00 per day, while working and that he apply those men when the Council is in need of help.

A DRAFT AGREEMENT

Respecting the Radial Railway Co. Has Been Amended by the Commissioners

The Utilities Commission is in receipt of a letter from the Wm. Hamilton Company, asking to be permitted to quote prices for fire hydrants, and on the boiler for an auxiliary pumping equipment. The communication was filed for subsequent consideration.

A draft agreement with the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, permitting the Company to use City poles for their feeder lines was referred to City Solicitor Gordon, who will submit an amended draft to the Company for acceptance.

At a meeting which was held on Saturday the following accounts were passed: Dominion Express Co. 90c.; G. N. W. Telegraph Co., 74c.; Wm. Telegraph Co., etc.

"IN THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE" COMING

To the Grand Opera House, Thursday Evening, Feb. 4th

Manager Small, of Toronto, announces that he has secured this splendid attraction for a tour through Ontario prior to the engagement of this company in Toronto and offers it as a guaranteed attraction, and at what he terms, standard prices, with the highest price one dollar for the best seats. It is seldom indeed that a real Broadway success with a Broadway cast is seen at these prices in Canada, and only the unsettled condition made by the European conflict makes such a thing possible. There are so few companies on the road this season that the better class of actors have had to reduce their salaries and managers have found it quite worth while to play their attractions at dollar prices instead of the regular dollar and a half usually asked. "In the Bishop's Carriage," as a novel has been widely read and the story of Nance Olden is an absorbing one and Channing Pollock's dramatization of this work is said to be a masterpiece in stage craft and enjoyed a long run in New York city, and has been most prosperous on the road, and should be welcomed here, especially at the moderate prices of admission — twenty-five cents to one dollar.

HORRORS ARE INCREASED.

Dead In Abruzzo District Alone Number 30,000.

ROME, Jan. 18.—Detailed reports received in the capital regarding Italy's stupendous earthquake assert that the number of dead and injured in the Abruzzo province alone is 30,000 without including the Sora district.

San Atolio has 800 dead and 500 injured, Nemino 1,500 dead, Collatro 600 injured, Cervaro [illegible] victims, Borge [illegible] dead, [illegible] Tallerezato 1,800. At Civitella Roveto almost the entire population escaped, because they were working in the fields when the shock occurred.

Frantic appeals for help have been received from [illegible]elatri, 3,500 feet high on Mount Arungo, eight miles from Tagliacozzo. The village was almost destroyed, and the survivors say they are perishing of cold and hunger.

In the highway near Ortucchio the earth has [illegible] causing an immense [illegible] filled with water, the depth of which is unknown.

The terrific force of the [illegible]quake cracked the mountains [illegible]. Huge pieces of rock, [illegible] which weighed several tons, [illegible] down the hillside, burying the cottages of peasants, killing cattle and obstructing the road. Mount Pizzuta, 9,450 feet high, between Balsorano and Roccacerro, was cut into two parts in an immense fissure, which is visible at a great distance.

The Government has appropriated $1,000,000 to relieve suffering.

JUNIORS PLAY IN PORT HOPE TO-MORROW NIGHT

The Peterborough Juniors will play in Port Hope to-morrow night, and the game will practically decide whether or not they will go into the district. A defeat at the hands of the Ontarios will put the Petes out of the running unless the Cobourg team manages to defeat Lindsay and Port Hope in Cobourg. On the other hand a Peterborough victory will likely mean a tie-up in the district. The team will leave on the 11.40 (G.T.R.) train to-morrow morning, with the following line-up:

Goal—Legres.
Right defence—Morrow.
Left defence—Long.
Rover—Ross.
Centre—Jackson.

The players are asked to be at Brock Street Rink to-night at eight o'clock, to pack their outfits.

HOCKEY GOSSIP

Lindsay Warder: When the visiting youngsters skated out and were called up by Referee McCord for a preliminary chat many Lindsay fans expressed surprise at their weight, and then sizing up the soft condition of the ice were somewhat dubious as to the outcome. Peterborough hockeyists have always proved themselves to be mud horses when it came to soft ice. However there were others, —and many of them—in the rink we were prepared to bet their last dollar on the home brews after the game fight and the outbursts of speed displayed in the game against Port Hope. And the latter were not disappointed. True there were times when clouds gathered on the horizon and Lindsay's chances of winning were obscured, especially in the last period when the visitors tied the score, and were running mad around the ice. Rather than be subdued the locals tightened up and with a determination that speaks well for future contests, went at the Peterborough line hammer and tongs. It was beautiful to watch them break away on the mushy ice and lambast the puck at all angles. They peppered the Peterborough citadel and not only broke the tie, but tacked on three more for good luck. It was a great little battle at that and Josh Craig's porridge-eaters displayed occasional rushes and combination that had the locals guessing.

The Petes came on the ice in the third period apparently as fresh as daisies and the big fellows bumped their way through the Lindsay ranks almost at will. Their "com." was good and for a space the home-brews were disorganized and caught off their guard. The Petes had the nerve, the backbone and the goods for, after a terrific onslaught, they managed to slip over two or three counters. stage of the game they displayed excellent combination and worked hard to slip over two or three counters. They tied the score and had visions of district honours, but while they were still dreaming and sighing the speedy locals got back to their stride, kept pushing ahead and completely reversed matters. It was good ot watch them go.

The game was over and the boys were pretty nearly all in after the gruelling contest, and like the bird with the broken pinion, the Petes will, in the opinion of many of the fans, never soar so high again, for on keen ice the locals should repeat the trick, even on Peterborough ice.

Innocent Old Age.

"Youthful innocence" is one of those expressions which is untrue so far as criminals are concerned. It is a remarkable fact that a criminal is at his worst when he is young, and the older he becomes the better the life he leads.

Criminal statistics show, as a matter of fact, that the most virtuous age of the average wrongdoer is between fifty and sixty. It is in the very earliest part of their careers, between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one, that men and women criminals are at their worst. From twenty-one to old age they gradually improve.

This also goes to prove another remarkable fact about criminals, and that is that marriage helps to reform a man or woman. At the average age at which most people marry there is a remarkable drop in criminal statistics.

Between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one—the time when a man is at his worst, criminally speaking—are just those years when a child is breaking away from its parents and is allowed to go free.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Story of Stevenson.

After one of Dumas' plays which he saw presented in Paris and in which a man employs an unworthy stratagem against a woman Robert Louis Stevenson wrote:

"I came forth from that performance in a breathing heat of indignation. On the way down the Francais stairs I trod on an old gentleman's toes, whereupon, with that suavity which so well becomes me, I turned about to apologise and on the instant, repenting me of that intention, stopped the apology midway and added something in French to this effect: 'No. You are one of the persons who have been applauding that piece. I retract my apology.'

"Said the old Frenchman, laying his hand on my arm and with a smile that was truly heavenly in temperance, irony, good nature and knowledge of the world, 'Ah, monsieur, vous etes bien jeune' (Ah, sir, you are very young)."

His Share.

Master (suspiciously) — Who wrote your composition, Johnny? Johnny—My father. Master—What, all of it? Johnny—No, sir. I helped him.—Current Opinion.

Used to It.

She—I suppose it would break your heart if I were to say that I can only be a sister to you. He—Not at all. I'm used to having girls say that.—Exchange.

A Haughty Personage.

Professors in Germany are important personages and know it, but few probably ever reach the pinnacle of haughtiness attained by the one of whom this anecdote is narrated.

He was one of the greatest men in the faculty at Heidelberg. One day the authorities of that city ordered that the street in front of the professor's house should be paved.

"If you don't stop that noise," remarked the professor to the pavers, "I shall give up my position as a member of the Heidelberg faculty."

The pavers stopped work at once. The municipal authorities sent around to inquire respectfully of the professor when they might pave the street.

"When I take my vacation," he replied.

Then and only then was the street paved.

Pathetic.

Oh, sad is the lot of the poet!
His shirt tears; there's no one to sew it.
But you can't get his goat
With his high buttoned coat.
He's shirtless, but no one will know it.
—Allentown Democrat.

Oh, sad is the heart of the poet
Of Rudy McPhee (you should see it!)
He hasn't a hair
On his head, though up there
Is a dandy big smooth place to greet.
—Houston Post.

We've always opined that a poet
Had hair and the breezes would gloat,
But Judd and McPhee
Are a pair who are free
Of all thatch, and their craniums shoot.
—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Truth.

"Men are getting more sensible," said the moralist. "I see very few of them congregating on the street corners on rainy days to stare at the ladies."

"That's right," agreed his observing friend. "With the present styles they don't have to wait for rainy days."—Puck.

Its thinness is in the movement

Come in and let us show you how a new, mechanically correct arrangement of wheels reduced the size of the ordinary movement space one-half.

Then you will understand how this watch can "fit your pocket like a silver dollar," yet maintain the highest standards of precision timekeeping.

Then you will know how different this genuine thin model thin-keeper is from watches made to appear thin by such methods as sacrificing the inside dust protection cap in the back case, or pinching a ladies' size movement in the centre of a thin edged man's case.

Before you buy any watch, be sure to come in and see this genuine thin model timekeeper—the Gruen Verithin.

Prices: $25 to $250

WEDDING BELLS

DEYELL—JEWELL.
The Union Church, Frobisher, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, Dec. 30th, 1914, when Miss Amy Etta Jewell, only daughter of Mrs. E. Jewell, formerly of Fenelon Falls, Ont., was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Deyell of Frobisher, Sask. The ceremony was performed by the Pastor, Rev. T. A. Munroe, in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride, supported by her brother, Mr. E. Jewell, who gave her away, entered to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss L. Lee. She was prettily gowned in white silk and wool San Toy, trimmed with shadow lace and white satin, and wore an embroidered net veil, caught up with clusters of orange blossoms. The bride was attended by little Gracie Timlin, cousin of the bride, who carried a basket of flowers, and little Letia Deyell, niece of the groom, the ring bearer. Both girls were dressed in pale blue silk and shadow lace, trimmed with pearls. At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests adjourned to the home of the bride, where they received congratulations. The assemblage then sat down to a dainty wedding dinner.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful rat coat and a necklace and to each of the flower girls, gold lockets and chains, and to the organist, a gold brooch set with pearls.

At 8.30 all present wended their way to the Station where, amid a shower of rice, Mr. and Mrs. Deyell boarded the train for Western points. The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue serge, with hat to match. The presents received by the bride were numerous and costly.

The bride, who had formerly been organist of the Union Church, was presented with a beautiful buffet by the congregation.

Messrs. Greenlaw and Mulligan Heard in Belleville

If possible there must have been a few more in the Bridge Street Church last night than on any previous evening. Mr. Greenlaw and Mr. Mulligan sang a duet, entitled "Nailed to the Cross." The two big voices blending so closely that at times one could not tell which was which. Mr. Greenlaw's new song, "Childhood Days," is full of pathos, and home love, and was sung with sympathy and power. The closing number, "Where is My Wandering Boy To-night," caused much intense feeling to sweep over the audience. To-night he will sing, "He Lifted Me," "Would You Believe," and "Lord I Want to Be a Christian in My Heart." Mr. Mulligan will sing (by request) "For You I Am Praying."—Belleville Intelligencer.

A. O. H. OFFICERS WERE INSTALLED

At the annual meeting of Division No. 1, A. O. H., held on January 14th, the officers for the year 1915 were installed by County President James Hickey, in a very creditable and impressive manner. After the ceremony short and interesting speeches were given by many of the members, which were greatly enjoyed by the large number present. At this meeting the Financial Secretary and Treasurer made their annual reports, which showed the Division to have made very satisfactory progress during the past year.

The meeting was a very enthusiastic one and was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Grand Jury Assizes

TORONTO, Jan. 16.—Under military escort two prisoners of war were brought down from the barracks yesterday to the Grand Jury Assize Room at the City Hall, where the grand jurors are now considering the indictment of Paul Masur, late of the Cobourg Heavy Battery and the 46th Port Hope Regiment, on a charge of high treason. They are witnesses in the case.

With Acting Provost-sergeant Lees, of the Depot Squadron, Royal Canadian Dragoons, striding alongside, the two nervous Austrians marched one after the other up the steps of the City Hall, preceded and followed by Troopers Parish and Lamb, with carbines sloped. The troopers had five cartridges in their bandoliers and six in the magazines of their guns.

POSTPONEMENT OF TANKARD GAMES

Water on Ice at Curling Rink Unpromising for To-morrow's Games

The district Tankard games, scheduled for to-morrow, will likely be postponed until the later part of the present week. Patches of water here and there promised the first disappointment of the curling season and the weather will have to make a sharp turn before satisfactory play can be resumed. Mr. R. M. Waddell gave the rink a "once over" this morning and stated that a decision upon to-morrow's games would be made this afternoon or evening. There have to be two degrees of frost in the rink for these games, and there were no signs of frost this morning, although the probabilities indicated slightly lower temperature. Hence it is almost safe to say that to-day's weather will necessitate a postponment of the Tuesday Tankard games for this district.

Are Polluting The River

Complaints are heard from the adjoining townships, concerning the number of dead animals that are deposited in the river for convenient burial. The townships, as a whole, have complained about the City depositing sewage in the river, yet there are said to be many farmers who think nothing of dropping in a dead horse or cow. They merely haul the beast out on the ice, chop a hole in the ice and drop the carcase in. On more than one occasion, it has been stated, that dead animals have found a watery grave above the spores of the City's water supply. When such cases are reported to High County Constable Cochrane steps are usually taken to apprehend the offender.

MORE EGGS OFFERED PRICE COMING DOWN

Drop of Five to Ten Cents in Price Since Last Week.

The Toronto News says: — The downward tendency in the price of new laid eggs, which was aparent a week ago, was again in evidence in the Farmers' Market at the St. Lawrence Saturday. Supplies were very much heavier, and where a short time ago the rural salesmen presided over a small carton containing a dozen or two fresh eggs—the sole product of the week—Saturday large baskets were in order.

As a result of the plentious offerings prices were again lower, some eggs being quoted at 45c per dozen.

Butter was also offered in large quantities at prices ranging from 35c to 38c per pound.

DAIRY FARMS NOW RUN SUCCESSFULLY WITHOUT PASTURE

JAMESTOWN, N.Y., Jan. 16.—To run a dairy farm without pasture is a new thing for most dairymen in this section, but it is being tried successfully. Taking the place of the early pasture, rye is the best substitute. Its late fall and early spring growth gives green food before most pastures start. Experiments in combining the hairy or winter vetch with rye are proving successful, and adding a strong nitrogenous element to the feed.

The vetch needs no inoculation, and except for the difficulty in securing seed, seems to be a most valuable crop to use in this way, and for future green manure. The early clover, oats and peas, fodder corn, millet and alfalfa are all available as later soil crops, and will maintain a flow of milk equal to if not better than pasturage.

The price of land is likely to force much of this kind of dairying in New York state in the near future.

JUST TRY THIS WHEN HAIRY GROWTHS APPEAR

(Modes of To-day)

A smooth, hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powdered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or 3 minutes then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.

THE GERMANS HAVE AGAIN ASSUMED THE OFFENSIVE

MAIN OBJECTIVE THROUGH SOISSONS

A U. S. Complaint From Germany

The Sayville Wireless Reports Tells of Detention of American Vessel by a British Cruiser

SPECIAL CABLE:

BERLIN, (via wireless through Sayville, L.I.)—Charges of insults to the American flag and of improper interference with his vessel have been transmitted to Washington by Capt. Farley, of the American steamer Greenbrier now in Bremen Harbour. The Greenbrier sailed from New Orleans for Bremen with a cargo of cotton on December 19, after the State Department had assured the owners that she would not be interfered with. The story of the hold-up on high seas as recorded in the log book of the Greenbrier has been sent to Secretary of State Bryan by Capt. Farley, under instructions from her owners. The record declares that on Dec. 29, while proceeding toward the German coast with the vessel flying the American flag, she was halted by a solid shot across her bows, fired from a British cruiser. A cutter's crew in charge of an officer boarded the steamer and the officer demanded the ship's papers. As soon as they were shown the British officer signalled for more men. A prize crew was sent aboard, and then he ordered the American flag hauled down and the British ensign raised above the steamer. Capt. Farley says that he refused to comply, and alleges he was ordered from his bridge while the prize crew took over the vessel. They hoisted the British flag and then headed the liner toward the British coast. Capt. Farley alleges that through incompetent navigation by the British officer, and incapable handling by the prize crew, his vessel was damaged. Three boats were swept away when she was needlessly brought about in a heavy sea, he alleges, and the vessel was finally brought into Kirkwall. Here Capt. Farley declares he was ordered to take command of his vessel and to take her to Leith for examination, carrying the prize crew, whose responsibility ended at Kirkwall, as passengers. Capt. Farley declares that he refused positively to have anything more to do with his ship as long as the British flag flew over it. Finally, after three days, he claims, he was allowed to replace his own colours and then he took the vessel to Leith, finally being permitted to continue his journey to German waters.

FRENCH TRYING TO RETAKE LOST POSITIONS AT ST. MIHIEL

Severe Fighting Continues For the Control of La Boisselle—Weather Still Interfering With Conditions Generally

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Severe fighting continues for the control of La Boisselle, twenty miles northeast of Amiens, at St. Paul, near Ypinegre, and in the forest of La Prette, where the French are again trying to regain their lost positions at St. Mihiel. The Germans are taking the offensive, apparently hoping to gain noticeable success before the celebration of the Kaiser's birthday next week.

In the extreme north the weather is still interfering with conditions generally, and Alsace is blocked by snow which makes anything but artillery duels, impossible.

There is little question that the main German objective will be through Soissons. This is indicated by the gathering of a number of crack Prussian brigades in German positions north of the Aisne. The German artillery continues its efforts to demolish the town, and a large part of it has been wrecked. The authorities have expelled most of the civilian population and no civilians are permitted an entrance at the present time. This is of course, due to plans of defence that are being perfected.

The flood in the Aisne shows signs of soon subsiding, and it is believed a general advance will be attempted about the latter part of this week.

German claims that Verdun is encircled are ridiculed by military experts here. They declare that the Germans have been unable to make any material progress, and that not a single shell has yet fallen on French fortifications in this vicinity.

Reinforcements For The Princess "Pats" Regiment

Eighty-two Members of the Nova Scotia Regiment Are Sent --some Wounded Men of the "Pats" Reach England

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

SALISBURY, Jan. 19.—Some wounded men of the Princes Patricia's Regiment have been brought to England and placed in hospitals.

Eighty-two members of the Nova Scotia Regiment (the 17th Infantry Battalion of the Canadaian Expeditionary Force have been sent to France to reinforce the Princess Patricias. Lee-Enfield rifles have been issued to the 17th Battalion.

Col. W. R. W. James of the Royal Artillery has assumed command of the Fourth Brigade of the Canadians.

Sergeant Roy Johnson of Grimsby, Ont., has been promoted to be paymaster of the First Battalion.

British ordnance officers say that the Canadian Government is sending unnecessary overshoes, harness and Oliver equipment.

When the Princess Patricia's Regiment went to Winchester to join the British brigade before proceeding to France it was armed with the Lee-Enfield rifle in place of the Canadian Ross rifle. The statement that the Nova Scotia battalion has been so armed, therefore, is apparently significant of an early move toward the firing line.

The Fourth Brigade of the Canadians mentioned in the cable includes the Nova Scotia Regiment, and the 5th, 10th, 11th and 12th Battalions.

German Troops Hurried From Prussia To Bolster Advance

On the Belgian Frontier, Jan. 8.—German reinforcements from Antwerp and Brussels, as well as from Prussia, have been moving steadily through Belgium in the direction of the centre line on the Aisne for the last three days. It evidently is the intention of the Germans to try to convert the temporary advantage gained in the vicinity of Soissons into a great victory.

The German Naval Staff at Zeebrugge apparently has succeeded in concentrating there several light draught war ships, which are believed to be refitted Belgian vessels abandoned at the evacuation of the port. Every day when the weather permits two submarines put to sea from the shelter of the breakwater, accompanied by from two to four vessels which an eyewitness describes as monitors. These vessels sit low in the water and appear to have only one large gun.

The submarines as well as these strange craft are painted a tint corresponding with that of the sand dunes, for the purpose of making the vessels more difficult to discover when off the coast.

ANOTHER BIG APPROPRIATION FOR THE WAR

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—A hundred million dollars of war appropriation will be asked of Parliament by the Government at the coming session, it was learned to-day. It is considered that this sum will be sufficient for expenditure on the troops in the field and those being raised in Canada to the end of the calendar year.

Government departments have their estimates to the minimum, while no new public works will be undertaken, though the larger ones now under way will be continued. A number of sums voted last session have not yet been spent and will appear as revotes.

Lost Ground Is Regained By Russians

Two Efforts in Poland Were Discovered in Time By Searchlights

ACTIVITY IN GALICIA

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The situation in the eastern war theatre as revealed in despatches presents no new aspects of importance to-day, the opposing armies apparently continuing in deadlock everywhere excepting on the two wings. North of the lower Vistula the Russians are progressing with their offensive in the region between Plock and Mlawa, where they are reported to be drawing ever nearer to the West Prussian fortress of Thorn. At the other extremity of the line in Bukowina, where the Russians have captured an important pass leading into Eastern Hungary, they are said to have delayed their invasion until another pass, strongly fortified by the Austrians, can be taken, in order to eliminate any menace to their flank.

In Central Poland, where the Germans secured some success in storming trenches on the Russian front to the south-west of Warsaw, the situation has been restored to its former state by a Russian counter-attack. To-day's official statement from Petrograd announces that all the trenches in question were reoccupied Sunday night, after the Germans had possessed them for one day only. The German soldiers holding these trenches were "virtually annihilated" by the Russians, and two attempts by the Germans to return to the attack later in the night were repulsed.

At two other points on the central front the Germans during Sunday night commenced offensive operations. In each case, however, the movement was discovered by the Russian searchlights, and the enemy's troops dispersed before they could advance. The opinion is expressed in reports from Petrograd that the Germans still have the intention of trying to force their way to the Vistula south-west of Warsaw. They are credited with a plan of advancing along the Pilica iver, with the assistance of an Austrian force to be brought up from the army now entrenched on the Nida and Dunajec rivers east of Cracow.

OPERATIONS IN WESTERN ZONE FAVOURABLE TO THE ALLLIES

German Attack is Repulsed and Village North of Amiens Recaptured at Point of Bayonet

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, Jan. 19—The official communiques issued by the French War Office to-day contain news more than usually favourable to the allied operations in the western war zone.

The Village of La Boisselle, 20 miles to the north-east of Amiens, was taken from the French by the Germans, and later recaptured by the French. At this point there has been much work with the bayonet. A French ammunition depot blew up, and part of the Village was destroyed by fire The Germans, taking advantage of this, attacked the French with the steel and drove them to positions beyond In a fierce counter-attack some hours later the French recaptured the positions.

Aeroplanes Brought Down.

The night communique also declares that the French have brought down two German aeroplanes which flew over the position in the Argonne, and the afternoon communique says that marked progress has been made in the effort to clear La Pretre wood, near Pont-a-Mousson, of the enemy.

In both communiques to-day the fact is emphasized that storms are interfering with the fighting on almost the entire front. This is particularly true in the Vosges, where there is a violent fall of snow, and from the sea to the Oise, where the rain and a heavy wind are interfering with all recent artillery action.

German attacks yesterday and to-day were directed against Autreche, north-east of Vic-sur-Aisne, at Hill 263 in the Argonne, north-west of the Pont-a-Mousson, at Thann, where the Germans began a bombardment without effect, at St. Paul, north-east of Soissons, and in the Champagne district.

These efforts were easily repulsed, the French War Office reports.

Tennis nets are being used in Flanders as a protection against the hand grenades of the Germans.

AEROPLANES SCOUTED OVER ALSACE

GENEVA, Jan. 17.—Eight Anglo-French aeroplanes, acting as scouts and carrying no bombs left Belfort this morning, flying duck formation. The triangle separated above Altkirch. Four went toward Colmar and four toward Mulhausen and the Rhine. They were frequently bombarded, but returned safely to Belfort within six hours. None of the aeroplanes was injured.

Counties Must Take Lead In Road Building

Financial Stringency May Prevent Province From Putting Thirty Million Dollar Scheme Into Operation

While it is certain that legislation dealing with the good roads question will be introduced at the coming session of the House, the new measure will not alter the policy pursued by the Government in the past of contributing to the construction of roads by counties. The Hon. Finlay G. Macdiarmid, Minister of Public Works, gives the assurance that should any county desire to undertake the construction of a road it can count on the customary Government grant. At present this grant is 33 1-3 per cent. of the total cost of construction, and the Minister of Public Works says that the amount will certainly not be decreased.

Legislation Not Ready.

With regard to the reports that the Government intended to adopt the report of the Ontario Highways Commission and put into immediate operation the $30,000,000 scheme, the Hon. Mr. Macdiarmid intimated when questioned, that the Government felt the effects of the financial stringency. He said that the legislation had not been prepared as yet, and was still being considered by the Government, and explained.

"The initiative in all good roads work must be taken by the counties. At present the indications are that counties are carrying considerable debt and the councils are not very anxious to proceed with any work or undertake any additional tasks which will increase the debt. The Government can't order the roads to be built; the counties must start the work and then come to us for the contribution. The general opinion seems to be that the Government has the power to start the construction of a road."

"Do you think that a vote taken at the present time would carry in the majority of the counties?"

"I could not say, but with present financial conditions it is extremely doubtful."

A Good Suggestion.

Mr. Macdiarmid suggested that it would be a very good move on the part of the counties to get large quantities of stone in the summer months and then when winter came and men got out of work they could be given jobs crushing the stone. The stone had to be crushed anyway, and it was work that could be paved for the winter months.

"THE BATTLE CRY"

Charles Neville Buck

So when she reached the ridge and stood again under the poplar tree she looked to the east where she could see the ox-teams still snaking logs down to the mill and others bringing up squared timbers for her buildings, and a happy smile lifted the corners of her subtly curved lips. She patted the bark of the big tree, and, gazing affectionately at it as at an old and confidential friend, she murmured, "I'm back again, and it's all right." Then with another glance at the sombre pile of brick she murmured, "Feud leader, law maker, law breaker and student of Shakespeare! Of course you're not at all typical, but you're a very interesting somebody, Honourable Bad Anse Havey."

But the smile faded as she turned, and a patch of roof down the other way caught her eye and reminded her of something. She had yet the very delicate and unpleasant duty of telling young Milt McBriar that, to him, the school was closed and its hospitality withdrawn. She was glad he was still a boy for that would mean that in him remained a touch of chivalry and generosity. Soon young Milt would be going back to Lexington again to college, for he was one of the few boys of the hill aristocracy who were being given education.

The girl had often wondered why it had not changed him more. He was almost as typical a mountaineer as those who stayed at home and in him she found a discouraging exponent of the immutability of heredity. As chance would have it young Milt rode by her place the next day. She knew he would come back the same way and that afternoon as he was returning she intercepted him beyond the turn of the road. With the foreign courtesy learned abroad he lifted his hat and dismounted. Juanita had always rather liked young Milt. The clear fearlessness of his eyes gave him a certain attractiveness, and his face had so far escaped the clouding veil of sullenness which she so often encountered.

At first she was a little confused as to how to approach the subject and the boy rolled a cigarette as he stood respectfully waiting.

"Milt," she said at last "please do not misunderstand me. It's not because I want to, but I've got to ask you to give me a promise. You see I need your help."

At that the half smile left the boy's lips and a half frown came to his eyes.

"I reckon I know what ye mean," he said; "young Jeb, he's asked ye ter warn me off. Why don't Jeb carry his own messages?"

"Milt," she gravely reminded him, resting her hand for a moment on his coat-sleeve, "it's more serious than that. Jeb ordered me to send his sister back to the cabin. You are having an education. I want her to have one. She has the right to it. I love her very dearly, Milt, and if you are a friend you won't roo her of her chance."

The boy's eyes flashed. "Air ye goin' ter send her back thar, ter dwell amongst them tutor-back hawgs an' hound-dawgs an' fleas?" he demanded.

"That depends on you. Jeb is the head of his family. I can't keep her without his consent. I had to promise him that you shouldn't visit her."

For a moment the heir to McBriar leadership stood twisting the toe of his heavy boot in the dust and apparently studying the little circles it stamped out. Then he raised his eyes and contemplatively studied the mist-wreathed crests of the ridges.

At last he inquired, "What hes Dawn got ter say?"

"Dawn hasn't said much," she faltered, remembering the girl's tirade. Then she confessed. "You see, Milt, just now Dawn is thinking of herself as a Havey and of you as a McBriar. All I ask is that you won't try to see her while she's here at the school—not at all events until things are different."

The boy was wrestling with youth's unwillingness to be coerced.

"An' let Dawn think that her brother skeered me off?" he questioned at last with a note of rising defiance.

"Dawn sha'n't think that. She shall know that you have acted with a gentleman's generosity, Milt—and because I've asked you to do it."

"Hain't I good enough ter keep company with Fletch McNash's gal?" The lad was already persuaded, but his stubbornness fired this parting shot.

"It's not a question of that, Milt, and you know it," declared Juanita. "It's just that one of your people kiled one of his. Put yourself in Jeb's place." Still for a while the boy stood there, scowling down at the ground, but at last he raised his face and nodded.

"It's a bargain, ma'am, but mind I only says I won't see her hyar—some day I'll make Jeb pay fer it." He mounted and rode away while the lazy, hazy sweetness of the smoky mists hung splendidly to the ridges and the sunset flamed at his back.

Juanita never knew what details of the incident came to Old Milt's ears, but when next the head of the house passed her on the road he spoke with a diminished cordiality, and when she stopped him he commented a little bitterly. "I hear ye're a-runnin' a Havey school over thar now. Little Milt tells me ye warned him offen yore place." She tried to explain, and though he pretended to accept all she said in good humour, she knew in her heart she had made a powerful and bitter enemy.

Even now when the desolate fall rains must soon wash all the colour from the hills and leave them reeking and grey, the drought hung on. It has been unprecedented and sometimes the smoke of the ridges mingled with the real smoke of forest fires. In places as one rode the hills one came upon great blackened stretches where charred and blistered shafts alone remained in memory of the magnificent forestry of yesterday.

One afternoon Anse Havey, wandering through the timber on his own side of the ridge, came upon a lone hunter and when he drew near it proved to be young Milt McBriar.

"Mornin', Milt," said the Havey. "I didn't know ye ever went huntin' over here."

The boy, who in feud etiquette was a trespasser, met the scrutiny with a level glance.

"I was a-gunnin' fer boomers," he said, using the local phrase for the red squirrels of the hills; "I reckon I hain't hardly got no license ter go gunnin' on yore land."

Anse Havey sat down on a log and looked up at the boy steadily. At last he said gravely:

"Hunt as much as ye like, Milt, only be headful not to start no fires." Milt nodded and turned to go, but the older man called him back. "I want to have a word with ye, Milt," he said soberly. "I ain't never heard that neither the McBriars nor the Haveys countenanced settin' fire to dwellin' houses, have you?"

"I dont' know what ye mean," responded the boy, and the gaze that passed between them was that of two men who can look direct into any eyes.

"I 'lowed it would astonish ye," went on the older man. "Back of the new schoolhouse, that's still full of shavin's an' loose timber, there's a little stretch of dry woods that comes right down to the back door. Somebody has done laid a trail of shavin's an' leaves in the brush there, an' soaked 'em with coal-oil. Some feller aims to burn down that school-house to-night."

"Did yo tell Miss Holland?" demanded Milt, in a voice of deep anxiety.

"No, I ain't named it to her," Bad Anse sat with a seeming of indifference in his face, at which the lad's blood boiled.

"Does ye aim ter set byar an' let her place git burnt up" he snapped out wrathfully. "Because if ye does, I don't."

Anse Havey laughed. "Well, no," he replied, "I didn't aim to do that." Suddenly he rose. "What I did aim to do, Milt, was this: I aimed to go down there to-night with enough fellers to handle either the fire or whoever starts it. I aimed to see who was doin' a trick like that. Will you go with me?"

"Me?" echoed Milt in astonishment. This idea of the two factions acting in concert was a decided innovation. It might be loaded. It might be a trap. Suddenly the boy demanded, "Why don't ye ask pap?"

"I don't ask your pap nothing." In Havey's reply was a quick and truculent snap that rarely came to his voice. "I'm askin' you, an' you can take my proposition or leave it. That house-burner is goin' to die. If he's one of my people I want to know it. If he's one of your people you ought to feel the same way. Will you go with me?"

The boy considered the proposal for a time in silence. Dawn would be in danger! At last he said gravely: "Hit sounds like a fa'r proposition. I'll go along with ye, an' meantime I'll keep my own counsel."

CHAPTER XX.

Anse Havey had been looking ahead. When Old Milt McBriar had said, "Them Haveys 'lows thet I'd cross h—l on a rotten plank ter do 'em injury," he had shot close to the mark. Bad Anse knew that the quiet-visaged old murder-lord could no more free himself from guile and deceit than the rattler can separate himself from the poison which impregnates its fangs and nature.

When he had taken Milt's hand, sealing the truce, he had not been beguiled, but realized that the compact was only strategy and was totally insincere, yet in Young Milt he saw possibilities. He was accustomed to rely on his own judgment and he recognized a clean and sterling strain in the younger McBriar. He hated the breed with a hatred that was flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone, but with an eye of prophecy he foresaw the day when a disrupted mountain community must fall asunder unless native sons could unite against the conquest of lowland greed. He could never trust Old Milt, but he hoped that he and young Milt, who would some day succeed to his father's authority, might stand together in that inevitable crisis.

This idea had for a long time been vaguely taking shape in his mind, and when he met young Milt in the woods and proposed uniting to save Juanita's school he was laying a corner-stone for that future alliance.

At sunset young Milt came and he came without having spoken of his purpose at his own house. The night was sharp and moonless, with no light save that which came from the coldly glittering stars, and Anse and young Milt crouched for hours, knee to knee in the dead thickets, keeping watch.

At last they both saw a creeping figure, which was only a vague shadow moving among shadows, and they peered with straining eyes and raised rifles. But the shadow fell very still and since it was only by its movement that they could detect it they waited in vain. What hint of being watched was given out no one could say. The woods were still and the two kneeling figures in the laurel made no sound. The other men, waiting at their separated posts, were equally invisible and noiseless, but some intangible premonition had come to the shadow which lost itself in the impenetrable blackness and began its retreat with its object unaccomplished.

Young Milt went back to his house in the cold mists of dawn. No shot had been fired, no face recognized, but the Havey and the McBriar both knew that the school had been saved by their joint vigilance.

Some days later the news of that night-watch leaked through to Jerry Everson, who bore the tidings to Juanita, and she wrote a note to Anse Havey, asking him to come over and let her express her thanks in person.

The mail rider brought her a brief reply, penned in a hand of copy-book care.

"I don't take any credit" (said the writer): "I only did what any other man would do and young Milt McBriar did as much as I did. Thank him if you want to. It would only be awkward for me to come over there.—Respectfully,

"Anse Havey."

IN SUCH PAIN WOMAN CRIED

Suffered Everything Until Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite. The pains were so bad that I used to sit right down on the floor and cry, because it hurt me so and I could not do any work at those times. An old woman advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I got a bottle. I felt better the next month so I took three more bottles of it and got well so I could work all the time. I hope every woman who suffers like I did will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. P. W. LANNING, Route No. 1, Florence, South Dakota.

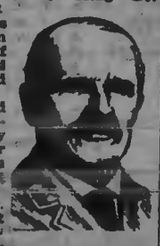
Why will women continue to suffer day in and day out or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Operation Decided On As Only Means of Relief

But the Writer of This Letter Resolved to Try Dr. Chase's Ointment First and Was Cured.



This is not an isolated case, for we frequently hear from people who have been cured of piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment after physicians had told them nothing short of an operation could bring relief and cure.

If you could read these letters, coming as they do, day after day and year after year, you would realize what a wonderful curative agent Dr. Chase's Ointment really is. Fewer ailments are more annoying or more persistently torturing than piles, and when this suffering is promptly relieved by the application of Dr. Chase's Ointment there can be no doubt as to where credit is due. Friends and neighbors are told of the result and so the good word spreads, and Dr. Chase's Ointment is becoming known far and wide as the only actual cure for piles or hemorrhoids.

MR. BEAUVAIS.

Mr. Charles Beauvais, a respected citizen of St. John's, Que., writes:—"For 14 years I suffered from chronic piles or hemorrhoids and considered my case very serious. I was treated by a well-known physician who could not help me, and my doctor decided on an operation as the only means of relief. However, I resolved to try Dr. Chase's Ointment first. The first box brought me great relief, and by the time I had used three boxes I was completely cured. This is why it gives me such great pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to everybody suffering from hemorrhoids as a preparation of the greatest value."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Sunday Morning

By F. A. MITCHEL

James Weatherby awakened at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning and lay staring at the walls of his room. On them were a dingy daub of a water mill and an engraving of Benjamin Franklin. Being in a court, not a ray of sunlight could permeate the apartment.

Six mornings had Weatherby awakened in this room, and this was the seventh—not the seventh day of the week, but the seventh day since he had awakened in his own little home. Turning on his side, his eyes rested on one of those framed words one sees here and there in lieu of pictures. It read "God Bless Our Home" and under it "Remember the Sabbath Day." He thought of the Sunday mornings that he had awakened at home. Little Jim climbed out of his crib and joined his father in bed, while Mrs. Jim went downstairs to start the breakfast. Big Jim, on his back, would hold little Jim up at arm's length, his feet under the child.

Then had come quarrels between Weatherby and his wife. Mrs. Weatherby was frugal, and Jim was careless with his money. He was hard for an economical wife to manage, and sometimes she would lose her patience with him. At last Jim declared he would no longer stand her harrowing, as he called it, and left her.

This was a week ago. As Jim lay looking at the words "God Bless Our Home" and "Remember the Sabbath Day" he went over and over again in his mind those happy Sunday mornings he had spent at home. After he and little Jim had had their play he had taken his bath, put on his Sunday clothes, and on that morning he had always helped Jimmie to dress. Then the three had met at the breakfast table, on which there was always something nice provided for Sunday morning.

While Weatherby was looking at the mottoes on the wall and thinking of his home the words were having their effect on his heart. It seemed to him that there was a connection between the two. "God Bless Our Home" caused him to think what home was, how different from the lonely room to which he had moved, and "Remember the Sabbath Day" set him to thinking in a quiet vein. After all, was not the economy his wife had urged necessary? Suppose he should be suddenly taken away. And suppose his wife should soon follow him. What would little Jim do? His father pictured him hustled off to some charitable institution or, worse, trying at a tender age to make his living on the streets.

The thought made Jim restless. He got out of bed, splashed a little water on his face, dressed himself and went downstairs. In his pocket were his week's wages that he had received the day before. He had been tempted to spend it in a saloon and went there to do so, but somehow the place didn't look as attractive as it had often looked when he knew that his wife would chide him on his return home. The full amount was intact.

He stood in the sunlight, thinking. It was 7 o'clock. His Sunday morning breakfast hour at home was half past 8. That home was three miles away, but he would gladly walk it to have his breakfast at home. He walked down the street, passing one restaurant after another, trying to force himself into one of them to get a meal. But his stomach rebelled.

"I can go home," he said, "and eat with Molly and the kid. But what use? There would soon be more trouble about the expenses, and every time I paid a car fare instead of walking home after a hard day's work I'd get a scolding."

Then the thought of little Jim left on the world came to him again.

He was walking in the direction of his home, and as he thought he walked the faster. When he had gone a mile he stopped. Then he went on for another mile and stopped again. A third time he stopped and stood looking at his home a short distance away.

A clock struck 8. Molly was getting the breakfast. Who was helping little Jim dress himself? He could get on his clothes, but could he get the buttons in the holes? Weatherby could see the window of the boy's room and fancied him trying to "button himself up." Involuntarily Jim started forward.

A few minutes later Molly Weatherby, standing over the range, heard the kitchen door open. Turning, she saw her husband. He had a roll of bills in his hand and handed them to her.

"It's yesterday's pay," he said. "Take it. You can run the finances better than I. I never want to see a cent of the money again."

Molly threw her arms around his neck.

"Where's the kid?" Jim asked presently, and without awaiting a reply he went upstairs.

"Hello, pop!" cried Jim. "Ain't I glad you came! This button is too big for this hole and won't go in at all."

Jim hugged the boy, then helped him to finish dressing. After that they went down to breakfast."

"Oh, Jim," said his wife, "somehow I couldn't bear to leave out the muffins you always eat for breakfast, though I didn't suppose you'd be here. Wasn't it lucky?"

"It wasn't exactly luck," replied Jim. He was thinking of the mottoes "God Bless Our Home" and "Remember the Sabbath Day."

The shoe that pinches looks just as well as the one that does not irritate your corns.

How some of those war poems get by the censor is something that ought to be explained.

About the blackest touch on the night side of warfare is what calls itself "reprisal."

Add to the list of the horrors of war a Canadian firm is advertising a military wrist watch.

Consistent neutrality must be as hard an ideal as the frictionless pulley and the invisible lens.

It yet may become necessary to land marines to protect Mr. Carnegie's peace palace at The Hague.

Anybody who knows anything about a family fight should know enough to remain strictly neutral.

While machine guns are melting their bearings in Europe, there is talk of reviving archery in this country.

If only the supply of habit forming drugs were shut off the war might prove a blessing to this country.

There may be as much wisdom in preparing for peace in time of war as in preparing for war in time of peace.

Switzerland's bid to become the international hospital camp is due to the fact that the tourist business is ruined.

IGNORES U. S. REQUEST.

But Carranza Hastens To Comply With British Demands.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—While Secretary of State Bryan and other officials of the State Department waited there yesterday for an answer from Carranza in reply to Mr. Bryan's protest against the confiscation of British oil wells in the Tampico district, the matter had already been settled by Carranza direct with the British Embassy at Washington.

Carranza answered promptly and definitely to the British Ambassador through the British Legation at Mexico City before one o'clock Saturday, explaining away the difficulties and making a surrender to the British contention.

This evening, after Secretary Bryan and other State Department officials had gone home, Miss Alfodonde gave out at Carranza headquarters Carranza's oil decree of Jan. 7 and a message to Secretary of State Bryan, saying that no confiscation was menacing foreign oil properties, and that the only legal provision that had been enacted referred to the general suspension of such work as was being conducted without authority from his Government and to companies that were not paying taxes.

Treasurer Shot Himself.

UTICA, N.Y., Jan. 18.—William H. Richards, formerly treasurer of this county, and for many years prominent in the counsels and leadership of the county, and for many years prominent in the counsels and leadership of the Republican party, committed suicide by shooting. He was a member of a prosperous insurance agency and prominent in fraternal circles. It is supposed that he was discouraged over some recent speculations.

To Ship Horses at Once.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—Owing to the special demand for horses for the British army some of the horses now being purchased for the second Canadian contingent will probably be shipped at once to England, others being purchased to take their places.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites kidneys, causing backache, sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent litha-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Gen. Garza Is President.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 18. — Gen. [illegible] Eight made provisional President of Mexico by the convention in session here over which he has presided. The former provisional President, Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez, together with Generals Blanco, Robles and Jesse Vasconcelos, left Mexico City yesterday morning at four o'clock for Vashuco.

Martial law has been declared by Gen. Garza and the city is being patrolled by mounted police.

In electing Garza, the convention declared itself to be supreme and until a new President is elected, has assumed all the legislative, executive and judicial powers.

LOOK!

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!

Pepa is the discovery!

Pepa are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the minute walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air cells in the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Pepa fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Pepa are entirely distinct from the old fashioned liquid cough cures, which are merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Pepa treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.

If you have not yet tried Pepa, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 1c. stamp to pay return postage) to Pepa Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Pepa at 50c. box.

TO LEAVE ENGLAND SOON.

Three Weeks Will See Men In France Says Alderson.

SALISBURY, Eng., Jan. 18.—During his inspection tour through the camp Saturday afternoon, Gen. Alderson congratulated the men on their splendid work. When he made the announcement that he expected they would leave for France within three weeks he was vigorously cheered. The impression prevails that the division will go to southern France for sound training which has been greatly hampered here.

The following casualties among the Canadian Expeditionary Force are announced:

Deaths—Jan. 16, Pte. Robt. Lamb, 4th Battalion, at No. 1 Canadian General Hospital, Netheravon, from heart failure. Next of kin, John Sidey, 144 Jo..n street, Toronto.

Jan. 15, Pte. Hartley Chase, 12th Battalion, at No. 1 Canadian General Hospital, Bulford, from meningitis. Next of kin, Mr. Edward Chase, Fredericton, N.B.

Why She Did It.

"Why is it," they asked, "that you let your husband have his own way in everything?"

"Because," she replied, "I like to have some one to blame when things go wrong."

NO LIFE IS WASTED.

No life is wasted in the great worker's hand. The gem too poor to polish in itself we grind to brighten others.—Philip James Bailey.

A Scrupulous Officer.

At Marengo, while Napoleon reconnoitered the enemy's movements and gave his orders in writing, a cannon ball struck the officer to whom he was dictating and threw him mutilated on the ground. Napoleon uttered another secretary. He came. At the moment when Napoleon resumed his dispatch the wounded man raised himself. "Unofficial," said he in a dying voice—"general"—we stopped there." And he repeated the last words that Napoleon had dictated.

The Keys of the Universe.

In the year 1694 William Patterson, founder of the Bank of Scotland, conceived the grand project of planting on the isthmus of Darien a British colony which, in his own words, "should secure for Great Britain the keys of the universe, enabling their possessors to give laws to both oceans and to become the arbiters of the commercial world." This colony was actually founded at a place still known as Puerto Escoces, but its people were subsequently forced by the Spaniards to evacuate and return to Scotland.

Colors of Rainbows.

Violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange and red are the colors of the rainbow. Most are sure of that. It is true, however, of only a very few rainbows. The colors of rainbows vary with their width, and their width varies with the size of the raindrops, big drops producing narrow bows with bright clearly defined colors, small drops producing wide bows with pale colors. Here are the colors as generally seen: (1) When the raindrops average one millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange, light red, dark red; (2) when the drops average three-tenths of a millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange; (3) when the drops average one-tenth of a millimeter, very pale violet, violet, whitish blue, whitish green.

Law at Ascot.

Ascot is legal as well as royal in being the only racecourse in the world with its especial court of justice. When George IV. was regent he was assaulted at Ascot and when his assailant was arrested demanded his instant punishment. Enraged at the delay necessitated by the man's conveyance to Windsor, the prince decreed that a magistrate should always be in attendance at Ascot for the swift punishment of offenders. The indictable offenses act of 1818 made the royal wish the law of the land, and during Ascot week the chief magistrate at Bow street is accordingly on duty in the little room opening onto the paddock, to try and to sentence all offenders within a minute or two of their arrest.—London Answers.

Not Allowed to Read the Bible.

But few people know that in the sixteenth century an Englishman was not allowed to read the Bible, yet it is perfectly true. Henry VIII. issued a decree prohibiting the common people from reading the Bible. Officers of state were exempt from this law. Probably the king thought these officials would be none the worse for perusing the sacred work, and noble ladies or gentlewomen might read the proscribed volume if they did so in their gardens or orchards, but no one was allowed even to read it to the lower classes.—Westminster Gazette.

The Compromise.

"How did Jack and Mabel agree over their dispute about the marriage service?"

"Mabel told Jack if he would make good on the 'all his worldly goods' endowment proposition she would gladly make the promise to obey."—Baltimore American.

Girl Dead Beside Lover.

"By the side of a young French cavalry officer who had been hit in a fight on the Aisne we found the body of a pretty girl," says Sergeant Payne, who is at Bristol, wounded. "Both were dead. Their story was as sad as anything I have heard of in a war full of tragedies. When the young man joined his regiment the girl left a convent school and attached herself to the Red Cross.

"Hearing that her sweetheart had not returned from a charge in which his regiment was engaged, she had gone out with the ambulance men to look for him. Going in advance she had found him, and while attending to his wounds was hit by a stray bullet, which penetrated her right lung and killed her. They were buried side by side."

BRONCHITIS

If Neglected Will Surely Turn Into PNEUMONIA.

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold. It starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is of a light color, but soon becomes copious and of purulent character.

You have, no doubt, wakened up in the morning and have had to cough half a dozen times before you could raise the phlegm from your bronchial tubes, and when you do succeed in doing so you find that it is of yellowish or greenish color, and you get some relief right away. When this happens to you, you may rest assured that you have a touch of bronchitis, and if not cured immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia or some other more serious trouble.

Cure the cold, and thereby prevent bronchitis and pneumonia taking a hold on your system.

This can be quickly done by the use of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Rebecca Have, Mahone Bay, N.S., writes: "My little boy, aged six, was always troubled with bronchitis, and when he had whooping cough he was worse. Doctors advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It gave him instant relief, and positively cured him."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

To bind velvet with braid is a clever way to obviate the heavy edge that would result from turning the velvet under in a hem. Overdresses or jumpers for girls are made of velvet also, although they are more often seen in serge or cheviot. In combination with striped, checked or plaid materials the jumper style is very effective. In the accompanying illustration the plain and plaid are well combined. The waist is somewhat on the order of the Russian blouse, with deep armholes, and the separate skirt is side plaited. Piqué collar and cuffs contribute an added touch of distinction. The pattern, No. 6,957, comes in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

Middy blouses in dark blue serge are worn by schoolgirls and are often made with taffeta collars, the plaited collar sleeve and yoke feature. Another pretty design is like a Russian blouse, the fulness confining almost to the skirt hem and made of plain material. On the other hand the skirt is made of striped material, and while only a few inches of it shows it is just enough to look very smart. The cuff matches the skirt, but the collar is made a pretty, scalloped and embroidered, cloth ribbon forms the sash.

Price, 10 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

JERSEY PRIVATE HONORED.

Escaped From Germans and Aided in Capture of Staff.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—A French private has just been decorated for an exploit which, while it missed the capture of the German Crown Prince by a few hours, led to the rounding-up of the entire staff of one German regiment.

After the battle of Charleroi the private was taken prisoner. At the German general's request he served as the latter's orderly for a fortnight at a village near Sedan, where the Crown Prince had taken up his headquarters. Eventually the private escaped and carried the intelligence of the Crown Prince's presence to the French lines.

Early one morning the village was surrounded and the garrison capitulated. The Crown Prince, however, had left on the previous night for an unknown part of the front.

Steamer In Distress.

HALIFAX, Jan. 18.—The steamer Camino, flying the American flag is reported by wireless in distress 150 miles southeast of Sable Island. The steamer lost her rudder and has asked for assistance. She is from San Francisco via the Panama Canal for Rotterdam with a cargo of supplies for the Belgians. The Government steamer Lady Laurier has been sent from Halifax to the Camino's assistance.

Capt. Adams Drowned.

PRESCOTT, Ont., Jan. 18.—Capt. Gideon Adams of the Government steamer Reserve was accidentally drowned here Saturday night. Capt. Adams was proceeding to his steamer to make his inspection for the night and missed his footing on the edge of the wharf. Two brothers, one sister and a wife survive.

AUSTRALIA RAISES TARIFF.

All Countries But Britain Must Pay Higher Customs Duties.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—The first increase in the new Australian tariff, information concerning which has been received by the Trade and Commerce Department in the general advance of from 5 to 10 per cent. in the preference upon goods manufactured in the United Kingdom, by advancing the duties upon goods imported from all other countries to that extent.

This preference does not extend to Canadian products and manufactures so that Canadian exporters will have to face increased duties.

The second increase is in the duties from which increased revenue is desired and the third increase covers the increased protection to Australian industries promised prior to the recent general election. In the order named the principal articles of goods and products imported into Australia are agricultural implements, motor-cars and vehicle parts, printing paper, lumber and fish in tins.

Train Left Track.

GUELPH, Jan. 18. — When the C. P. R. train from Goderich was pulling into Guelph station at 2.25 on Saturday afternoon, the engine jumped the track. The train was under fair headway, and had it gone two or three feet further would have tumbled over the bank into the river. The line was blocked and a train was sent into the city from the junction and the passengers transferred. The auxiliary from West Toronto worked till 11.30 p.m. to get the engine back on the line and the track cleared.

British Officers Escape.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—British naval officers interned in Holland formally notified the military authorities some time ago of their desire to be relieved from their parole, according to a Central News despatch from Amsterdam. From that time forward they were strictly confined to camp, but early this week seven of the officers escaped at night. Two of them obtained an automobile and it is understood have reached England. The others were recaptured at Harderwijk.

As a consequence of this attempt all British officers have been transferred to the fortress at Bosseraven.

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT, BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

Make It Thick, Glossy, Wavy, Luxuriant and Remove All Dandruff

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this — moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

British and Germans Arranged Their Own Truce on Christmas And Exchanged Many Greetings

Letters Received in London Recount Remarkable Scenes When Foes Met on Christmas—Mixed Football Games Provide Sport, and Newspapers and Cigarettes Are Handed About.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Nothing has occurred in this strange war more remarkable than the Christmas passed in social intercourse between the German soldiers and the British. Letters are now beginning to come in telling of the extraordinary way in which the troops had an unofficial armistice, which has been condemned by the German general staff and forbidden in the future. A British officer writing home on Boxing Day, says:

'You said I should probably hardly know it was Christmas Day, but far from it, we had a most extraordinary day, and quite different from the others. On Christmas Eve our section of the line—and I think it was the same all along—arranged an unofficial armistice, each side agreeing not to shoot if the other did not. That night lots of British and Germans met between the two lines and had talks, the Germans giving boxes of cigars to our men, and we giving them hot tea.

"On Christmas morning there was a hard frost with a thick mist. When the mist lifted they saw Germans sitting all along the top of the parapet, so our men got right out in front of the trenches, and they did likewise and met in the middle. Neither side would let the other over the half-way line.

"When I went down to the trenches instead of walking miles underground or under water, we walked up above ground, as everybody else was doing the same thing. When we got up there, just behind our trenches, which are only 200 yards from the Germans, we found a game of football going on, and farther on there were bicycle races on bikes without tyres, found in the ruins of the houses. Looking across to the 'Deutschers'' line, they were walking about anywhere and everywhere. After a bit, two officers came out and had a talk.

Presents from a German.

"Really, it was a most extraordinary sight, for, as a rule, you don't see a soul; every one is underground, and if you want to look over to the enemy you take jolly good care not to poke your head right over, but look very cautiously. One of my men—the one who got the D.C.M. (Distinguished Conduct Medal) — was given some sweets and a pair of braces by a German. Some of them were really most friendly and said they did not want to fight at all and bore us no hatred. They are still the Saxon corps opposite to us. Today is almost as usual, with guns shooting on both sides, but there is not much sniping."

Could Scarce Believe It.

"Strolling down to the trenches on Christmas morning," writes a Sussex officer in the Royal Field Artillery, "I was staggered to find Germans and British all crowded up together between the two opposing wire entanglements. I felt in my pocket to make sure my revolver was there, and went there too. It absolutely beat cock-fighting. 'Tommy Atkins' was swopping woodbines for rank cigars, and talking a desperate lingo of Cockney French and pidgin English.

"A subaltern said, 'Oh, my dear fellow, you've come too late. I've been talking to a chap who was head waiter at the Trocadero two years ago, but he's gone now.'

"Several has iron crosses, and if you didn't ask to see them they asked you to look at them. I found one fellow, small, grubby and ill-shaven, who had a few words of English. I asked him if he had ever been in England. He said 'No, but am clerk. Do busines with England.' 'What is your business?' I asked, and I shrieked with joy as he gravely said 'Exporters of mouth organs.' The one phrase of English they all seem to know is 'Made in Germany.' At regular intervals one would point to something and say 'Made in Germany,' and they would all laugh fit to burst."

Foes Hold a "Sing-Song."

"We had quite a 'sing-song' last night (Christmas Eve)," writes another. "The Germans gave a song and then our chaps gave them one in return. A German that could speak English, and some others, came right up to our trenches, and we gave them cigarettes and newspapers to read, as they never get any news, and then we let them walk back to their own trenches. Then our chaps went over to their trenches and they let them come back all right.

"About five o'clock on Christmas eve one of them shouted across and told us that if we did not fire on them they would not fire on us, and so the officers agreed. About twenty of them came up all at once and started chatting away to our chaps like old chums, and neither side attempted to shoot. They said their officers had told them that the Germans had taken St. Petersburg and smashed up all our navy and all the east coast, and bombarded London to ruins. But they will see a different story when they read the newspapers we gave them."

Bagpipes Helped.

Sergt.-Major Naden, of the 6th Cheshire Regiment, writes:

"On Christmas morning one of the Germans came out of a trench and held up his hands. Then lots of us did the same, and we met half-way, and for the rest of the day we fraternized, exchanging cigarettes and souvenirs. The Germans also gave us sausages and we gave them some of our food. The Scotsmen then started the bagpipes and we had a rare old jollification, which included football, in which the Germans took part. The Germans said they were tired of the war and wished it were over."

Germans Well Supplied.

Bombardier Carson, of the 1st Battalion, 4th Brigade, writes:

"On Christmas Day not a shot was fired. One of the German officers thought the war would be over in three weeks, as they had been told they had captured the entire Russian army. That is how they keep up the spirits of the troops. It is a mistake to say they are not well equipped. They have plenty of clothes, boots, ammunition, and grub. Every man has a pair of field glasses and a luminous watch.

"One German officer I was real worried for. He said he was sorry the war ever started, for he had expected to marry an English girl and the engagement is now off."

TURKEY INFECTED WITH BLACKHEAD

A party in Cobourg purchased a turkey during the holidays. Upon dressing it, she found that the liver was diseased and consulted with others about the matter. The liver was sen to the Guelph Agricultural College, where microscopic examination revealed the fact that the turkey had been infected with Entero-Hepatis, commonly known as "blackhead," which is a disease that affects turkeys in the United States and Canada, and which renders them unfit for consumption. The liver becmes affected early and later the head of the bird becomes black.

TO SHOW FOLLY OF WAR.

Socialist Convention In Copenhagen Is Not Well Attended.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 18. — (Via London.)—The conference of Socialists of neutral countries, which opened here yesterday, was very slimly attended. Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Holland were represented by four delegates each and Italy by one. Neither the United States nor Switzerland sent delegates.

The real object of the conference is to draw general attention to the folly of making Europe bankrupt and crippling her manhood, and to draw up plans for approaching the belligerents with arbitration proposals when an opportune moment arrives.

The Socialists want to bring home to all peoples the uselessness of fighting to the "bitten end."

One of the subjects under discussion is arbitration on the lines that no frontier changes be made without the consent of the peoples concerned.

Paris Darkens Down.

PARIS, Jan. 18. — The military government has submitted to the authorities a suggestion that there be a diminution in the number of lights in Paris and its suburbs as a precautionary measure against aerial incursions by the Germans. The military authorities strongly urge the extinction or the strict limitation of lights in shops, factories and elsewhere, and say that it is even desirable that window shades be used to conceal lights.

Gen. Stoessel Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The death of Lt.-Gen. Anatole Mikhailovitch Stoessel, the defender of Port Arthur, is announced in a Petrograd despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. Gen. Stoessel had suffered from paralysis for several months.

Gen. Stoessel was condemned to death by a court-martial for surrendering Port Arthur to the Japanese, but the sentence was commuted to a term of imprisonment.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 18. — Trains filled with German soldiers are continually passing through Hungary towards the Serbian frontier to take part in the approaching Austrian offensive against Servia.

GREECE DEVOTED TO CAUSE OF BRITAIN.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Greek Minister, Mr. M. J. Gennadius, addressing a meeting here last night, said:

"We are not only in sympathy with, but are absolutely devoted to the cause of Britain in this great world crisis, because we are convinced that her cause is just and good for the world."

How To Make the Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind and Two Times as Much for Little Money.

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in conquering distressing coughs, chest and throat colds is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Children, too, like it. Prevents croup. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of better cough syrup than you could buy for $2.50. Keeps fine in a cool place. No trouble to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised to note how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

IF CONSTIPATED OR BILIOUS "CASCARETS"

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and Stop Headache, Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box.

Take a Cascaret to-night to cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, a bad cold, are bilious, nervous, upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

Could Not Walk

Because of Bad Sore.

Zam-Buk Brought Quick Relief

Mr. Austen Fulmore of Five Islands, N.S., writes:—"I suffered for some time from a sore on my leg, which, in spite of all treatment, turned to erysipelas. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me did not give me much relief. In fact the sore kept getting worse and worse until I was unable to walk. The pain I suffered was most intense. I had heard of the great curative powers of Zam-Buk, so decided to give it a trial. The first few applications of Zam-Buk gave me such relief that I determined to persevere. The sore is now completely healed, and I cannot speak too highly of what Zam-Buk has done."

If you suffer from any skin trouble, don't waste time and money experimenting with various remedies. Try Zam-Buk first.

Zam-Buk is best for Eczema, Piles, Ulcers, Chilblains, Burns, Frost-Bites, Cold Sores, Chapped Hands, and all skin diseases and injuries. All druggists and stores, or post-paid from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price, 50c. box, 3 boxes $1.25.

GERMAN FIELD WORKS ARE CAPTURED

A LULL IN THE SOISSONS FIGHTING

MORE GAINS BY THE FRENCH IN NEIGHBOURHOOD OF METZ

Further Progress by the Allies Will Cause the Complete Withdrawal of the Germans From the Forest of Le Prete—Heavy Snowfalls Are Interfering With the Operations.

ARTILLERY DUELS ALL ALONG THE LINE

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, January 19.—The official statement to-day (Tuesday) says: The capture of additional German field works in the forest of Le-Pretre, south west of Metz, reported by the War Office official statement to-day, led to the confident belief here that further progress by the French forces in that region, will cause a complete withdrawal of the enemy's forces from the woods. No other important gains were reported in the official communication.

Violent cannonading occurred in the northwest from the sea to Arras. In the region east of Soissons and at the other extremity of the long drawn battle line, there were artillery duels, particularly near Bandesept and Thann in Alsace. About Soissons itself, however, there was a lull in the fighting.

Military experts here to-day considered the lull in the German activities about Soissons as an omen of a quick renewal of the desperate fighting, and it is believed here that the Kaiser's forces will shortly begin a supreme attempt to force a gap in the allied lines at this point.

The lull in the artillery duel that has shattered the city itself suggested to experts here that additional German infantry reinforcements are being brought up for the commencing of attacks.

Heavy snowfalls were again reported to be interfering with operations, both in the region northward from Arras to the sea, and in the Vosges. Except for occasional clashes betwen outposts, the fighting to-day resolved itself into a continuation of the artillery duels.

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 19. — The British Government to-day officially notified the United States that it would not consent to the proposed trip of the cotton steamer Dacia to Rotterdam before taking up the question of her transfer from German to American registry.

OTTAWA, January 19.—In the three months to date there have been 57 deaths among the Canadian troops at Salisbury. Of these 31 died of spinal meningitis. Also a large number of cases of pneumonia have proved fatal, and there have been several accidental deaths and two suicides. With the removal of the troops from their swampy quarters it is expected that the death rate will decrease.

AMSTERDAM, January 19.—Heavy artillery fighting has been heard since early Monday around Ypres, where the Germans have taken an active offensive. Their efforts to occupy Ypres have so far been unsuccessful. Many fresh British troops have arrived at this front.

PRICE OF BREAD ADVANCED TO THE RETAILERS

Grocers Met Last Night to Consider the Question—The Wholesale Price Went up Yesterday Morning

CONSUMERS ARE SAFE

Daily bread is not going up for the present at least. That is it will not cost the consumer any more, but the retailers are very indignant over the raise in the wholesale price of bread, which took effect yesterday morning.

Following the example of Toronto, and other cities, where bread has been raised in price to the retailers, the local bakers yesterday asked for an additional cent per three pound loaf, claiming that they are forced to do so on account of the increased cost of flour and such commodities necessary for the baking business.

Merchants Meet.

A meeting of the Retail Merchants Association was held last evening at which there was a large and representative number of grocers present. They met for the purpose of discussing their stand in the matter. It was found that almost to a man they had been acting independently of the Association, and were refusing to handle the bread.

A number of them seemed to think there is a certain faction amongst the bakers who want to cut the retailers out of the bread trade, and that they are taking this means to gain their point. A half a cent per 1½ lb. loaf certainly seems a small margin from the grocers' standpoint. By the time they handle it, using their wrapping paper, delivering, and in many cases charging, they are practically doing it at a loss. If they refuse to handle it the bakers will have the retail trade under their own control.

Retail Price the Same.

Grocers and bakers alike claim to be desirous of protecting the consumer, therefore the masses have no cause of worry yet. Mr. Thos. Hooper stated to an Examiner reporter this morning that so far as the bakers were concerned they would keep the retail price of bread down as low as possible.

Report from Toronto.

The Fleschmann Co., yeast manufacturers, announced yesterday from their Toronto office:

"The price of bread was advanced this day to 5c per 1½ lb. loaf at Chatham, Ridgetowns, Tilbury, Wallaceburg, Thamesville, Blenheim, St. Catharines, Port Weller, Niagara Falls, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Welland, Thorold, Beamsville, Hagersville, Jarvis, Dunnville and Fort Colborne.

"With the price of flour $7.40 bread should be 5c per loaf."

Lecture Was A Success

The Rev. W. C. Riddiford gave a very interesting and helpful lecture entitled "Essentials for Service," in the Park Street Baptist Church, last evening, under the auspices of the Young People's Society. The President, Mr. M. Dunkley, opened the meeting and then resigned the chair of it to Mr. Haw, Vice-President. Mr. Absolom Gochaly, B.A., of Persia, was also present. The Male Quartette, composed of Messrs. Hill, Goodwin, Moore and Dunkley, sang two numbers, which were much appreciated. There was a good crowd present to listen to the lecture, and after the meeting was over nearly all present adjourned to the basement for refreshments, kindly provided by the ladies of the Church and congregation. A very enjoyable time was spent. A vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Matchett and was seconded by Mr. H. Hill, to Mr. Riddiford, for staying over and giving the lecture to the young people. This was very heartily responded to by all present.

COST OF A PLANT

For Auxiliary Purposes is Submitted by Mr. Kennedy, Jr., of Montreal

Estimated Cost is $17,750

THE FULL REPORT

The report of William Kennedy, Jr., C.E., concerning an auxiliary pumping plant for the Waterworks Department, is in the hands of the Utilities Commission. The auxiliary plant is designed to overcome the danger of a shutdown caused by anchor ice and other unforeseen circumstances.

Mr. Kennedy's report contains the following:—

As directed by Resolution of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, Dec. 11, 1914, I submit the following report:

An auxiliary pumping plant should be capable of furnishing to the City of Peterborough a sufficient quantity of water for the demands of domestic supply, or about three million gallons per day—a little over 2,000 gallons per minute—also sufficient to meet the ordinary demands for fire purposes—say 1,000 gallons per minute, or four good and effective fire streams: a total of three thousand (3,000 gallons per minute, at 90 lbs. pressure per square inch at the pump house; and this is the capacity contemplated in each of the following suggestions:

1—Turbine pump, with electric motor as motive power;

2—Turbine pump, with steam turbine as motive power;

3—Same as No. 2, but with electric motor added;

4—Turbine pump, with reciprocating high speed steam engine as motive power; as Belliss & Corcom Engine.

5—Turbine pump, with gas engine as motive power;

6—Turbine pump, with gasoline engine as motive power.

Referring to the foregoing numbers:

No. 1—This would be the most feasible and quite inexpensive plant—almost ideal in use, but as the necessary electric current for its operation must necessarily be obtained from water power driven plants, subject to the same interruptions from troubles as your present pumping plant, I cannot recommend its adoption.

The Cost.

No. 2—In addition to the cost of the pumping unit proper (steam turbine and turbine pump), the very considerable cost for steam boiler and fittings, boiler house, smoke stack, etc., also banking fires at certain weather conditions to provide against sudden shut down at the water power plant—I repeat, in short, the cost of such complete outfit is really the only substantial objection to a well equipped steam plant.

I estimate the cost of a really efficient steam turbine plant ready for use at, say, seventeen thousand seven hundred and fifty ($17,750) dollars. This includes suction and discharge

WILL OPEN ON MONDAY

City's Interests in the Forthcoming Arbitration Will Be Looked After by Mr. R. A. Ross of Montreal

A LEGAL BATTLE

The city's battle for a municipal owned electric lighting and power system will be staged in the Court House on Monday next, when His Honour Judge Huycke will preside over the Board of arbitration that will convene for the purpose of deciding upon the price that the city should pay for the distributing system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. The system is necessary to complete the scheme inaugurated by the city two years ago, when they decided to enter the Hydro Electric field. For this system the city has made an offer of one hundred thousand dollars. This money which has been paid into court, is a good many thousand dollars below the price suggested by the Power Company. The latter's initial price was $400,000. This has been reduced somewhat by the elimination of the Auburn dam. Failing to secure the system at a price compatible with the valuation of the Hydro Commission, arbitration proceedings were decided upon. To pave the way for the arbitration two trips to the Ontario Legislature were necessary.

The Arbitrators.

The preliminaries have all been disposed of and the way is now open for navigation through the legal channels of arbitration. Three arbitrators have been appointed, namely, His Honour Judge Huycke, chairman, R. A. Ross of Montreal for the city, and Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., of Toronto, for the company.

Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., of the local firm of Beatty, Blackstock, Fasken, Cowan and Chadwick, of Toronto, will represent the city in conjunction with City Solicitor G. N. Gordon and Mr. W. N. Tilley, of Thomson, Tilley and Johnston, Toronto, will act for the company. Mr. Cowan was retained by the city during Mr. E. H. D. Hall's tenure of office as City Solicitor. He is conceded to be a heavyweight in his profession, as is also Mr. Tilley, so that the two of them may be expected to put up a battle for the rights of their respective clients.

RUSSIANS SUCCESSFUL IN BLOODY FIGHTING

Germans Are Being Forced Back to the Frontier in the North East Section of the Province of Plock—Progress in the Other Sections of the Fighting

PETROGRAD, January 19.—Bloody battling for the possession of the north east section of the Polish province of Plock, has resulted successfully for the Czar's armies, it was announced here to-day, and the Germans are being forced back to the frontier. Artillery engagements followed in several instances by infantry charges, occurred from a point east of Mlawa to the village of Stzypid throughout to-day. Mlawa itself is in ruins, following successive bombardments by the opposing armies, and the country over which the fighting is now in progress is devastated. The Austro-German armies advancing on Warsaw from the south, have reached the village of Apocono, and their outposts have advanced nearly to Radom, where the Russians have fortified positions. The most desperate fighting of the Polish campaign is expected to ensue at this point. Regarding the Transylvanian and Turkish campaigns, the War Office contented itself to-day with the announcement "progress is being made."

ROME, January 18. — Telegrams from Vienna state that anti-Italian demonstrations have occurred in front of the Italian Embassy in the Austrian capital. News of the great earthquake disaster is commented on in the bitterest tone by the Austrian press.

At the time of the Messina disaster some of the Austrian politicians seriously urged that the moment had arrived to attack Italy and settle once and for all the question of the Adriatic. These gallic thoughts apparently have entered the Austrians minds once again.

CHICAGO, January 19.—A special cable to the Chicago News from a point in Russia by their correspondent, says:

"The great question asked by everyone in Poland to-day is, 'Will the Germans continue to batter themselves to pieces in frontal attacks against the entrenched positions of the Russian army on the Rawka and the Bzura Rivers, when the strongest kinds of defences still lie before them on the way to Warsaw, even should they be able to drive through the present situation?'

"The alternative is a hurried retreat from Poland, involving an enormous moral defeat at home and abroad. Having seen the defences about Warsaw, I would say that the city is practically untakeable by frontal attacks, even by the German infantry, especially considering the present condition of the army after five months of war, and in view of the excellent morale of the Russian army, which was never better than it is to-day. The enormous losses of the Germans in the attacks on Warsaw fronts make every insignificant success or trifling advance an ultimate defeat."

Col. Sergt. Howarth Explains Camp Life In Children's Terms

In a recent letter home Col.-Sergt. Fred Howarth requested that the gratitude of the Peterborough men with the 1st Contingent be extended to the ladies of the City, if it has not been already done, for the Christmas remembrances forwarded by them. A Toronto man who chanced to see some of the presents from the ladies, remarked: "Peterborough must be a great place to live in. We haven't received anything from Toronto." The men were delighted with the consideration shown them, and were deeply touched by the gifts from their home town.

Col.-Sergt. Howarth, writing some time ago, to his little daughters, explained in simple terms, some of the workings of the battalion, which may be of interest to other young people:

"The Battalion consists," he wrote "of eight Companies, A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, and the Base Company. Each Company has four officers, one Colour Sergeant, four Sergeants, five Corporals and six Lance Corporals. All the rest are Privates; I have to look after 1146 men, see that they get their proper allowance of food, clothing, etc., drill them, and see that every man does his share of the work. In addition to these nine Companies, including the Base Company, there is a machine gun section, water detail, whose duty it is to see that the water supply is good, dispatch bearers, signallers, cooks, pioneers, tinks, transport, pattens and artificers, who repair the Nile if anything goes wrong; so you see there are quite a lot of jobs to be attended to. I forgot to tell you about the pioneers. Each Company sends out men to act as pioneers; that is, to clean up the camp and paint all nature.

"At 6.30 every morning the bugle says: 'Get out of bed, get out of bed, you lazy beggars.' That is followed by reveille. Then the men wash up, roll over and then the Orderly Sergeants come around and shout: 'Show a leg, boys,' and at 6.45 the bugle sounds the 'Short Drum,' which says 'You won't have an hour to do it in.' Then at 7 the bugle says 'Stables all,' which is to say 'Can you hear the bugle call,' and each Company falls in for half an hour's physical drill which we call 'monkey tricks.' At 7.30 the bugle says 'Cookhouse,' which is to say 'Come to the Cook House and get your breakfast.' Then the Orderly must pump water, sweep out and run up to the Cook House and come back with the breakfast. Then we have to clean the stables, then wash and pump about ourselves, and see that they will look their best. The bugle sounds again, and the Sergeants go and get their breakfast and the first part of the day's work is done.

"At 9 a.m. the bugle says 'Parade,' and again at 9.30 a.m. 'Orderly Officer Parade,' when the Orderly Officer goes round and inspects the men and their barracks. After that there is nothing to do till 12 noon, when the bugle says 'Dinners,' which is to say 'Come to the Cook House and get your dinner.' Then we have to clean up the stables,

STRICKEN ITALY.

Italy, though not in the war, has suffered more strikingly than the nations in the forefront of the blaze of battle. Her calamity came like a thief in the night, and wrought a destruction of life and property whose extent cannot at this distance, be appreciated. While the waste of life may be less than on the battle lines, it is greatly sadder. In the battlefield men fell each other, with their blood up, the fire of battle in their eyes. Give and take, thrust and parry, and all the thrilling excitement of battle take the edge off death and invest the fallen with a sort of halo of chivalry. The soldiers in the field expect the death they are seeking to give. But in peaceful Italy, with happy homes holding happy citizens, with no thought of disaster, with no warning, the destruction comes with appalling suddenness, and for tens of thousands, their rended and shattered homes become their graves. The destruction of property and life do not appeal to us as they would have done six months ago. We are told in history of two armies battling so fiercely and intently that under the feet of the fighting hosts, "an earthquake rolled unheededly away." In the shock of a score of simultaneous battles, covering the area of a great kingdom, the earthquake in Italy attracts less attention. But for all that we cannot turn a deaf ear to the cries for sympathy and help. Fortunately the earthquake comes to Italy in times of peace, when there is no demand upon her resources, to bind up the wounds of war.

HEALTH AND LIFE.

Toronto has reason to be proud, and more than that, extremely gratified, for its low death rate. With full recognition of the share of divine Providence in bringing about this condition, Providence could not have done it without Toronto's cooperation. Providence will work no miracles to prevent the result of our actions or neglect. The laws of nature are the supreme sources of health production; and it is simply by bringing conditions to a point permitting these laws to operate normally, that health is induced and life prolonged. Toronto has a low death rate because it has spent money liberally, intelligently, and systematically to improve sanitary conditions. Whatever money has been spent has given splendid returns. A healthy city and a low death rate are of incalculable value. We shall recognize the importance of an efficient board of health, that has been shown to be an agent in sanitary improvement to the point of saving life, when we reflect that its action has negatively saved the city from the crime of taking human life in thousands. It is an awful responsibility to neglect employment of the means that contribute to saving human life. In view of such things we cannot attach too much importance to the maintenance of an alert, active and efficient board of health; and within reasonable limits we cannot spend too much money to improve the sanitary condition of a city, which means the saving of life. We all know that every day many lives are going out that might have been saved; we know that the crusade against tuberculosis, and against many forms of contagious disease, have directly reduced the death rate from these diseases. We have evidence in the case of Toronto of vigorous work on the part of the board of health, having produced results in life-saving almost direct. Toronto's death rate the past year was 11.2 per thousand; in 1910, the rate was 14.2, showing a decrease of three per thousand, which in a population of 500,000 means the saving of fifteen hundred lives. The point to be remembered is that, in a very large sense, life and death are in our hands. If we maintain an efficient board of health, and if that board does its duty, we shall have health conditions that will decrease the death rate and save the lives of our fellow-citizens.

MORNING VS. EVENING.

Taking one's newspaper with one's breakfast coffee is a favourite fiction with fiction writers; and in the matter of newspaper value there is a good deal more fiction than fact in this condition. The evening paper is the more valuable. The Winnipeg Telegram published for years as a morning paper, the only Conservative organ in the city, has abandoned its morning edition and will throw all its energies into an evening issue. It doesn't do this for financial reasons but because, as it says, it has discovered that after careful observation and inquiry, seventy-five per cent. of the important news—the news that make a paper valuable—comes along in time to make the evening paper worth reading. This is the age of war news. The manager of the Associated Press, says that all the news advantage is in favour of the evening paper. To make a newspaper popular, it must reach the mass of readers at a time when they have leisure; and that is in the evening when the routine day's work is over; when they have time to read. By all odds, great as the morning papers of this province are, their value consisting in the general amplitude of their contents, the evening paper's the thing. It contains the pith; all that one can remember, after reading columns of details. In making this plea for the evening paper, The Examiner modestly obtrudes its merits as the evening newspaper that has the best war news service obtainable and if sometimes the news published are not official, we are not responsible. We can only print the news we get, and that other newspapers get, and a good deal of news that other papers do not get till after it has appeared in The Examiner. Experience proves that the evening paper, published at a time when the best class of news is available, is the better of the two — morning or evening; and the experience of a great majority of the people of Peterborough and of the surrounding country, is that The Evening Examiner, as far as this district is concerned, at least, stands first in the first class.

PLENTY OF MEN.

Some pessimists are moaning over the fact that recruiting for the British cause is not progressing as rapidly as might be done. These persons are too impatient; they want to see tangible results that cannot be reasonably expected to develop to suit the views of arm-chair critics. People that know are satisfied. Kitchener knows and he is quite satisfied over the prospects and certainty of obtaining all the recruits he wants, as fast as he wants them. This war, except for thousands of poor soldiers in the fighting line, is not a "sudden death" game as we sometimes have in hockey. Russia, Britain and France have soldiers enough on the spot to hold Germany and Austria in check, while they are preparing smashing blows when the time for inflicting them is ripe. Kitchener is getting recruits as fast as he can equip them, and make soldiers of them. He is not going to send raw, ill equipped levies into action.

We, in Canada, are recruiting men as fast, and faster perhaps, than we can equip them, and in the Old Country, recruiting is going on bravely as we are assured on good authority. Mr. J. A. Spencer, the editor of the London Westminster Gazette, gives this authoritative statement as to how Britain stands for man-power at this moment:

"The coast-raid will help the recruiters," he says, "but if your journalists have got it into their heads that the appeals of Mr. Asquith and Lord Kitchener have failed, please get it out of their heads as quickly as possible. All appeals have been answered, and more than answered. We have now considerably over two million men engaged in war or training for war, exclusive of the armies from overseas, and we shall get more, as quickly as we can train them and equip them.

"Some zealous recruiters have had the notion that the men would hold back if it were thought that the government were getting enough without them, so they have poured ashes on their heads and uttered loud lamentations about the degeneracy of young Englishmen. Others, again, had committed themselves to the idea that voluntary enlistment must break down under the strain, and have publicly proclaimed what they thought must be true without troubling to ascertain the facts.

"The result has been a most mischievous misapprehension, first in Germany, then among the allies, and finally in the neutral nations, especially the United States. For how could we expect the sympathy of the onlooker if we were not alive to our own peril and could not be induced to make the effort necessary to win this war?

"The truth is simply that no country has ever in a few months collected so large a force as we have since last August. From all I hear, they shape admirably, and promise to be a great new factor in the war. So do not be in the least alarmed when you hear people crabbing the old country. Its spirit is splendid and its whole heart is in this fight.

"Now that can be said without in the least detracting from the need of further effort. 'More men and more men' is the cry of all the belligerents. There is no 'enough' in this war."

Concrete Proof That Britain Is Still "Mistress Of The Seas"

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—If there are any doubting Thomases over in Canada who think for a moment that the glorious flag, 'that braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze,' is not still all-powerful throughout the world, or that Great Britain has ceased to be "Mistress of the Seas," let these worthy but timorous people come down to New York and see the jolly lot of British steamships of all shapes and sizes, the Union Jack flying at their sterns, with smoking funnels and clanking machinery, loading or unloading huge cargoes of merchandise, while the scene of hustle and confusion and strenuous activity goes on just the same as if there were no great conflict raging over in unhappy Europe.

Let these same doubting Thomases also take a walk over to Germany's maritime graveyard — the Hamburg-American line docks. What a difference. On the one side commercial activity and prosperity, despite the war; on the other, lines upon lines of steamships—ghostly, silent, dead—no fires beneath their boilers, no hissing of harnessed steam, no shouts of teamsters or songs of dock-labourers —a silence so profound and impressive that it makes one shiver as at something positively uncanny. Visions of the "Ancient Mariner" and the "Flying Dutchman" float before our eyes in imagination, and the effect is heightened when one occasionally sees ghostly figures making their way to the ships — slowly, wearily, aimlessly, with but one object in view —that of seeking shelter for the night on what were once their floating homes. Such a sight compels our deepest pity and sympathy for the crews of these German and Austrian ships, who have had this hideous wrong thrust upon them by the acts of their own people. And we of British blood should thank God that the whole ugly business is hurting us much less than it is our enemies, and should rejoice that the "meteor flag of England" is, through its very power, averting the miserable fate that has befallen the ships of the two Kaisers — ships that are rotting in New York and every other harbour in the world.

Stupid Criticism.

An educated New Yorker, whose chief fault lies in the fact that he does not delve deep enough into things, made the remark to me the other day that he was disgusted with the action—or rather inaction—of the British navy in the present war, and the apparent ease with which the German submarines, and even cruisers, scouted around the English coast and accomplished all sorts of damage. He supplemented his remarks with some choice things about the First Lord and the whole British Admiralty. Of course, his eyes were fixed on the battle ground afar—the English Channel or the North Sea—and he never thought of looking for results right here. Like lots of other good people his vision is telescopic, and he never sees the marvellous things that are happening right under his very nose. This is a specimen of the talk one hears in New York among the unthinking:

"What has the English navy (nearly all Americans speak of us and our institutions as "English")—what has the English navy done in this war anyway? Of course, that little fight off the Falkland Islands the other day was all right; but the great navy of which we have heard so much, has done comparatively nothing. We have been led to believe the English navy invincible, invulnerable — that no other navy in the world could ever face its dreadnoughts and superdreadnoughts and remain afloat, and that the other Powers of the Earth dreaded contact with it worse than they did a pestilence. You talk about your flag 'that braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze,' and England being 'Mistress of the Seas' —Rubbish, I say—all rubbish. The results recently haven't shown it."

When the gentleman referred to had finished his picturesque remarks I said to him quietly:

"If you will come with me to-morrow, I will give you an object lesson, and one that should last you throughout the war, on why, in the great and glorious past, and in the most momentous present, Great Britain has been called 'Mistress of the Seas,' a name she is much more entitled to to-day than in the time of Drake and Frobisher."

The New Yorker gave me a quick look, and then, with a careless laugh, quite in keeping with his foregoing remarks, promised to be on hand, and left me.

The next afternoon we two made a tour of the steamship docks, more particularly those of the German and Austrian lines, and, long before we had finished our investigations, my American friend had ceased criticising the British navy, and, instead, became wrapt in a state of silent wonder at the great, irresistible, but unseen power that compelled all these steamships of our enemies to tie-up in the harbour of New York all "afraid to go home in the dark" —all fully aware that, if they so much as showed their noses outside of the three-mile limit at Sandy Hook they would immediately become the property of His Britannic Majesty, King George, and that would finish their maritime careers in the service of their Teuton or Czech for all time to come. Thereafter they would be treated to a fresh coat of paint, and be known in the future by good old Anglo-Saxon names. Thus their German and Austrian owners have chosen the lesser evil of "interning" their boats until the war is over.

An Ocean Leviathan.

It is really a sad sight to see the giant floating palace, the Vaterland, lying at her dock, while the crew — those of them who are not facing the Allies' bullets over in Europe— return each day from their thankful meal at one of the sailors' homes. Not far off lie the George Washington, the President Grant, and the President Lincoln, huge boats, the first named being of 15,000 odd tons, and the other two over 11,000 tons each. In the vicinity are many more German and Austrian vessels, whose tonnage runs all the way from 8,500 down to 1,500. We counted thirty-five boats in all, and were informed by reliable authorities on the docks that this meant some 15,000 officers and men, a large percentage of whom would now be starving in New York were it not for the excellently organised system of charities, and the sailors' homes, of which there are two German and several American institutions. Of course, I now speak of the crews, as the officers cannot complain. The latter — those who have not been appointed to berths on auxiliary cruisers or received other appointments in the navies of Germany or Austria—are still in New York under half-pay. Even some of the expert workers from the vessels, such as stewards, chefs, etc., are receiving a percentage of their pay—at least, until they can procure other employment. The crews of all the interned vessels are still permitted to sleep on board, but they must be on hand at certain hours at night, and leave early the next morning. But the men are only too glad to accept this arrangement, especially when they see the number of homeless ones wandering about the streets.

The interned boats comprise 28 German steamships, four Austrian steam ships, one German motor-tank vessel, one German barque, and one German sailing ship.

The total tonnage of all these boats amounts to the huge figure of nearly 200,000 tons and, besides the large number of officers and men there are upwards of 25,000 persons, directly and indirectly dependent on this service, now thrown out of employment.

A CANDID CRITIC.

Mr. Hamilton Holt, editor and owner of the New York Independent, publishes the following this week in his journal showing that the best thought of the people of the United States is not in line with the commercial conscience of the lucre-loving government of the country:

Plumes of fire are dropped from the clouds on undefended towns and cities. The United States is silent.

Deadly mines are strewn on the high seas. The United States is silent.

Buildings dedicated to religion, art, science, and charity are razed to the ground. The United States is silent.

Enormous fines, far in excess of military necessities, are levied on ravaged cities. The United States is silent.

Seven millions stand emaciate in Belgium. The United States is silent.

The Hague Conventions are thrown into the scrap basket. The United States is silent.

But—

The dollars of American trade are threatened. And the United States protests.

It is the duty of the United States to protect the commercial rights of her citizens. But it is also the duty of the United States to protect the civilization of the world.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE'S VAST ADDITION.

While technically speaking, the Rev. A. P. Shatford may have been right the other Sunday when he told his congregation in St. James' Church that the war would not add one inch to British territory, literally speaking he has been shown to be mistaken. The war has already added 1,400,000 square miles to the British Empire in Africa alone, and some 15,000,000 people to its population.

This new addition, which is not far short of the total area of British India, has been acquired by the action of Great Britain in terminating the suzerainty of Turkey over Egypt, and the formal announcement that Egypt is placed under the protection of His Majesty, "and will henceforth constitute a British Protectorate." Of course it will be said that the British were in Egypt and the Soudan before the war broke out. That is true. But there was this difference between the British status there then and now. Before the war, Egypt remained nominally a self-governing province of the Turkish Empire. The flag was Turkish, and the words of command in the Egyptian Army were Turkish. The British position was that of a Power in military occupation, its agent nominally a mere Consul-General, like the other consuls, but with a right to "advise."

Egypt now is no longer classed as nominally a part of the Turkish Empire. It is taken unreservedly into the British Empire, and far-reaching changes will inevitably result. The first change has been seen in Britain's selection of a native ruler for it, in accordance with the conditions implied by a Protectorate of a native ruler and a native Government. It should be remembered, however, that just as Britain first went into Egypt in the interests of good government and the peace of the world, so her present extension over Egypt of a Protectorate is not for the purposes of territorial aggression, but for the sake of preventing that country from ever again being the prey of vampire nations.—Montreal Herald and Telegraph.

THE REGINA ASSESSMENT

REGINA, Jan. 19.—To remove the assessment beyond question will be the aim of Regina's 1915 city council. To do this, it is altogether likely that the suggestions made by the city commissioners during the latter part of last year will be carried out. The opinions of the ratepayers will probably be secured as to values, and when these are tabulated, an equitable assessment will be struck. In view of the existing conditions Canadian cities have a difficult problem on their hands in the striking of an assessment, and the Regina plan is inciting considerable interest.

Allies And Germans Ready For A Battle

French Eye-Witness at the Front Says That In Spite of Wretched Weather the Allies Have Made Notable Gains at Several Points

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The omission from the German official report of any reference to Soissons, the scene of their recent marked German success and the French statement that there had been no change in that region leads to the belief that a renewal of the violent struggle there is impending, the temporary quiet being due to the fact that neither side cares to risk an offensive in the present circumstances.

At widely separated points elsewhere on the western front there have been engagements, but the weather is again playing an important part. The storm in Belgium prevents operations except artillery duels, and snow in the Vosges, at the other extremity of the line, makes fighting exceedingly difficult.

In the Argonne, however, the fighting is almost continuous, and each side claims minor successes. For the time being the Germans seem to be more on the offensive than the defensive.

The Morning Post correspondent in the department of the Oise, writes:

"I have left the region of Soissons, where any immediate break through by the Germans appears unlikely in the near future. It is not so much that the Aisne is in flood, but that the most feasible passage for them is in the heart of the town. This, of course, involves considerable preliminary street fighting, always a long and murderous business. I understand that the continued bombardment is working further havoc in the place, but as all entrance is denied to any civilians, I cannot speak of what I cannot be allowed to see. Yet the Germans will probably prefer this street fighting, for they have brought up their picked Prussian regiments. Any attempt to cross the river at any point further east would bring the advancing troops under a heavy artillery fire. While holding parts of the northern suburbs, they may be expected to wait a day or two yet before attempting a coup.

"Journeying eastward along the Aisne, things do not improve, because, in point of fact, we are just as we were last September, and we are not in direct contact with the main German positions at any point. It is mostly a matter of outpost skirmishing with an artillery duel which is going on all the time along the Aisne valley. There is now a series of stone heaps where once there were villages. The havoc wrought has been terrible and is still going on."

An eye-witness with the French army gives a summary of the operations in the west. He says:

"The period from Jan. 5 to 15 has been like the preceding period, marked by wretched weather conditions—rain, snow, wind and fog, and mud. As a consequence the operations have slackened. The events worthy of note are:

"First, the extension and strengthening of our successful operations on the right bank of the Yser between St. Georges and the sea. The German offensive in this region has broken itself on the Yser; we have on the other hand, gained a broad open space beyond the river.

"Second, the fighting near Soissons, where our offensive began brilliantly, has been checked by the flooding of the Aisne, with the consequent destruction of three footbridges, preventing reinforcements from being sent to the right bank to oppose a very strong attack by the enemy; hence, there has been a withdrawal of our forces of less than 1,200 metres (a little over a mile) on a front of less than five kilometres (more than three miles).

"Third, the new advance gained by us in the region of Perthes, and the failure of all the counter-attacks of the enemy.

"Fourth, the failure of the German attacks in the Argonne.

"Fifth, the continuation and maintenance of our success in upper Alsace."

Admiring Soldiers Weep When Viscount's Son Is Killed

LONDON, Jan. 1.—How Major the Hon. Hugh Dawnay, D.S.O., of the 2nd Life Guards, younger son of Major-General Viscount Downe, of Dingly Hall, Market Harborough and Wykeham Abbey, met his death in action in the region of Ypres, is narrated by Corporal J. Jennings, of Tadcaster, a Household Cavalryman, now on leave. It is not only a tale of valour, but is an example of how the British officers are loved and respected by their men.

"We were at Zillebeke, about three miles from Ypres," said the Corporal, "and the order was given for two hundred of us to storm several farmhouses situated on the ridge, in the hands of the Germans. We could not advance under cover and had to expose ourselves to rifle and shell fire. Still not a man wavered. Major Dawnay, a great favourite with all of us, led the charge. We gave one great cheer, and with a 'Follow me, boys, and grip tight!' from the Major we leaped after him. All the way Major Dawnay was in the forefront, and he was the first to reach the farm houses, 300 yards distant. We took two of them. At the third Major Dawnay met his death. He was in the yard of the farmhouse, patting on the back a man who was bowling over scuttling Germans like ninepins.

"'Good boy!' shouted the Major, who then turned and thrust his revolver through the lower window of the farmhouse. He was immediately riddled with bullets from within and collapsed. When we realized that he was dead a number of us wept. If you knew how we all loved that man you would have understood. We would willingly have died for him."

Grew Accustomed.

Lieutenant C. C. Thompson, serving with the 2nd Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, writes to his old headmaster at Handsworth Grammar School:

"The chief feature about everything here is how ordinary it all gets. You walk along a road; a stray bullet drops in the mud at your feet; you just walk on. You go up to a trench, and the next man to you gets shot through the lung. He is calmly bandaged up, and walks himself to the stretcher-bearers. The awful feeling of seeing a man shot has worn off, and all you think is 'Plucky devil!'

"The cunning of the Germans is almost devilish. Their snipers get behind our lines even, often dressed as civilians, and snipe at us going up to the trenches. Their spies dress as British officers and prowl about inside our lines."

First Step Toward Rule of New Poland Is Taken In Warsaw

WARSAW, Jan. 2. — The nucleus of the Parliamentary organization which has been formed to rule Poland when the Russian Emperor is able to put into effect his promise of an autonomous government has been established here by a congress of delegates from all parts of the kingdom.

The new body, which is under the chairmanship of Count Zygmunt Wielopolski, is called the Polish National Council. The congress which formed it had the sanction and approval of the Russian authorities. The delegates included three classes of Poles: First, all Deputies from the kingdom of Poland to both legislative bodies of the Russian Empire; second, all erstwhile Depaties; and third, a considerable number of other "leaders of social work."

The proceedings of the congress reflected the Russian expectation that all German and Austrian Poland will be added to the new Russian State with the end of the war, and the organization of the Council was partly undertaken at this time for the purpose of gaining for Russia the support of Poles in Germany and Austria.

The Council laid "the foundation for the unification of Poland and the free development of the nation" in a manifesto, which is in part as follows:

"The undersigned this day unite to form a Polish National Council, thus laying the foundation of Poland's political organization, giving expression to her leading tendencies, making her one in purpose and deed.

"The nation is at this moment with the whole of its strength helping to secure victory over the Germans. Our youth has rushed with ardour into the ranks of the Russian army. The Polish civil population has zealously co-operated with that army, doing all in its power to assist in the struggle against our mighty foe. And, though the war has carried to our territory devastation, ruin and desolation, we are bearing the calamity with calmness, confident of a luminous morrow.

"The Russian army in Austria has already set foot upon earth Polish in pith and marrow, and we are now expecting its advance into those fastnesses of our nation which Prussia possesses. In this grave moment there lies before our fellow countrymen in those parts the solemn duty of affirming that in thought and deed they are one with the rest of Poland.

"Countrymen, for a hundred years boundaries have divided us. This was abolishes those boundaries and opens a radiant morrow of reunion to our nation, which in spirit never suffered itself to be divided."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Bert Humo, 17 years old, employed at the London Foundry Co. plant, was instantly killed last night when he fell two storeys down an elevator shaft.

A despatch from Copenhagen says the Danish Government has decided to confiscate all wheat in Denmark of foreign origin to the value of $500,000.

Emperor William has issued an order that the untrained German reservists no longer shall be permitted to serve as guards of honor at the burials of prisoners of war.

The Kingston Service Utilities Commission will again ask Sir Adam Beck what offer he has to make Kingston for cheap power. The Board of Trade is pressing the matter.

There is no truth in the report published in the United States that the German steamship President was sunk off Havana last night by the British cruiser Berwick, says a Havana despatch.

Gen. Otter has announced that the principal detention camps for alien enemies in Ontario will be located at Petawawa, Kopuskasing, between Hearst and Cochrane and Hurrittenau, on Lake Abitibi.

Restitution of the double subsidy paid by the Dominion Government to the Valley Railway of New Brunswick, is likely to be demanded as a result of the investigation conducted by R. A. Pringle, K.C.

Dr. Maloney, district medical officer of health for Brockville district, said yesterday that he would call on the provincial sanitary engineer, F. A. Dallyn of Toronto, to investigate the entire local typhoid situation and report his findings.

ELDERLY MEN CALLED.

Austria Now Summoning Reserves of Class of 1875.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—"A Budapest despatch just received here," says Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent, "states that the trained landsturm classes of the years 1875 and 1881, inclusive, and the younger landsturm men in Budapest have been summoned to join the colors Jan. 21."

A Vienna despatch says:

On assuming office Baron Stephen von Burian, the new Foreign Minister, sent the following telegram to the German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg:

"Both allied powers now have tried, in serious and historical times, the value of an alliance of friendship, which relies on tried faithfulness, on close intercourse of interests and must form the foundation of their policy. I beg of your excellency to give me the same energetic assistance as our [illegible]."

HUGE VOTE REQUIRED.

Estimates For Year Will Be $100,000,000 For War Alone.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—The estimates of the various departments are now well in hand and they will be ready for the session, which begins in a little over a fortnight. Everything that is not strictly necessary is being eliminated from the estimates. The big public works now under way in different parts of the country will be continued, but no new works of importance will be started. Many important public buildings that has been intended will be left over for the present on account of the heavy demands of the war and the difficulty of obtaining money for any other purposes.

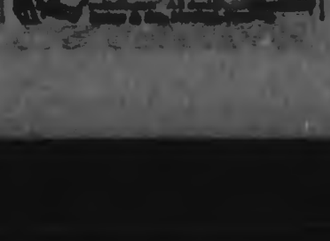
It is understood that the militia estimates will include a war expenditure of $100,000,000 for the period from April 1 to the end of the present calendar year. This does not include pensions, which will also have to be provided for. It represents the cost of mobilising, equipping, and transporting the second and third contingents and reinforcements and the maintenance of the Canadian force overseas.

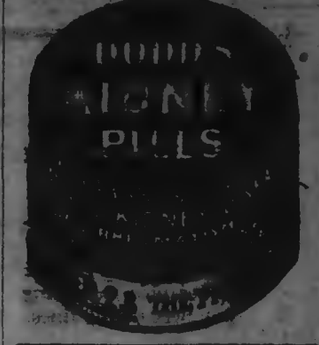
Since the opening of the war the staff of the Militia Department has been increased by 500 employes. Several hundred have been taken on at headquarters, where there are now 180 in the accountant's branch alone, and others have been engaged at the headquarters of the various divisional areas and military districts.

No new armories or drill halls will be built while the war is in progress.

Stage Marriages Stopped.

KINGSTON, Jan. 19. — Fifty dollars was a great attraction to two young couples who offered to be married on the Grand Opera House stage for that amount, but the weddings were prohibited. A letter was received from an officer, telling the management of the house that the soldiers who had offered to be married on the stage were breaking the militia law and were liable to heavy punishment. In the soldiers' interests the management withdrew its offer, and the couples will be married at some other place without the bonus. The brides broke into tears when they found the knot could not be tied on the stage.





Hungarians Demand Transfer.

ROME, Jan. 19.—A demand that Hungarian soldiers now serving in the Austrian armies of southern Poland and western Galicia be transferred to Transylvania to defend their country from Russian invasion from Bukowina has been voiced by the Hungarian National Union, says a despatch to The Messagero from Bucharest.

The Hungarian Landsturm was called out in October when the Russians entered northern Hungary through the Dukla pass.

Ask Five Per Cent. Increase.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—An increase of 5 per cent. in eastern freight rates to United States points is asked for by the Canadian Railways in an application to the Dominion Railway Commission. They argue that this is necessitated by the increase granted in the United States. Canadian shippers, if they intend protesting, must do so by Feb. 1, as the new rates are to come into force Feb. 15, according to the application.

Planned To Conquer America.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A remarkable book, which has been published anonymously, by a governess who was in the employ of the German prince until last year, attributes to a German officer the statement, made at the beginning of last year, that it was "no secret that plans for an American conquest were already mapped out by the German General Staff."

Many Private Bills.

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—Twenty-nine applications for private bills have been forwarded to the clerks of the Provincial Legislature to date. These come in the majority as requests from different municipalities seeking ratification of undertakings that have received sanction from the ratepayers, or from companies desiring increased powers.

Strengthening the Sound Waves

AFTER travelling a certain distance the electric wave which carries the human voice along the telephone wire becomes attenuated and speech becomes too faint to be heard.

Just as in the old stage-coach days fresh relays of horses at regular intervals along the way, enabled the traveller to continue his journey with undiminished speed, so by means of the newly invented "loading coils" inserted at proper intervals, the electric waves are strengthened and long distance telephoning is made easy.

We have lately finished the "loading" of our long distance lines and speech transmission has been very greatly improved. This is especially noticeable on extra long talks. Our "long-haul" transmission is better than ever.

Begin the New Year by making systematic use of the Long Distance Telephone in your business. It will save you time and labor, as well as much money in the shape of travelling expense.

LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY COMPANY'S ANNUAL MEETING

Reports Presented by the Different Officials Were Considered Most Satisfactory—The Year's Work

DIRECTORS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company was held in the Council Chamber yesterday at 3 o'clock. President W. H. Moore was in the chair. Reports were presented from the President, Superintendent, and Secretary, as follows:

Directors' Report.

The report of the Directors was presented, as follows, by Mr. W H. Moore:

To the Shareholders—

(1) It will be observed from the other reports which will be presented to you, that the sale of lots during the year 1914 has fallen short of former years, yet I believe you will agree with them that this is not altogether a matter for regret. If additional sections had been opened and sold off at the rate of former years, there would soon have been an approach towards the last of our property to dispose of at no very distant period. Besides the unsold lots are the Company's actual capital, except the invested portion, and their material increase in value stands in place of, and grows perhaps faster than the interest that would be derived from the money obtained from their disposal.

(2) The Company's reserve funds, which are in City debentures, now stand at $15,417.31, notwithstanding the large draft that has been made upon the revenues and spent in lasting improvements. Within the past ten years all the wooden buildings have been removed from the grounds and about half an acre which they included, is now in lawn; commodious office and Superintendent's residence and modern stables, and two large conservatories built, a new receiving vault provided, new entrance gates and fences on foundations of stone or concrete with superstructure of iron, erected at a total cost approaching $12,000; yet we are pleased to note that the whole cemetery has been kept in an attractive and improved condition, and no part of it has been overlooked. The Board of Directors can give assurance that these betterments are of excellent quality and construction. They will, comparatively, last for all time, and it is believed these necessary amendments will be approved of, so that now the Directors will be able to devote their entire efforts to the care of the grounds and growth of the reserve funds for future maintenance.

(3) What was planted as a hedge some thirty years ago, along the West side of the Cemetary and neglected as such, and allowed to grow in a close line of trees adjoining Haggart street, were, with their foliage, excluding the sunlight from the ground and stunting the grass. These trees were removed last Fall, with some others, leaving ample of fine, well-grown and thrifty maples, elms, birch and black walnut, to give, in a measure, the appearance of a park, while retaining the distinct features of a well-kept and beautiful sepulchre of the dead.

W. H. Moore,
President.

Superintendent's Report.

Gentlemen,—The past year in your cemetery has been a busy one owing to the completion of work undertaken in 1913, in the erection of the new entrance gates. This work consisted of the building of a new fence of iron and concrete, extending from the entrance before mentioned to the Grand Trunk tracks at the southern boundary, including gateways at the junction of Ware and Haggart streets, and also at the south side, in all about 1,200 feet. The cost of this fence was about $2,600.

The roadways leading from the gateways mentioned, have been graded and coated with cinders, which, when mixed with clay and sand, is found to make a splendid roadbed. This class of dressing is being adopted for all the roads throughout the cemetery.

A quantity of pine trees was removed last winter from section "O" on the east side, and the ground on which they grew, graded, seeded and placed in condition for burial purposes. This work is being continued this winter.

About 500 feet of the River bank, on the east side of the cemetery, has been protected with large boulders. This has been found necessary owing to the large increase in late years of the small power boat, the wash from which is wearing away the bank. Some more boulders have been secured to complete this work to the boundary.

The sale of lots has fallen below either of the two previous years' sales to the extent of over two thousand dollars, causing a considerable falling off in receipts. This should not be looked upon as a financial calamity, but more as an extension of life on this earth of those dear to us, as a lot in a cemetery is not generally purchased until the purchaser has cause to use it.

I wish to call the attention of the lot owners and, consequently shareholders, of the necessity of retaining the natural beauty of the landscape of the cemetery, which has in the past been considerably marred by the indiscriminate grouping of monuments of one design. One of our slopes which at one time was admired for its natural beauty, has entirely lost its charm by having upon it long rows of stones, which vary very little in shape or design. Some cemeteries have a by-law making it necessary for all monument designs to be submitted to a committee before they are allowed to be placed. This may appear a hardship to the lot owner, but in cemeteries where this is done a pleasing effect has been obtained, as well as being satisfactory to all parties concerned.

I trust this matter will be taken up by the incoming Board, so that the beautiful slope at the west side of the grounds may retain some of its natural beauty.

All of which I respectfully submit,

Frank Wise,
Superintendent.

The election of Directors also took place, resulting in the re-election of the old Board: Messrs. W. H. Moore, T. H. G. Denne, Dr. Burnham, B. Shortly, J. J. Lundy, W. G. Morrow, E. H. D. Hall, A. Stevenson, and T. A. S. Hay. After the election of Directors they met and re-elected Mr. W. H. Moore as President, and the following gentlemen comprised the Board of Management: T. A. S. Hay, T. H. G. Denne, B. Shortly, W. G. Morrow and the President.

LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robt. Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot describe what I suffered, but now I am entirely cured."

INTERESTING LETTER FROM GLASGOW

Patriotism of the People—Liberality in Giving—Rich and Poor Subscribe for Relief Funds

The following are extracts from a letter received by Mr. H. Rush from a prominent merchant in Glasgow under date of January 4th, 1915:

"It is such a long time since I wrote to you that you will be thinking I have forgotten you altogether, but as you know we have been experiencing dreadful times with this awful war. What a shock we got on the fourth of August when war was proclaimed against Germany. Everything and everybody was paralyzed for a time and a panic commenced, but I am glad to say it soon subsided. How patriotic the whole people have been. We in Glasgow alone have sent between 40,000 and 50,000 men to the army. We have raised £220,000 for the National Relief Fund and over £100,000 for the Belgium Fund. We have had collections on the streets every second Saturday for the various funds — Red Cross, Belgium, French, Scotch, Irish and C. Funds. These collections raised from £3,000 to £7,000 each Saturday they were taken. Everyone rich and poor, subscribing and wearing the various flags.

"Then again from the business point of view for the past three weeks during the panic, trade came to a complete standstill. I never experienced anything like it. We felt as if we were going to be ruined. The people seemed to think food was going to be scarce and dear and thousands of people crowded the provision and grocery shops and cleared them all out, but they soon found their mistake, as within ten days trade came back to normal and has remained so more or less, still our business commenced slowly to recover after three weeks, and gradually came up to the average, and by the end of November we made up all we had lost in August, and I am glad to say we have done splendidly in December, but better than last year, the Christmas trade being exceptionally good. Trade in Glasgow is booming at present — so many men away everyone is getting full employment. The shipbuilding yards, iron works, coal workers, and manufacturing trades are working day and night with government orders, so we have nothing to complain about.

"Canada has done splendidly for the Old Country and so has all her colonies. What a surprise for the Kaiser. He has discovered what the contemptible little army can do. We all hope the war will not last long and that by mid-summer it should be well over.

TO PREVENT WASTE.

Britain Puts Screws on Stock Issues at Home or Abroad.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—How carefully Great Britain is guarding her financial resources during the war is indicated by the treasury regulations which have been deemed necessary with the opening of the Stock Exchange. Under these regulations issues of capital or the participation in issues for undertakings in the colonies will be permitted only where it is shown there is urgent necessity for them. Issues for undertakings within the United Kingdom will be permitted only when the treasury is convinced they are advisable in the national interest.

The Government view is that "until further notice all considerations must be subordinated to the paramount necessity of husbanding the financial resources of the country with a view to the successful prosecution of the war."

Prohibition In Quebec.

MONTREAL, Jan. 19. — Province-wide prohibition until the war is over is a request the Montreal Protestant Ministerial Association will make to the Quebec Government, as decided upon at a meeting of the association yesterday.

INDICATIONS POINT TO A GENERAL RETREAT

Germans Are Showing Great Activity at Lowicz, According to Russian Aviators and They May Decide to Give Up Effort to Hold Present Advanced Positions

LONDON, Jan. 19.—There are indications in despatches from the eastern front of fresh movements of the enemy in southern Poland. The arrival of a German army at Kielce is reported, and is taken here to represent [illegible] with the Austrian forces engaged on the banks of the Nida and Dunajec.

Grenville Fortescue, correspondent of The London Telegraph, says: The aviators report much movement in Lowics, which is interpreted as an evacuation of the town. If this is so the wave that has threatened Warsaw has been broken.

A nice question confronts the Germans now — whether to attempt to maintain themselves in Poland or to retire to their own frontier. If Gen. von Hindenburg's army strives to hold during the rest of the winter the position it occupies at present it will lose, at a minimum, 25 per cent. of its forces before spring. Part of this loss will be due to the Russian guns, but a large portion will come through sickness—and these sacrifices will bring no results.

Every sign points to the fact that the wonderful German fighting machine is beginning to crack. During the last few weeks it has shown unmistakable signs of weakening at all points of contact. It is still capable of heavy fighting, but I am of the opinion that it has passed the period of its highest power.

Under these casualties the great German Staff might decide upon withdrawal to their own boundaries. Such a movement would be a moral defeat, but in view of their limited lines of communication the present battle area would be a safer experiment than the attempted occupation of seven of the ten governments of Poland.

The operations in East Prussia have a bearing on the situation here. A lieutenant-colonel from that district declares that the Russian army of the north is making slow but sure gains in this almost impossible country. Two of the outer forts of Lotzen have fallen, but the enemy still holds most of the railways. This leaves the north of Poland open to invasion, but should the Germans try to force their way to the south they will find a surprising number of Russian corps awaiting them.

Plock Virtually Occupied.

LONDON, Jan. 19. — The Daily Telegraph's Petrograd correspondent in a despatch dated Sunday says the Russians have not actually occupied Plock, in Russian Poland, but no Germans have been there for a fortnight. A few German troops, according to the correspondent, arrived in Plock two weeks ago, but hearing that Russians were in the vicinity they speedily departed.

Turks Are Told The Kaiser is Lineal Descendant Of Mahomet's Sister

A missionary, who has reached this country as a refugee from Haifa, gives some curious details of the methods employed by the Germans. To impress the Turkish Army and win over public opinion in Syria they celebrated an alleged victory over the Russians in Araxscausacia. He says a Turko-German fete was recently organised there, one of the principal features being a procession in honour of Mahomet and the German Emperor.

"The Lutheran pastor of the German colony at Haifa is said to have taken a prominent part in the affair and joined in raising the cry, 'Allah protect the Kaiser, Hadji Wilhelm!' For the benefit of the Arabs, some of whom appear to have accepted the stories readily enough that it has been discovered that the Kaser is a lineal descendant of the Prophet's sister and that he has undertaken to go on a pilgrimage to Mecca when the war is over. That the German nation as a whole had been converted to Islam is generally believed by the less educated members of the native community."

Young People's Sleigh-Drive

Enjoyable Outing to the Home of Mrs. Burnham in Otonabee

The annual sleigh-drive of the young people of St. Luke's Church was held last night to the residence of Mrs. Z. Burnham, in Otonabee. Four busses carried them to their destination, the trip being enlivened by much song and merriment. The evening was pleasantly spent in progressive euchre, the prizes being won by Mrs. F. Whitehouse, Mr. R. Long and Mr. F. Whitehouse. The pleasure of the evening was greatly enhanced by the violin selections by Mr. F. Whitehouse and pianoforte numbers by Mrs. Locke. That the kind and untiring hospitality of Mrs. Burnham and her two daughters, Mrs. Nicholls and Miss Burnham could not be excelled, was the popular opinion of all present. In a well-worded speech Rev. F. J. Sawers conveyed to the hostess the appreciation of their guests. Mr. Clifford Cox, President of the Young Men's Club, thanked the musicians of the evening for their contributions to the enjoyment of the affair.

At midnight dainty refreshments were served. The return to the City was made at an early hour this morning in a heavy snowstorm, all vowing last evening's drive the best ever.

An Appeal To Musicians

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—May I be allowed, through the columns of your paper to ask musicians, generally, to attend the concert in St. Paul's Church to-night given by the "Adanac" Quartette, and M. Hesselburg, pianist. The initial expense of such a venture is heavy without counting artists' fees, and such numbers as have been already announced guarantee a really musical evening to any who can arrange to attend.

Yours faithfully,
Richard J. Davey.

Infantry Training

The Matter in This Column is from the Official Manual 1911 and is Published According to Orders of the Home Guard

6. The Individual Training of Officers, N.C.Os. and Trained Soldiers.

1. Individual Training under this head will comprise:—
   - i. The training of officers in professional duties (see "King's Regulations," and "Training and Manoeuvre Regulations").
   - ii. The training of non-commissioned officers, and privates likely to become non-commissioned officers (see "Training and Manoeuvre Regulations").
   - iii. The training of soldiers in their individual duties in the section in war.
   - iv. The preliminary training of the scouts of each company (see Sec. 174).
   - v. Practice for all ranks, in visual training, in judging distance and in aiming under varied conditions, the improvement of indifferent shots, and, if possible, the practice of all ranks once a month on the range.
   - vi. Physical training. During each winter every man should be exercised in the Trained Soldier's Physical Exercises as laid down in the "Manual of Physical Training," and should be practised out of doors in marching, running and surmounting obstables.
   - vii. Bayonet fighting. (See Appendix I.)
   - viii. Training in packing and loading all available descriptions of transport and, where facilities exist or can be improvised, in the embarkation, disembarkation, entraining and detraining of animals and vehicles.
   - ix. Semaphore signalling for all subaltern officers and non-commissioned officers, and at least 20 per cent. of privates.

2. At the beginning of the period of individual training signallers, machine gun detachments, range takers and transport drivers will be brought up to establishment and their training will be begun, regard being had to the probable requirements of drafts.

3. Leave and furlough will be arranged so as to interfere as little as possible with individual training and to enable company commanders to carry out a systematic course of instruction in their commands. It is important that all training which can be carried out efficiently during this period should be completed before the period of collective training begins.

COLLECTIVE TRAINING.

7. The Training of the Section and of the Half-Company.

Company commanders will allot such time as they consider desirable at the beginning of the course of company training in field operations (see Sec. 8, 2), for the training of sections and of half-companies. When companies are weak or when the requisite number of efficient section commanders is not available at the beginning of the period of collective training, company commanders are authorized to dispense with section training. In such cases the training of the half-company should begin with the elementary work prescribed for section training.

8. The Training of the Company.

1. The training of the company should be arranged, as far as possible, on a progressive system, from the commencement of the period of collective training up to the beginning of the period of battalion training. It is not to be confined to the course of training in field operations (see para. 2 below). The development of a soldierly spirit, drill, musketry, and bayonet fighting, which are essential to the efficient training of the company, can often be carried out when training in field operations is not possible.

2. During the first four months of the Training Season each company will be struck off all duties for 36 working days for a course of Section, Half-Company and Company Training in field operations (see Part V), and for a further period sufficient to carry out the musketry practices detailed in Table "B," "Musketry Regulations, Part I." When companies are weak, general officers commanding-in-chief are authorized to permit this course of training to be carried out by double companies, but this is not to be taken as implying any change in the organization of a battalion for war as laid down in "War Establishments."

At the conclusion of this course companies will be inspected in field operations by the battalion commander.

3. When range accommodation is available, the most suitable period for firing Parts I, II and III of Table "B" is after the first fortnight of company training. Parts IV, V and VI of Table "B" should usually be fired at the conclusion of company training.

4. Every officer, non-commissioned officer and man, except private soldiers of more than fifteen years' service, bandsmen, pioneers and those exempted from the annual course of musketry ("Musketry Regulations, Part I"), will be trained, and will be relieved of other duties.*

*For the training of the machine gun section see Sec. 9, 4.

10. The Training of the Battalion.

1. Battalion training will begin on the conclusion of company training, and the completion of Table "B," "Musketry Regulations, Part I."

Each battalion, or portion of a battalion will be struck off duties and be at the disposal of its commander for at least 18, and, if possible, 24 consecutive working days. (See Part V.)

2. At the conclusion of battalion training, the battalion will be inspected in field operations by the brigade commander.

PART II.

THE TRAINING OF RECRUITS

12. General Instructions.

1. Recruits will be formed for instructional purposes in squads; the maximum number of men in each squad should not exceed ten, but battalion or depot commanders may permit this number to be exceeded if necessary owing to lack of instructors.

2. The squad instructors will be most carefully selected. They must be intelligent, energetic and thoroughly well trained in the art of instruction. It will usually be found advantageous for the instructor to remain with the same squad throughout the period of training, and carry out the whole of the instruction with the exception of the physical training which will be taught only by fully qualified instructors.

3. Equipment will be issued on joining, but will not be worn on parade for the first month. Rifles will be issued when the battalion or depot commander directs, usually not later than the first fortnight.

(To be continued.)

NIECE OF DR. BLANCHARD WEDS GENERAL'S SON

Dr. W. H. Blanchard, 346 Water Street, City, has just recently received a letter from his sister, Mrs. L. Sharp, announcing the marriage of her eldest daughter. The wording of the clipping giving the details of the wedding is as follows:

Military Wedding at Hotham.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Oswald's Church, Hotham, by special license on Saturday, the parties being Miss Mary Sharp, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sharp, of the Field House, Hotham, and Lieutenant Eric Bayly of the 3rd Battalion, East Yorkshire Regiment, and only son of Major-General Sir A. W. L. Bayly, K.C.B., and Lady Bayly, of Fishley Rectory, Acle, Norfolk. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. B. Radcliffe, Rector.

The bridegroom was in khaki uniform, but the wedding was quiet owing to the war. As the bride entered the church, leaning on the arm of her father, Lohengrin's "Wedding March" was played by Mr. Douglas Newmarch, of North Cave. The service was fully choral.

As the happy couple left the church Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was played. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked well in a travelling dress of navy blue, with Saxe blue hat and black plumes, and wore a spray of lilies of the valley, the gift of the bridegroom. There were no bridesmaids. After the ceremony the party, on leaving the village, were greeted with showers of confetti and rice. A reception was held at Field House.

The happy couple were the recipients of a large number of presents. Later in the day Lieutenant and Mrs. Bayly left Field House by motor for York, the bride wearing a dark squirrel coat and muff, the gift of the bridegroom.

Fourteen days after the wedding the groom was ordered to the front in France.

No Repepition Of August 18, 1870 In Soissons Affair

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 18—Foreign Office despatches to the French Embassy here to-night discounted the importance of the recent German advance at Soissons, declaring that the French troops still covered the town and had merely withdrawn to the left bank of the river because the rising of the stream had made it impossible for reinforcements to come up.

The retreat was said to cover only 1,800 metres. The message said:

"The recent German communique throws into relief the attack which they delivered last week to the north of Soissons, comparing it with those of August 18th, 1870. The French troops engaged about Soissons did not reach the number of three brigades, and they had been withdrawn to the left bank of the River Aisne because of the flood, which had broken several bridges. We thus no longer had the means of sending them reinforcements, and they withdrew without being pursued, continuing to cover the town. This is the truth of the affair which bears no resemblance with the battle of August 18th, 1870. As for the situation of the French Army, it is a question of a retreat of some 1,800 metres on a front of five kilometres, centred by the docks of a river."

Peterboro' Boy To Educate With Movies

A scheme to teach the American men and women who lack education by utilising motion pictures is proposed by C. G. Thompson, son of Peter Thompson of this city, and manager of the Victor Film Service Co., of Cleveland. Mr. Thompson proposed to hire a hall, one which will be large enough to accommodate from 200 to 300 people. The pitures will be taken in Cleveland, probably in one of the school buildings. It is not the idea of the school to appeal to children who are studying in the Public school, but appeal to grown men and women who find their education sadly lacking and who would learn if they had the opportunity. Mr. Thompson does not intend to charge the public anything to learn by this system. He will issue cards which will admit them to the school at certain hours.

The Cleveland Plain-Dealer says Thompson is one of the men in Cleveland who has been very successful at the moving picture business. He attributes his success to the fact that he has been given the public what they wanted to see, and the public in turn have steadily patronized his pictures until he feels he owes it something. The school idea is the one by which he expects to reciprocate. Each lesson will be done with moving pictures. English, plain figuring, the proper way to do housework, geography, spelling, reading and common sense rules will be taught with the camera. After the lessons the pupils are expected to write what they have seen. Papers will be gone over and graded.

PRIVATE LONSDALE.—The English soldier who, in the German concentration camp at Doberitz, struck a German guard and was twice court-martialed, being sentenced to death at his second trial. Through intervention a reprieve was granted, but it is not yet clear what will be his fate.

DIRECTORS IN DOCK

Symons and Hughes on Trial in Union Life Case—Victims Give Evidence

EVAN ABSENT

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—After many ineffectual attempts to bring the case to a hearing, and efforts on the part of the defendants to traverse it to the County Court having failed, the trial of Harry K. Symons, K.C., and Dr. F. G. Hughes, two of the directors of the now defunct Union Life Assurance Co., started in the Criminal Assize Court yesterday before Mr. Justice Clute. A formidable array of legal men gathered to contest what was characterised by the crown as one of the most skillful and most scandalous cases of fraud ever perpetrated on a gullible public in Canada.

Symons and Hughes are only two of the four directors indicted on various counts of fraud and conspiracy. Dr. G. E. Millichamp died a fortnight ago, while H. Pollman Evans, the guiding spirit of the bold and complex scheme, has so far evaded the toils of justice.

The crown's case consisted of a long list of persons who had bought stocks and debentures in the National Agency Co. Mrs. J. Aikins of Paris Junction said she bought $3,500 worth of bonds on the recommendation of Pollman Evans. As far as she could recollect representations were made to her to the effect that the Government were behind the scheme.

A number of aged men and women from different parts of rural Ontario then proceeded into the witness-box and told stories of their losses. Mrs. Copeland of Aylmer Lad invested $4,500 in the National Agency. Dr. Hughes had told her, she said, that the company was as good as any bank in the Dominion.

Mr. Robert McGregor of Galt had invested to the extent of $10,000 in debentures. He had known Dr. Hughes for a number of years. He had every confidence in him, and was "fool enough to invest." The case was adjourned until to-day.

HE WANTS ALL THE WORLD TO KNOW IT

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED JEAN BAPTISTE TAPP.

L'Anse-a-Valleau, Gaspe Co., Que., Jan. 18.—(Special.)—"I am happy to tell you Dodd's Kidney Pills made me well." So says Jean Baptiste Tapp, a well known and highly respected resident of this place. And so thankful is Mr. Tapp for the benefits he has received from Dodd's Kidney Pills that he wants the whole world to know it. He wants others who suffer as he did to know the cure.

"For many years I suffered from kidney disease,' Mr. Tapp says. "It started from a cold, and gradually grew worse. My skin had a harsh, dry feeling, my appetite was fitful and I perspired freely with the slightest exertion. I had flashes of light before my eyes and I was always tired and nervous.

"Finally rheumatism was adde to my troubles, while attacks of sciatica and neuralgia followed. The doctor who attended me and the medicines I tried, failed to help me till I decided to use Dodd's Kiney Pills. I took four boxes in all, and to-day I am a robust man in excellent health."

All Mr. Tapp's troubles came from sick kidneys. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills cured them.

TURKS IN FULL RETREAT

Enver Bey's Campaign Has Come to an Inglorious End

LONDON, Jan. 19. — The Daily News in a despatch from Frederick Rennett, its correspondent at Petrograd, says:

The Russians are now inside Turkish territory and within four marches of Erzerum. The garrison of Erzerum amounts to 30,000, with ample artillery, but is cut off from ammunition supplies from the coast and still more isolated by the winter conditions of the land route across Anatolia.

The Turkish winter campaign in the Caucasus has now suffered its final collapse. Its chances became very slender when the Goeben and Breslau failed to control communication in the Black Sea between Constantinople and Trebisond. The Turkish army assembled around Erzerum found itself cut off from reinforcements and supplies. With the heavy task of converting Enver Pasha's defeated and retreating corps at Kara Urgan into a force strong enough to continue the war with Russia, the Turkish rank and file fought stubbornly for ten days on frontier positions around Kara Urgan until on Saturday, they fell victims to the careless and incompetent management of their German and Turkish leaders. Originally five corps were sent forward by Enver Pasha and Gen. von Sanders into Russian territory, but after the disasters at Ardagan and Sara Kamyah only the remnants of two corps could return, the 11th Turkish Corps, which was the reserve of the invading army. It is this combination which is now retreating hastily on the road to Erzerum with its rear guard annihilated and Enver himself hurrying to Constantinople. The German General Lange has been left to try and extricate the Turks from complete destruction. They have thrown great numbers of their field guns into the deep, snow-covered ravines.

And Her Heart Does Not Bother Her.

Thanks to MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. McLaren, Commanda, Ont., writes us under date of February 9th, 1914. "Sixteen years ago I took bad with my heart and nerves, and was not able to do anything. I tried a good many doctors, but they did me no good; in fact one doctor gave me up to die. I heard about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I thought I would give them a trial, and after using a couple of boxes I saw that I was improving. I kept on using them for quite a long time. I am eighty-three years old and my heart does not bother me at all.

"I am raising a little girl who was never very strong, and the doctor said that she had palpitation of the heart, so I started to give them to her. She is now twelve years old, and they are doing her more good than I can possibly tell you. I would advise anyone who has a weak heart to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, as they have done wonders for me."

Large Attendances And Educative Addresses

Feature Annual Farmers' Institute Meetings at Lakefield—Splendid Programme Marked Meeting Last Evening

Featured by an exceedingly large attendance last evening, a fairly large attendance yesterday afternoon, and very educative and instructive addresses, the annual meetings at Lakefield of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute were held in the Village Hall. A sale in the vicinity had a tendency to keep down the attendance in the afternoon, but the Town Hall was crowded to overflowing for the meeting at night. A particularly pleasing feature was the large number of ladies and young men present. All showed keen interest in the various topics discussed, and judging by the number of questions the speakers were called upon to answer, the farmers in the vicinity of Lakefield are anxious to gain as much knowledge of their vocation as scientific farming and experimental farming affords.

The principal speakers, Mr. F. C. McCrea, district representative at Norwood of the Ontario Agricultural Department, and Mr. Clark Hamilton, of Iroquois, Ont., both spoke ably and interestingly. Their subjects were placed before the audiences in a simple yet very convincing manner. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was present at the evening meeting, and also gave an address.

This meeting was further marked by a musical programme, the rendition of the various numbers of which evinced the fact that Lakefield's talent is by no means inferior to that of much larger centres. The numbers were: Violin selection, Miss Baldeon; song, Mr. Allan B. Mann; male chorus; piano duet, Misses Braden and Walker; cornet solo, Mr. Jewell; male quartette; piano duet, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter; song, Mr. E. Milburn; solo, Miss Moore.

Two dialogues provided a great deal of amusement, particularly the one entitled "A Society for Doing Good," in which four young men impersonated four "old maids."

The chair at both meetings was occupied by Mr. Charles E. Moore, president of the Institute. He made reference to the long service rendered the Institute by the former secretary, Mr. William Collins, whose duties are now being ably performed by Mr. Allan B. Mann. He assured the gentlemen present that the speakers were men of genuine and practical experience, and if their advice were taken, the farmers of Peterborough county would be benefitted beyond estimation.

Mr. Moore made special reference to the opportunity now awaiting the Canadian farmers to produce more and thus assist the countries in need. He hoped the farmers of Peterborough county would be ready to grasp the opportunity. To assist in this endeavour it was necessary to bring into play all the up-to-date methods, and these methods were taught and explained at the meetings of the farmers' institutes.

RAISING SWINE.

Mr. Clark Hamilton spoke in the afternoon on "Swine and the Raising of Swine." The farmer of to-day who is interested in live stock is the man of to-day who is making money. There is great diversity of opinion as to whether there is money to be made or not in raising hogs. However, in the speaker's mind, if the matter of hog raising be gone at in the proper manner there is money in it. There is always room for a hog on a mixed farm. There is always room for a hog on the dairy farm. Dairy farming and hog raising go hand in hand.

To make a success in raising swine a farmer must stay at it. The man who sells out completely as soon as the price of pork takes a drop does not attain success. The hog that should be raised is the smoothly developed hog, moderate width and depth and good length. It matters not what breed the farmer has, such style of hog can be secured. Many persons do not think that the eyes play an important part of the hog. A sunken eye or a nervous eye bespeak the fact that the hog is not a good feeder, and a hog that realises returns must necessarily be a good feeder.

The speaker advised his listeners not to feed swine too much slop feed during the winter time. Bulk feed is better. When a sow is given considerable slop feed she must throw the water off, and this causes considerable energy. He also touched upon the breeding, urging that stock of too tender an age be not bred. That is why some men's stock runs out—they are not mature when bred. The greatest gains are made in a pig's life when in its first six or eight weeks; for that reason great care should be taken with the young swine. While a sow is nursing her young she must likewise be carefully looked after.

Young pigs should be kept growing—the opportunity to look after them carefully during their first six or eight weeks of their existence should not be sacrificed. Under normal conditions they should be weaned when about eight weeks old. After being weaned they should be fed ground oats, bran or skimmed milk. Great care should be exercised so as not to injure the digestive organs. An attack of indigestion goes very hard on a young pig.

Swine should not be fed either too much slop feed or too much dry feed. The pig has to take too much water when slop feed is given, and wastes too much when dry feed is given. Feed should be mixed well, with a good quantity of salt in it. Where there is an abundance of skimmed milk and whey it is better to feed a large number of pigs with a small amount of milk or whey for each than to feed a small number of pigs a great amount.

Experiments along that line have shown that to feed skim-milk most economically it is not best to feed too large quantities, but rather use smaller quantities with more mill feeds, and so feed a greater number with the same amounts. For instance: 7 lbs. per day gives a value of .54 cents per hundred for skim-milk; 3 lbs. per day's value of 31 cents; 5.4 lbs. per day value of 18.6 cents, and 15.7 lbs. a value of 13 cents per day.

MR. F. C. McCREA.

Mr. F. C. McCrea gave very interesting addresses on lightning rods at both meetings. His remarks were very helpful and thoroughly understood as he explained the use of the lightning rod by means of a Wimshurst machine, which tended to simplify a very complex subject. He asserted that 95 per cent. of the lightning rods in the County of Peterborough are installed in a faulty manner. Should one of the buildings thus equipped be struck with lightning there is very great danger of fire resulting.

The speaker went thoroughly into the subject of rodding a house, and, to assist him, he gave demonstrations with miniature barns, houses and rods. Mr. McCrea made special reference to the grounding of the rods, remarking that they should reach to perpetual moisture, which is usually some eight or ten feet below the surface.

There are three kinds of cables used, the copper, the iron and aluminum. A copper cable of a certain thickness is just as efficient as an iron cable six times as heavy. Thus copper is preferred as it is much lighter and is not subject to rusting as is iron. Rust is oftimes the cause of a spark which means fire. The aluminum cable is a steady conductor, but its point of melting is about half as high as copper. Theoretically, aluminum is a good substance for a lightning rod, but thus far it has not been proved so by practical use.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION.

The subject of Mr. Clark Hamilton's evening address was "Agricultural Education." For a man to know his business to-day he must be educated. A man of one hundred and fifty pounds of bone and muscle does not make a farmer; he must have more. He needs training. It was of the training farmers of Canada require Mr. Hamilton desired to speak. To have any success along that line there must be education. One American writer has said the foundation of every country depended upon the educating of the youth.

One mark of the lack of education among the farmers is the lack of system. The farm must be systemized. Youth should be taught this. Farmer boys should be taught all about their business. The talent should be selected out and then co-operation put into force. Farmers should also be endeavouring to get away from old ideas when new ones have been proved to be more beneficial. Another thing the farmer boy should be taught is to love the grandeur of his work and life. The latter rests with the farmer boys themselves; politicians cannot do it, nor educationists cannot do it.

That education can help the farmer practically is made known by the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, whose officials claim that the production of the farms of Ontario can be increased three hundred per cent. Under the care of men educated along the proper lines cows have been raised to a higher standard; the same can be said about sheep and other live stock, also fruit growing. The methods put into play by these men can be learned by every farmer.

The only way these methods can be brought to the farmers is to educate the farmer boys. Of late the agricultural education is being brought more into general education, and the average boy enjoys it and becomes interested. The farmers of to-day have a beautiful country handed down by their forefathers, who battled against Nature. It is for the farmers of to-day to further beautify this grand and noble country. It should be the case that the word Canadian means "brotherhood." All the different nationalities should unite as one great people working for the one end—advancing this great section of the world's greatest Empire.

First Meeting of Smith's Council

Approved Suggestion of Mr. Burnham for Celebration of Smith Centenary

The members of the Council of the Township of Smith met in the County Council Chamber on Monday, Jan. 11th, at 11 o'clock. After making the necessary declarations of qualification, and of office, the members took their seats. Present: Reeve McKee, Deputy Reeve Jobe and Councillors Northey, Moore and Nichols. The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed.

Moved by Councillor Moore, seconded by Councillor Nichols, that the communication of Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., re holding a celebration or some fitting memorial in 1918 of the first settlement and survey of the township, which took place in 1818, be received and approved of by the council. Carried.

Mr. F. W. Scott addressed the Council and outlined his work as Commissioner of the Communication Road. The policy adopted during the year had been one of consolidating and it was the intention to put gravel during the winter and to suspend the balance of the commuted statute labour for the next season. Mr. Scott said that he did not wish to retain the office any longer, and his resignation was reluctantly accepted by the Council.

Moved by Councillor Moore, seconded by Councillor Northey, that the communication of Andrew Montgomery be received, and that the Reeve and Councillor Nichols, be a committee to see about the sale and cutting of timber on the 10th and 9th Concessions. Carried.

Moved by Councillor Nichols, seconded by Councillor Moore, that the Reeve and Councillor Northey be a committee to expend $150 on the 10th Concession, near lot 10. Carried.

Moved by Deputy Reeve Jobe, seconded by Councillor Moore, that the treasurer be instructed to pay the following accounts:

Wm. Elliott, refund taxes	$11.75

The appointment of municipal officers was left over until Monday, Feb. 1st. The Council adjourned to meet again on that date.

Renewed Their Ad.

The following letter has been received by J. J. Turner & Sons:

Peterborough, Ont., Jan. 17, 1915.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, City:—

Dear Sirs,—I have much pleasure in enclosing my cheque for twenty dollars ($20.00 renewal of advertisement on Grand Opera House curtain.

I have no hesitation in stating that the new advertisement is most highly satisfactory.

Yours very truly,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

Local Council of Women

The annual meeting of the Local Council of Women will be held on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Assembly Room of the Public Library and is open to the public.

To this meeting each affiliated society should send their president, secretary and representatives.

Besides the election of officers and other business, the secretary of each affiliated society will give a report of their work done during the year, and each convener of the various standing committees will also report on work accomplished.

Other work of bodies not directly in affiliation with the Local Council, but of interest to women, will also be reported. The Women's War committee will give a resume of the splendid work accomplished by it since its inception, and the Health Association is sending their district nurses to tell of their work, and their summer camp held during the summer months in Jackson Park. These last two reports will be accompanied by interesting slides.

Lastly, the Red Cross Society will also report; in fact, practically every society in which women are engaged, will be represented.

KITCHENER LEAGUE

The Canadian Manchester League will meet this evening at Y.M.C.A. at 8 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 21st, the League is holding a Tipperary tea, afternoon and evening, and every feather will be typically Irish. The tea room in the afternoon will be in charge of Mary Kelly from 3 to 6, and in the evening in charge of Bridget O'Reilly from 7 to 9.30. The ladies are all invited.

ANTISEPTICS IN AUSTRALIAN BLUE GUM PROVE A CURE FOR BRONCHIAL CATARRH

Bad Cold in the Head, Throat Weakness and Catarrh Cured Quickly.

Medicated Air a Marvel.

Catarrhozone is far superior to any internal medicine.

Its relief is almost instantaneous—just taking enough to breathe its healing vapour into the lungs to give wonderful soothing relief.

Catarrhozone goes right to the tiniest cells in the lungs, carrying healing, soothing balsams to the places that are tainted with Catarrhal inflammation. A sneezing cold is cured in ten minutes—a sore throat is healed and restored in an hour or two—chronic bronchitis is dashed away and quickly disappears—catarrh of long standing is invariably cured because Catarrhozone kills the germs that cause the trouble.

As a cure for Asthma and a preventative of Grippe every doctor is delighted with Catarrhozone. One eminent throat specialist says if Catarrhozone is used two or three times each day you will never suffer from any disease of the head, throat, nose or lungs. This is good news to many of our readers who must require a safe, sure and permanent cure for their colds and winter ills. Every good druggist sells Catarrhozone, large outfit $1.00; small size 50c.; trial size 25c.

Petes Defeated Whitby 4 to 1 Hard Battle Away From Home

Homesters And Picton Are Now Tied For the Group Championship With Four Games Left to Play—Finished Strong Last Night

THREE IN LAST PERIOD

The Peterborough intermediates chased up on even terms with Picton last night when they invaded Whitby and agve the Blanchard-Watson combination a 4 to 1 beating. The blue and white team had a tough job to beg a victory, but they came through handsomely. Until the middle of the third period it was 1—1, but the Petes wound up with a fine finish and scored three goals. The ice was in surprisingly good condition considering the mild weather. The Whitby management ha l packed snow on the surface and then removed it, thus drying up the water, and the result was a firm, if somewhat rough, surface. With Wizard Blanchard on the line-up, the Whitby team put up a great argument. They scored the first goal, but the Petes soon tied it up, Moines going the length of the rink on an individual rush for the tying goal. It was the prettiest play of the night. There was no score in the second period, but in the third the Petes found the nets three times. Both goalkeepers played grand hockey, while every one on both line-ups went the limit. There were only a couple of penalties. The line-up was as follows:

Whitby — Goal, Brown; defence, Smith, McIntyre; rover, Lavery; centre, A. Blanchard; wings, C. Blanchard and Watson.

Peterborough—Goal, Janes; defence, Pethick, Hunter; rover, Halpin; centre, Park; wings, Moines, Kelly.

Tankard Games Were Postponed

The Tankard Games have been postponed until Friday. The slightly lower temperature this morning was drying up the ice at the curling rink, and it is expected that the side ices will be in condition for use.

Port Hope Game Is Postponed

The juniors' trip to Port Hope today was cancelled last night on account of the soft ice and will be played on Thursday night. The juniors and intermediates will practice at Brock Street rink to-morrow night.

JAPANESE VOLUNTEER ARMY CORPS BEING RAISED FOR EUROPE.

TOKIO, Jan. 16.—The promoters in Japan of what has been called the "volunteer movement," have issued a manifesto in which they announce their intention of despatching an army corps to Europe. To this end they are appealing to both Japanese and foreigners for funds.

The manifesto says that as Lafayette aided the American colonies and Garibaldi helped France, so the Japanese wish to help the Allies—Great Britain, Russia, and France—to terminate the misery of war and restore peace to the world.

Another Big Game For Friday Night Oshawa The Attraction

The next big game is scheduled for Friday night, when the Oshawa and Peterborough intermediates will clash at Brock Street rink. This should be a battleroyal and will undoubtedly attract a grand crowd. The Petes are playing grand hockey right now and are worthy of a crowded house every time out. They must win Friday's game to stay in the running, and it will not be an easy task, as Oshawa have always put up a good argument here. The reserved seat plan is on sale at the Morgan Hardware Co. store and fans, remembering last week, should lose no time in booking their seats.

Invasion of Palestine Likely.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A despatch to The Daily News from Cairo says on the authority of a missionary who has arrived there that the Turkish military preparations point to apprehension of a British invasion of Palestine. The hills around Nazareth, the correspondent says the missionary told him, have been fortified and that roads suitable for the transport of heavy guns are being constructed from Acre, Syria, to Mount Carmen.

There is a general belief among the natives still, according to the missionary, that Emperor William has been converted to Islam, and will undertake a pilgrimage to Mecca.

Cost of a Plant

pipes to and from the pump, stop valves, etc., amounting to, say $1,000. This amount is included in all estimates herewith.

I may here remark that the boilers, boiler house, smoke stack, etc., included in my estimate, cost over double that of the pumping unit proper.

No. 3—Owing to the uncertainty of the electric current for operating a motor I cannot recommend the addition of a motor to a steam plant. The additional cost for motor fully equipped would be nearly $4,000.

No. 4—Although a very efficient and reliable outfit the cost of a high speed outfit would be too great; say $15,000 to $20,000.

No. 5—Gas engine outfit: this also is too costly, say $15,000 or over.

No. 6—Gasoline engine direct connected to turbine pump. This proposal has the advantage of less first cost, and always ready for operation. Its greatest objection, probably, is the necessity for more skill in management (starting and operation) than steam power. I think, however, that a reliable unit can be secured that may be operated by the regular pump house staff.

The estimated cost of a complete gasoline outfit is from $8,500 upwards to, say, $12,000, or even more, depending principally on the speed of engine; the higher speeds being lower in price. . . . . .

The Most Reliable.

My opinion is that the steam turbine outfit would be the most reliable auxiliary, but that a first-class gasoline outfit will be found satisfactory for the purposes required. As between the two I am not prepared to make a definite recommendation until tenders are received, together with plans and actual cost figures, guarantees of operation, etc. I may state, however, that I have had low cost figures on such a plant from a very reliable contracting company.

If the Commissioners decide to install an auxiliary pumping plant, I, therefore, recommend that specifications be prepared stating the requirements of the case, and, at the same time, furnishing for the information of intending contractors, all details that must be adhered to regarding available pump house space, etc., also requiring all tenders to be accompanied with plans, data as to total cost, efficiency, etc., guaranteed. It is not, however, advisable to enter too far into details in specifications furnished such as would hamper manufacturers or prevent them furnishing their own specialties, otherwise the cost would be very much increased.

Either a gasoline or steam pumping unit may be very conveniently placed in the present pump house: the boiler house would be an entirely separate building but convenient to the pump house.

Turpinite Shells, By Air Pressure, Produce Paralysis

Soldiers Are Found Unconscious With Neither External Nor Internal Wound to Indicate Cause

Danish surgeons have been studying the effect caused by turpenite in France and Belgium. This new destructive shell was invented by Mr. Turpin, and during the early part of the war was used with deadly effect by the French.

In a letter from a Danish surgeon signing himself "Dr. J.," which appears in the Copenhagen Dargens Nyhe Der (Daily News), mention is made of several cases observed by him, of which the following are most interesting:

"A young soldier was lying in the German trenches in Belgium on August 28 when a turpenite shell struck at a distance of three or four metres from him. He was thrown several feet by the shock and when found was unconscious, but no wounds were visible. His knapsack was torn to shreds and his field bottle was broken. He regained consciousness after being taken to the field hospital, but he was unable to move his right arm or leg. There were no external or internal injuries, but he presented the appearance of a man who had suffered an apoplectic stroke. In a few weeks he was perfectly well again. A German lieutenant at that time in the north of France had the same experience and symptoms.

"Another case under my observation was that of a non-commissioned officer who suffered from severe hemorrhages from the nose and mouth following the explosion of a turpenite s' l near him. He also had severe pains in the left side of his chest. He was carried unconscious to the field hospital, where it was found that he had a hemorrhage near the pulmonary cavity. In six weeks he was ready for service again.

"It was characteristic also in this case that there was no external or internal wounds caused by the projectile, nor have any wounds been found in any of the patients that have come under my notice. In all cases the men were found lying upon the ground unconscious, with the exception of one, who was found standing up and who became unconscious before he fell.

"In these cases paralysis must be ascribed to the air pressure which is caused by the explosion of the shell. This air pressure will cause one or more small or large blood vessels to burst in the body. The air pressure is positive when the projectile strikes in front of a soldier and the bursting of the blood vessel is in that case occasioned by the compressed air; but the air pressure can also be negative when the shell flies by a person, and in this instance the bursting of blood vessels is not caused by pressure, but by suction produced by the vacuum left behind the shell in its swift course through the air. Should a blood vessel burst in the brain a typical case of apoplexy will follow, and the bursting of a blood vessel in the lungs will cause a pulmonary hemorrhage.

"In cases where death occurs after the explosion of a shell and no wounds of any kind are found on the body, it can be determined with certainty that the shell was composed of the new explosive turpenite and no doubt caused copious bleeding from the bursting of a blood vessel in the chest or abdomen, ending fatally. But it is characteristic of turpenite that it causes no wounds that are visible."

GERMANY'S MINISTER OF FINANCE RESIGNED FEARING LOAN FAILURE

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 17.—The Ministerial crisis caused by the resignation of Herr Herman Kuehn, the Imperial Minister of Finance, has caused much misgiving in German industrial circles, where it is taken as evidence that the war has played havoc with Germany's finances.

Herr Kuehn resigns not because of ill health, as announced, but only from the fear of overwhelming difficulties ahead. Of these his first fear was that the second war loan of $1,250,000,000, to be issued soon, would be unsuccessful. Then there was the discovery that the imperial revenue drawn from the income tax would suffer appalling reductions this year owing to the numerous soldiers who have fallen, leaving their widows without income, and that the fact that, most of the home industries being stopped, the average income of Germany's industrial people is terribly reduced.

The third circumstance which awakened Herr Kuehn to the real state of German finance is the growing demand throughout Germany that the widows of fallen soldiers should not be compelled to pay death duties. This means millions less for the imperial treasury, and the income tax slump means the loss of many more millions.

Herr Kuehn came to the conclusion that under these circumstances a third war loan would have to be issued, not only for war purposes but to make up for the enormous deficit in the usual income needed for working the German state machine. Herr Kuehn's successor, Dr. Helfferinh, is one of the directors of the Deutsche Bank and is said to be a man of considerable financial ability.
